EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT does seem to have gone "out of bounds" somewhat with her radio reference to the "average girl of today." As you may know, she is quoted as putting this "on the air": "The average girl of today faces the problem of learning very young how much she can drink of such things as whisky and gin and sticking to the proper quantity." And no time was lost by many people and organizations of the country in calling the referee on this bad play of our First Lady-Elect.

While many have replied in rather bitter and biting words others have been a bit more conservative. The Christian Science Monitor, very faithful to the cause of temperance and prohibition, feels that surely Mrs. Roosevelt has been misunderstood and perhaps misquoted. This spirit we appreciate very much. Mrs. Roosevelt is no longer just a private citizen with private views, nor even just the wife of New York's Governor. She belongs to all of us. And the large place she is shortly to occupy greatly augments the carrying power of her voice and opinions. We are jealous of her.

The Christian Century comes to the fray and strikes both ways. Plainly it says that what the "gracious lady" who presides over the "manor at Hyde-Park-on-Hudson" said isn't true, and therefore it should not have been said. It feels though that the many indignant mothers are in error in thinking that Mrs. Roosevelt was "deliberately libeling their daughters in order to bolster up the wet cause." It further remarks, "no more charming or public-spirited mistress has presided over the White House than the nation will presently find there in the person of Mrs. Roosevelt."

But here is the "unkindest cut of all." "The trouble is, however, that she is still Mrs. Roosevelt of Hyde Park and Manhattan; still encased in an environment which has only the most superficial knowledge of that United States which lies west of the Hudson river." In other words this journal is hinting that Mrs. Roosevelt is "New York minded," and that one can be so minded and still be quite provincial regardless of social, political and cultural position. It suggests that there are several people living west of the Hudson, and that New York is hardly to be taken as the standard for identifying the "average girl." Perhaps you will agree.

It begins to appear that being the First Lady is a rather responsible position, and that Mrs. Roosevelt, whether they learn to "co-operate" or not, might do well to talk things over a little with Mrs. Hoover, who, on account of her four years at the White House, may know her United States a little better.

And this radio talk is dangerous too. When you put things on the air there is no telling just what ears may be listening. Sometimes others than those of Manhattan have "tuned in." This home consumption idea has been greatly expanded. The King of Syria was greatly distressed about a "leak" that had developed in his private stock of information. His plans were all going awry and he was becoming a laughing stock. He called in his servant and said, "Tell me; who is it that is for the King of Israel?" And one of his servants said, "None, my lord, O King; but Elisha, the prophet that is in Israel, telleth the king of Israel the words that thou speakest in thy bedchamber." That is what radio is doing.

BUT LET US NOT judge Mrs. Roosevelt entirely by this remark of her seeming provincialism. This is not all that she has said. She might not have had her manuscript with her at the time. One is more deliberate when he writes it down on paper and knows that it is going into the columns of the press. So we invite you to read the article by Mrs. Roosevelt in the December Forum. The title is "What Religion Means to Me." "We must honestly try to put into practice some of the things which have always been considered too visionary to be actually tried in every-day life." Now, that is not so bad, is it? All along through the article you can feel her groping for reality in religion, a reality that we might spell with a capital, the Reality that must save our Christianity today.

Going on she says, "Failure must cease to mean material loss; it is the way we meet adversity, not adversity itself, which counts. If we have life and love and health and hope and a vision to strive for, then we are not failures; but if we are to hold this point of view real religion must be supreme on earth."

From one in the White House who says of her faith, "It means that belief and faith in the heart of a man which makes him try to live his life according to the highest standard which he is able to visualize," and is honestly following that faith, we feel that much of good may come in the next four years.

"BALANCE THE BUDGET" has become a kind of a slogan for our days. It ranges in its meaning from the individual to the world. It is being heard much in political and economic circles. Due to shortsightedness and bad management in the past we find the effort to balance the budget almost as ticklish as trying to walk a tight-rope. We spent so much of our money before we made it. And we spent so much of our neighbor's money. And we so completely forgot the lessons of thrift and economy and hard work and wise management, and flirted so much with gambling that we are in desperate straights in many quarters. The day of judgment was inevitable. And we were unprepared when it dawned.

Now the budget must be balanced. How can it be done? Someone remarked in the morning paper that the authorities would much prefer to do it by some other means than by cutting down expenses. This means increased taxes, and once more the private citizen must pay for his folly in making no better government than he has.

But, for the time, we shall have to leave this pretty much to the economists and those assigned to the task whether they are any wiser than we or not.

We are interested in the moral and spiritual budget. What about our balance at this point? Have you balanced your moral budget? Is a crash in the offing for you, for us, and are there squally days ahead? Can the Church balance its moral budget? A severe strain is upon us. Must we say with the man in the Bible, "A friend of mine, in his journey, has come to me and I have nothing to set before him?" Is our spiritual larder empty and an emergency upon us? The storm is upon us. Shall we take to the cellar? Are we bigger than the storm?

Our spiritual liabilities are exceeding great at this time. Let us never take refuge in the suggestion that these are problems of the government or some other agency. The responsibility of the Church antedates and underlies all the obligations of the state. The solving of its problems is largely in the hands of the Church of God.

To meet the pay-day and balance the budget we shall not cut down our spiritual expenditures. Happily this is not necessary. Let us avail ourselves of the larger spiritual resources already at hand.

Let us balance our spiritual budget.

"I REALLY DON'T KNOW if I should smoke," says the girl in the cigarette advertisement in a college periodical. "But my brothers and my sweetheart smoke, and it gives me a lot of pleasure."

"Women began to smoke, so they tell me, just about the time they began to vote, but that's hardly a reason for women smoking. I guess I just like to smoke, that's all."

Well, it is time we were knowing why we do what we do, whether it be smoking or anything else. It will hardly be the right thing to charge our habits of questionable conduct up to our sweethearts and our brothers.

There was nothing in the Nineteenth Amendment that required or suggested that women should smoke. Just why should they feel that the vote should make them masculine and that the highest form of erally overlooked that the Christian Churches comprise the strongest organization of patriotic citizenship in the United States, having at least one building, society and leader in practically every community of the land. If and when the issue of prohibition comes directly down to the people, stripped of partisan aspect, and from consideration of candidacies, it will be in a very peculiar sense the duty of the Church to be ready, organized through every branch to oppose a proposition deemed essentially immoral in character and, therefore, a proper subject for direct action by Christian societies. This has a strongly practical side as it will be possible for the various denominations to contribute both personnel and material to a united effort.

The constituencies of our churches are being continually urged to 'organize' to achieve ends which the church itself is already established to achieve. If we now proceed to let the existing organizations function throughout its entirety we will find the weight of our entire Christian brotherhood thrown into the scale against evil in all of its forms."

It was stated that effort will be made to enlist the general religious leadership of enormous influence which has not heretofore been available to temperance discussion and effort, and, also, non-church groups that are willing to aid.

"Those who think that prohibition is going out of the Constitution by default are ignorant of the formidable reserves upon which we can and will draw," said Bishop Hughes. "We have not yet made use of one tithe of the leadership and influence available. The Christian Church will be found set squarely for the defense of the American home against exploitation by a licensed liquor trade."

A SUPERANNUATE HOME FOR THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Rev. W. W. Drake, D.D.

An item of interest came to light during the Louisiana Conference, which has not been publicly announced, was the fact that Mrs. W. J. Porter, of Monroe, widow of Rev. W. J. Porter, who was one of the most faithful and consecrated of the members of our Conference, was ready to give a house located at Sibley, La., to the Conference as a Superannuate Home.

So far as I know, this is the first Superannuate Home given to our Conference, and is a matter not to be passed over lightly. Though the transfer has not been legally made, I understand that by common consent, it is being occupied by Brother J. F. Waltman, who superannuated at our recent session.

I should like to make the suggestion that this home be named "The W. J. Potter Memorial Home" as a suitable memorial to our sainted brother and his good wife.

Another suggestion is that inasmuch as a small amount of some $60 to $70 of taxes stands against the property, which I have agreed to raise so that the property may be deeded clear of incumbrance, any one who desires to have a part in establishing our first Superannuate Home, may send me a small contribution toward it. I am sure a number of our preachers and laymen will be glad to help in this way.

Another suggestion is that following Sister Porter's generous example, effort ought to be made to secure other homes for our veteran preachers who in many instances superannuate with no home to go to and pitifully inadequate means even to live. In these days of financial stringency, there are doubtless many who own houses which, on account of taxes, rental conditions, etc., are a liability, who would be willing to give them to this sacred use. There may be also parsonages which on account of changing conditions, are vacant, which could be used as superannuate homes and thus continue their valuable service.

MISSIONARY OFFICIALS STUDY FINANCIAL SITUATION

In view of the serious financial situation of the Board of Missions due to the continuous decrease in collections in the annual conferences, Dr. W. G. Cram, general secretary, asked a number of members of the board to meet with the administrative staff on November 28 to give advice and counsel and to consider ways and means of effecting still greater economy.

Those invited were the bishops in charge of the mission field, members of the executive committee and the chairmen of various committees of the board. Those present, in addition to the administrative staff, were Bishops Kern, Ainsworth, McMurry, Arthur J. Moore, Cannon, Hay and Darlington, Dr. R. L. Russell, Dr. J. D. Hammons, Mr. C. L. Shepard, Mr. W. D. Hawkins, Mr. G. E. Edwards, Mr. P. D. Maddin, Mr. Lavens Thomas, Mrs. E. A. Kitchell, Mrs. J. P. Harvill and Mrs. W. J. Piggott. Bishop Mouzon was invited but was unable to attend.

This committee spent an entire day surveying the missionary situation. A study of income revealed that in three years the missionary cause had suffered a loss by decrease in collections of over $800,000, a decrease of approximately 55 per cent of the board's annual income as of 1929. Drastic reductions have been effected through this period, but owing to the nature of our missionary work cuts could not be made quickly enough to keep up with the rapid fall in income. This situation has resulted in an indebtedness of approximately $400,000. The expenditures of the board have been cut from over $1,535,000 to approximately $900,000, an economy of approximately $635,000 in the three years. Since the income of the board for 1932 will not be more than $700,000, it was seen that a serious situation was at hand.

Through Dr. Cram, the general secretary, the secretaries, treasurers, and employees of the board proposed additional reductions in their own salaries. It will be recalled that these salaries were voluntarily reduced 10 per cent one year ago. The committee accepted this second reduction, the understanding being that the salaries of the secretaries and treasurer of the department of General Work should be further reduced 10 per cent; those of the secretaries and treasurer of the department of Woman's Work would be further reduced 5 per cent; and that the further reduction of the salaries of the employees of both sections be referred to a committee for definite action.

It was of course realized that the further reduction of salaries paid at headquarters would effect but slight saving in comparison with the total deficit.

A committee was appointed to enter into consultation with the secretaries and treasurers of the board and thus to work out additional economies which should be passed on by the board or its executive committee.

A CHRISTMAS BAPTISM

By Mrs. N. H. Simmons

A picture which will live long in the memory of those so fortunate as to witness it, was that of the baptismal service for little children conducted by Rev. R. T. Ware, of the Park Avenue Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., on Christmas night, 1932.

This special service was held directly preceding the regular Sunday night prayer service, during which time all lights were extinguished with the exception of a cross formed of golden lights above the pulpit.

While the choir softly sang "Holy Night" the impressive procession of seven couples made its way to the altar. The parents of the children walked together, the fathers holding lighted blue candles in holders of red in pine cone shape, while the mothers carried the little ones to be baptized. The candles formed a circle of soft radiance above the altar during the ceremony.

Immediately following, Brother Ware preached a sermon in keeping with the occasion and as a result an entire family of six persons came into the church.

Truly, the Light from Heaven had shined down upon that congregation in celebration of Christ's Birthday and brought it peace.

A TRIBUTE

R. E. WILBURN

December 10, 1931—December 10, 1932

"A Year in Heaven"

Reunited with beloved parents who had long awaited his coming, angelic children who greeted him with a joyous smile, his youth renewed, his earth cares and sorrows all hushed, he sits at the feet of Jesus learning of things divine and true while "the river of Life flows close by the Throne of God!" Time is not measured there, as here, for the evening and the morning have become the perfect and eternal day! "The last supper" on earth has been drunk anew in His Father's Kingdom. He is standing beside the "Tree of Life" and hears paeans of victory, and as he listens, catches the sound of his beloved brother's voice with glad entrance into the eternal home of the soul. The earth life is reviewed and they "sit together" in heavenly places in Christ Jesus forever more.

The day when Easter lilies bloom, the day when He who is called "Wonderful," the "Prince of Peace" reveals himself teaching us that back of the gloom the blossoms unfold, and 'tho now our heads are bowed as the bulrush and our hearts breaking—each cup is of His preparing. They are crowned and glorified, the great end of their being has been fulfilled, and the broken links will be knit together again in even holier and more sacred bands as we too shall fall adoring at His feet!

"A year in heaven—for him of rest and blessing.
For us a year on earth with him above;
But heaven and earth are both together blending
And over all is Love!"

MRS. SAM GWIN.

LEST WE FORGET

Dedicated to the Memory of Mother, Mrs. B. B. Moore, by Effie Moore Shelton

Somewhere beside a quaint fireplace
Sits a mother old and grey.
Stop and cheer her with your chatter,
As you pass along that way.

Make the day a wee bit brighter,
Bring her flowers wet with dew;
Make her feel she's not forgotten;
She'll be happy if you do.

You won't think your time is wasted,
You won't think you've tried in vain,
If you scatter lasting sunshine,
For the aged, and the maim.

And you'll be content to listen
To a voice so soft and low,
You will wish the day much longer,
So you wouldn't have to go.

Look about you, there are many Deeds of kindness to be done.
If you have your own dear mother,
You can well begin at home.

Go and put your arms about her,
For to her you're just a child;
It won't cost you cents or dollars,
But it will be worth your while.

I can see it's not the money
That you spend for gifts to give,
It's the words that have the value
To a life that's bent with years.

Whisper cheerful words and tell her
She's the dearest friend you know;
Tell her she's your rarest treasure,
That you really love her so.

Please don't wait, for on the morrow;
You might wish, but wish in vain,
That you had scattered rays of sunshine
Through the clouds that held the rain.

VOICES OF LIVING PROPHETS

In "Voices of Living Prophets," a symposium of present-day preaching, which Cokesbury Press will publish on January 1, 1933, sermons by five Methodist Episcopal ministers appear, three of them Northern Methodists.

Bishop A. Frank Smith's sermon is "Lengthen the Cords"; Dr. Ivan Lee Holt's, "A Stubborn Faith"; Ralph W. Sockman's, "Keeping Life Fresh"; Bishop Francis J. McConnell's, "A Good Word for Jacob"; Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes', "The Unhidden Christ."

The publishers remind us that twenty full-length sermons comprise "Voices of Living Prophets." Among the other contributors are Charles E. Jefferson, S. Parkes Cadman, James Gordon Gilkey, Harry Emerson Fosdick, Walter Russell Bowie, Joseph Fort Newton, Albert W. Palmer, John Alexander Hutton, and Frederick W. Norwood. The book will be available through the stores of the Methodist Publishing House: Richmond, Nashville, Dallas, and San Francisco.

The price will be $2.

MISTAKEN VALUES

It seems to us that so many folks in this world have an entirely mistaken idea of real values and false values.

And the further along we go the more convinced we become that this mistaken idea of values is responsible for much of our trouble.

Few really appreciate and realize the value of their word. Yet a broken word once oftentimes severs a friendship which has been built up over years. To the man who keeps his word, a broken word is a trust and faith shattered. He never forgets it.

To break a confidence is equally as bad.

And the pitiful part of it is that we oftentimes sell honor, our self-respect and our integrity for a pittance. It is sold at a cheaper price than a mess of pottage.

Our mistaken idea of value often accomplishes a certain end oftentimes and leads us to destroy something which has required years to build up and once that something is broken it is like humpty dumpty on the wall—all the king's horses and all the king's men can't put it back again.

Business, of course, plays its part in losing and costing us these valuable characteristics. Oftentimes for a small monetary consideration, to sell something, to put over a deal we cast ethics and fairness to the wind. And then too late we realize what we have done.

Politics without a doubt has been responsible for the loss of more of the finer characteristics of manhood than any other one thing. There is no question but what politics needs to be purged of the graft, the corruption, the patronage and a thousand and one irregularities, which have developed as a result of them. One individual has declared that 60 per cent of the present cost of government could be saved if politics could be cleaned up. We don't believe the figure is very high, either.

But we believe that our mistaken idea of values is in a measure responsible for some of our acts and actions. We believe if we recognized true values and could distinguish them from false values probably we would change some of our ways and methods of doing things.

But we believe some of us have failed to appreciate real values—we can't determine what is good for us and for our community and our fellow citizens from what is bad for us and our community.

It would be fine, however, if we would give a little more thought to some of the things that we are guilty of doing as individuals. We believe if we did we wouldn't do some of them.

And we can't keep from thinking what a fine old place this would be and how we could improve it if we stopped thinking so much of ourselves and of our own when we make a decision, which, after all, concerns the public and the public interests, and tried to decide the issue on such a basis instead of the one which so many of us are using.

We believe many of us have failed to learn and to recognize and appreciate values.—Crowley Daily Signal.

POETICAL THOUGHTS

By Mrs. George S. Brown

For she said, "If I may touch but his clothes, I shall be whole." Mark 5:28.

THE MASTER'S TOUCH

"In the still air the music lies unheard;
In the rough marble beauty hides unseen;
To make the music and the beauty needs
The Master's touch, the sculptor's chisel keen.

Great Master, touch us with thy skillful hand,
Let not the music that is in us die;
Great Sculptor, hew and polish us; nor let Hidden and lost thy form within us lie.

Spare not the stroke. Do with us as thou wilt;
Let there be naught unfinished, broken, marred;
Complete thy purpose that we may become Thy perfect image, Thou, our God and Lord."

A piano, a harp or an organ may stand for years, the music hidden within but unless some skilled musician touches the keys there is no beauty and sweetness. A piece of marble is an inanimate thing until the sculptor's power produces something which makes us marvel. So, we may have within us great possibilities. We may have music within our souls, we may possess hidden powers, but all come to naught unless the great Master hand brings forth that which will beautify and bless the world. Naturally we shrink from the stroke, but without it we are naught. We may desire to do and to dare, but we are so insufficient ourselves. We are crude and rough and our tongues blunder and our steps falter and our hands are useless unless directed by One who knows and understands the needs of mankind.

Our Father knows that if we have suffered pain we know how to be patient with the sick, if we have faced privations we understand how the needy are suffering; if we have blundered, we will not find fault with others who have gone astray. If the angel of Death has entered our home and taken from us one we feel that life can never be the same without, then we know how to weep at the tomb with those who weep.

It may be a difficult prayer, but if we would be of service, and that should be the aim of every Christian following in the footsteps of Him who came to minister, we must be willing for God to hew and polish us so that nothing that we undertake in His name will be broken or marred, and in the molding we shall by and by become like our Lord and Master and then the whole world shall be filled with music and sorrow and sighing shall flee away.

"O Spirit of the living God, now fall on me;
Lord take me and break me and mold me and make me;
O Spirit of the living God, now fall on me."

BISHOP DOBBS ON THE RUN

I was at Noel Memorial, Shreveport, last Sunday; go to Mer Rouge next Sunday, to DeRidder the next, and to Dallas the next; and then to Lake Charles, then to the Missionary Council and then to the meeting of the Committee on Courses of Study in Memphis.

HOYT M. DOBBS.

THANK YOU, MR. EDITOR

"You know how our youngsters in college do when they select the ones to grace the 'beauty section' of the Annual. They send a bunch of photographs away to some movie star and ask him to select the prettiest, as though he knew any better than any one else. He is busy. He hastily marks one of them and returns it."

This clipping from your "Sweet Gums" editorial of December 15 explains something, and changes one's attitude to the "taste" of our college "boys" and others.

I had often wondered WHY certain pictures were selected. I had also felt "sorry" for the other girls if the one selected was really the most beautiful. And I had also about reached the conclusion that "beauty contests" were the most monumental jokes of our day.

For instance, hardly a day passes that we do not meet on the streets of any of our towns, or country places, really beautiful girls—girls who stand out like the "Sweet Gums." Looking at the empty faces so often selected in beauty contests kinder depressed.

Without intending to make "invidious comparison," I had occasionally found myself thinking of the hog contest in which the owner of a razor-back remarked that his hog was entered for speed.

But a movie star makes the selection. And he is about as successful in this as in other things by which he is known.

human life is the male sex of our kind? The woman who soaks her ballot in beer and smokes it in cigarettes will soon do less with it than men have done.

The logic of the girl in the advertisement is about the same as that of the four-footed animal that wallows in the mud. He "likes" it.

THE WAR DEBTS PROBLEM seems headed for the orphan's home. It is reported that when it was first suggested that Mr. Roosevelt, President-Elect, take a hand in the matter, he replied, "That is not my baby." Mr. Hoover felt a great deal of concern for the little fellow for awhile and tried to aid him, but he grew so rapidly that he felt that he must have help. He talked it over with Mr. Roosevelt and reported that the President-Elect "did not choose" to co-operate, whereupon Mr. Roosevelt publicly felt shocked and declared that he did not want it understood that way at all, that really he was co-operating. He was co-operating enough for him to feel, but Mr. Hoover couldn't feel it.

Isn't it a pity that our leaders cannot forget politics long enough to think about the country and its needs? If we had imagination enough we could see that conditions today are as critical as they were during the World War. Suspicion, timidity, side-stepping and bungling mark us. No one lifts a voice that inspires confidence, and no one lifts a banner to which with hope the people can rally. Let our leaders take warning. The people will not remain patient. They will shortly begin to insist that the "new deal" be inaugurated.

In the meantime let the followers of Jesus Christ bestir themselves to the life and activity their profession inspires and promises. Either we shall make terms with the process of disintegration or become the active leaven that will provide the vision and courage needed so much at this time.

A CHRISTMAS PRESENT FOR THE ADVOCATE

From Dr. W. W. Drake, presiding elder of the Lake Charles district, we received this interesting message: "What do you think of this? A Christmas present for the Advocate."

"It comes from our good friend—a young lady of 89—Mrs. M. L. Clement, Lake Charles, La., and will help 'Save the Advocate.'"

"She asked me to send it in, which I do with pleasure. I am enclosing herewith her check for $5."

We remember Sister Clement with great appreciation, having served for a few months as her pastor.

Now we hope that all those charges that have not mailed us their quotas on "Save the Advocate" will get them up and make it a New Year's present. WE JUST HAVE UNTIL FEBRUARY 1.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Take down your evergreens and sweep out the trash. It is time for us to get back to work. Let us pool our prayers, sympathy, energy and enthusiasm, for a great year in Louisiana and Mississippi.

The fourth year for Rev. Paul H. Grice on the Madison, Miss., charge, is opening encouragingly.

We apologize. The tribute by Rev. Paul H. Grice to Rev. W. W. Broom, which recently appeared in our columns, had the name "Brown" instead of "Broom."

Columbia, Miss., has extended a most cordial welcome to Rev. H. A. Gatlin, the new pastor. Every courtesy has been shown. Brother Gatlin is expecting a great year.

We have just received a copy of the Mississippi Conference Journal. It is a queenly book dressed in autumn brown. Big compliments to Rev. W. B. Jones, editor, and to the printer.

Again we thank all of you who sent Christmas Greetings to the editor and the Advocate. We feel as if we are members of your families. You have made us very glad. We love you for it.

We see in the local paper that Rev. E. W. Day and family, Greensburg, La., have issued a card of thanks to the people of the church and community for the happy reception to the work.

We want you to read everything in the Advocate. We try to select the material carefully. But we want you to give special attention to the "Statement of the Educational Council" in this number on page 2.

"I will keep the interest of the Advocate before my people and do all I can to help you succeed. R. V. Fulton, P. C., Choudrant, La." Thank you, Brother Fulton. Your spirit and co-operation assure success.

"The Mystery of Bethlehem" was the lovely cantata rendered at our First Church at Gulfport, Miss. Dr. J. L. Neill, the pastor, sent out very attractive announcements of the great Christmas program.

Rev. Jas. T. Harris, recently assigned to the Rayville, La., charge, spent part of the holidays in New Orleans, where he was formerly pastor of Felicity Church. Brother Harris has been well received at Rayville.

Rev. R. G. Lord, executive secretary of Christian Education of the North Mississippi Conference, has had family trouble. Wait now. They have all been down with the flu. We have received a copy of the December Bulletin and it is loaded with good things.

Why not, in making plans for liquor control, if prohibition must be discontinued, consider this: Allow no one to have beer or booze except able-bodied people who never become intoxicated, and publish their names that other members of the community may know them better.

Mrs. F. O. Durbin, of the Montpelier Church, on the Pine Grove charge, La., died, after a year's illness, December 15. Funeral was from her home church with her pastor, Rev. A. P. Smith, officiating. She is survived by her husband, her parents, a son, and several brothers and sisters.

Rev. A. P. Smith, new pastor at Pine Grove, La., is hard at work on his charge. We are voting for him and his people for a great year. Brother Smith says that in visiting the homes of the people that he is finding some in a "reading position." He is looking out for the Advocate.

Being "from the country" and of the country, we have been, in our mind, visiting our great host of country churches and thinking of the many very fine and heartening programs they had during the holidays. Of course they make little "fuss" about what they are doing, but we can feel them.

We are happy to report that Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor at Ruston, La., who has just been in with pneumonia, is climbing the steep back toward health. Give him a hand. Rev. R. W. Vaughan, superintendent of the Orphanage, faithfully stood by and kept us informed as to Brother Johns' condition. A hand for him too.

Thomas F. Neblett, president of the Student Body at Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., was in New Orleans, December 30-31, in attendance on the meeting of representatives of College and University Leaders throughout America. Mr. Neblett is the son of Rev. and Mrs. R. P. Neblett, of the North Mississippi Conference.

Miss Mary Searles, field secretary for the Young People's Division of the Louisiana Conference, stopped over in New Orleans upon her return from the Christian Education Council at Nashville. She reported a great experience. While in the city Miss Searles attended Epworth League program at the Algiers church.

President D. M. Key, of Millsaps, presented a paper on the "Scaled Tuition Plan," which has been in operation at Millsaps, at the recent session of the Educational Council meeting at Nashville. Write to Dr. Key about this plan. It seems to us that it has much to commend it. Millsaps is making a practical test of the plan.

With a pageant, "The Nativity," First Church at Lake Charles, La., celebrated its White Christmas service. The program was under the efficient direction of the Misses Georgie Woolman and Bertha Moss. The young people enjoyed a large place in the service, which was followed by a delightful social hour conducted by Mrs. C. D. Moss.

Who said those preachers were "complimenting" the Advocate and not "saving" it when they voted unanimously to carry the campaign on until February 1, that all might have a chance to do their share? From Rev. W. W. Bruner, Vaiden, Miss., comes the quotas from the Missionary Society and the Young People, and this word. "We hope we'll have more help for you in this good work."

We received a good letter from Mr. Jas. H. Ramsey, of New Albany, Miss. Look over my shoulder. "I have been a subscriber for forty-two years, and have enjoyed reading it more and more every year. I wish all loyal Methodists would subscribe for this great paper." And he says that Rev. J. H. Holder and wife are in high favor with the people. Brother and Sister Holder have both been in the hospital.

Dr. W. F. Henderson, head of the X-Ray Department of Touro Infirmary, New Orleans, and son of Rev. W. F. Henderson, Sr., an honored superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, recently left for the Mayo Clinics, Rochester, where he is to undergo a very serious operation. His condition is precarious. Let our people pray that this valuable man may be spared, and that he may be sustained by the presence of God.

Gone but not forgotten. Mrs. John N. Ryan, formerly of Eupora, Miss., is now living at Wenatchee, Washington. She has been a regular reader of the Advocate. She pays both it and our church a high tribute. Being out of reach of our church now Mrs. Ryan has become a member of the M. E. Church. We feel sure that she will find a big welcome and a warm fellowship. We are all the children of Wesley, all in the same great family.

Rev. W. M. Sullivan, presiding elder of the Newton district, is on the right track and going strong. While he did not get a whole book on his postal card, he did say four very fine and interesting things: 1. The men of the Newton district are at their posts and ready for work. 2. I am going to try to get a new subscriber from every charge in the district as I go around. 3. All my money for Christmas cards will go to superannuates this Christmas. 4. Come to see me.

Yes, and more. That is our answer to Rev. J. W. Faulk, newly arrived at the Abbeville charge, La. Our answer is to his question, "Has Abbeville paid its quota for the Advocate?" The answer we give is explained by the fact that Rev. H. W. Rickey was on the job before Brother Faulk's arrival and the Abbeville people are backing the Advocate. With such support on a charge, ex-pastor, congregation and the new pastor, the Advocate takes new courage. Hurry, boys, let's get those quotas in. Soon be time to plant Irish potatoes.

How we do enjoy those encouraging notes from our pastors as they get under way for the new year. We are hearing from numbers of them, and not a "sour note" yet. Rev. T. C. Cooper, newly arrived at Collins, Miss., has been generously received. He has already pulled his banner to the top of the pole, no half-mast for him, and shouts that he is ready for the greatest year of his ministry. So be it. From his church at Collins, Mrs. D. A. McIntosh, who is teacher of the young people and doing a great work with them, has sent the quota of the Young People. Watch those young people do their part all along.

Passing along the columns of the Bolivar Commercial, Cleveland, Miss., we noticed a sign hanging out, "Methodist Services." Going in we found Rev. Melville Johnson, pastor, on the job at First Church. It seems that someone had circulated the report that there would be no service on Christmas Day, but he was telling them rather emphatically that of all days that was the time to come to church for worship. We gave him a hand and passed on up the columns. By the way, that little paper, The Bolivar Commercial, is putting in some heavy blows for Prohibition. Editor Davis, I am for you. Stay with your guns, and keep 'em hot.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

For the first time since I have been in the field I have received a pounding. Not as large as some of the brethren have had, but just as good. Several of the brethren have shared their molasses and potatoes, etc., with me. It was greatly appreciated. This thoughtfulness made us feel real humble. This was a big lift to the family and a greater encouragement.

Through the kindness of Rev. R. H. B. Gladney it has been my pleasure and profit to read "Ecce Deus." This is the greatest book it has been my privilege to read. It seems to me it deals only with the fundamentals and puts them in the proper perspective. The book has much of challenge in it and much to stimulate and stir one's heart. If you wish to be helped, secure a copy of this book and read it with care.

The date for the Pastors' School is June 19 to 30. The undergraduate work will be the same as it was last year. There will be some changes in the faculty. We expect to have Dr. Orear and Dr. Goddard with us again. Rev. A. W. Martin is to teach the course for circuit pastors. It is hoped that we can have fifty preachers to take this course. Prof. P. J. Rutledge will be with us to teach "Teaching Children." This course will be helpful to all workers with children, and especially with pastors who wish to render a larger service to the children of their congregations.

Thedford's Black-Draught "Good for Constipation"

"We have used Thedford's Black-Draught in our home for about 20 years and have found it to be a reliable medicine," writes Mrs. Joe G. Roberts, of Porterville, Ala. "A friend recommended it to me a long time ago and it has proved its worth to me. Black-Draught is good for constipation and to rid the system of bodily poison. I find that taking Black-Draught prevents the bilious headache which I used to have. I take a dose of Black-Draught, dry, as I need it."

Thousands of men and women have found how well Black-Draught works in the relief of many little common disorders due to constipation. Costs only 1 cent or less a dose.

Backache bother you?

A nagging backache, with bladder irregularities and a tired, nervous, depressed feeling may warn of some disordered kidney or bladder condition. Users everywhere rely on Doan's Pills. Praised for more than 50 years by grateful users the country over. Sold by all druggists.

We will have as fine a faculty as we had last year and the courses will be as choice. Put the date in your note book and make your plans to be present and stay through.

The loyalty and sacrificial giving of many of our churches is most heartening and refreshing. It is inspiring to see the offerings made for the various causes by loyal people. I find many churches who are responding to every call placed upon them. Some are giving beyond expectations. If every church in the Conference would take the offerings asked and send them in every cause would prosper and none of them would suffer. These comments were caused by looking at the list of churches that have taken the offering for the superannuate preachers Christmas fund. It was most cheering and encouraging.

We have 418 Sunday schools. We have received offerings from 70 Sunday schools this month for missions. If we could get an offering from each of these 418 schools not only would our Conference work be in good shape but we would be able to make worthy contributions to the General Board of Missions for its work.

Pray for the work and the workers.
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The Committee on Children's Work of the Children's Division of the Grenada church, of which Miss Sallie Parnell is superintendent, has established some worthwhile goals for the workers of that division. For the benefit of others that might wish to do a similar thing I am giving these goals:

1. To make it our first purpose as Christian church school workers with children to make self-examination of our own lives, endeavoring to increase our personal loyalty to Christ.
2. To spend much time in prayer for all the work of the Church school, for our guidance in training and teaching, for the homes from which our children come and for the Christian growth of the children especially assigned to our care.
3. To make a study of our own responsibility to each individual pupil in our classes.
4. To help our pupils grow in deeds of Christian service by making all possible contacts with them during the week as well as those on Sunday.
5. To make as complete study of our lesson materials as we can that our teaching preparation may be the best possible to meet the needs of our group.
6. To read, in addition to our lesson materials, "The Elementary Teacher," "Childhood Guidance in Christian Living," and other outside helpful literature.
7. To be on time—at least five minutes before opening—regularly each Sunday morning, and to let only illness keep us from attendance, except in rare cases. The conscientious, regular punctual attendance of teachers and officers, well prepared in every way, reflects itself in like behavior in our children.
8. To exercise loyal co-operation in all the work of our different departments in all the work connected with the children's division and with all the work of the church school. In so doing we, as workers, will experience that joy and blessing that come to those who work together with Christ the Master Teacher.

Keep Young with Your Children

Don't give them a cross nagging mother to remember. A happy home depends upon you. If your work is a burden—if the children annoy you—do something about it today. Start taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It will steady your nerves—give you that extra strength and energy you need.

By actual record, 98 out of 100 women say, "It helps me." Give it a fair chance to help you too. Sold by all druggists.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

We believe that if we are able to help the church school "meet the needs of growing children" in their daily Christian lives and in their well-rounded Christian development it is our duty to try consistently and, if necessary, to the point of sacrifice to abide by these goals.

It would be a fine thing for the workers of children in every church to set up a similar set of goals for their work.

Are you planning training work for your church this year? We are ready to help you. Many of our workers should be doing individual study. This can be done at very small cost and is most helpful. We will be glad to help you get started if you will write us just what you wish to take up. Or we will be glad to assist you in deciding what course you should study. Call on us.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

May we again remind you Conference officers, District Directors, and Young People's Union Presidents of the Council meeting, January 14 and 15, at Alexandria? The first session will begin at 9 o'clock Saturday morning, and the last one will close Sunday afternoon in time for everybody to get home at a reasonable hour. This is very important in every way, so you are urged to attend and help draw up plans for the spring months. Mr. E. O. Harbin, of Nashville, will be with us.

Points of Emphasis

At the September Conference Council meeting a Conference Program was drawn up, and it was decided to prepare this in the form of Points of Emphasis for the guidance of the local church groups. This has been done, and with the December issue of the Broadcasts, a copy of these points has been mailed to each local president whose name is on our mailing list. Some of these names are not up-to-date, so if you have not received your copy, notify your Conference Director or Young People's Work, sending name and address of your new president.

Special Days

part of our Conference program is Quiet Hour Covenant Night, which comes in January. Suggestions for observance of this night appear in the Epworth Highroad for January.

Then January 15 is Prohibition Sunday. By all means we should give special emphasis to this subject, as this is one of the great world problems before young people today. Young people—both those of voting age and those who will be voters in a few years—must help to fight for the cause of Prohibition.

Some advance information concerning a most important day in Young People's work—Young People's Day comes on March 25 this year. An entirely different type of pageant has been prepared for this day—different from previous "Anniversary Day" programs. It is a beautiful Biblical dramatization entitled "World Builders." Let us begin now to lay plans for a 100% observance of this day and determine to realize our Conference goal of $1,000 offering.

Union News

The Shreveport City Union held its November meeting on the 28th at Cedar Grove, with fair attendance. A very unique program was enjoyed, in that two former presidents of the Union were present and spoke concerning its earlier days. An entertaining program of character readings followed the splendid devotional led by Miss Pearl Hattie. The publicity superintendent, F. M. Smith, sent in this fine report.

As a feature of its Community Service program, the New Orleans City Union visited the Federal prison December 18, and rendered a Christmas program. Johnny Hoefflin is supervising the publication of the Union News, the monthly bulletin of this Union, which is a very creditable magazine of some ten or more mimeographed sheets.

To the Women of the North Mississippi Conference:

Below is a Calendar of your work for the first quarter of 1933. If you do not already have a copy of this Calendar, will you not please cut this out, pin it in your Year-book, and then follow it as nearly as possible?

There is also a suggested zone program for the first quarter of 1933. Please help your zone leader by seeing that she has a copy of this program.

These two outlines carefully followed will lay a foundation for your year's work that you will have no leftovers to hamper your second quarter's work when you take up the new plans of your Conference at Louisville, March 28, 1933.

It is my sincere wish that this may be our very best year's work in the Master's kingdom.

Sincerely,

MAKING LIFE'S SATISFACTION

Any man whose life has failed of a good deal of genuine satisfaction and happiness has, we believe, somehow missed the providential way. The fault may have been his, or it may have been some one else's, but there was fault somewhere, and serious fault, too; the thing wasn't in the divine plan at all. Of course, we have very varying ideas as to what we mean by satisfaction and happiness, and as to how they may be arrived at, but we have every reason for thinking that life was intended to give them to us all after some good fashion. Oh perhaps it would be more accurate to say that we were intended somehow to achieve them. And if we have failed in that for any reason, the failure has been a serious one.

One rather good proof that life was intended to give every one some real satisfaction and happiness is found in the fact that no man can do good work, anything like his best, unless the days do bring these things to him after some fashion. It is true that men find their satisfactions in the most diverse things, and what brings happiness to one may not bring it to another, but that only means that in this mixed-up world of ours there seems to be some chance of nearly everyone winning out to these experiences. We can set this down at any rate, that the finer and more wholesome the satisfaction is that a man gets out of living, and the greater is his real happiness in it the better will be the service which he will render to the world. A dissatisfied and unhappy man is generally the man who quite misses the truest and the best kind of success no matter in what field he is working.

But how can a man make sure of finding these things that are so inalienably his privilege, and that seem so necessary to a good and useful life? Is there any surely-guaranteed way of reaching them? No, fortunately or unfortunately, there is not. But we have learned one secret about them when we have discovered that one sure way of missing them is to seek them a little too eagerly. And we have made some more progress when we have found out that the mere getting of things, or the winning through to this envied place or that, does not in itself guarantee anything. And we come nearer still to the heart of the secret when we understand that the undertaking is one for ourselves to work out, and that it consists as much in learning to take hold of life by the right end and to achieve the right attitude toward it as it does in anything else we can think of. No man ever stumbled into real satisfaction or achieved happiness just by accident.—Exchange.

ONLY JUSTIFICATION FOR PROHIBITION

Dr. W. D. Bradfield, S. M. U., Dallas

The only justification for prohibiting the traffic in intoxicating liquor must be found in the nature of the liquor. If it is harmless there should be neither regulation nor prohibition.

Alcohol is that content of all intoxicating liquors, to get which they drink the liquor. Alcohol is not a medicine. The best physicians of today do not prescribe it. Were I to list their names here there would be few exceptions. Neither is it a stimulant, but the opposite—a narcotic. It is classed with opium; chloroform is made from it. Our government prohibits the traffic in opium.

Alcohol is also a deadly poison. It paralyzes the nerve centers controlling the respiratory organs or the heart. Death ensues instantly. It is reliably reported that 98 per cent of our deaths from so-called "poison liquor" is from liquor containing no other poison than alcohol.

It is also a slow poison. As a slow poison it damages the cell-substances that form the basis of physical existence and vitality. Here the poison is in direct proportion to the amount taken. It may be in moderate doses not causing drunkenness, yet, if regularly taken, stores up death against the day of a crisis in health, as an accident or disease, being the determining cause whether the patient shall live or die.

It will be noticed that this chronic form of alcoholism may result from the moderate use, if regular, as under the saloon regime. During pre-Volstead days, a distinguished actuary, Mr. E. B. Phelps, after a thorough investigation, reported that 66,000 of our people died annually from liquor, or 7.7 per cent of all the deaths.

The question is: Should our government license a traffic in such a poison? If it licenses it, it must necessarily protect it and tacitly recommend it. Can our government afford to be bribed for the tax it may collect thus to sponsor the traffic and use its endorsement to encourage our people to drink it?—The Southwestern Advocate.

CAPUDINE--Liquid

How Doctors Treat Colds and Coughs

Medical writers agree that the important point in the treatment of a cold, or cough due to a cold, is to relieve the congestion in the nose and throat, thereby preventing serious complications which may follow a neglected cold. To stop this congestion calomel was the accepted and standard remedy until Calotabs, the improved calomel compound tablet was introduced.

Now that science has robbed calomel of its nausea and danger, making it pleasant to take and perfectly safe for general use, over forty million Calotabs are consumed in the U. S. yearly with only the most pleasant and satisfactory results. In millions of homes Calotabs have proven their superiority in the prompt relief of colds and coughs due to colds.

One or two Calotabs at bed-time with a glass of sweet milk or water. No salts necessary. No nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning the congestion has subsided, your cold or cough is relieved, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish—no danger.

Get a family package of Calotabs, containing full directions, only thirty-five cents. Trial size, ten cents. At any drug store. (adv.)

Doctors Give Creosote For Dangerous Coughs

For many years our best doctors have prescribed creosote in some form for coughs, colds and bronchitis, knowing how dangerous it is to let them hang on.

Creomulsion with creosote and six other highly important medicinal elements, quickly and effectively stops all coughs and colds that otherwise might lead to serious trouble.

Creomulsion is powerful in the treatment of all colds and coughs no matter how long standing, yet it is absolutely harmless and is pleasant and easy to take.

Your own druggist guarantees Creomulsion by refunding your money if you are not relieved after taking Creomulsion as directed. Beware the cough or cold that hangs on. Always keep Creomulsion on hand for instant use.—Adv.

Saves $2. No Cooking! So Easy!

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It takes but a moment to prepare, and costs very little, but it positively has no equal for quick, lasting relief. From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with granulated sugar syrup, made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's so easy! Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost. It never spoils and children love its taste.

This simple mixture soothes and heals the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, the most reliable healing agent for severe coughs. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

HERESY?

By Rev. Jas. H. Felts

(Christmas Sunday Announcement)

A word about the Sunday service at the Methodist church may not be amiss. There will be no evening service. The pastor has an idea that the morning period of worship is altogether sufficient and praiseworthy. He is further of the opinion that those who stay at home that night, enjoy the family circle, renew friendships, exchange experiences, and play with the children will be benefited more than ordinary. We have too many laws, too many organizations, too many things that keep us away from home. A Stay at Home and Behave Yourself Society might absorb many of the other things with profit. Blessed is the man, or woman, who learns the lesson of contentment and fine fellowship. The pastor will be happy to know that his people spend this one Sunday happily, intelligently, magnifying contacts, minimizing faults, giving more than meat to the hungry, more than bread to the poor, and more than singing and chanting to God. May the fires of the Yuletide logs burn brightly in every home, and the joys of sobriety, common sense, and Christian fellowship be known to all. Worship at some church Christmas Day.—Grenada Tribune.

26 MILLION REASONS FOR PROHIBITION

The 26 Million Cars and Trucks Now on the Roads of the United States

Every motor is a potential agent for accident and death, not only to those in the car but to all persons within reach, when the wheel is in the hands of an incompetent.

According to undeniable scientific research, every driver who has drunk as little as a couple of glasses of beer or an average highball, within two to four hours before taking the wheel, is two to three times as slow to function intelligently in case of emergency, as is the driver in normal condition.

The really drunken driver seldom gets far before he runs amuck or falls asleep, but it is the moderate drinker who is the worst menace on the road.

The alcohol speeds up his driving, makes him take wild chances, and slows down his control.

Australia, with the least liquor regulation, has the largest number of automobile deaths, and the United States under prohibition has the fewest auto fatalities in proportion to the number of motor cars and trucks.

In the event of repeal, it would be necessary for the Safety Councils in the various communities to post on their bulletin boards something like the following:

"Don't drink before driving, Don't drive after drinking."

—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

HOW TO STOP A COLD QUICK AS YOU CAUGHT IT

A New Method Doctors Everywhere Are Advising

Take 1 or 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets.

Drink Full Glass of Water.

If throat is sore, crush and dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in a half glass of warm water and gargle according to directions.

Almost Instant Relief In This Way

If you have a cold—don't take chances with "cold killers" and nostrums. A cold is too dangerous to take chances on.

The simple method pictured above is the way doctors throughout the world now treat colds.

It is recognized as the QUICK-EST, safest, surest way. For it will check an ordinary cold almost as fast as you caught it.

That is because the real BAYER Aspirin embodies certain medical qualities that strike at the base of a cold almost INSTANTLY.

You can combat nearly any cold you get simply by taking BAYER Aspirin and drinking plenty of water every 2 to 4 hours the first day and 3 or 4 times daily thereafter. If throat is sore, gargle with 3 BAYER Aspirin Tablets crushed and dissolved in a half glass of warm water, repeating every 2 or 3 hours as necessary. Sore throat eases this way in a few minutes, incredible as this may seem.

Ask your doctor about this. And when you buy, see that you get the real BAYER Aspirin Tablets. They dissolve almost instantly. And thus work almost instantly when you take them. And for a gargle, Genuine Bayer Aspirin Tablets dissolve with sufficient speed and completeness, leaving no irritating particles or grittiness. Get a box of 12 or bottle of 100 at any drug store.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

CALVIN COOLIDGE is dead. With our fellow-citizens everywhere we bow our heads in grief. In him there was something that was primitively, persistently and, permanently American. He was marked as our own. Unexcitable and undemonstrative, he was as sturdy as the Vermont hills from which he came. None of us can forget the dramatic scene of the night of August 3, 1923, in the little home at Plymouth, Vermont, when, upon the death of President Harding, in a little group around a lamp light he was sworn into the highest office of our land by his father, Col. John Coolidge.

His administration occupied what we may call the "Great Divide" between the turmoil of the World War and the present distress through which we have been muddling for the past three years. Pulling things together after the inglorious administration of President Harding, without exciting strong opposition or developing enthusiastic support, he made a good President. He was followed with confidence, a confidence inspired by his steadiness.

Of him Walter Lipmann says, "One of the most austere of all American presidents sat in the White House during the most flamboyant years of American history. It is a strange paradox. Mr. Coolidge typified those very standards of life which his time most flagrantly disregarded. He was for thrift in an age of wild extravagance, for prudence in an age of fantastic imprudence, for caution amidst drunken recklessness."

The funeral was held at the boyhood home of Plymouth with the rites of his church, the Congregational. From the quiet and simple life of this community, and from an humble home, he went forth to the highest office in the gift of the people. In the same spirit of quiet simplicity he returned to it when his task was done. And now he sleeps amid the New England hills of which he was so much a part.

Uncovered we note the passing of another great American.

IF YOU WILL LOOK on page 3, column 1, of last week's Advocate you will find an article by Dr. W. W. Drake, presiding elder of the Lake Charles district, on "A Superannuate Home." We want you to read that, we want you to think about it, and we want you to do something about it. It is a plan that is practical and timely for Mississippi as well as Louisiana and beyond.

At this time when prices are low there is a fine opportunity for securing some of these homes for our honored brethren for whom we have made inadequate provision. A place to stay makes a big difference. A little garden plot and a place for some flowers will make those closing years much brighter.

There should be one or more such homes in each presiding elder's district.

"WITHOUT ARE DOGS," say the scriptures. And we agree that most of them ought to be out, yea, in outer darkness, where the worm dieth not. Away with poodles and poodlers. But, let's not put all the dogs on the outside. There are dogs and dogs. And we are for dogs.

A strange looking vehicle drove on the ferry. It had a rather strong wire cage built on the body. There were compartments in the cage and locks and keys. In one of those compartments was a dog, a beautiful fellow in no way connected with a poodle either by affinity or consanguinity. My heart went out to him as I said, "Poor fellow," thinking that the man up front on the truck was the official city dog-catcher. "Your days are numbered," I said.

But look. There on the door were these letters: "S. P. C. A." (Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.) I was greatly relieved.

Some years ago a poor man was trudging along in the cold and rain out near Longview, Texas. His clothes were thin and he had not had much to eat for a great while. Beside him was a dog that seemed to be uncompromisingly identified with the condition of his master. Tired and cold they kept their heads to the wind. A car slowed down beside them. "Have a lift?" Too tired to waste words: "Can you take my dog?" "No, I can't take a dog." And he drove on leaving the pair with their unbroken comradeship. The next morning the dog was found standing beside a cotton-house not far down the road. When approached he defied entrance to the house. Finally he was killed as he suffered no one to enter. Inside, the body of his master was found. He had died during the night; tired, sick, hungry, cold.

It is reported that the county Board of Supervisors at Sturgis, Mich., declined to provide employment for "anyone who feeds dogs." To receive aid the owner must give up his dog. A man from New Orleans appears on the scene with a cudgel that he wields valiantly. "Now that rule is manifestly unfair and indefensible. If it becomes necessary nearly every dog owner would willingly share his food with his dog. So, why the narrow-minded and unreasonable attempt to make dogs suffer for man-made conditions? Dogs all earn their keep by their companionship. They are comfort and a consolation in times of misfortune. More than ever the world needs kindness and consideration—feeling—for the weak and helpless, be they human beings or animals. Everyone knows that there is an overproduction of nearly all foodstuffs. That ruling in Sturgis, Mich., is very wrong."

And the man of Galilee asked, "How much better is a man than a sheep?"

DEAR UNCLE SAM—For some time I have been planning to write you, but something always comes up, and another good resolution paves the way to hell. But I am not going to put it off any longer. I hurry these lines to you this morning hoping that they may help to accomplish what so many of your nephews and nieces earnestly desire.

What precipitated this hasty note is the sad and broken look we have noted upon your face in all your more recent photographs, cuts of which practically all of the newspapers carry. In these more recent months you appear disturbed and worried. We just know that you are greatly troubled about something. Can we help you? We are just a bit uneasy about you and cannot withhold this confession of our alarm. We trust, however, that nothing serious portends.

We know about the war debts. We understand how you are needing the money and all that. And we can appreciate somewhat the ticklishness of the whole situation. Your budget is unbalanced and we understand how it is that your suit is beginning to look shiny and your appearance a little "seedy." But that does not cause us to love you any the less. We are all passing through these hard times.

And we know about the millions of us without work, walking the streets for a job, and going home to fireless grates and the shivering forms of hungry babies. We note, though, that while you seem to be starving in some places you are suffering from indigestion in others. This is hard for us to understand. The food you are taking is not being properly assimilated. There is dire poverty at one place accompanied by starvation, at another is an abundance of cheap corn and wheat.

And those little heartburns with the other nations are a source of much irritation. We don't seem to understand quite how to get on with them. They seem to expect too much, don't they?

And certainly we know about Prohibition. Really that is the main thing about which we desired to write you. It seems to be commanding so much of your attention just now. It must account for a great deal of your worry.

To be perfectly frank about it, Uncle, do you intend to give it up? Or compromise on it? Having "broken off" for so long, and doing so well, are you going to break the pledge and go back to your old crowd and the old ways? We cannot think it of you.

Now, while we should count it an irre-

A NEW MOVE TO SAVE OUR BENEVOLENCES

(A plan developed by a committee of the College of Bishops and the Executive Committee of the General Commission on Benevolences for a joint campaign for the Kingdom Extension offering and the general and Conference apportionments.)

The General Commission on Benevolences directs attention to the fact that the Church is facing an acute crisis in connection with its benevolent enterprises. The serious consequences of this situation demand immediate and drastic action, else interests precious to the Church and essential to the Kingdom will be irretrievably lost. We are aware of the insistent demand for a united approach to the Church in the matter of benevolent giving. We have been in consultation with a special committee from the College of Bishops and have given serious consideration to all the factors involved in the complex situation confronting the Church. We appeal to the pastors and membership of our churches to give hearty and Church-wide co-operation, and we unanimously recommend the following program:

1. We recommend that the Kingdom Extension cultivation program shall be continued throughout the Church and shall include emphasis upon General and Conference Benevolences, and that it shall be extended to include Easter Sunday. On or before Easter Sunday there shall be taken an offering for Kingdom Extension, and Conference and General Benevolences, in every church in Southern Methodism. This offering shall be immediately divided, one-half of it being sent to the Kingdom Extension treasurer and the other half being sent to the Conference treasurer and credited on General and Conference Benevolences.

2. There are no Kingdom Extension quotas to be handed down to Conference or local churches. The measure of our generosity is to be determined by our resources and our intelligent appreciation of the critical needs of the Kingdom at this hour. The commission recognizes the right, in conformity with the legislation of the General Conference, of any church or charge to determine for itself the proportion of its total offering to be directed to Kingdom Extension, but we appeal, in confidence, to the loyalty and fairness of our churches to observe the proportion indicated above.

3. The Church should make this offering an act of sacrifice and self-giving which is in the spirit of Passion Week and Easter Day. We fully recognize the right of any church to set an earlier day, if more suitable, but we urge that in case this is done some Sunday in March be used for this offering, in order that we may have a complete record and close out this entire joint appeal not later than Easter Sunday.

4. We pledge that in view of this new approach to the Church no special emergency appeal will be made during this conference year for any of the causes represented in the General Benevolences, but the remainder of the conference year shall be left free for cultivation and securing the balance due on General and Conference Benevolences.

5. We have requested Bishop Paul B. Kern to assume the leadership of this enterprise and have associated with him a group of our leaders, and we promise to the Church that every assistance will be given through publicity and personal contacts in bringing to our membership a vivid realization of the emergency confronting the Church.

6. We appeal to our bishops, presiding elders, pastors and laymen to give hearty support to this new approach to our problem and thus give to the world a glorious demonstration that our purpose remains firm and undefeatable. With Christ on our side and His cause at stake we can do no less.

OUR BISHOPS AND BOOZE

Statement on Prohibition by the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Adopted Unanimously at Shreveport, La., December 17, 1932.

We reiterate and emphasize the action of our General Conference at Dallas, Texas, in 1930 as follows:

Stand of General Conference

"Today there is a serious challenge to Prohibition as a principle and a policy. The issue is joined. Shall the outlawed saloon be restored to its former place? It was the clearing house of the forces of unrighteousness. By its patronage of every vice that degrades, the saloon invited destruction. It now asks to come back under an alias. The only alternative to Prohibition is the saloon. Those who imagine that there is some half-way house, or any other substitute for Prohibition are deceiving themselves. We declare our enlistment for the war against the 'drink habit.' Prohibition came about to undo the evil of strong drink. We firmly set our faces against any recession from the Constitutional outlawry of the liquor traffic. We highly resolve to enlist our every power to maintain in full force the Eighteenth Amendment and all laws of state and nation for its observance and enforcement."

Stop the Stampede

We would emphasize at this time, when the effort is being made to stampede and to overwhelm the friends of Prohibition, that there has been no change in the attitude of our Church. Within the last four months every Annual Conference has adopted resolutions similar to the actions of the General Conference quoted above.

Mandate to New Administration

This College of Bishops would respectfully remind the Congress of the United States, that the platform of both major political parties and the two candidates "expressly and unequivocally declared against the return of the saloon and for the protection of dry territory." If it is claimed that the country voted for beer and repeal, it would be equally true that the country voted against the return of the saloon, and for the protection of dry territory. We insist, therefore, that Congress has no mandate from the people to vote for a resolution to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, until, and unless it presents to the states for action a substitute amendment, which will effectively prevent the return of the saloon and effectively protect dry territory. As a matter of fact, the people did not in the last election vote so much on the question of repeal and beer as on bread.

Nullify the Constitution?

We insist that this frenzied effort to authorize the manufacture of such beer as is clearly in defiance of the Constitution cannot be regarded as other than a deliberate attempt to nullify the Constitution. We would regard it as nothing less than a disgrace for the Government of the United States to undertake to balance the budget by taxing a criminal Anti-Social Liquor Traffic, which tax if levied, be it remembered, would come largely from laboring men, thereby reducing their ability to buy bread.

We direct the secretary of the College of Bishops to send a copy of this statement to the President of the United States, the President of the United States Senate, and to the Speaker of the National House of Representatives, with the request that it be read, and made a part of the record of both the Houses of Congress.

LOVE

By D. W. Heidelberg

God is Love, and in proportion as we are dominated by love we have God in our souls. Love makes us happy; the absence of love makes us unhappy. Love is developed by doing what God commands us to do; it takes its flight from the soul when we refuse to do what He commands us. It is developed by unselfishness, by kindness, by loving our enemies, returning them good for evil, by helping the poor and needy, visiting the sick, and the widow and orphan in their affliction, and by doing unto others as we would that they should do unto us.

Love is driven from the soul by jealousy, envy, hatred and selfishness. But for its absence no crime would ever have been committed, no war would ever have fought. But for the absence of love from the souls of men the World War would never have been fought, sixty millions of human beings would not be sleeping the sleep that needs no awakening, millions of wives would not have been made widows and millions of children orphans; billions of treasure would not have gone up in flames, and a number of countrymen equal in population to forty states as numerous as the state of Mississippi would not have lost their lives on the field of battle.

Love makes the domestic relation happy and enduring, does away with divorce, and makes the honeymoon perpetual. It makes the mother love and cling to the wayward child after he has forfeited the right to her love, and when all others have forsaken him. Love makes Heaven out of the relation of husband and wife during the honeymoon, and when it departs converts this same relation into a hell. Love causes the Christian to endure affliction, and to shout the praises of God in the trying hour of death. Love enabled the martyr, Stephen, to pray for those who stoned him to death, and to ask that their sin be not laid to their charge.

Love can make old age happy after the allotted period of three score and ten years have been reached, and the locks have been made white from the frosts of many winters. Love caused Christ to pray for those who mocked Him and spat upon Him, and nailed him to the cross. It was love that caused Mary Magdalene to linger at the cross of Christ when all His disciples had fled, and it was love that led her first to his tomb.

Though we may have the eloquence of a Chrysostom or a Galloway and have not love we have become "as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal." Though we have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries and all knowledge and have all faith so that we can remove mountains and have not love we are nothing. And though we give all our goods to feed the poor and though we give our body to be burned and have not love it profiteth us nothing. Love suffereth long and is kind; love envieth not; love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil, rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth, beareth all things; hopeth all things, endureth all things."

Love may change its place of abode, but it is unchangeable. It is more enduring than the mountains. The north polar star may be blotted out, the Pleiades may disappear from the firmament; the remotest fixed star may be rolled back into its original nonentity, but love will still remain.

God speed the day when this heavenly Messenger will be enthroned in the souls of all the inhabitants of earth:

Shubuta, Miss.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

Rev. W. R. Lott, Contributing Editor

The Devil fears a kneeling, devout Christian more than he does any other type of person. He is anxious to keep us proud and arrogant. He is never more pleased than when he sees people with their heads up and their backs straight when someone is trying to approach the Father through prayer. The first sign of losing grace is failure to respond to the call of prayer by at least some posture of recognition. Our churches are not built with the thought of posture in prayer, but that in itself will not prevent a sincere Christian from having the added help resulting from coming humbly to the Throne of Grace. Beware of that voice which eases your conscience in saying it does not matter how I appear just so I pray within my heart. Attitudes of reverence have a definite place in our lives. To be sure, we do not pray to be seen of men, but to be heard of God. The danger in this generation is not that we will stand on the "Street corners and pray," but that we will forget to pray at any time. Let us all go back to that simplicity of faith which will enable us to have comfort and strength in prayer.

How wonderful the laws of creation and growth! God has made no mistakes in his work. Here I am just rounding the corner of forty-one, and it is not so bad after all. Standing at twenty-one and looking over here on this hill top it seemed to me that it was near the great divide of years. Well, I was certainly wrong about that for just look around me at the boys and girls who grew up with me. They are still boys and girls in "our set." Looking out and up yonder toward the way of life the heights are far off and we all have hardly left the foot hills. Come on all of you and let's go up to the cool springs. There are a thousand things a man or woman forty-one can resolve to do during the next few years. Physical, mental and social capacities are nearing the maximum. If we are to do anything worth while we must do it as mature men and women. The excuses for youth will not suffice us any more. We must stand up now and fight in the arena for our ideals. Look at the long line of men and women coming on right up behind us! Watch out, they will run right over us if we do not pick up and move faster. No, do not throw that rock at him. They are coming right on up on our heels. You can't stop younger men and women by throwing at them. It is not right. Let them all come on. God intends for some of them to pass us on the way and go on up to be "heralds of the newer day."

SAVE OUR BENEVOLENT WORK

It is well known that the missionary, educational, and other benevolent work of the Church is on the verge of collapse, due to the unprecedented decline in giving during the past three years. In 1932 we reached the lowest point in payments on the benevolent collections to which the Church ever fell. In three years the Board of Missions has lost half of its normal annual income and other Boards have suffered proportionately. In spite of repeated drastic cuts in salaries and other expenditures large deficits have been incurred and our work has suffered beyond description. Unless this downward movement is immediately checked, precious and essential interest will be wrecked.

In this emergency the General Commission on Benevolences, in consultation with our Bishops, has developed a plan which, it is hoped, will lighten the burden of the churches, stimulate the pride and morale of our people, and realize the funds so urgently needed to save our benevolent work.

The essentials of the new plan are as follows:

1. The Kingdom Extension Cultivation, usually culminating in February, is to continue until Easter Sunday, April 16th.
2. There is to be a period of self-denial and a great Easter offering in all congregations.
3. All money raised in this collection is to be divided equally between the Kingdom Extension causes and the regular benevolent collections of the local church.
4. No definite quotas are assigned and no other special appeals will be made.

The churches will secure credit on their regular apportionments, General and Conference, for half the amount raised during this period. By thus early paying a large part of their Conference collections, they will have less to raise at the end of the year and should be able to pay their benevolent obligations in full without great difficulty. At the same time they can make their regular Kingdom Extension Offering as required by the Discipline.

It is recognized that congregations have large liberty in these matters. They may determine for themselves what they will do for the Kingdom Extension causes, and they may set a date earlier than Easter for the offering if they prefer.

But most churches are loyal to the general movements of the whole Church, and all are especially urged to give active and thorough co-operation to the present plan. Those charged with the responsibility have devoted weeks of study to the situation, and all are agreed on this plan as the only way to save Methodism from defeat and disaster. Presiding Elders, pastors, and people are earnestly besought to give wholehearted support to all the features of the plan as they may be unfolded during the coming weeks, to the end that the glorious program of Methodism may not be further hindered but may continue to the glory of God.

Fraternally yours,

W. G. CRAM, Chairman of the General Commission on Benevolences, BISHOP PAUL B. KERN, Director of the 1933 Campaign.

Did you ever lose your temper? I mean did you ever completely let yourself get away and say things you never thought you would? Of course you do not like to think of such a thing. Now, what happened is about this: Your heart began to beat several times its normal rate, like you had run about one hundred yards at top speed. Something like racing the motor of a car. Blood was rushed through the brain; the whole process of physical life was disturbed. The amount of carbon burned in your blood was decidedly increased. Your nerves which control the blood vessels and muscles had a paroxysm. They simply went on a wild orgy of frenzied activity. They contracted the muscles and even touched muscles which are involuntary. The glandular system which secretes its hormones for mutual balances of attitudes was all in a flutter. It takes hours for a person to "come out of a spell of violent temper." It is similar to epilepsy. Its tragic effect on the mental disposition is even more disastrous. It will completely destroy religious life. Anger resulting in violent fits must set against a person. If all restraint were taken away the violent tempered person would literally viciously tear the other person to pieces. No wonder the Word of God says: "Wherefore, my beloved brethren, let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath; for the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God."

GENERAL MISSIONARY COUNCIL AND PAINE COLLEGE JUBILEE

The General Missionary Council will meet at Augusta, Ga., February 7-9. In connection with this meeting will be launched the Paine College Jubilee celebration ordered by the General Conference to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of our College for Colored people.

The Paine Jubilee will be on the evening of February 7 and the entire day of February 8. This program will be bi-racial. Among the speakers will be Bishop Candler, chairman of the Jubilee Commission; President Bruce R. Payne, of Peabody College; Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, Dr. W. F. Quillian, Dr. W. W. Alexander, Col. John E. Edgerton, of Lebanon, Tenn., Mrs. J. W. Downs, Dr. J. W. Perry and others. Speakers representing the Colored Methodist Church are Bishop R. A. Carter, Dr. Channing H. Tobias, of New York City, International Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and Mr. W. A. Bell, prominent layman of Atlanta.

On the evening of February 8, the Department of Music of Paine College will present a pageant and musical drama entitled, "Marching On." In music and pageantry the history of the Negro race from the African jungles to the present time will be presented.

The General Missionary Council section of the program will be on February 9. The theme will be "The Missionary Imperative of the Church." The speakers will be Bishop Paul B. Kern, Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, Dr. W. P. Few, of Duke University, Mrs. J. W. Perry, Dr. W. G. Cram, Dr. W. Angie Smith, of Shreveport, and others.

This combined gathering will be the outstanding missionary event of the quadrennium. Many hundreds of visitors are expected to attend.

KINGDOM EXTENSION INSTITUTES LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

The district institutes, which initiate the cultivation period in the Louisiana Conference are announced as follows:

Morgan City, January 10, a. m.; Leesville, Jan. 18; New Orleans, Jan. 10, p. m.; Minden, Jan. 18; Amite, Jan. 11; Winnfield, Jan. 20; Baton Rouge, Jan. 12; Monroe, Jan. 24; Alexandria, Jan. 13; Ruston, Jan. 25; Crowley, Jan. 17; Shreveport, Jan. 26.

It is hoped and expected that all pastors and representative delegations of the lay membership of each charge will attend the institute for their district.

The facts as set forth in the Advocate of January 5, viz., that the income of the Board of Missions has decreased $800,000 in the last three years, and that, in spite of drastic economies the Board now faces a debt of about $400,000; together with the situation of all the Boards involved, in which vital interests of the church, such as the whole Educational program of the church, are seriously handicapped for lack of funds, brings the whole church face to face with a serious situation and a ringing challenge.

These institutes are the first step in bringing the facts and needs before the entire membership of the church. These meetings followed by faithful cultivation in each congregation, will doubtless inspire each church to respond as liberally as possible.

Dr. Elmer T. Clark, of the General Board, will bring the message to these gatherings.

It may be well to say in advance that the Executive Committee of the General Conference Commission on Benevolences in conference with the bishops, has planned a new approach in this year's cultivation period.

No definite quotas are figured out beyond the goal set in the General Conference action making the amount asked for equal to 60 per cent of the apportionment for General Work—equal to about 50 cents per member of the church. It is planned that the cultivation period include appeal for the regular Benevolences as well as Kingdom Extension askings, and at the close of this period—before Easter—the offering be taken, and half of it sent to the Kingdom Extension treasurer, and the other half applied on the regular Benevolences.

parable break and blunder, throwing the whole family back for generations and putting us all to shame before our sister nations, what would shock us most about it would be your backward step. We have always been proud of you and called you progressive. And we have not taken all our standards from the market-place. We have boasted all around, "What Uncle Sam undertakes he carries through to a glorious finish." It has been your record. Have you forgotten the days of the Revolution, the period of the Civil War, and how you outdared the storm of the World War? Do you remember the Panama Canal, a job abandoned by others and regarded as too big for them? It has been your motto: "What others cannot do I specialize in doing."

You have steadily resisted and successfully withstood sudden and radical changes in your Constitution. Why, we are told by our elders that literally hundreds of resolutions have been offered seeking amendments to it, while you have suffered only nineteen to become a part of your basic law, and this after long and careful deliberation. And of these you have allowed none to be removed. But just now you seem to be wavering a bit. Can we be in error about the matter? Have you not been listening too much to your loud-mouthed enemies who bring a dagger hidden in bouquets of roses? They want you to repeal your Eighteenth Amendment. They are saying to you that it is a failure, and that we need the income to balance your budget, and that they only want a drink with a small alcoholic content, and that it is necessary to teach our people self-control and to preserve their personal liberty. We can see how all this pressure troubles you. But look here, Uncle Sam, you are not fixing to fail us, are you? Listen to us a bit. That Eighteenth Amendment is not a failure. We refer you to your own records for proof of this. Surely your memory is not beginning to fail you already. You are not old and you are far from dotage. And your eyes surely are not bad yet. You can see the difference in our country now and what it was before you adopted this amendment. Yes, we know it is not perfectly enforced. We regret this. And while we take no pride in the fact that many of your laws much older are still violated, it does balance our attitude on the matter to keep this fact in mind. And you must remember that a nation's reach should exceed its grasp or what is there to struggle for.

And as to the income to be derived from the sale of alcoholic beverages, we cannot imagine you so foolish (pardon us, Uncle, if we seem very much in earnest) as to secure income for balancing a temporary budget at the expense of human welfare. Your budget, is something far more than dollars and cents. You cannot afford to balance it with blood, and we don't believe you will try it. Your best credit for the future is not a balanced budget, anyhow, but a sober and steady citizenship. And if you will consult your ledger it is something more than figures. It seems to us that the smiling face of a little child, growing up strong of limb and clear of mind, because you have made it possible by the Eighteenth Amendment, would be pay enough, especially since you can multiply it by thousands.

Uncle Sam, don't sell your people into slavery again for the few paltry millions you need in this temporary period of our distress.

Sincerely you have offered us nothing so good as this plan for dealing with a problem acknowledged by all, and certainly nothing better.

LAY OFF:

A good brother who went to another charge last conference received one of our messages saying that his charge had not responded to the "Save the Advocate" appeal. He had been among the first to respond to it on his former charge. So when he received this message from us he felt that it was "personal" and that it was a reflection upon his good record. Let no pastor think that it is not so intended. Pastors have been shifted since the campaign began. That accounts for the fact that some pastors who have secured their quotas on former charges received this message from us. Get your sharp stick and go after your predecessor and make him come back and get up that quota. But, however you do it, let's raise the quota by February 1. We deeply and sincerely appreciate all those pastors who did their bit. Some pastors, upon arrival upon their new charges, wrote us at once, asking, "Has this charge sent in its quota on 'Save the Advocate'?" Knowing well the brother who wrote us thus, and his fine record on other charges, and his fine muscular manhood, we beg of him, "Lay Off!"

SECOND WIND

A man who is a friend of the Advocate and who does not speak inadvisedly with his lips or otherwise, told us the other day that nothing more would come in on the "Save the Advocate" campaign. And we have never doubted his word. But times have changed, you know. The Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences voted unanimously to extend the campaign to February 1, that all might have a chance to send in the quota. We thought you were serious about it. Quotas are still coming in. Let us show this brother up for hinting that you have quit. You now have your second wind. Let us finish the job. We are counting on you.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Mrs. Cora M. Harmon, Chunky, Miss., for fifty years a reader, renews her subscription and sends congratulations.

"I am now in my eighty-seventh year, and still enjoy reading the Advocate. I hope that it may long continue." J. L. Jordan, Biloxi, Miss.

The special Christmas service at First Methodist Church, Crowley, La., was held at 10 o'clock in the morning. Rev. C. K. Smith, pastor, preached on the theme, "King of Kings."

The Advocate joins, with prayerful sympathy, Misses Ella K. Hooper, principal of McDonnell School at Houma, La., and Ora Hooper, rural worker, in the death of their sister, Mrs. John Dardienne.

All our Conferences voted unanimously to extend the "Save the Advocate" Campaign to February 1, 1933, in order that those charges that have not already done so might have an opportunity to share in the "Saving of the Advocate."

We have only three weeks left in which to complete the task. Let us do it NOW.

SAVE THE ADVOCATE!

Prof. Ross H. Moore, associate in history at Millsaps, recently returned from Toronto, Canada, where he represented Millsaps College at the three-day meeting of the American Historical Association.

Dr. Elam F. Dempsey, former editor of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, after a period of heavy and sacrificial work on the paper, returns to the pastorate. To him is due, in large measure, the preservation of the paper.

Dr. L. M. Lipscomb, our pastor at Louisville, Miss., and member of the Advocate Publishing Committee, is in the Methodist Hospital, at Memphis, having undergone a minor surgical operation. Let us not forget him when we pray.

"Broadcasts," the official organ of the Young People's Division of the Louisiana Conference, is here. Miss Mary Searles is the editor. It is full of good things for our young people and others. We congratulate this great division of the Conference.

Here it comes. $6, the "Save the Advocate" quota from Hollandale Church, Hollandale, Miss., Rev. C. W. Avery, pastor. Let us all who have not sent in the quota follow Brother Avery's example. February 1 is the end of our campaign. We are still expecting yours.

In a message from Rev. J. S. Purcell, 210 Church Street, Dade City, Fla., we have this message for you: "All the family join me in good wishes to you and our Louisiana and Mississippi friends." We wish Brother Purcell and his family a great year at Dade City.

We regret to note the death of Mrs. J. L. Jones, of the New Hope Church community, Greenwood Springs charge, North Mississippi Conference. The pastors of that charge will always remember Sister Jones for her open hearted hospitality and genuine interest in her church.

Rev. J. Thurlow Barrett, one of our young preachers, who has been serving a charge in Tennessee, now a student in Vanderbilt University, spent the holidays with his people in New Orleans. While here Brother Barrett paid an appreciated call to the Advocate office.

Cassidy Bayou, that ugly old muddy, slow-moving creek, that runs, no, creeps, through the delta of Mississippi, coming by Sumner and some other places, is getting up again. You recall how our people up there fought those high waters last year. Don't forget them in this new threat.

"No one else can do what God expects of you," is a statement from Postal Service of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans. You better back up and read that sentence again. It is not put down just to be read. The writer expected it to be thought about, and then something done about it.

Miss Lucille Richardson, of Shreveport, speaking: "Please enter my name on your subscription list in the place of that of my mother, Mrs. Eva Richardson, who passed away several months ago. She had been a reader of the Advocate for more than fifty years. I wish to continue having the paper in my home."

The many friends of Mr. P. A. Dulin, layman of Aberdeen, Miss., will be pleased to know that he has recovered from his long serious illness and is now back at his accustomed place in his church work. He has been an active man in all phases of laymen's work in that section of the North Mississippi Conference.

"Lexington, Miss.—I shall secure during Christmas week the very small amount asked of each pastorate to 'Save the Advocate.' I am 86 years of age, and have enjoyed reading it 72 years. I am unwilling to dispense with its weekly visits. Mrs. Sam Gwin." Look in last week's Advocate for Mrs. Gwin's tribute to R. E. Wilburn.

Rev. F. N. Sweeny, one of our Louisiana superannuates, firm friend and faithful worker for the Advocate, writes us a good word. Brother Sweeny takes it as one of his main responsibilities to see that the Advocate is placed in the homes of the Methodist people of Franklinton, La. We very much appreciate and value his assistance.

"The Church Outlook," official publication of the DeRidder, La., Methodist Church, of which Dr. C. D. Atkinson is pastor, is before us. The January number carries greetings from a number of our pastors, wishing for the pastor and church a great year. We join those who thus express themselves with our own best wishes for the year.

The church at Saucier, Miss., sustained a great loss in the going of Miss Bessie Myers, who died at Bay Springs, and was buried at Saucier on Christmas Day. Rev. Roy Wolf, her pastor, officiating. Miss Myers was teaching at Bay Springs and was a strong Christian. She was a niece of Mrs. Dr. Hopper and a sister of Mrs. J. W. Laudenslager.

"Your New Year—What Will You Make of It?" was the sermon topic of Rev. E. H. Cunningham, pastor at First Church, Greenwood, Miss. Brother Cunningham pays a great tribute to his people and to his predecessor, Rev. A. T. McIlwain. And there was an Advocate echo like this: Our people like the Advocate and we expect to stand by you all along the line."

From the St. Marks Church School, New Orleans, the editor has received a check drawn upon "The Bank of Good Cheer," ordering said bank, which does not seem to have closed its doors, to pay to us Three Hundred and Sixty-five Days of good things. Among those days we find fifty-three Sundays. We have used several of the days already and find them most delightful.

Rev. R. M. Brown, presiding elder of the Minden district, writes a word of commendation and invites the editor to visit his district. The editor would be glad if somebody would get that law of physics, that no body can occupy two places at the same time, repealed. Again and again we find it seriously handicapping our personal liberties and desires. See what can be done about it.

Let us share with you a letter that touched us very much. "I am enclosing check to renew the subscription of Mrs. M. R. Baker, Winnsboro, La. Mamma has been in the 'Over There' for three years, but we want the Advocate always to come in her name. She loved and read it for over 70 years, and we love and appreciate it more and more." This is from Mrs. Genevieve Baker Jones. What could be finer than this?

Dr. R. H. Harper, our pastor at First Church, Baton Rouge, and secretary of the Louisiana Conference, was in New Orleans on Monday of this week making arrangements for the mailing of the Annual of the Louisiana Conference, which has just come from the press. Dr. Harper has requested us to announce that the minutes will be mailed in a few days and should be in the hands of the pastors by the 18th of this month.

Rev. Eugene Tilleux, graduate of Centenary College, now teaching in Chicago Y. M. C. A. College, and completing his Ph.D. course at Chicago University, accompanied by his bride, whom he found at Northwestern University, was a caller at this office during the holidays. Brother Tilleux is a brilliant young minister of the Christian Church. Centenary College may feel happy in the share it had in the training of this valuable young man.

Our Millsaps System of Colleges reopened January 2. If you know of anyone thinking of entering any of these schools at mid-term tell them to write at once about the matter. By all means the Methodists of Mississippi should be sending their children to these colleges. If they should lose one of these schools it would be bad, but the greater loss would be in our church's failure to provide Christian education for its own young people.

Do you know what these things are, "Stratosphere gondola," and the "Beebe bathysphere"? Well, they are both to be on exhibit at the 1933 Chicago World's Fair. The first one is the contraption in which Prof. August Piccard ascended up into the sky 53,856 feet above the earth; and the "bathysphere" is the thing in which Dr. William Beebe descended into the depths of the sea 2,200 feet. Now the distance and space between those two points should be sufficient for most of us without attempting to steal their records.

Wedding bells. Dr. and Mrs. H. B. Wren, of Shreveport, La., announce the marriage of their daughter, Janice, to Mr. Wm. L. Fleming on December 28, 1932. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. T. Ware, pastor of Parkway Church. Both of these young people are faithful workers in the Young People's Division of Noel Memorial Church. Miss Wren attended Centenary College and was a member of the Chi Omega Sorority. They will live in Shreveport. The Advocate extends congratulations and pronounces a blessing upon the beginning of this new home.

Rev. C. C. Wier, pastor at Franklin, La., in a very confidential chat with the editor, says, with reference to his good speech at the Orphanage dinner during our recent session of Conference, that he left out one of the most important points. We are trying to help him get it to the people. "Providence has prepared and given us a man in the Rev. Robt. W. Vaughan to perfect the work that I began in the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage. He has made it one of the great institutions of our Church. He is the best orphanage man in our connection. We must keep right on helping him that he may continue to keep it out of debt and do a great work for humanity."

Again we rise to say to those who ask, "When are you going to 'shut up' about the Advocate?" that we are like the widow who came to the unjust judge asking for some help. Finally, as you recall, he said, (Advocate Translation) "I don't give a rip for either God or man, and this little old widow is least to my mind; but I am struck on my own comfort. She is going to pester the life out of me if I don't do something. I am going to set things right for her in order that I may have a little peace." Just as soon as you send in the quota you will be able to sleep better. You will not forget this: We are trying to save the Advocate for the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi, and so many have already responded that we feel that no church will feel right if it fails those who have already done their part.

AN APPRECIATION

Out of the heights and depths and windings of our inmost beings, our immortal souls there emanates feelings of gratitude that can not be uttered or expressed. During our loved one's illness there was never a day but that some token of love and appreciation came to her. Since her death an arm full of telegrams, letters and resolutions, each containing words of tenderness, sympathy and love, has reached us. Had we the time it would be a source of blessedness to write each thoughtful individual a personal word of appreciation. But it is our hope that each and every one of you both far and near who through tender words of sympathy, flowers, telegrams, letters, gifts and personal services were so graciously considerate of us may read these lines and consider these words of love and appreciation as intended for you. May our Lord and Savior who said, "In as much as ye have done it unto one of the least of these ye have done it unto me," richly bless and reward you every one.

H. A. WOOD AND DAUGHTERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE TO MEET AT FIRST CHURCH, WATER VALLEY

Dear Doctor Raulins: At the last session of the North Mississippi Conference in Tupelo, the undersigned committee was appointed to arrange for the meeting of the next session of the Conference. At a meeting of this committee in Grenada on January 5th, a very cordial invitation was received from First Church, Water Valley, which was accepted by unanimous vote. Owing to the difficult financial condition, it will be necessary for the assessment of an amount equal to one per cent of the pastors' salaries to be enforced. This assessment was levied by the action of the Annual Conference. These amounts should be sent to the Conference treasurer, Mr. R. W. Sharp, of Grenada, Miss.

It was a real pleasure to visit the Lake Cormorant charge last Sunday. Rev. W. L. Robinson is the pastor of these good people. The writer having been pastor there some years ago, it was a particularly pleasant privilege to visit with old friends again. Under the able leadership of the pastor every phase of the church work is receiving attention and is making progress. Brother Robinson has set up and is working the program of the church.

Miss Katherine Rogers, district director of young people's work in the Aberdeen district, reports the holding of five fine union meetings during the last quarter. At the meeting at Fulton nine churches were represented by 90 young people, and at Amory eight churches were represented by 60 young people. The other meetings were well attended. Miss Katherine is doing fine work in her district and we can watch out for the Aberdeen district to come out at the Assembly on top.

Recently we held the North Mississippi Conference Educational Council. All who were expected to attend were present except four and these were unavoidably detained. Plans were mapped out for a most effective program of Christian Education in our Conference this year. Definite plans were made for the organization and functioning of the district organization.

Some Important Dates

Make a red mark around the following dates; they are important:

January 29—Fifth Sunday. College Day in every church. The program will be published in our monthly Bulletin this month.

April 30—Sunday School Day. If an earlier date suits you better or a later date is more suitable you may change the date to suit your own situation, but it will be best for every Sunday school to observe the day as nearly on this date as possible.

June 5-10—The Conference Standard Training School at Grenada College. We are going forward with our plans for this school.

June 12-16—The Young People's Summer Assembly at Grenada College.

June 19-30—The Seashore Pastors' School at the Campground at Biloxi. The late winter and early spring training schedule is being made up now. If you want a class or school get in touch with me.

Pray for us and for the work.

R. G. LORD.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Your Conference officers and Union presidents are in session this week-end, checking up on progress, and laying plans for the spring months, which will culminate with the two summer Assemblies at Mansfield. Pray for them and co-operate when they return and ask you to put over the program in your corner of the field.

Reports

The district directors' reports are due January 15. If you have not sent in your report to your district director (though you should have long ere this!) send it at once, even though late. He or she needs this report for a secondary and complete report.

Charters

We have been notified by Central Office of five more charters in the Louisiana Conference—Alco, in Alexandria district; Keener Memorial Intermediates in Baton Rouge district, and Oak Ridge, Bonita, and West Monroe, in Monroe district. Fine! Keep up the good work. Will officers of these departments please send names of new officers to your Conference director, 323 Brice Street, Baton Rouge? Thank you.

MARY SEARLES,

Conference Director of Young People's Work.

TOO BUSY TO LIVE

He hadn't time to greet the day,
He hadn't time to laugh or play;
He hadn't time to wait a while,
He hadn't time to give a smile;
He hadn't time to glean the news,
He hadn't time to dream or muse;
He hadn't time to train his mind,

He hadn't time to be just kind;
He hadn't time to eat a meal,
He hadn't time to deeply feel;
He hadn't time to take a rest,
He hadn't time to act his best;
He hadn't time to help a cause,
He hadn't time to make a pause;
He hadn't time to pen a note,
He hadn't time to cast a vote;
He hadn't time to sing a song,
He hadn't time to right a wrong;
He hadn't time to send a gift,
He hadn't time to practice thrift;
He hadn't time to lend or give,
He hadn't time to really live;
He hadn't time to read this verse,
He hadn't time—he's in a hearse.

MRS. JOHN DARDENNE (formerly Miss Eluria Hooper) died on December 2, and was buried at Rosedale, La., on December 3, Rev. G. A. LaGrange, her pastor, officiating. Mrs. John Dardenne was the sister of Misses Ella K. and Ora Hooper. She was a woman of few words, but she had a kind, tender and sympathetic heart. She caught the Christian spirit, for she supported the Gospel with her means and substances, and she would not give her place to anyone in the church.

G. A. LaGRANGE, P. C.

Once more death has entered into our community and borne from us a dear friend and relative, MR. WINBON CLEM BALDRIDGE. Mr. Baldrige was born near Fayette, Miss., on April 11, 1853, and was married to Miss Fannie E. Draughton in the spring of 1880. After her death, fourteen years ago, he moved to the Old Men's Home of Jackson, where he died, on December 20, 1932. His remains were brought to McNair, Miss., for burial by the side of his wife. Mr. Baldrige was a member of the Methodist church since childhood, and lived a consistent Christian life. He is survived by one brother and two sisters. Mr. J. S. Baldrige, of Hampton, Miss., Mrs. I. B. Draughton, of McNair, Miss., Mrs. T. D. Martin, of Longstreet, La., and numerous nieces and nephews.

HIS NEICE,

Miss Mabel Draughton, McNair, Miss.

MRS. EMILY JANE MOORE, SR., passed from this life quietly at her home in Oakland, Miss., December 23, 1932, into the greater life beyond. She was born February 16, 1841, near Charleston, Miss., the daughter of Benjamin and Sarah Ann Lott Carson. She was educated in the schools of Oakland and Charleston, Miss., also the Franklin Female Academy, Memphis, Tenn., from which she was graduated in June, 1859. The following August she and James Moore, Sr., of Oakland, were married. The happy union held for sixty-five years, until his death in 1924. Two sons, G. H. and B. C., with several grandchildren and great grandchildren survive her. Mrs. Moore united with the Methodist Church early in life. Hers was a life of loving service unto her family, her church and community. Her home was always the second home of her pastor. She was the teacher of the beginner class in Oakland Methodist Sunday School for probably fifty years. She was faithful to all the places of service in the church and community. She was loved and honored as a mother in Israel. Peace to her memory! May God's blessings abide upon her loved ones.

Her Pastor,

E. L. JERNIGAN.

LYNCHINGS ARE FEWER

According to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute, 8 persons were lynched in 1932. This is five less than the number 13 for 1931; 13 less than the number 21 for 1930; two less than the 10 of 1929; 3 less than the 11 for 1928, and 8 less than the 16 for 1927. Seven of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; four were taken from jails and three from officers of the law outside of jails. The bodies of two of the victims were burned.

Thirty-one instances were recorded in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Four of these were in Northern and Western states and 27 in Southern states. In 24 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 42 persons, seven white men and 35 negroes, 33 men and 2 women, were thus saved—from death at the hands of mobs.

WHAT CAN THE DRYS DO?

A wet declaration in a national political party platform is worth the paper on which it is written and nothing more.

It is not legally binding and it has no moral authority, for the simple reason that a party convention strays far beyond its sphere of representation in declaring itself upon a question which is a matter of conscience.

A political convention might just as well try to compel adherence to a particular form of religious worship as to attempt to coerce free American citizens in regard to the liquor issue.

There are only four men in this Republic who are bound by the Democratic and Republican platforms. They are the presidential and vice-presidential candidates. Even upon them the bonds rest lightly, inasmuch as these conventions were mob-dominated, so much that debate was made almost impossible, and orderly transaction of business out of the question. Those party platforms cannot bind the judicial department of our government; no judge will change his decision because of the hysteria and clamor that was heard at Chicago. The legislative department is not bound. No Senator or Congressman worthy of trust will repudiate his obligation to his constituency and his own pledged promise to stand for the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act because his party platform bound over a President. A Senator makes his own platform, a Congressman makes his promises, the members of the state legislatures go out and promise their people that if elected they will do and not do certain things. These pledges to the voters are the supreme obligations, therefore, the duty of the drys is clear.

What should dry Democrats and Republicans do? Vote for candidates for Congress who believe in the prohibition Amendment and who will sustain it in all needed legislation. What shall dry candidates for office do? Run on their own prohibition planks.

In the case of the Democrats, these candidates have the high precedent of the action taken by Mr. Al. Smith in 1928, although Mr. Smith did not have the excuse that the Democratic party had attempted to coerce him in matter of principle, for the Democratic plank was for law enforcement only.

As for the presidential candidates they need to answer satisfactorily these questions:

Will you enforce the law?

Will you appoint honest, courageous men to administer the law?

Will you name judges and other appointees in whom the people will be justified in having faith? In other words, "Will you hold true to your oath of office?" If so, you may well leave the question of the law to Congress, which has the duty under the Constitution to deal with it.—Methodist Clippingsheet.

REPORT OF THE WORSHIP COMMITTEE

"Your committee of worship goes to suggest that the month of January be observed as a church loyalty month under the title of 'Knowing Your Church.' The conviction of your committee is that one way to develop loyalty to the church is to supply facts and in some manner set forth the various programs in the church school and League of Nations department and also perhaps show the primary school. Leaders have been selected to handle the essential facts for each day. The following subjects are recommended:

January 1—Knowing New Year History

January 4—Knowing Your Church at Large

January 15—Knowing Your Church at Large

January 22—Knowing Your Church Missionary Work at Large

January 29—Knowing Your Church at Large

In the scripture lesson today we learn that the children of Israel sought a place in which to worship. God also craved their worship because He gave detailed instruction for the construction of the Tabernacle. He also provided them with leadership in the person of Moses. His same desire to worship as manifested in early Hebrew history was evident in the early history of Jackson. However, until 1836 this need was supplied only by chance passing of some traveling preacher. But in 1836 Thomas Ford, one of four sons of John Ford who came to Jackson in 1808 was made a missionary to the Jackson territory and at once organized a Methodist church. This first church organization held its services in a two-story brick building, called the State House, located at the corner of President and Capitol Streets, where the Baptist Book Store is now.

In 1836 the Mississippi Legislature reserved several plots of land for church purposes, intending to release to each denomination the particular land upon the payment of a nominal stipulated sum. In the same year the Methodist Church purchased a portion of the land set aside for them and paid the magnificent sum of fifty dollars for it. This site has been retained until today. The first building, which was immediately erected, faced the park instead of Congress Street. The first significant meeting to be held in the new building was the convention called for the purpose of arranging for the Centennial Celebration of Methodism which was held in 1839. In 1842 the church took great pride in entertaining the Mississippi Conference. The congregation grew and the church prospered until the War between the States. During this time the church building was used as a hospital and a store house. The soldiers destroyed all the records of the church except two. One record stated that the first persons to join the church was a man and his wife named Finucane. The other was a statement to the effect that the janitor was a faithful old negro by the name of Uncle Jeff.

The second church building was made possible by an initial gift of several shares of stock by Mrs. Minerva Sharkey. The shares of stock were sold for $5,000. The congregation, consisting now of 300 members, resolutely set about to raise the balance of $20,000. Mrs. Thomas Green and Mrs. W. J. Brown did much toward securing the money. The church was many years in construction, but in 1883 Bishop Charles B. Galloway laid the cornerstone and indicated the building. The cornerstone of this building is preserved in the present building.

The new Galloway Memorial church building was begun in 1913 under the pastorate of Rev. A. T. Smith. It was completed in 1915 under Rev. W. G. Henry. The building was dedicated in 1917 by Bishop E. R. Hendrix to the memory of Bishop Charles B. Galloway, who had spent several years of his ministry as pastor of the church.

There are a host in the present membership of Galloway who are descendants of the families who worshipped in all three of these buildings. Some of these members are: Mrs. Charles B. Galloway, Mrs. John Starnes, Miss Molly Shelton, Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Patton, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Patton, Sr., Mrs. Bessie Nuzent (H. R.), Shanda, Mrs. W. L. Hemmingsway, Mrs. Minnie Manship Phelps, Miss Kate Manship, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Voight, and others.

It is apparent to each of us that steady progress has been the trend of the church for the last 97 years as it was in each successive building. The key to its success has been the desire to worship coupled with a spirit of devotion and co-operation. Just as those whose loyalty and effort resulted in the church's present achievements may we, each member of this department, give to Galloway Memorial Church a like measure of devotion and loyalty to carry on the unfinished task which other hands have so nobly begun.

A COLD PASSES THRU 3 STAGES

And It is Far Easier Relieved in the First than in the Second or Third Stages!

A COLD ordinarily progresses through three stages: The Dry Stage, the first 24 hours; the Watery Secretion Stage, from 1 to 3 days; and the Mucous Secretion Stage. Once a cold gets beyond the first stage it is far more difficult to relieve.

Fourfold Effect for Immediate Relief

The wise thing to do when you feel a cold coming on is to take Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine stops a cold quickly because it does the four necessary things. It opens the bowels. It kills the cold germs and fever in the system. It relieves the headache and grippy feeling. It tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack. That is the treatment you want—complete, thorough and effective. Anything less is trying with a cold.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is absolutely safe to take. It contains no narcotics and produces no bad after-effects. Every drug store in America sells Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. Handy, pocket-size box, cellophane-wrapped. Get a box today and keep it handy as the "stitch in time."

Remember Only Medicine Helps A Sore Throat

Modern medical science now throws an entirely new light on sore throat. A way that eases the pain, rawness and irritation in as little as two or three minutes.

Results are among the most extraordinary in medical science. On doctors' advice, millions are following this way... discarding old-time "washes" and "antiseptics." For it has been found that only medicine can help a sore throat.

Simple To Do. All you do is crush and dissolve three BAYER Aspirin Tablets in half a glass of water. Gargle with it twice—as pictured above. If you have any indication of a cold—before gargling take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets with a full glass of water. This is to combat any signs of cold that have gone into your system. Keep on taking if cold has a "hold." For Genuine Bayer Aspirin will not harm you. Your doctor will tell you, it does not depress the heart. Get a box of 12 or a bottle of 100 at any drug store.

Reduces Infection, Eases Pain Instantly. Gargling with Bayer Aspirin will do three things: Relieve soreness at once. Allay inflammation. AND—reduce infection; which is the important thing in fighting a sore throat.

It requires medicine—like BAYER ASPIRIN—to do these things! That is why throat specialists throughout America are prescribing this BAYER gargle in place of old-time ways. Results are quick and amazing.

Be careful, however, that you get real BAYER Aspirin Tablets for this purpose. For they dissolve completely enough to gargle without leaving irritating particles. Watch this when you buy.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

SHOULD OUR BISHOPS TAKE A CUT in salary? This is a question that comes to this editor's desk from time to time. Frequently it comes up in conversation. Occasionally a brother accompanies his remarks upon the subject with the strong hint that we will not print such matter.

Of course, the one making such a statement as the above, we feel, fails to understand either our bishops or the editor. Our bishops are the instruments of our Church. They were elected by the General Conference before they were consecrated to this high office. They are our brethren and they are concerned for the welfare of the entire Church. They desire to know what our people are thinking, and they ask no special protection. And this editor has no desire to keep from the columns of our paper matter pertaining to the welfare of the Church. And, certainly, at a time like this, the matter of finances enjoys peculiar prominence.

We, therefore, proceed, with due appreciation for our Church and the problems it is facing today, to answer this question in the affirmative. Yes, our bishops should take a cut. There are probably others who think otherwise and must be credited with equally as great wisdom in their opinion.

Our position in the matter is not arrived at by the feeling that our bishops, out of their resources, are not making sacrificial gifts to the support of the Church and its great causes. What they are giving may amount to more than the cuts that others have taken. Their liberality is not to be questioned.

Neither do we take this position because we feel that our bishops are overpaid. Their duties are strenuous, and their obligations are widespread and insistent. They are entirely worthy of the salary they draw, but are not to be measured by it. It has been provided by our Church, and the Church does not overestimate the work of our chief pastors.

And it is to be remembered that some of our pastors in larger churches draw salaries higher than those received by the bishops.

Some have suggested that the salary should be kept what it is as a kind of support to the dignity of the office. We appreciate fully this suggestion, still we do not regard it as of sufficient weight to merit serious consideration. What price dignity? Paul's dignity did not seem to require any such provision. John Wesley did not require it. And it would be difficult to find support for it in practice and principles of Jesus, who, for our sake, became poor. Such argument might obtain in the ranks of those of the world, but we are not of the world, and do not accept its standards.

"The active bishops are paid $6,000 per year, with a maximum of $1,500 for house rent and clerical help and $500 per year for traveling expenses. The salary of a retired bishop is $3,000 per year. The compensation for the widows of bishops is $1,200 per year, with an allowance of $300 per year for each dependent child under eighteen years of age." (Yearbook 1931-1932, page 369).

It is to be observed that the bishop's salary enjoys some protection lacking in other fields of ministerial compensation. There may be a few pastors drawing a larger salary, but when they are superannuated they automatically take the position of their other brethren. The bishop enjoys considerable advantage at this point. The salaries of other ministers, missionaries and church workers face greater hazards, and for them there is no special protection or provision other than the pitifully limited amount now provided by the Church.

Something is to be said for a cut on the grounds of the enlarged purchasing power of the dollar over what it was a very few years ago. It is said by some that a dollar today will do almost as much as one dollar and seventy cents not a great while ago. At least there is considerable increase in purchasing power. This is a very practical approach to the matter.

We believe the bishops should volunteer a reduction because we think that it would be one of the shortest ways to identification with the hardships faced by many of our people at this time. Their example would be of tremendous value, and their counsel would be greatly enhanced.

Our pastors, missionary secretaries, missionaries, and other church workers, and presiding elders have had this experience. A moment's glance at the salaries assessed for pastors and the amounts paid to them is sufficient to cause reflection. Some pastors and others have volunteered reductions, while others have had it thrust upon them. Our presiding elders automatically receive their reductions along with their pastors.

Missionary secretaries, other secretaries and workers on our boards have volunteered reductions. So have our college presidents and faculties. It will be a long time before our Church knows the complete story of heroic and sportsmanlike attitude of these valuable servants of the Church.

In the fields of commercial endeavor, many have received cuts and have come to take it as a matter of course. Wages have been reduced and jobs have been closed. Multitudes have joined the vast and unofficered army of the unemployed among whom are many of our own Methodist people. And we need not forget that we must rely upon the rank and file of our church for payment of the bills of the Church. Why should they not be concerned about these matters? Have we heard of any disturbance among taxpayers in recent years?

Our bishops, because of the size of their districts and the character of their work, are put at too great a distance from the hearts of the membership of the Church. This works to the disadvantage of both the bishop and the people. Nothing at this time, we feel, could bring them so close to the people as a voluntary reduction in salary, and the announcement of the same.

Furthermore, our people may be assured that our bishops will take the proper action concerning this matter.

* * *

AND THEY DO TAKE the cut. After the above editorial had been prepared for some days the report of the meeting of the bishops in Shreveport came to us. In this report we note the following paragraph: "Dr. Alfred F. Smith, one of the publishing agents and one of the treasurers of the Episcopal Fund, came before the bishops to make a report of the status of that fund. Necessarily with the payment on the general benevolences brought to a low percentage this fund has suffered. The bishops took action asking that the treasurers reduce the monthly payments on the salaries of the bishops by sixteen and two-thirds per cent, but that no reduction be made in the payments to the widows of bishops."

...

TELL IT. We mean if you appreciate a man, tell him so. It is an old principle, but it needs to be put into more constant practice.

Now, of course, we do not mean that kind of gush that makes one feel as if he has been clothed in lather. No, not that.

Have you learned the art of saying "Thank you"? Not just these words, of course, but what they stand for. It can be spoken in a thousand ways. Some do it with a letter, some say it flowers, others with a present, a book, a card, or something else that speaks the word of appreciation.

What brought this to my mind were the letters we have received during the year commending our work with the Advocate. With such a few adverse criticisms, and they well-intended, it has been a great delight. We wish to acknowledge that appreciation expressed not only in numbers of letters and personal words, but in the attempt to carry on the work. And it has come from so many sources, so many different people. We have been on the receiving end of the line, and it has enlarged our hearts.

But getting back to the principle. It is not enough to feel gratitude and appreciation. It must be expressed. An emotion that remains without a tongue tends to shrivel and die. This is true both of the

Under the preacher's eye followed a more solemn than their leader. He was out of dinner with one of them when the latter drew attention to the place, owing to the laughter of the house, such as, or embarrassment.

Wesley looked at it admiringly, and observed: "It is a beautiful band."

After Wesley's death, I read & recovered that he had a copy of Shakespeare with wide margins in which he had made many notes. His executors told me they did not like to think he had laughed at the antics of Polonius and Antiphras.

He also was troubled by a letter from some deafened prophets who told him he was to be "annihilated" and that they were to wait till it was done. He politely showed them into what he called a "tolerably old room" and sent them out with some stink-bread or fire-stick which he said "they quietly went away."

He guarded that he spent in incredible hours with his "cat," his greatest passion in life. Ideas that ever fall under my notice, I really believe, were he seriously to set about it, he could invent the best mousetrap that ever was in the world."

Wesley did not like to give in to the infirmities of age. One day he was walking up a hill with several of his preachers when he was getting out of breath which he was unwilling to confess. Stopping suddenly he said I am surprised to find you at your end of taste. You are pressing up the hill regardless of the beautiful prospect that is the situation which met in Miami January 1962. Besides her own and other parties, and was herself from the viewpoint of program, education and inspiration. 25 men and women were present and none can tell if these were members of the Communist Party.

Dr. R. A. Johnson, District Secretary W. M. S., gathered the women together at the success hour and addressed them concerning the work of the women.

Rev. H. A. Cook, a keynoter from Union, Miss., spoke upon the subject of "Evangelism," and emphasized the qualifications of soul winners. The early church was busy in bringing the lost heathens, which is the business of the modern church.

The Church is giving us a great program in evangelism, which we should come to."
He stated that we have the desire for souls, we love for souls, and that we suffer for souls.

Church, "and that the Church needs is a re-

Mr. D. Hawkins, Conference Missionary Secretary, imparted necessary information concerning the program of the church, and exhorted that the church carry on its work.

"God can use us in doing the things He wants to do, and we need to depend on Him rather than upon our own resources."

"In the midst of difficulties look to God."

"Further reduction in giving means the closing of our mission fields, and the calling back of missionaries."

"Forget conditions and depression and think of privilege and opportunity."

"Let this be a year of service, in which all give something and have a part in the program of the Church."

Dr. R. P. Henry missionary to China, spoke twice during the day, and told about the work in his particular field. He recited messages from Chinese Christians to the Christians of America, and gave many instances of loyalty and self-denial.

"The situation in the world today is complex."

"We need the courage to be loyal to God amid all circumstances."

"Let God have His own way with you."

"Christians can do the impossible in the strength of God."

"A penny each meal by all Methodists will pay assessments."

"The Chinese feel the touch of Christ, and have admiration and love for Him."

"Through the power of redeeming love they give up evil habits and reform."

"Among the Chinese there is splendid Christian character and leadership."

Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Conference lay leader, spoke upon the plan and purpose of the Board of Lay Activities.

"Responsibility is great upon the Church, which needs awakening."

"If there is not an awakening in the Church, the future will be sadly unattended to."

"There is no excuse for not putting the gospel in the uttermost ends of the earth."

"Today there is the danger of the failure of the Church."

"The Church means much to the government and to the home."

"As a mass of the Church, we are not doing our duty."

"Every pastor needs the work and activity of the laymen."

"The entire membership of the Church is not alive to the duties and responsibilities of the Church."

"We call upon laymen to dedicate themselves to the Kingdom of God."

"Serve the Lord and do your part out of a small income."

"Expect more from the children than memorizing the golden text."

Each speaker at the Institute recognized the great problems which confront the world today, and called upon the Church to fulfill its mission of evangelization; otherwise, the future of the world is indeed clouded with uncertainty.

The Institute enjoyed the hospitality of the Biloxi church, and the splendid lunch provided by Brother Power and his members.

The garments of a presiding elder seem to fit Brother Porter, which he is wearing with dignity and efficiency.

The pastors of the district are cheerful and determined to give of their best to the Master. They are organizing for a year of activity.

VICKSBURG KINGDOM EXTENSION INSTITUTE

The Kingdom Extension Institute for the Vicksburg district was held in the Port Gibson Methodist Church January 6. It was a season of spiritual strength and reviving interest in the cause of Christ. The dawn was dark, and the weather threatened, a heavy fog lay upon the highways. This, however, did not interfere with the attendance, as nearly all charges were represented, pastors and laymen being in attendance.

Reverend Henry G. Hawkins, the capable presiding elder, conducted the opening exercises, reading a chapter from the Book of Isaiah, commenting on the same in an interesting and thoughtful way.

Dr. R. T. Henry, of the Missionary force in China, brought the principal message of the Institute, which thrilled the hearts of all. His portrayal of the stalwart faith, Christian fortitude and sacrificial service of the Missionaries made a wonderful impression. With such examples of consecration and self-denial, the Church at home should rally her forces, renew her courage and increase her gifts for the spread of the Gospel in other lands.

The ever-present Missionary, W. D. Hawkins, was on hand with a word of good cheer distributing literature and books for the cultural period. The institute was favored with the presence of Dr. C. W. Crisler and Reverend O. S. Lewis, of Brookhaven.

The members of the institute were served by the ladies of First Church with a very appetizing plate lunch, which was very much enjoyed and appreciated.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT INSTITUTE

"Dear Brother Raulins: We had a great Missionary Institute at Cleveland, Miss., last Tuesday, the 10th. The attendance of both preachers and laymen was far above the usual, and the stirring addresses of Dr. Manget, for 23 years a medical missionary in China, will not soon be forgotten."

We expect to see a great improvement this year in the Greenville District in Kingdom Extension and Benevolence offerings as a result of this meeting.

Yours fraternally,

H. P. LEWIS.

FROM THE JOURNAL OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

By Rev. H. G. Hawkins

A hurried survey of statistics given in the printed Journal of the Mississippi Conference, recently issued, reveals interesting items, several of which we mention here.

Taking two charges in each district which had the largest number of accessions by profession of faith, we have the following list: Adams, Centenary, Taylorsville, Lucedale, Yazoo Circuit, Capital St., Central, East End, Raleigh, Burnside, Saucier and Nugent, Main St. (Biloxi), Gloster, Roxie, and Woodville (a tie with Roxie).

There were eighteen charges that paid salaries in full, but only five that paid the General and Conference Work in full. These five are: Centenary, Galloway Memorial, Capital St., Millsaps Memorial, East End. After these, the following seem to make the best showing: Mt. Olive, Forest and Morton, Port Gibson, Woodville.

According to the Journal, the highest valuations of church building properties are: Crawford St., $165,000; Capital St., $163,400; Centenary, $150,000. The charges carrying largest debts are: Centenary, $74,000; Crawford St., $57,750. The highest valued parsonages are: Capital St., $15,000; Hazlehurst, $14,000; Court St., $12,500. The largest amounts of insurance carried are: Galloway Memorial, $100,800; Crawford St., $90,000; Capital St., $87,700; Centenary, $75,000; Central, $66,500.

In one or two of the Committee reports there is wrong spelling. But the work of the editor and printer seems well nigh perfect. By some means the long row of decrease figures in recapitulation of Table No. 3 got on the increase line.

The "Save the Advocate" campaign comes to a close on February 1. To-date, less than 50 per cent of the anticipated receipts have been received. Over 200 charges have not responded in any form. The asking is very small—the Saving of the Advocate for the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi is most important. Let all pastors whose charges have not responded see to it that their quotas are raised. Just a little effort, the amount of which any one individual can assume, will insure the continuance of the New Orleans Christian Advocate which is now in its eightieth year of service to the Church.

bad and the good. If you want to stifle and destroy that mean impulse or feeling, deny it expression. If you want it to master you, give it speech. If you want appreciation to grow in you, give it expression. An emotion of appreciation unexpressed is incomplete. It falls short of its goal.

There is much in confession. Not just of wrongs, but of fine feeling. That is why we sing hymns. Our religion is a singing religion. Rob Christianity of its hymns and it will weaken if not die. Songs celebrate and wing the finer emotions. Music and poetry are the servants of the finer feelings.

Good people are too prone to cultivate the negative virtues to the neglect of the positive. Faith flies with two wings, the negative and the positive. Let us get a balance. We need to improve the positive impulse of gratitude and appreciation by giving it expression.

Appreciation operates in two directions, toward the giver and toward the receiver. For the receiver many a time it means encouragement to make a braver, better fight. For the giver, while it costs him little, means a larger heart and a greater gratitude, so that his giving becomes a boomerang of receiving, and forms an endless chain of blessing.

CONGRESS IS HAVING A TIME getting that Booze Bill into presentable shape. Speaker Garner and his House tried to stampee it through somewhat after the fashion of the Chicago convention. For this he and the House should be forever ashamed, and if they are not we shall, as God-fearing and honest citizens, try to liquidate the debt of shame. For a supposedly dignified body to adopt such a method condemns both them and those of us who elected them. The undue haste betrays a lack of confidence in their cause and a lack of respect for the American people.

The delay has given our lawmakers a little time to begin to think. The Eighteenth Amendment was not put into the Constitution the "first hour" of any Congress, and it was not put in there solely by Congressmen. It took a long time, about a hundred years, and it took a big majority of the American people.

And whatever happens about the matter, the final decision is with the people. If enough of us have so completely lost our sanity and steadiness as to desire to reinvoke the curse upon ourselves and our children, we may do so. On the other hand, if we expect to keep faith with our fathers and our children, we must rally to the call and by our influence and vote close the door. This is patriotism and Christianity. A part of "The American's Creed" is, "I therefore believe it my duty to my country to love it—and to defend it against all enemies," liquor included.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

"We shall be able to do more for the paper soon." Rev. H. A. Wood, pastor of our church at Union, Miss.

Rev. W. R. Lott, pastor at Aberdeen, Miss., and contributing editor of the Advocate, has just favored us with some subscriptions.

With strong words of appreciation and commendation for the Advocate, Mrs. J. B. Cassity, Ruston, La., renews her subscription.

You preachers turn to that notice from Bishop Dulose where he tells about that good theological journal, Christian Faith and Life.

Rev. W. H. Giles, pastor at Tallulah, La., reports that his work has had a splendid beginning. He anticipates a great year, this being his fourth with the Tallulah people.

Attention, Boards of Stewards! Dr. J. L. Neill, pastor First Church, Gulfport, Miss., is boasting of a lovely General Electric radio, a Christmas present from the board of stewards.

We have come to have great appreciation for the "American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation." Their New Year's Message on another page is worth your reading. Look it up.

From the board of stewards of Tylertown, Miss., comes a check for $4 for the campaign, and with it a strong hint that the Missionary Society is about to send its quota also. That is fine.

"Thank God for the 'wherewith' to bring the dear old Advocate to my home for another year.

TWO MORE WEEKS

Two more weeks and the "Save the Advocate Campaign" closes. February 1 is Judgment Day. Fifty per cent of the charges have not been heard from. Have we kept faith with the unanimous pledges of our Conferences? Have we given our people a chance to respond to the call? Come on. The train is at the station and the conductor has called, "All aboard." You will have to hustle to make it.

D. B. RAULINS, Editor.

May He send his choicest blessings to all its readers," writes Mrs. J. S. Chennault, of Gilbert, La.

The local paper at Greenwood, Miss., generously commends the pageant, "The Coming of the Wise Men," which was staged by the young people of our First Church. Dr. E. H. Cunningham is the pastor.

"With very best wishes for the success of the Advocate, and with expressions of the highest appreciation of its weekly visits to my home," is the way Rev. B. F. Jones, Brookhaven, Miss., signs off in a letter that brought his renewal.

Mr. C. Krause, of Sicily Island, La., a long-time subscriber, expresses the wish that he were able to give a number of free subscriptions of the Advocate to friends of his. That is a good idea. Maybe you wish to do the same thing.

Rev. T. M. Bradley, our pastor at Greenville last year, seems to have broken a record in additions to the church. He received 260 people into the church. That great church now has a membership of 948, the largest in its history.

"I am 89 years old and love to read the Advocate yet. I think you are giving us a splendid paper. Success to you. Eli Cupit, McCall Creek, Miss." That is the spirit in which he renews his subscription. We wish this veteran a good year.

It is good to know that Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor Trinity Church, Ruston, La., who has been down with pneumonia, is making most encouraging progress toward recovery. He is deeply grateful to all those who thought of and prayed for him in his illness.

"Have been reading the Advocate for 50 years. Would hate so much to give it up," writes Mrs. O. L. Savage, Sumner, Miss., as she renews her subscription. If you all pull together, each doing his bit, there will be no cause for the Advocate's coming short.

By special invitation of Mrs. J. S. Levi, president of the Crawford Street Auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society, Vicksburg, Miss., Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, Conference society president, visited with that auxiliary on January 2 and made a most helpful address.

Sister Rickey, wife of Rev. H. W. Rickey, our pastor at Gilbert, La., has been on the sick list, having taken ill on the way to the new charge. She is recovering after a four-week's siege. We are glad to hear this. Her friends will rejoice to know that she is improving.

Rev. C. T. Floyd, pastor at Amory, Miss., has started his second year as pastor of that great church, with promise of this being the best year of all. His church was one of the very few churches in the Conference to pay benevolences in full. All praise to those churches.

Mississippi, from the standpoint of employment, with one exception, ranks highest. Vermont alone leading. Only 3.3 per cent of its working population are out of work. Oklahoma has the highest percentage of unemployment with 60.4 per cent of its working population.

Rev. R. S. Walton, pastor at Amite, La., who makes the Advocate a part of his ministry, has just sent in some renewals. We very much appreciate this good co-operation of our pastors. If the Advocate is worthwhile, tell it to the people; if there is something wrong about it, tell us.

We so much appreciate the assistance of our Missionary Societies and other women of the Church in carrying forward the work of the Advocate. From Mrs. R. A. Tucker, Aberdeen, Miss., we have just received some subscriptions and a contribution to the "Save the Advocate" campaign.

I find myself calling your attention to the material in the Advocate. Well, we are a little afraid you may miss some of it. From "A Preacher's Wife," you will find another interesting suggestion about the Superannuate Home. Let's keep that matter up until we do something about it.

Rev. J. Tillery Lewis, a superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference, now of Hazlehurst, Miss., is reported improving in health. His many friends will rejoice to know that it is hoped that in a few more months he will be able to get around with some comfort and pleasure to himself.

Rev. R. S. Lawson, a superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference, is confined to his room and to his bed most of the time at Memphis, Tenn. He wants the Advocate, but feels that he can hardly afford it. One of you North Mississippi fellows send us the renewal for Brother Lawson's paper.

Mrs. C. P. Evans, Waynesboro, Miss., whose husband spent 39 years of faithful service in the Mississippi Conference, renews her subscription. We hope the Advocate may continue to bless these good women who live with the memories of happy years spent with their sainted husbands in the pastorate.

The Missionary Committee of Aberdeen Church has designated February 7, 8 and 9 as the dates for their School of Missions. The pastor of the church is using the lessons in the elective course on "Winning People for Christ" as a basis for prayer meeting discussions looking forward to a revival in March.

Again we hear from a good woman who finds it impossible to secure the full subscription price for the Advocate but is anxious to have the paper come to her. All of you who are waiting for a chance to give a lift where it will mean much, send in a dollar or two, saying, "Put this on subscriptions where it will count most."

We are indebted to Rev. A. K. McLellan, executive secretary of the Board of Christian Education, Louisiana Conference, for a nice little folder giving the special church days for this year. Brother McLellan is working hard in the promotion of the Conference work. Let all our churches help him reach these goals that are of so much importance to us all.

Preachers' children. Among those nineteen students of Millsaps who made the much coveted all-one level in scholarship, we find the names of Misses Juanita and Onita Winstead, twin-daughters of our good pastor, Rev. T. B. Winstead, of Dekalb, Miss. Give them a hand, girls and parents. These girls are seniors. It is great to make "A" in every subject.

Rev. L. P. Wasson, pastor at Clarksdale, Miss., is demonstrating what zeal and hard work can do even in a time of great difficulty. Just a glance at his report at last Annual Conference as given in the Minutes will show: Members received, 166; paid Conference Collections in full, $2000. It seems that every organization flourished during the year.

In a letter renewing her subscription, Mrs. W. C. Harris, Dallas, Texas, speaks of the struggle of the Advocate. Then she says, "If all the church members were as hungry for the things good for the soul that I find in the Advocate, I believe the struggle would cease. My prayer is that more people wake up to their real needs. There is nothing that takes the place of our church paper."

The Institute of Citizenship and the Georgia Press Institute are to meet at Emory University, February 7-11. President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt is scheduled to speak before these bodies. "The Press and Public Opinion," is the general theme of the Emory Institute of Citizenship for 1933. In addition to Mr. Roosevelt a number of prominent leaders are on the schedule. These institutes are in their sixth year, and are co-operating in the arrangement of program.

Upon the announcement that the Kingdom Extension offering this year might be taken on Easter Sunday, Dr. A. W. Turner, of Shreveport, wrote urging that the Sunday before Easter be observed and thus protect Orphanage Day. We feel that in the Louisiana Conference some such arrangement will be made. We shall be unwilling to jeopardize the welfare of the Orphanage, of whose interests we are jealous; and we are sure that great church obligations do not conflict and that the right arrangement can be made.

This is the spirit. "Here is six dollars to be applied to the 'Save the Advocate'." This comes from the Noxapater charge. "Hope to be able to send more as I put the proposition to the other three churches. Was glad to help out in this plan while I was at Shuqulak and I am glad of the opportunity to help from here." That is from Rev. W. W. (Billie) Milligan, who has been cordially received at Noxapater, Miss. He finds a good spirit of brotherliness among his people. "We are strong for the Advocate, and with you 100 per cent in any undertaking for the saving of our great paper. It gets better all the time." And he speaks highly of his presiding elder, Dr. V. C. Curtis.

The pastor-host of the next Annual Conference for North Mississippi will be Rev. J. D. Wroten. Brother Wroten has served in recent years as pastor of New Albany and Indianola. At the latter place he saw finished under his pastorate a fine adequate church building. He is well known among his brethren for his interest in all the work of the church. A strong preacher, a faithful pastor, with it all a genial Christian spirit which gives him an entrance into the hearts of all the people. He married Miss Bertie Gray Steen, his classmate at Millsaps College. Five attractive children bless their home. Certainly North Mississippi Methodists will be graciously received and entertained in the hospitable city of Water Valley. They still remember their happy experience there in 1922.

Let us tell you something. "The Bolivar Commercial" is a semi-weekly paper published at Cleveland, Miss. A short while ago it devoted an entire page headed, "Cleveland Pastors Unite In Appeal to Members." And that appeal was for the reading and support of church publications. The Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist papers were represented. Rev. Melville Johnson, our pastor, had a great word for our papers, including the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Let us not forget that these church papers are representing interests of great importance to which the regular press generally gives little attention if not opposition. Bishop Cannon is quoted as saying that we must rely chiefly upon the church press for dependable information on the liquor question. We appreciate the co-operation of these good county papers.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE JOURNAL, A CORRECTION

My attention has been called to some discrepancies in the Plan of Unified System of Mississippi Methodist Colleges as contained in report No. 2 of the Board of Christian Education, pages 56-59 of the Journal of the Conference of 1932. It is regretted that there are some omissions in the plan as published, but the copy furnished for publication seems to be defective, and the Journal agrees exactly with the plan as given in the report submitted by the board and adopted by the Conference. The editor had no other copy than that supplied by the Board. The failure seems to be in the fact that some stenographer failed to make complete and corrected copies of the original.

J. T. Calhoun, secretary of the commission on the plan, makes the corrections in the following statement:

The Journal of the Mississippi Annual Conference of 1932 contains several mistakes in the record of the "Plan for Unified System of Mississippi Methodist Colleges." Apparently, these mistakes arose because of the omission of several lines. These omissions appear in Sections III and V. We are reproducing these sections correctly with the omitted portions underlined. The corrected portions should read as follows:

Section III

Administration

(a) The Millsaps System of Colleges (Millsaps College, Grenada College, and Whitworth College) shall be operated by the board of trustees of Millsaps College, which board shall elect a president of the Millsaps System of Colleges, who shall be the president of Millsaps College, Jackson, Mississippi; president of Grenada College, Grenada, Mississippi; and president of Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Mississippi. The aforesaid board of trustees of Millsaps College, Jackson, Mississippi, shall perform all the duties and have all the rights in connection with each of the three colleges, as are usually exercised by trustees of such institutions, except where herein otherwise provided.

Finances

(d) All indebtedness against Grenada College at the close of the 1931-1932 session and whatever indebtedness may accrue in the operation of Grenada College under provisions of this plan thereafter shall be a liability against the property of Grenada College; and, the liquidation of the present or future indebtedness of Grenada College shall be the responsibility of the board of trustees of Grenada College, who are the agents of the North Mississippi Annual Conference.

(e) All indebtedness against Whitworth College at the close of the 1931-1932 session shall be adjusted by the board of trustees of Millsaps College and the board of trustees of Whitworth College, as to the distribution or placement of liability; and in the event said boards of trustees are unable to agree then the matter shall be referred to the 1932 session of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Annual Conferences for determination.

All indebtedness which may accrue in the operation of Whitworth College under the operation of this plan after the close of the 1931-1932 session and whatever amount of the indebtedness accrued prior to the close of the 1931-1932 session is assumed, if any, by the board of trustees of Whitworth College, shall be a liability against the property of Whitworth College; and the liquidation of the indebtedness against Whitworth College shall be the responsibility of the trustees of Whitworth College, who are the agents of the Mississippi Annual Conference.

The remainder of the record seems to be correct.

Faithfully,

W. B. JONES, Secretary.

CORRECTIONS FOR GLOSTER, ROXIE AND NEBO REPORTS

In the published Journal of the Mississippi Conference neither the Gloster nor Nebo charge is credited with anything paid on Conference and General Work, whereas they paid and reported as follows: Gloster charge, $130, from the following congregations, Gloster, $111; Mt. Carmel, $3; Union, $5; Mt. Vernon, $5; Stephenson, $4; Hopewell, $2; Nebo charge, $43; from the following congregations, Blue Hill, $1; Cool Spring, $21; Nebo, $21.

For amounts paid on district work the Roxie pastor properly reported as follows: Greendale, $1; Knoxville, $6; but neither of these amounts appears in the published Journal. The pastor also correctly reported $10 paid by Roxie; but the published Journal has it $39, which figures should have been in Kingdom Extension column, instead of District work column.

For the Nebo charge in the Journal nothing appears as paid on district work, whereas $20 was reported and paid, as follows: Blue Hill, $2; Cool Spring, $6; Nebo, $11; Oak Grove, $1.

In the pastor's report for district work from Gloster charge, there is a slight error in that Mt. Vernon's amount paid was $3.50, instead of just $1 reported.

SUPERANNUATE HOMES

By A Preacher's Wife

Sister Porter has set a wonderful example. Louisiana needs "Homes" for these ministers who have spent all their meager salaries while serving the people.

Why can't a part of Mansfield College property be used for homes or apartments for some of our superannuates? The property is so commodious that these superannuates need not interfere with the League Assembly. Their families could keep up the grounds and be an addition to the Mansfield church. It strikes me also that some of the superannuates might live comfortably on the Bynum Farm. Will wiser heads please take up these ideas and see what can be done?

BEWARE!

By Rev. W. H. Giles

One "Brother Ward," traveling over the country and visiting churches, claiming to be a member of First Methodist Church, Birmingham, Ala., and claiming to be a returned missionary from China, and having traveled over our missionary fields with Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, is reported by the Bishop as being an "impostor." He appeared at our church a few days ago, was introduced to our Sunday school, made a very interesting missionary talk, and used blackboard with "acrostical" ability. He is a man some fifty-five or sixty years old, weighing about two hundred pounds, ruddy in complexion, partially grey. This brother is very clever and able in his "business." People seem to want to give him what he's designing for—money.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE GROUP INSURANCE

Those who have not paid what is due to February 10, I appeal to you to send check as soon as you read this, for it is both important and necessary. I will thank those who can pay for the quarter that will begin February 10 and end May 10, to do so now, as it will greatly help NOW. Some of the members do not appear to realize that premiums have to be paid each month on every member of the group, and that means that some one has to put this in for those who do not remit, and you may guess who he is. Will appreciate a response from each one in either class mentioned.

PROHIBITION CONFERENCE

While you received a news release saying that the Church Conference on the Temperance situation would be held on March 7 and 8, instead of the earlier date in January, we are repeating this notification for your benefit and the benefit of your readers. The conference will be held on March 7 and 8 in Washington, D. C. Remarkable interest is being manifested.

"CHRISTIAN FAITH AND LIFE"

By Bishop H. M. DuBose

The church reviews and other theological publications, long counted of prime importance to religious thought and life, practically without exception, have demised, as a result of the current economic depression. "Christian Faith and Life," monthly conservative theological journal of critical and discussional vigor, has weathered the storm and is serving, through the contributions of its editorial corps, a useful end to the ministers of the evangelical churches. I have accepted, without salary, the post of associate editor of this magazine, and am writing to commend it to the support of my fellow ministers in the South. The subscription price is $2 the year; single copies 20 cents. Send a full subscription, or order a single copy, at once. Send to Frank J. Boyer, Publisher, Reading, Pennsylvania.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

Brother Higginbotham, at Walnut Grove, donated a nice mass of backbones and a gallon of molasses to the executive secretary.

This was surely appreciated. It also makes for humility and a deeper sense of God's care.

A churchman invited us to the district conference meeting in his church and insisted that we come. He said, "we are mighty poor people, but you would never know it from the tables we set." Many of us would be glad to be able to have that sort of eating as a steady thing. I am greatly appreciative that our people are dividing with their preachers and if our clothes can just hold out until spring we will be alright.

Rev. R. A. Allums, pastor at Ellisville, is beginning a fine year at Ellisville. Good congregations are greeting him at all of his appointments. His people have presented him with a nice gold watch so he could tell when to begin his services, and I suggested that they were willing to pay for "stopping" time. It was my privilege to preach to the Pleasant Ridge congregation second Sunday. A very fine congregation greeted us.

"The Jones County Junior College has a large student body. Our Methodist students appreciate their church privileges. It was my privilege to visit this student body and speak to them. It was a most happy occasion for me. "Rev. Ira Williams has begun a fine year's work at Morton. Morton has already asked for more time and the work has been divided and more time given. They are planning to begin soon the building of a parsonage. This progress shows that it was wise to divide the charge.

"Good reports came from Forest. Congregations are good and the spirit of the church is fine. Rev. J. W. Sells is promoting a most vigorous program.

The district organization has been perfected in the Jackson district. The Hattiesburg district and the Newton district. This organization should put new life in the district program and give to the district directors larger opportunities of service.

The Christian Education Institutes will be held as follows:

Meridian district, at Enterprise, Feb. 2.
Newton district, at Rose Hill, Feb. 3.
Seashore district, at Long Beach, Feb. 8.
Hattiesburg district, at Petal, Feb. 9.
Jackson district, at Canton, Feb. 10.
Brookhaven dist., at Summit, Feb. 14.
Vicksburg dist., at Fayette, Feb. 16.

There will be a uniform program. All programs will begin at 9:45 a. m. All programs will close not later than 2:15 p. m. It is hoped that every church in every district will have a representative at a district institute.

The Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise has been the means of enabling the Board of Missions to carry on. While in our Conference this fund has dropped off throughout the church at large the income from this fund has been larger than last year. This is gratifying news. It is our prayer that our Conference will again contribute more than it did in 1931 and take our place with other progressive missionary Conferences.

Every church should make an offering for this most needed of all causes and put on the educational program that their people would be increasing their activities continually.

Rev. J. F. McClelland is happily located in the Carthage circuit parsonage. He was talking to me about having three hams. I do not know what it meant, but he has always told the truth, but it is mighty hard to believe.

Rev. H. J. Moore is happy in his location at Lake. His people have received him graciously and from expressions heard there will be a good year on this charge.

Brother and Sister Rutledge are happily located at Homewood. They were graciously received and begin the Bright, Fresher After Taking Black-Draught

"Seven years ago, I was troubled with constipation," writes Mrs. L. E. Williams, of Jackson, Miss. "My mother told me she thought it would help me to take Black-Draught. She had used it herself and it had helped her. I found it relieved me of this troublesome complaint. I suffered from sick headache and biliousness which made me feel dull and lifeless. I had no ambition to do anything. I felt bright and fresh after I took Thedford's Black-Draught. It is a splendid medicine for constipation. I take it dry, at night, followed by a generous glass of water."

One Sure Way to End Coughs and Colds

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new, medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

Getting Results

Do we really want to accomplish anything of any value for the advancement of the Kingdom on earth? Or are we not too prone to just let things go along in whatever course they wish to take? Are we letting conditions control us or are we bravely going forward and making conditions? To take it easy means defeat. The farmer that expects much of a harvest must dig deep, long and faithfully. A bountiful harvest does not just happen. The same is true in every phase of life. What kind of results are we expecting from our efforts? What sort of efforts are we putting forth? The results will be according to the measure of our efforts. The promise is to those "Who seek first the Kingdom of God" to those who ask and knock. If we take things easy and just let conditions control us we need not be surprised with poor results.

felt better in my life."—MRS. ALBERT MUNNINGHOFF.

Perhaps your mother or your grandmother depended upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, too. Thousands of women do. They give it to their daughters as they come to womanhood—they take it before and after childbirth—they rely upon it at middle age. It must be good when 98 out of 100 women say, "It helps me."

"MY MOTHER TOOK THIS MEDICINE TOO"

"My mother took your medicine the greater part of her life, especially at the Change. She is now 63 and in good health. I took it for weakness when I was single. I also took it before childbirth and I have two lovely girls. I highly recommend the Vegetable Compound especially during pregnancy. It makes childbirth very easy."—MRS. CONFERENCE NEWS

Louisiana

The following resolutions were passed by the Woman's Missionary Society of the Pleasant Hill Methodist Church, Alexandria district, following the death of Mrs. Rebecca Harrell, which occurred Wednesday night, December 21, 1932:

"Since in the wisdom of God, it has pleased Him to take from our midst one of our honored and most beloved members, Mrs. Rebecca Harrell, we, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Pleasant Hill Methodist Church, consider it a privilege to pay this loving tribute to her memory. Mrs. Harrell was a devoted mother, an inspiring friend, one who loved hospitality and was always loyal to her church. She lived a long and useful life and her gentle Christian character, her sweet, helpful influence will be missed, not only by her devoted family and her church, but by the entire community. Therefore, be it resolved, that we extend to the bereaved family our loving sympathy, and send a copy of these resolutions to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, a copy be sent to family and that a copy be placed on our records."

Writing for the Biloxi Daily Herald, Daisy Bell Garber says of the Moore Community Center, Biloxi, Seashore district:

"Emerging from an avenue of oak trees leading to the bay, flanked by fishermen's cottages, one unexpected arrival at the Moore Community House and Epworth Church. The clean whiteness of the buildings contrasts vividly with the prevailing greys of the neighborhood. To fully appreciate Moore Community House and what it means to Back Bay it is necessary to survey briefly the buildings and grounds as they are and were in 1924, the beginning of this particular movement, and its development.

"The Community House is a low, white building of many uses. In it are held club meetings for the adults, overflow classes from the sewing schools, the junior division of the Sunday school and, in more prosperous times, a day nursery. Miss Ellis and Miss Kuntz, the resident deaconesses, live upstairs. The house and most of the furniture were donated by people interested in the work.

"From the Community House proper flagstones lead across a neat lawn and a rustic bridge over a small stream flowing from an attractive rock garden pool, to a one-room building in the rear where the primary and beginners hold their Sunday school classes, and the girls' and boys' clubs meet during the week, being given over almost entirely to the children's activities.

"On a platform at one end the Sunday school classes and week day clubs give plays. Several pictures include one of Christ as a child and a large print of George Washington. There is a small circulating library in two small bookcases, mostly children's books, which the Community House maintains. Donations of old and new books would be appreciated, as this small library supplies the only literature that many of the children have access to, and they read them avidly.

"In 1924, all of this was only a weedy lot, and the only building on it was a small structure, now used as a garage. The Rev. Waldo W. Moore, seeing the need on Back Bay, chose this particular spot to found what is now the Moore Community House. The rear lot was given by Mrs. Dacey, and Mr. Moore, with donated funds, bought the front lot. In the present day garage he and Miss Kuntz held the first church and Sunday school. At first there were only a few adults and a small number of children, but gradually the attendance increased so as to require a new building. This was met by donations from people all over Mississippi; and in two years' time a neat church and Community House were built. The rear building was added much later.

"The neighborhood co-operates gladly, and takes great personal pride in the Community House. To many it is a haven and refuge, who go to the workers for every conceivable aid.

"The Community House is sponsoring and supplying seeds for family garden plots. A large vacant lot adjoining was lent to them; which 22 families have transformed into a model garden, each being allotted an individual plot. The Community House also has supplied seeds to many private gardens in the neighborhood, which meant a more balanced diet to those whose chief diet has been mainly sea foods.

"Miss Sallie Ellis has been in charge of the work there since 1926, and under her supervision it progressed remarkably well. At present 13 clubs meet regularly at the Community House: the sewing school, three girl scout troops, the primary children's story hour, several clubs for boys in which they are taught woodcraft and supervised athletics, a boy scouts troop; also several clubs for women, they being partly for recreation and partly for aid in sewing. All of these clubs combine work and play with very good results.

"The Community House needs every one who has a few hours that he can donate now and then, for the volunteer workers form a very real part of the Community House."

Medical writers agree that the important point in the treatment of a cold, or cough due to a cold, is to relieve the congestion in the nose and throat, thereby preventing serious complications which may follow a neglected cold. To stop this congestion calomel was the accepted and standard remedy until Calotabs, the improved calomel compound tablet was introduced.

Now that science has robbed calomel of its nausea and danger, making it pleasant to take and perfectly safe for general use, over forty million Calotabs are consumed in the U. S. yearly with only the most pleasant and satisfactory results. In millions of homes Calotabs have proven their superiority in the prompt relief of colds and coughs due to colds.

One or two Calotabs at bed-time with a glass of sweet milk or water. No salts necessary. No nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning the congestion has subsided, your cold or cough is relieved, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish—no danger.

Get a family package of Calotabs, containing full directions, only thirty-five cents. Trial size, ten cents. At any drug store. (adv.)

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

Saves $2. So Easy! No Cooking!

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in more homes than any other cough remedy, because it gives more prompt, positive relief. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Syrup is easily made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

Instantly you feel its penetrating effect. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm, clears the air passages, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief in severe coughs.

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of Glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

Valuable Helps

During the first quarter this year there is being prepared and published an elective course for Adult Bible Classes. This course is on Evangelism and is written by Dr. O. E. Goddard. Many adult classes should avail themselves of this material. It will diffuse new life in a class to study these lessons every Sunday. If you wish real results try using this material. Pastors will find this excellent material for use in the mid-week services. This will pave the way for your evangelistic program for the year. You will find this material in the "Adult Student" and in the "Church School Magazine."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Have you read the January Christian Education Bulletin? If not, turn to page 3 of same and read the fine article by your Conference president, Mrs. G. W. Pomeroy. At the end of this good message, she has listed some things for you to do to co-operate in the plan of Christian Education in your church. You could do no better than to abide by these suggestions, as a beginning at least. May we urge every local church group to study seriously this plan—you cannot but become interested when you are acquainted with the purpose and aim of the whole plan. If you do not have the necessary materials, write your director of Young People's Work, who will be glad to advise with you.

Young People's Day, March 26

May we call your attention to the date for Young People's Day this year. March 26 is the day set for this observance, or the nearest day thereto which is convenient for your purposes. Let us not fail to have a 100 per cent observance of this day in Louisiana this year. There have been prepared for your use two programs in observance of Young People's Day: (1) A New Testament dramatization, in the form of a playlet, entitled "World Builders," written by Martha Race. This can be purchased from the Publishing House for 15 cents a copy, or 75¢ for one-half dozen. (2) The other program will appear in the March issue of the Epworth Highroad.

The observance of Young People's Day in each local church is very important because it gives the young people an opportunity to prove to the adults of the church the importance of the program of Christian Education in the Young People's Division. Also, the offering to be taken as a part of this service contributes very materially to the promotion of Christian education among Young People specifically. Three-fourths of the offering remains in our Conference treasury for the carrying on of the Conference program. Therefore don't forget.

Fourth Sunday Missionary Program

Next Sunday is Missionary Sunday again, and we hope that you are planning a vitally interesting program to acquaint your young people with some phase of the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise, to which their offerings on that Sunday go. The theme suggested in the Epworth Highroad for the morning worship service is, "He Took It Upon Himself." Can we "follow in His train?" The theme for the Epworth League service is, "Investing a Life." May we not think prayerfully and carefully upon these themes, striving to get their messages across to our young people? The offering which follows a well-prepared and well-prayed-over program along either of these lines, must of necessity be a little more real, and heartfelt. Let us strive to make our offerings mean more—and we will find that our young people give more when they are really interested. We spend our money for the things we really want.

Don't forget to send your offering for both morning and evening, in the name of your young people's division, to Wallace White, Box 260, Alexandria, Conference Young People's Treasurer.

Union News

The Sunshine Union of Lake Charles district sends a very interesting report of activities. This union, composed of young people's groups from Rayne, Lafayette, Gueydan, Abbeville, New Iberia and other nearby churches, meets every two months in the various churches. Miss Edwina Baker reports that on New Year's eve a New Year's party was held at Rayne, attended by a large crowd of Union members. The party was followed by a most inspiring Watch service to close out the old year in a fitting manner. A week-end institute is being planned by this union in the near future. We congratulate them upon their fine work. Miss Sharland Myers is president.

Take 1 or 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets.

Drink Full Glass of Water.

If throat is sore, crush and dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in a half glass of warm water and gargle according to directions.

Almost Instant Relief In This Way

If you have a cold—don't take chances with "cold killers" and nostrums. A cold is too dangerous to take chances on.

It is recognized as the QUICKEST, safest, surest way. For it will check an ordinary cold almost as fast as you caught it.

That is because the real BAYER Aspirin embodies certain medical qualities that strike at the base of a cold almost INSTANTLY.

You can combat nearly any cold you get simply by taking BAYER Aspirin and drinking plenty of water every 2 to 4 hours the first day and 3 or 4 times daily thereafter. If throat is sore, gargle with 3 BAYER Aspirin Tablets crushed and dissolved in a half glass of warm water, repeating every 2 or 3 hours as necessary. Sore throat eases this way in a few minutes, incredible as this may seem.

Ask your doctor about this. And when you buy, see that you get the real BAYER Aspirin Tablets. They dissolve almost instantly. And thus work almost instantly when you take them. And for a gargle, Genuine Bayer Aspirin Tablets dissolve with sufficient speed and completeness, leaving no irritating particles or grittiness. Get a box of 12 or bottle of 100 at any drug store.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

NOTWITHSTANDING his military genius, and it remains unquestioned; notwithstanding his value to the cause of education, and his footfall would have blessed any campus; and notwithstanding his peerless leadership of loyal men, and for him they would have died; ROBERT E. LEE'S chief contribution to his country was himself. It was his character that determined his decision to cast his lot with Virginia and follow her in secession from the Union, regardless of what critics may say of the wisdom of that action. It was his character that caused him to decline to resort to the accustomed brutalities of war in a period before war had been stripped of its glory. It was his character that determined his reply to the offer of $50,000 for the use of his name in an enterprise of questionable moral quality, and accept the presidency of a small college at a salary of $1,500.

We no longer need Lee's military leadership, and it is quite probable that, were he living today, he would general the forces mustering against the curse of war. Neither do we so much need his educational genius, though, were he living, he would champion the education that makes most for character and the welfare of men. But our times groan and bleed in their need for the character that was Lee.

"God give us men. A time like this demands Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands:

Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have honor—men who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue
And scorn his treacherous flatteries without winking;

Tall men sun-crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty and private thinking—
For while the rabble, with their thumb-worn creeds,

Their large professions and their little deeds,
Mingle in selfish strife, lo! Freedom weeps,
Wrong rules the land, and waiting justice sleeps."

And a man shall be as a hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place; as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.
—Isaiah.

WHEN THE APPOINTMENTS in the Louisiana Conference were read, Rev. S. J. McLean was reassigned to the Morgan City charge, but the reassignment of missionary funds was not made. In the round somewhere it was hinted that the pastor, because of reduced income, might withdraw his ministry to those needy people along the bayou for whom no financial provision was made. We came across this pastor and we began to talk the matter over. Every Methodist in Louisiana should have heard what he said. Listen! "Those people out there on those bayous will not know the difference. They do not understand the doings of an annual conference. Some of them are without sufficient food and clothing. They get sick and die. They want baptism for their babies and Christian burial for their dead. Their needs will continue regardless of lack of funds or conference action. It shall make no difference to me either. To the extent of my ability, I shall continue to minister to them. I must find a way."

That pastor is hunting that way. Let us join him in the search.

What he needs right now is some repairs on his boat with which he must make

"SIGNING OFF"

In the middle of September, 1932, we began our "Save the Advocate" campaign. Each of the three Conferences, encouraged at the response of the churches, voted unanimously to extend the campaign to February 1. That day is upon us. At that time the campaign closes. Of course, should any desire to send in the quota later, we shall gladly receive it. We shall not continue the appeal. This is our last word.

We feel that we should report to you. That is what we are doing now.

Approximately fifty per cent of the churches responded to the appeal. We are still short of the goal some $2,000. You still have time to make it. We are therefore asking individuals and churches throughout the three Conferences to send us contributions, at once, of from One to Fifteen dollars.

There is one good friend of the Advocate who has given us a dare. And we just never could face a dare without doing something about it. He tells us that if we will raise $375 by February 1 he will give us $350. Let us take that. It is easy money.

We wish heartily to thank the churches, Missionary Societies, Young People's Divisions, Sunday Schools and individuals for their glorious share in the "Save the Advocate" campaign. We are hoping that you may be rewarded with a paper increasing in interest and value.

those far away places. His boat has developed submarine tendencies and imperils the life of the preacher. Let's help him fix that boat. Send your contribution either direct to Rev. S. J. McLean, Morgan City, La., or to the Advocate office, 512 Camp Street, New Orleans.

DEAR POPE PIUS XI—You will please to overlook this rather simple form of salutation as I am unfamiliar with the accustomed mode of address.

I read with great interest excerpts from your message issued on December 24, 1932, your Christmas message in which you set forth your joys and sorrows. While the material to which I had access did not so state, I presume that this message was addressed primarily to the people of your great church, the Roman Catholic. The matters about which you spoke, though, are problems of us all. You will not object, I am sure, to a Protestant world's taking note of those things also. It is because of my feeling that your sympathies must run beyond even the wide bounds of your own church that I address these words to you. As a matter of fact one reporter states that your words were addressed to the world. That includes me. Therefore, I feel free to take up the matter with you.

How very earnestly do I trust that your predictions with reference to debt payments and postponements, insolvencies, disarmament and lack of confidence will prove true. You say that these things will cease to occupy the universe during a holy year beginning April 2 of this year, commemorating the Nineteenth Century of the Passion, Death and Resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ. Surely this is an opportunity of colossal magnitude especially to us who use his name, and through us to all those who do not. Certainly it is an anniversary of sufficient significance to cause us, for a while at least, to forget these matters and think upon Him whose passion, death and resurrection mean so immeasurably much to the world. Do you not think that if we follow your suggestion that at the end of this year's moratorium on these problems we shall be much better prepared to deal sympathetically, intelligently, courageously and effectively with them? I presume that that is what you desire to see come of it.

It was interesting to note that you listed, according to ancient custom, your joys and sorrows of the past year. I am glad to note that you preserve a balance that is so necessary to our sanity during these disturbed and troubled times. Many of us had about reached the conclusion that there were no joys, but all sorrows. How fine that you, not overlooking your sorrows, but looking over and beyond them you recorded those things that brought you joy. I sympathize with you in this viewpoint, and I trust that your sorrows may yet work out to the glory of our common Saviour.

How much I do appreciate your prayer for "peace, tranquility, mutual confidence, friendly relations, greater assistance wherever are the greatest needs, sufficient remunerative work, and less unfavorable and uncertain general conditions of life." I join you in that prayer and shall exhort my people to do so.

May I now ask you a few questions, Pope Pius, about some things to which I have given a great deal of thought? I am sure you must be deeply interested. Do you not think that these world-sized and heart-breaking problems, economic, industrial,

SAFETY SIGNALS

By Rev. S. J. Davies, D.D.

The genius and spirit of Protestantism is to protest against error in church doctrines and polity. And these protestants, with few exceptions, were within the church. Neither Luther nor Wesley, if I read history aright, intended to found a new church or a new branch of the church, but rather to reform errors and abuses of authority in the existent body. Real reformation means retrenchment and improvement. Bishop McMurtry has sounded the tocsin for retrenchment in the uniting of departments in our church and many of the members, judging from the letters written to the church press, are following his lead. The Board of Christian Education is a consolidation or uniting of three pre-existent departments of church activity and, I presume, is counted the most important Board in the home field.

But why does it require such a numerous corps of writers and such an extensive body of literature? Is there really need for so many Sunday school periodicals? I attend one of the best organized and largest Sunday schools in our Conference, and I think this Sunday school is just about as loyal to our church and its institutions as any. We subscribe for, and pay for, I venture to say, about fifty per cent more periodicals than are used. Much of this literature is carted off by the sextons and goes to adorn the trash pile. And I do not think our church here is an exception. To my mind, this is sheer waste. Why any intelligent teacher should need from three to four comments on the lesson in order to teach acceptably is—well, that great big word in the book of discipline—a work of supererogation. And few of them eragate over it all. . . . Following the protest above, I think it would be well if the money used in the excess of Sunday school periodicals could be spent in sustaining our Conference Advocates, which are struggling for life, the results for the welfare of the church would be more fruitful. These papers—the Advocates—are read in the homes of the people and not glanced at on Sunday morning, then too often left at the Sunday school room, as the Nashville periodicals are. I am not criticizing the quality of these—it is most excellent—but the quantity. It reminds me of Charlie Miller's story of the aged man suffering with St. Vitus dance holding his gun all over the tree to bring down the squirrel. He may have secured the game, but at a terrific loss of energy and ammunition. People are protesting vigorously against excessive taxes and overhead expenses in governmental affairs, and our leaders are slow to learn, and hard to tame. I just mention this; it might put some of us to thinking.

SINS OF THE AVERAGE CHRISTIAN

By Rev. James William Sells, Contributing Editor

Inconsequential take their proper place by the side of realities. Minor sins have received too much emphasis. The sins of the mind may be more degrading than the sins of the flesh.

We are self-elected judges in the court of moral action and we determine our own sentences in the light of what seems good to us.

The sins of the average Christian are not the sins of the flesh that have received such denunciatory attention in the past days. We are—in respect to the sins of the flesh—living under Puritanical prohibitions and judging others by a moral code set up by our Puritan fathers.

There are sins of more fearful consequences than the sins of the flesh. Not to condone these but to tell the truth. Jesus said, "Seek ye first." Anything less than putting first things first is dangerous to the spiritual life.

Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. That which comes out is only a revelation of that which is within. Everything depends upon what we think.

One sin which the average Christian commits is the sin of superiority. The sin lies not in regarding ourselves as beings worthy of merit, but it is in considering our brethren as inferior beings.

The sin of superiority lies at the base of many an inefficient Christian life. It feeds primarily upon a false feeling of achievement and is fertilized by a false feeling of security. Coupled with a false idea of knowledge and a lack of the proper perspective it endangers all our happiness. Contrasted with our current superiority of social achievement, international security and personal knowledge is the attitude of humility stressed by Jesus.

We are also convicted of the sin of self-sufficiency. This comes as a result of our low ideals. The day of exalted ideals waned with the Victorian era and passed with the period of prosperity. We are guilty of being willing to abide by half-baked success. If one prayer out of a thousand is answered we are satisfied with our percentage. Sufficient unto today is the payment of pledges to the church; real religion can wait until tomorrow. We are hurried under a mass of things and shop-worn luxuries. The personal element has surrendered its sovereignty to machines and we feel that a low estimate of our own abilities is sufficient. The idea of becoming Sons of God is hardly a poetic vision. We conquer pain with an opiate, satisfy suffering with tears and thereby miss forever the creation of character.

The sin of self-content rests smugly upon our faces. We have the attitude that things are good enough as they are. Our church is as good as the average; the town is good enough for me. Anyway, what's the use? "Ye whitewashed tombstones. Outside you are as clean as a newly washed plate, inside you are full of dry bones and unclean things."

The remedy for these sins is to be found in our willingness to receive new truth. We must be willing to make a definite effort to inquire into the true condition of affairs. We must have a willingness to admit, to ourselves and God, our own shortcomings. There must be a definite attempt to bring our lives to coincide with new ideals.

This is followed by a realization that the Christian life is a growth, not a static condition; and a refusal to be satisfied with nothing less than a continued growth in spiritual knowledge and power.

Most average Christians are sitting in a 1933 model high powered and expensive car on which they have to pay taxes, keep it greased, polished and full of gasoline. They are content to sit in the car and admire their possession. They never take the trouble to turn the ignition switch, step on the starter and drive off to a certain destination.

"There is a way that seemeth right unto man, but the end of it are the ways of death."

SHALL WE ABANDON OUR MORGAN CITY MISSION?

By Rev. S. J. McLean, P. C.

Beginning with the first of December, the General Board of Missions found it necessary, because of financial conditions, to discontinue all appropriations to the Morgan City Mission, and the pastor was advised to sell the mission boat and withdraw from the field.

This field is so situated that it cannot be served other than from Morgan City and the Morgan City pastor is the only preacher within reach of the territory. The people must depend upon the Morgan City pastor for all religious service and while the pastor might decline to hold the preaching appointments, it is impossible to refuse to visit their sick, bury their dead and render other service which is necessary.

After due consideration of all the facts in the case the pastor has undertaken to carry on the mission work just as it has been for the past years, and this will be a heavy drain upon his finances which are already below that necessary for his own family.

In this field we have hundreds of Methodist people and many others who are Methodist inclined and they are entirely dependent upon the Methodist pastor of Morgan City for all religious service. They have no money and the vast majority of them can not read, so that all instruction must be by word of mouth.

No preacher worthy of the name can refuse the service necessary to these people, nor can he adopt the Roman Catholic system of requiring payment before service is rendered.

A large part of these people can be reached only by boat. The marshes and swamps make roads impossible and also prevent walking to and from communities. The boat we now have for this work has been in use for several years. It is in such condition that it would cost no more to build a new boat than it would to repair the old. It has sunk four times within ten months and the cost of floating and repairing has been heavy, all of which the pastor has to pay and he is receiving less than 40 per cent of his salary at present. This expense must go on and the pastor must pay it or he must have someone pump the water from the boat almost daily. You can see that the preacher cannot continue this expense under present conditions and he cannot give his time personally to the care of the boat because of many duties which make it impossible to keep in touch with water conditions, which result in the sinking of the boat.

A neighboring lumber company has offered to furnish the lumber for a new boat at about one-third price. The machinery we have is in excellent condition. The sum of $300 will build a new boat and boat house.

In view of the fact that the pastor is giving his time and paying his own expense, which will amount to about the same sum as the cost of the boat, will not some friend, a church, a Missionary Society or young people's group undertake to provide this fund?

During the last six weeks the pastor has baptized five babies and buried one for these people. During the last year he baptized about thirty and buried some ten people among them. Shall he now tell them he is unable to serve them without pay knowing that they have nothing with which to pay?

The answer is yours. The pastor is doing his full part to save the reputation of the church and meet the needs of these people. The next few weeks will determine the future of this great work. What shall the answer be?

SARDIS-GRENADA DISTRICT

By Rev. James H. Felts, D. D.

This temporary district is not marking time. Rev. W. L. Stormont is giving himself to the work without reservation, and the response of pastors and people is most gratifying. I have known no more favorable start at any time or anywhere. The conferences have been well attended as a whole, and financial reports have been heartening to all.

Sardis was host for the district stewards' meet. This meeting was not so well attended as could be wished, but the spirit and purpose of the meeting was in evidence. Brother Stormont was courteous, considerate, and happy. It was "catching." Smiles and good will were coupled with definite work. No echo comes from that meeting other than helpful.

The missionary spirit is growing. Numbers of charges "purpose in their hearts" to report "everything in full," depression or no depression. Our "elder" is giving himself definitely to the work of Grenada College. Numbers of names have already been given to President Countiss as good prospects for the ensuing year. All we need is united effort, real, honest-to-goodness effort, and this institution will function as it should.

The cheery optimism of the pastors is most refreshing. The gospel they have been preaching to others is being practiced in a most helpful way. Surely the hard lines so much talked about are proving to be helpful lines.

From time to time the writer will be "knocking at the door" of the New Orleans Christian Advocate for Sardis-Grenada space. He will try to confine himself to various and sundry happenings of interest and worth. You can call him a self-appointed correspondent if you wish. But he will be offering grist for your mill as grist appears. The Grenada offering for Grenada College passed the $400 mark. "More to follow."

Grenada, Miss.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By Rev. W. R. Lott, Contributing Editor

That "all the world loves a lover" has been demonstrated again and again in the lives of every generation; and it is also equally true that "All the world appreciates a good story teller." We older people try to deceive ourselves by saying that the children just can't be told stories enough to satisfy them when we are just anxious to hear a good story as any child. It's a fine art to be able to relate an interesting story. Humorous stories delight us all. The wise speaker or teacher soon learns their power and will use them discreetly to a very telling effect. When a cheerful, rippling anecdote can be given to bring smiles and laughter to the face the avenue of interest and attention is open to any message which is to be given. Moderation in this, however, is commendable. The joke teller himself become a joke and the story teller drift into a shallow thinking entertainer. In inverse proportion as the wholesome story teller is appreciated so the relater of vulgar anecdotes is despised. The devil knows how easily people drift into that which is vulgar and low. A smutty suggestive story can so blacken the very atmosphere that it is hardly possible to think wholesome thoughts. Nothing grieves me Holy Spirit so quickly. A minister who tells vulgar stories may not know it, but his laymen distrust his sincerity as a Christian. The layman who tells them does not deceive any one but himself.

- NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Should a pastor visit his people when they are sick? Yes, is the answer from the Bible, the Discipline, the pastor's oath, and the heart of the pastor himself. Yet there comes the question of his becoming sick and unable to fill his place in his pulpit. The health regulations advise that communicable diseases be isolated as far as possible. Do the demands of his office require him to go into these rooms where the sick are languishing and run the risk of scattering these germs wherever he may go from house to house? There is hardly a pastor but such questions as above have come into his mind. The weakness of the flesh says to him, "you cannot run the risk." Yet there comes to his mind the facts that physicians go in and out day after day. Have they more to do than ministers of the soul? Has that Scripture which says, "The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep," any application in this case? I do not think it has reference so much to physical danger as to spiritual dangers. Yet the man who neglects his people feels something inside of his heart that is akin to remorse, and when he has stood by even until the last hours of their danger the bonds of love and appreciation have been forged. His judgment will cause him to use every known means of prevention and care and often only a word at the door, a phone call or note of personal interest is all that can be done or should be expected. Diligent pastoral care will cure many ills of the church. The joy in his heart and appreciation from his people overbalance all the risks to himself. It is literally true that "... Whosoever will lose his life for my sake will find it."

February 1 is the dead line on the "Save the Advocate" campaign. Only fifty per cent of the charges have responded. There is yet time to complete the task. The asking is small—the cause is most important—Send in your quota without delay. Thank you.

The Kingdom Extension Missionary Institute of the Greenville District was held at Cleveland, Miss., Tuesday, January 10, with Rev. Melville Johnson as pastor-host and with Dr. E. Nash Broyles, presiding elder, in the chair.

Rev. H. P. Lewis led the opening devotional. Rev. C. A. Parks was elected secretary. Out of the 21 charges in the district 18 pastors were present. One of the three absent was reported sick and the other two were A.W.O.L. Besides the pastors there were in attendance approximately 60 laymen, making a total attendance of around 80 for the day.

Official visitors at the Institute were Rev. R. G. Moore, Conference Missionary Secretary; Rev. R. G. Lord, Executive Secretary of the Conference Board of Christian Education; and Dr. Fred T. Manget, medical missionary to China, who represented the General Board at the Cleveland meeting.

Brothers Lord and Moore spoke in the interest of the missionary cultivation period and the program of missionary education in the Conference. They delivered timely and helpful messages. Dr. Manget was the principal speaker of the meeting and his addresses were of a high order. They were sensible and practicable, dealing with the present day conditions in China affecting the work of the missionary.

Revs. L. P. Wasson, J. W. Ward, S. H. Caffey, Mr. S. V. Wall, and Mrs. C. A. Parks, Findings Committee, appointed by the chair, made the following report: "We recommend that the Kingdom Extension Cultivation program shall be continued throughout our Conference, and shall include emphasis upon our General and Conference benevolences, that it shall be extended to include Easter, and that on or before Easter Sunday there shall be taken an offering for Kingdom Extension and General and Conference benevolences in every church. Second, we recommend that the church make this offering an act of sacrifice and self-giving, which is in the spirit of Passion Week and Easter Sunday. Third, that we pledge afresh and anew our allegiance to the great missionary program of our Church. Fourth, we appeal to our pastors and laymen to give hearty support to the new approach to our problem, and give to the world a glorious demonstration that our purpose remains firm and undefeatable. With Christ on our side and His cause at stake we can ill afford to do less. Fifth, we accept and endorse the recommendations of the General Commission on Benevolences."

At the noon hour the ladies of the Cleveland church served the visitors a bountiful and delicious plate lunch.

Dr. Broyles dispatched the business of the Institute without any loss of motion and yet every matter received the most careful attention. The institute was a great success in every sense of the word.

C. A. PARKS, Secretary.

GREENWOOD DISTRICT INSTITUTE

The Greenwood District Kingdom Extension Institute met in the First Methodist Church in Greenwood, on Wednesday, January 11, at 10 o'clock, with Rev. W. N. Duncan, presiding elder in the chair. The meeting was opened with Rev. Seamon Rhea, our pastor at Ruleville, conducting the devotional exercises. The hymn, "I Am Thine, O Lord," was sung, and Rev. E. G. Mohler, led in prayer, after which Brother Rhea read from Corinthians, making timely and helpful comment on the passage, "We are laborers together with God." Brother Duncan read from the Discipline concerning the nature and purpose of the Institute and made some pertinent suggestions with reference to carrying out the missionary enterprise in the district.

The high point of the meeting was the address

BISHOP PAUL B. KERN BROADCASTS OVER WSM

Through the generosity and courtesy of WSM (The National Life and Accident Insurance Company, Nashville, Tennessee), Bishop Paul B. Kern will broadcast on the evenings of February 1 and February 3, from 7 to 7:15 p. m., Central time, and 8 to 8:15 p. m. Eastern time.

WSM broadcasts on a frequency of 650 kilocycles.

Pastors throughout the connection are requested to make announcement on Sunday morning and evening, January 29, of the broadcast, and request our people to tune in.

W. G. CRAM, General Secretary

by Dr. Fred T. Manget, representative from the General Commission on Benevolences. Dr. Manget, who was introduced by Rev. R. G. Moore, Conference Missionary Secretary, brought a most stimulating address as he told the needs of China, basing his remarks on his experiences as a medical missionary in China during the past twenty-three years. His address closed the morning session.

The afternoon afforded several inspiring talks by Conference leaders with Rev. R. G. Lord, Conference Executive Secretary, speaking to the group on the subject of missionary education, being followed in turn by Mrs. Holloman, representing the Woman's Missionary Societies of the district, and by Rev. R. G. Moore, who spoke on the eminent needs of the missionary program of our Church. Brother Moore introduced the book, "Christ and the Coming Kingdom," and led in the discussion of plans to have the book studied by the largest number of people and for the largest results during the missionary cultivation period. Rev. E. G. Mohler read the report of the Findings Committee, the committee being composed of Revs. E. G. Mohler, J. E. Stephens, S. L. Pope, and W. T. Phillips.

Dr. Manget remained to close the Institute with an inspirational address. So close is Dr. Manget to the situation in China, and so illuminating and inspiring was his speech, that the brethren insisted that he extend his time and speak on the relationship between China and Japan, especially with reference to the recent Japanese conquests. It was a rare privilege to hear Dr. Manget speak with his first-hand information on the situation in the East that is now claiming world-wide attention.

The day was most profitably spent. The people of our First Church in Greenwood excel in the fine art of entertaining. The ladies had prepared a splendid dinner and they and the pastor-host, Rev. E. H. Cunningham, saw that every provision was made for the comfort of those present.

An encouraging attendance was noticed. Every pastor in the district with the exception of four was present, together with other officials, representatives and visitors from the various charges. With the interest shown we are expecting good success during our Kingdom Extension Institute in the Greenwood district.

W. J. CUNNINGHAM, Sec.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT INSTITUTE

The Kingdom Extension Institute for Meridian District, Mississippi Conference, was held at Fifth Street Church, Meridian, Thursday, January 12, beginning at 10 a. m. Rev. T. J. O'Neil, presiding elder, presided over the meeting, and conducted the morning devotions.

Dr. R. T. Henry, who has given some fourteen years of service to the China Mission Conference, was the feature speaker of the occasion. With his thrilling stories of sacrifices made in the Orient by both the missionaries and the Christian natives, he inspired his auditors to undertake greater work for extending the Lord's kingdom.

Mr. W. D. Hawkins, Conference Missionary Secretary and District lay leader of Meridian District, explained the plan for organizing and conducting the campaign for the Cultivation Period in the interest of the Kingdom Extension fund, which is to culminate with an inspirational program and offering Easter Sunday.

All the pastors of the district, except two, were present. More than one hundred workers in all were present. Several took part in the round table discussion of the mission work in the afternoon. A large number of the study books, "Christ and the Coming Kingdom," were sold, and promises were made to organize study classes. Regional Institutes were planned, and arrangements made for Dr. Henry to speak at several places in the District during the week, April 22-27.

Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, pastor-host, and his good people were very gracious in providing in every way possible for the comfort of the guests, and at noon served in the basement of the church a most delicious and elaborate lunch, for which an appropriate vote of thanks was offered.

REPORTER.

KINGDOM EXTENSION INSTITUTE. NEWTON DISTRICT

The Kingdom Extension Institute of the Newton district was held at Montrose, January 11, with Rev. W. M. Sullivan, presiding elder, in charge. There was a good representation of preachers and laymen from the district present.

The elder read a few verses from the tenth chapter of Romans and made brief comment. Then called on Rev. H. A. Wood, who spoke very forcefully on evangelism, urging that we carry out the aim of the founder of our church, namely, winning of souls. Rev. M. L. Burton then spoke in his usual forceful manner on the claims of the church, stressing the fact that all claims are important.

Dr. R. T. Henry, a return missionary from China, was the main speaker for the day, and he brought a great message in which he showed how the missionaries were willing to sacrifice, and the great need in the foreign field. He urged all Methodists to support the missionaries with our prayers and means.

The ladies of Montrose served a splendid lunch at the noon hour, which was enjoyed by all.

After enjoying the social hour we came back for work, and Rev. John C. Chambers spoke in the interest of the Sunday school, urging that the board of Christian education in the local church be more active, and that the fourth Sunday offering be sent in regularly.

W. D. Hawkins spoke in the interest of the Kingdom Extension Cultivation period, which is to extend this year until Easter Sunday. He also explained the financial condition of the Board and the new plan which divides the collections as follows: One-half to be sent to J. F. Rawls, Nashville, and one-half to F. Y. Whitfield, Meridian, which applies on the regular benevolences.

Orders were taken from the pastors for the study books, and a number sold to those present.

After a few statements from the elder in regard to the work of the district, G. W. Moas offered a resolution of thanks to the pastor and ladies of Montrose for their hospitality and the beautiful lunch that was served, which was adopted by a rising vote, and Dr. Henry pronounced the benediction.

educational racial, international, political and religious, are big enough to bring us Catholics and Protestants together? I am frank to admit that I do not see how we are ever to convince the world that we are Christians and that our Christ can solve all these problems if we do not. Seems to me that it is wasting time to ask God to straighten out all those troubles of the poor old world when we who say we follow Him cannot, in some way get together.

Now, I have heard that your answer to this is that all of us Protestants should repent and come back to the fold of your church, that you hold out for this. Many of your people seem to think this. We are regarded as rebels and outcasts from the fold. Why, I noticed in one of your prayer-books, and that for children, that attendance upon Protestant worship was an offense for which confession should be made. Even if you do so regard us, Pope Pius, it seems to me that your method of restoring the lost sheep lacks much of the spirit and method of Him whose passion, death and resurrection you so eloquently call upon us to celebrate this year. Have you thought over this seriously?

Let me make a suggestion. How would it do for us to incorporate in our plans and prayers for this Nineteenth Centenary of the passion, death and resurrection of our Lord, the REUNION OF THE CHRISTIAN FORCES OF THE WORLD? I'll admit that the thing staggers me when I think of it. Perhaps we both lack the faith with which to tackle it. A little incident told me by the Negro Baptist janitor at a Methodist church may describe us. These colored folks had had a terrible split-up in their ranks, and they were about to have two or three churches instead of one. Of course, there were not enough of them to have one good church. But a few devout souls were left among them, and among these was one old deacon who prayed long to God about the whole situation. Seemingly he had come to the close of his prayer and had paused, but had not said "amen." Then he added this little postscript to his prayer: "O Lawd, dahs one other thing I'd lack to ast you, but I knows you can't do it. Git us niggahs togetha. Amen." But let us try it anyway. I just know that we are both missing a lot of fun that we might have together in pulling this old world out of the ditch and starting it on the right road. Let's try it. Come on.

Now, I don't object to your way of worshiping and your view of religion. What is so strange to me, though, is that that worship does not seem to bring about just what I have been hinting at. How in the world you can follow the "Way of the Cross" and not come to it I cannot understand.

And we need to pull together in this matter of soberness, prohibition, disarmament, unemployment, and the other big things that so much distress us. I have been disposed to feel that your church was not very strong in its opposition to war or the use of intoxicating liquor. Why, your people could swing this thing, don't you think? And I just know all of us working together could do it and have a lot of time left for some other things.

Pope Pius, I just long for the day when with mutual respect, honor and good will we Catholics and Protestants can unite our forces in co-operative effort.

Yes, I know that we Protestants have much to repent of, and I assure you that I am going to do my share of it. I am ashamed of the way we have divided up into so many sects until some of us are little more than insects. That would not be so bad, perhaps, if each did not seem to feel that he had the whole truth, and that he had little to gain by association and co-operation with others.

Again let me assure you that I shall join with you in the celebration of this great Centenary. Those things it calls to mind, the passion, death and resurrection of our Lord, are all common property to us. And through them we shall not only fulfill your predictions regarding the year, but I believe they will ultimately bring us together.

May this be a great year to your people.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Well, come in, everybody. Let us see who is who this week and what they are doing. Friends, let us learn to weep with those that weep, and to rejoice with those that rejoice.

Mrs. J. F. Provine, treasurer of the Coffeeville, Miss., Woman's Missionary Society, has sent in quota for "Save the Advocate."

LET'S TAKE THIS EASY MONEY

A good friend and strong supporter of the Advocate has made us this dare: "If you will raise $375 I will give you $350."

That is a real proposition. If those charges that have not responded in the campaign will rush their quotas in at once, we will call this brother's hand and take his money. Let's do it.

C. M. CHALMERS, Manager.

Why not a letter or some flowers? Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, pastor at Louisville, Miss., is ill in the Methodist Hospital at Memphis.

Dr. J. F. Foster writes a good word from Ferriday, La. We appreciate Dr. Foster's co-operation in the promotion of the Advocate.

Our faithful friend, Mrs. B. W. Lewis, Marion, Ark., renews her subscription and says, "Hope the Advocate can stem the flood."

Miss Clara E. Chalmers, sister of our good manager, and Missionary stationed at Matanzas, Cuba, sends $2, saying, "Save the Advocate."

The Greenwood Ministerial Association, at its recent meeting, elected Rev. E. H. Cunningham, pastor of First Church, as its president.

Our pastor at Sulphur, La., Rev. T. F. King, recently lost a little son with diphtheria. Give him and Mrs. King a lift with your prayers.

Baldwyn, Miss., have as their pastor again this year one of their home town boys, Rev. W. C. McCay. He is diligent in all phases of the work of the church.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs is to be the guest preacher at First Church, Lake Charles, La. This great congregation is to be congratulated upon their opportunity. Rev. Elmer C. Gunn is pastor.

From Merigold, Miss., comes the quota from that charge. "Hope we may save the day for the Advocate. It has been on duty a long time and has served too well to give it up." Walter W. Jones.

Rev. N. L. Threet, Waterford, Miss., has entered upon the new year's work with his characteristic zeal. This is his third year at Waterford. He is one of the promising young men of his Conference.

Interesting? Rev. J. F. Mincy, a local preacher of the North Mississippi Conference, received in to the church last year four people whose ages were as follows: 78, 46, 70 and 72, an aggregate of 266 years.

Rev. W. S. Selman, the new pastor at Belmont, Miss., is happy in his work. This charge has a large number of young people in consolidated schools, which gives the church a fine opportunity.

From Rev. T. C. Cooper, pastor of our church at Collins, Miss., comes a good letter bringing the "Save the Advocate" quota. Thank you, Brother Cooper. The Collins charge is moving forward encouragingly.

Rev. C. Wesley Baley, pastor at Ashland, Miss., in addition to being a fine pastor, is said to be the champion squirrel hunter in all his territory. They say that he finds them and brings them in when the best fail.

A special service was recently held at First Church, Crowley, La. Upon special request the pastor, Rev. C. K. Smith, repeated a sermon he recently preached to his people. The subject was "The Four Faces."

Rev. George W. Curtis, a young man on trial for the first year in North Mississippi Conference at Lamar, Miss., is entering into his work with keen interest. He is preaching and visiting, making every effort to get acquainted with his people.

The Minden District Messenger, official organ of the Minden district, of which Rev. R. M. Brown is the presiding elder, has made its appearance. It is an interesting four-page quarterly carrying news of the district. We congratulate Brother Brown.

Seems that I am reading charts at the hospital this morning. That steady and strong-souled layman, Mr. J. R. Bingham, of Greenwood, Miss., is reported on the sick list. Let's see if we can run up the shades to his room with a prayer and a word of cheer.

The Sherman charge, North Mississippi Conference, comprises a group of splendid rural churches in addition to good organization in the town of Sherman. Their pastor, Rev. H. E. Carter, has taken hold of his work and is trying to carry the work to a greater degree of success.

Dr. Chas. W. Pipkin, dean of the Graduate School, Louisiana State University, was recently elected president of the Pi Sigma Alpha, government fraternity, at its meeting in Detroit, where it held its annual session in connection with the American Political Science Association.

Rev. E. M. Sharp was given Rienzi charge as his second year's work while on trial. Brother Sharp did a fine piece of work last year on the luka circuit. In addition to being a good thoughtful preacher he has the gift to lead his people in singing. This is such an advantage and help to any congregation.

A letter from Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor of Trinity Church, Ruston, La., that preacher who had such a combat with pneumonia and related ailments, brings a very sunny and triumphant note. Remembering your prayers and letters he said, "I had so much good help that I just sailed through in great shape."

Methodism in Blue Mountain, Miss., has been overshadowed by the preponderance of members of the Baptist church, yet all through these years we have had a small band of active loyal members who carry the work of our church right on. Rev. W. R. Liming is our pastor there. His daughter, Flora, is a student in Blue Mountain College.

Court Street Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., cordially and graciously received its new pastor, Rev. C. A. Shultz, who went from Grace Church, Jackson. Court Street Church has been greatly saddened by the deaths within twelve hours of each other, of Mr. C. A. Powell, Jr., and his wife. For a long time the father of Brother Powell was one of the leading spirits of the Mississippi Conference.

From First Church, Shawnee, Okla., comes a very attractive church bulletin. Rev. W. L. Broome is the pastor. Brother Broome, who is beginning his second year at Shawnee, renews his subscription to the Advocate saying, "I have read the Advocate all my life, and still want to keep in touch with my friends in Mississippi." A good year to you, Brother Broome.

"You may tell all the brethren that everything is moving on fine down here in the land of flowers. Our new preacher, Rev. J. E. Ward, preaches for us tomorrow. Lovingly, J. M. Mashburn, Tallahassee, Fla." Seems that he might have left that out about the flowers until we can be a little more sure about the weather in this part of the country, but we will let him off this time.

Elsewhere in this issue look for that call from our good friend and editor-brother, Dr. J. M. Rowland, editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate. Nobody knew he was a chef. He has started something interesting and valuable. We hope our people will send him some of their best recipes. Let those Virginians know that people in this section know how to cook what is good.

North Mississippi Conference is not "red," but its lovely journal is wearing a refreshing pink cover this year. A copy has just reached us. The Louisiana Conference journal comes out in purple. We keep the three volumes close to our hands. Congratulations to those faithful secretaries whose careful labors have made possible these bulletins. Let us see that our officials have copies and that their attention is called to some of the contents.

Lake Cormorant charge is fortunate to have as their pastor Rev. W. L. Robinson for the second year. Bro. Robinson has taken great interest in the work among young people, having served as president of the League Conference and also one year superintendent of young people's work of his Conference. His charges grow under his leadership. His views are progressive and his zeal in all the causes of the church show him to be alive to his work.

Rev. J. E. Cunningham, honored and valuable superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference, living at Greenwood, is reported sick. Who that witnessed it can forget his retirement from the active ranks? He reminded me of Browning's man, "One who never turned his back, but marched breast forward, never doubted clouds would break, never dreamed, though right were worsted, wrong would triumph, held we fall to rise, are baffled to fight better, sleep to wake."

"Here comes my renewal as fast as the Missouri Pacific train can run. But you will remember I live in or on the 'depression' Rio Grande Valley. 'Low down country,' only ten feet above sea level. The only reason I could not come and bring my renewal is that I stuck a nail in my foot and could not walk very well. I made a trip to North Mississippi, hoping to stay a good while, but had to hurry back here for sea breeze. Have about regained the vitality, my lost vitality, since returning." We sympathize with any man who is so much "depressed" that he has to use shingles instead of shoes, but we are a little cold to that hint that Mississippi depleted his vitality. That is from Rev. B. P. Jacob, Raymondsville, Texas.

The students of Millsaps College have scored again. On January 12, at Chapel, the new Science Building was named Sullivan-Harrell Hall in honor of the two professors who have given the longest terms of service to Millsaps, and who were instrumental in the development of the Science Department of Millsaps and in the erection of this beautiful hall, a gift of the citizens of Jackson and Hinds county. This honor was bestowed upon the unanimous request of the student body and the unanimous approval of the board of trustees. Dr. J. M. Sullivan, who is Conference lay leader, began his work at Millsaps in 1902; Dr. Harrell in 1911. The Advocate congratulates these noble men and those who have bestowed this highly deserved honor.

THE TRIP TO EASTER

Last year a great party joined me in a trip to Easter. And it was a great trip, wasn't it? I am thinking of making up a party again. Would you like to go along this year?

This year is the Nineteenth Hundredth Anniversary of the sufferings of our Lord. Thus it becomes much more than ordinarily interesting.

If you are interested and wish to go, drop us a card so we may know how many of the little booklets to order.

ICE CREAM

By G. W. Christian

I feel deeply interested in the "Save the Advocate" drive. My subscription expires in March, but I am renewing now, hoping that it may help some. I think it would be a real disgrace for us to allow the Advocate to fail. Just to think of three great Conferences acknowledging we haven't enough zeal for our great Church and the cause of the Master to furnish the pro rata mite necessary to support a church paper. It isn't the lack of money. We pay five times the amount asked for to cold drink and ice cream stands. How I wish we might change and pay part of this to save our church paper and our character as a body of true Christians. The time is short now, but I cannot conceive the feelings of the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi thus backsliding. God forbid that it shall be so. Grayson, La.

BOARD OF TEMPERANCE AND SOCIAL SERVICE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH, AT SENATE SUB-COMMITTEE BEER HEARING, JANUARY 7, 1933

As the official representatives of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and of the 37 Annual Conferences of said Church we file protest against the passage of the Culler Bill as attempting to legalize a beer of alcoholic content which before the Eighteenth Amendment was recognized by society at large, by the medical profession generally and by numerous court decisions as intoxicating.

The Eighteenth Amendment prohibits intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes and we insist that this bill is unconstitutional because it permits traffic in intoxicating beer. If it should be decided, as has been suggested, to so change the present bill as to provide that beer of more than 3.2 per cent be prohibited we insist that such action would be subterfuge unworthy of the highest legislative body of the country.

ATTENTION, METHODIST HOUSE-KEEPERS!

I desire the attention of Methodist housekeepers within the territory covered by the New Orleans Christian Advocate. With the assistance of two good Virginia women I am compiling material which they propose to publish in this paper and then issue in a rare volume, "The Methodist Cook Book." It will be published by the Methodist Orphanage and for its benefit. The book will contain rare contributions on what they eat in all parts of the world from special writers, but will major on Southern cooking. We want you good women to help us by sending to me some of your choice receipts that have been used in your own homes. We are especially anxious for the old Southern cooking and want a fine exhibit from Louisiana and Mississippi. Let every woman who reads this send me forthwith some contribution.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

The programs for the Christian Education Institute are being sent out. Please urge every church to have representatives at these Institutes. There are matters of importance to be discussed.

One of the most important matters is to build the district program for the year.

Last month the Missionary offering showed improvement. This was cheering and encouraging. It is earnestly desired that every church in the Conference send a missionary offering every month. If this can be accomplished we can expand the work in our own Conference and make possible the maintaining of work on the foreign fields.

You will find much of interest in "Here and There." This is not a program, but will aid you in building a program.

There is a set of pictures on the Home Field that will be furnished free if you will write for them, either to the Conference Board office or the Nashville.

The district officers are actively at work. Use them. They can give you much aid and guidance. Under the new plan you are expected to report to your district officers each quarter. Cokesbury Record Book, No. 595-H will give the blanks necessary for each church.

Pray for the work and workers.

LIPSCOMB FAMILY REUNION

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb and wife had as their Christmas guests all of their seven children except one son, Roy Lipscomb, of Greenville. The following members were at home for the holidays: Messrs. Reid, Hubert and Joe, of Jackson, Miss.; J. L. Lipscomb, of Houston, Texas, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Tomlinson and two children, of Clarksdale, and their youngest son, Lee, Jr., who has just graduated with honor in medical school of Northwestern University, at Chicago. He is now an interne in county hospital, Los Angeles, California.—Winston Journal.

METHODISTS OF SCHLATER HEAR OLDEST PREACHER

By Rev. W. J. Cunningham

On Christmas Day a large congregation of our people at Schlater heard a splendid message when Rev. J. J. Brooks, honored superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference and its oldest living minister, preached the anniversary sermon observing his 82nd birthday. Brother Brooks, who lives in Schlater with his daughter, Mrs. C. A. Foreman, preaches in our church each year on the Sunday preceding his birthday, which is December 27. The occasion Christmas Day marked the sixty-fourth consecutive anniversary sermon since the beginning of Brother Brooks' active ministry in 1871.

Brother Brooks' sermon was both thoughtful and logical. His mind has remained clear and strong, and his preaching betrayed no declension of his mental faculties. Most surprising was the force of his delivery. He spoke with a voice of remarkable clarity and power. The building rang as Brother Brooks rose in feeling during the delivery of his message.

On the Tuesday following he celebrated his birthday with a dinner, to which he had invited a number of his friends who were glad to share the joys of the day with him.

In renewing his subscription to the Advocate, Brother Brooks says that he always renews his subscription at the Annual Conference, but this year was unable to attend and give Mr. Chambers his subscription. Brother Brooks has been a regular subscriber to the Advocate since Bishop Keener was editor in 1871.

The last session of the Annual Conference was the first session which Brother Brooks has missed in 63 years. He has recovered from the illness which prevented his attending, and his friends are always glad to see him as he goes about visiting in the homes and on streets. It is good to have him live in this community where his presence is a benediction to everyone.

In Memoriam

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

Whereas, on the 30th day of December, 1932, death called hence our beloved sister, MRS. C. N. HARRIS, therefore:

Be it resolved by the Woman's Missionary Society of Edwards Methodist Church, South:

1. That while reverently bowing to the will of Him who "doeth all things well," yet our hearts are surcharged with sorrow and we sigh for the "sound of the voice that is hushed and the touch of the hand that is stilled"

2. That in the death of Sister Harris our church and this Society loses a faithful and valued member, this community one held high in esteem by all who knew her and her children a fond, faithful and devoted mother.

3. That to us and all others to whom she was dear, there is sweet solace in the knowledge that she "died in the faith" and that the Beyond had no terrors for her and that when called she was fully prepared to answer "I am ready."

4. That to her children we earnestly pray the Comforter will come and that He who was foretold as a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief will so lighten their burden of sorrow and grief that they may indeed feel that she is not dead but sleepeth.

5. That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Society, a copy of them sent to the family of the deceased, and one mailed to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

MRS. J. E. WHITE,
MRS. E. D. ROBBINS,
MRS. G. W. LUSTER.

Jan. 5, 1933.

Whereas, the Oakland Missionary Society has sustained an inestimable loss in the death of MRS. EMILY JANE MOORE, who has been taken from us to her place in our Father's House. Therefore, be it resolved:

First, That in her passing, the Woman's Missionary Society and the entire church have sustained the loss of a loyal, faithful member, and the community one who was a friend and a neighbor to all.

Second, That while we bow in humble submission to the will and providence of our Heavenly Father, we shall ever cherish the memory of Mrs.

Emily, Jones Moore as a most sacred heritage.

Third, That these resolutions become a part of the permanent records of the Society, and a copy be sent to the bereaved family and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

MISS EMMA MOORE.
MRS. J. B. LONG.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, death has called from her earthly home MRS. P. F. MONTGOMERY; and,

Whereas, the Methodist Missionary Society has lost a valued member, one whose smiling face and cheerful manner endeared her to us all. She will be sorely missed, not only in the church circle, but by the whole community. It could be truly said of her, "She stretcheth out her hand to the poor; yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy."

Resolved, That we tender our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family, and commend them to the mercy and consolation of our Heavenly Father.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the Society and other copies sent to the family, to the Morehouse Enterprise, and to the Christian Advocate.

TO THE WOMEN OF THE METHO DIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH

Dear Sisters—You have read the "Notice" from Mrs. Peabody, chairman of the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement, of a movement to appear at the state capitols, during this session of the Legislatures, to protest against the repeal of state laws for the control of the liquor traffic. We want you to know that the Woman's Missionary Council, as a body affiliated with the Woman's National Committee, stands squarely behind their efforts to maintain these safeguards against the evils of licensed liquor.

State Legislatures meeting now are beset with lobbyists, determined to tear down the defences that it has taken more than half a century of the labors and prayers of organized women and men to build. They represent powerful interests with unlimited resources of every kind directed toward making our states legally wet. We cannot let this be done without opposing the strength of right-thinking women. We therefore add our appeal to that of Mrs. Peabody that you will respond to her call by going or sending representative women of our Church to join with others at your State Capitol, in an appeal to your legislators to preserve the bulwarks erected in answer to the prayers of good people of the past.

Watch for the call and act as you pray!

Sincerely yours,
MRS. J. W. PERRY,
President, Woman's Mis. Council
MRS. J. W. MILLS,
Chairman Christian Citizenship Com
mlttee;

MRS. W. A. NEWELL,
Supt. Bureau Christian Relations.

WOMEN, HEAR THIS

The Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement, through its chairman, Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, requests the groups of church and Missionary Women to send representatives to their State Capitol, to appear before the legislature against any repeal of state laws for the control of the liquor traffic, and for the restoration of any that have been repealed. Unless women are aroused to the danger of the beer bill now under consideration in Congress, and are ready not only to pray, but to act in accordance with the plans under way, there is little hope of the protection of children and homes from this old enemy. Watch for notices of the meeting in your state capitol, and be prepared to send delegations of women. Representatives of the Women's Committee for Law Enforcement will be present to present plans. There will be one day sessions in every capitol possible.

MRS. HENRY PEABODY,

Chairman.

AUXILIARIES WILL RECEIVE CREDIT FOR STUDY OF "CHRIST AND THE COM- ING KINGDOM"

Someone has said "World evangelism must be the primary object of every church enterprise, whether it be a meeting, a building, a collection, or any consecrated effort, else such work is no good." Now is the time for our special missionary cultivation period in the whole church. As in past years, auxiliaries will receive credit, when classes are formed, under the direction of the pastor, for the study of the book being used, which is "Christ and the Coming Kingdom," written by Dr. W. F. Quillian, under the direction of the General Conference Commission on Benevolences. The following changes have been made: First, There are to be no quotas this year. Every member and every church are asked to do their very best. Second, The cultivation period is to close on Easter Sunday, April 16, at which time the Kingdom Extension offering is to be received. Third, This offering is to be divided between the Kingdom Extension and the benevolences. Fourth, The campaign is under the active supervision of Bishop Paul B. Kern, recently returned missionary from the Orient.

CONFERENCE NEWS

Mississippi

Reports of the activities at Meridian Wesley House featured the January meeting of the City Mission board, with Mrs. G. C. Kendall presiding.

Miss Anna Trawick, head resident reported 1,000 contacts during the month; 300 visits made, four socials and 40 meetings held. Her report included the Christmas activities and showed that in addition to gifts from the Christmas trees staged at Wesley House, 30 families were provided baskets containing fruits, food, toys and other articles. Besides these, clothing and groceries valued at $237 were contributed by various organizations of the local Methodist churches.

Miss Lucile Ingram, director of the young people at Wesley House, told interestingly of past activities and of future plans, among the latter is the organization of a basketball team among the young women. She announced that practically all of the necessary equipment has been contributed, the class of Central Methodist Church, taught by Mrs. Neville Brooks, donated the ball.

The Long Beach Missionary Society, Seashore district, carried out Council plans during 1932. Each quarter the weekly programs covered the various subjects, "Stewardship," "Social Relations," "World Outlook Programs," "Home," "Foreign and Home Mission Studies" with business and social meetings.

The contributions from Long Beach to Conference are equal if not in excess of amounts used locally. The budget pledge for 1932 showed a 10 per cent increase over that of 1931, with a 25 per cent increase in membership.

Final reports for the year 1932 show all finances paid in full and all study requirements met. The Foreign Mission Study Class completed the book "Korea, Land of the Dawn," in seven weeks, under the leadership of Mrs. Otto Porter, thereby obtaining a council certificate.

The activity of the Social Relations department reach out in many lines, visiting the sick, giving flowers and financial aid to those in need, also co-operating with the Orphans' Home, sending quilts, cash and Octagon coupons, having turned in 16,478 coupons since the contest began.

One of the outstanding programs during recent months was the Guest Day playlet, "Modernizing Young Mrs. Patton." This play was presented by members of the Society portraying the characters of the play.

Another special program given by the Society was an all-day session in observance of the Week of Prayer. The worship theme was prayer and its answers.

"SWIVEL CHAIRS, ELEVATORS, BUSINESS MEN, STREET NUMBER—AND GOD!"

Certain conditions obtain at Glendale Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., that no one person is responsible for, that has caused the present pastor to come in contact with more swivel chairs, elevators in "sky scrapers," men of business, and street numbers than ever before in his ministry, but amid it all God, even our own God, has especially blessed, strengthened and sustained!

All who know this pastor well, know he has had an aversion to taking the lead in purely financial matters during his ministry, but he faced a situation at Glendale that has taught him as never before that such matters undertaken in Christ's name are conducive to spiritual power and blessing.

So, in this blessed Name—a Name above every name!—he took the lead in a wonderful job—"to save Glendale!" From the human viewpoint, during these times, he faced an impossible job, but he has found encouragement on every side. Sitting in swivel chairs talking to business men about saving Glendale and its parsonage, he has found these men genuinely sympathetic and ready to help. He has heard the words, "I am with you in saving Glendale," with tears of joy. He has found the Methodist pastors and our presiding elder a unit in readiness to help in a practical way. He finds Jackson Methodism in sympathy; he finds Jackson, generally, genuinely interested; he finds Glendale membership anxious, disturbed, but ready to go. In fact, he finds the "milk of human kindness" very plentiful in the midst of the greatest depression of the age!

Glendale being a "youngster" in the Mississippi Conference (its first pastor being appointed November 15, 1926), though a right sprightly youngster (the number "538" is opposite the last name on the church register, though only 421 members were reported at Conference) I felt its "sisters"

The church and parsonage are unusually heavily involved financially. Not ten per cent of the membership is working, and the needy are all about us, yet our watchword is: "Glendale must be saved!" For the first time in my life, I have met the words "foreclosure," "suits are being prepared," and "notes in my hand for collection," and I was driven to my knees and to God and then to "swivel chairs, elevators, men of business, and street numbers," and the Day Star is rising! Amen! Brethren, pray for me, help substantially, as the Lord directs, and come to see me, or write me.

"Lost That Tired and Weary Feeling"

"I was tired all the time; had misery in back and sides that kept me feeling bad; was in a nervous and weakening condition," writes Mrs. H. H. Penn, of Portsmouth, Ohio. "I lost in weight until I was very thin." During girlhood, mother had given me Cardui and it helped me so much then that I decided to take it again. I took several bottles and my strength began to return, and I gained in weight. Soon I lost that tired and weary feeling. Cardui did me a great deal of good."

Take Cardui to improve the general tone of the system in cases of run-down health and "tired nerves." Women have found, in such cases, that Cardui helps them to overcome pains and make the monthly periods easier.

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of Glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

COMPENSATION

A pastor, recently removed from a circuit where the financial remuneration was small, received a letter in which was the following paragraph: "Brother, we are going to miss you in so many ways; you were so good, and could always find time to help those who needed to take a new grip on life. In fact, no one could listen to your good talks without being better. My whole family believe in you; and we have been made a better people by having been associated with you. We all just love you more than you really know. We hope you are all well, have a good year, and that those people will continue to play Santa Claus. We are going to do our best for our preacher."

To live in the hearts of those left behind is one of the satisfying compensations of the itinerant.

CAPUDINE--Liquid

After nearly two weeks of unconscious and semi-conscious conflict, I returned to a realization of the fact that God, a good doctor and good nurses had taken me out of the jaws of death.

But even such illness as that is by no means without its compensations. The love and loyalty of the people of my charge (Waterproof, St. Joseph and Wesley Chapel), whom I had lived among for only about two weeks, have stirred the depths of my heart with a desire to get back to them.

The people of Natchez, especially the ministers of every denomination, have been tireless in their offers and efforts to be of assistance.

Then, from places where we have lived before have come anxious and sympathetic communications almost innumerable.

I am recovering rapidly, but it will be quite a while before my strength will be sufficient for me to take up my duties in full. Am hoping to be able to sit up in a few days. I can spend several hours a day reading and that helps a good deal.

BROTHER MILLER'S BIOGRAPHY

I have finished a biography of my long life in the ministry and hope to have it ready for publication soon, I start with my life eighty-six years ago, and give a minute history of my struggles during the war, and my difficulties in getting an education for the most responsible work in God's service that this life affords, and I give a graphic account of the warfare against sin, and Satan associated with the glorious victories gained under difficult circumstances. I have many friends in the radius of the Advocate that I am sure would love to read it as well as being profited by it. Will the preachers, and laymen who read this article, and want any number of my book (which will be not higher than fifty cents) please drop me a card in regard to the matter. I have not fought life's battles alone, and I have succeeded in some places where others have failed with some of the most formidable foes of Christianity. I never was afraid to go where I thought my Lord directed me. Please renew my Advocate, and if you can find space for this in part or in whole please do so. The twelfth of next month I am to preach my eighty-sixth birthday anniversary sermon.

Yours in Christ,

S. W. MILLER.

THE TWO WORLDS

By Fred D. Warren

There are two complete and distinct worlds right here in the United States of America. One is a world in which plenty abounds, and one is a world in which poverty and dirt and hardship encompasses the lives of those who inhabit it.

You know to which you belong—I don't. There are fewer persons today in the world of plenty than there were one year ago. There are more people in the world of poverty than there were a year ago.

All this noise you hear about hard times and depression is coming, strange as it may seem, from the world of plenty. It isn't because these few rich do not have food to eat and comfortable homes in which to live. It is FEAR of what may happen to them tomorrow that causes them to cry out against conditions. They live today in constant fear—a fear that drives them to suicide—as Kreuger—or flight, as Insull—to escape the failure which threatens to engulf them.

Bankers sit in their sumptuous offices and wonder when the deluge will overtake them. They watch the dwindling accounts of some of their big customers whose money has disappeared overnight, leaving the bank to hold the sack. They watch the withdrawal of savings accounts put there against a day when the depositor would be unable to exchange his labor for a living.

The great industrialist reads the reports of his corporations—showing a growing deficit with no orders coming in to take up the slack. He appeals to the government at Washington for the help which a couple of years ago he would have spurned. Frantically, the politician looks over the nation in the hope of finding new sources for taxes. Government revenues are falling far behind expectations and estimates made a year ago. Desperately new forms of taxation are being devised by the administration. The discovery is made that as business falls off and profits disappear, taxes are not forthcoming. Big business having failed, it now threatens to bring down upon its shoulders, government itself. That is a picture of the world of plenty as it is today.

The world of poverty—not much use of wasting space telling you about that. You see it in the block in which you live. You see it on the streets of your village, of your town, or your city. The men who live in this world of poverty—members of the working class—are saying little. Nobody knows what they are thinking—but if they don't start thinking soon, then this civilization, which has been built up after years of struggle and pain, will disappear.—Southern Farmer.

All Pain And Soreness Eased In Few Minutes This Simple Way

Proves Only Medicine Helps A Sore Throat

Modern medical science now throws an entirely new light on sore throat. A way that eases the pain, rawness and irritation in as little as two or three minutes.

Results are among the most extraordinary in medical science. On doctors' advice, millions are following this way... discarding old-time "washes" and "antiseptics." For it has been found that only medicine can help a sore throat.

Simple To Do. All you do is crush and dissolve three BAYER Aspirin Tablets in half a glass of water. Gargle with it twice—as pictured above. If you have any indication of a cold—before gargling take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets with a full glass of water. This is to combat any signs of cold that have gone into your system. Keep on taking if cold has a "hold." For Genuine Bayer Aspirin will not harm you. Your doctor will tell you, it does not depress the heart. Get a box of 12 or a bottle of 100 at any drug store.

Reduces Infection, Eases Pain Instantly. Gargling with Bayer Aspirin will do three things: Relieve soreness at once. Allay inflammation. AND—reduce infection; which is the important thing in fighting a sore throat.

It requires medicine—like BAYER ASPIRIN—to do these things! That is why throat specialists throughout America are prescribing this BAYER gargle in place of old-time ways. Results are quick and amazing.

Be careful, however, that you get real BAYER Aspirin Tablets for this purpose. For they dissolve completely enough to gargle without leaving irritating particles. Watch this when you buy.

NO TABLETS ARE GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN WITHOUT THIS CROSS

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

WHAT PRICE HONOR? Recently two highly prized volumes, "A Life of Julius Caesar," written by Emperor Napoleon and presented by him to the city of New Orleans, were stolen from the library at Lee Circle. The thief had broken through a window in the basement, secured the books, and made his escape. He was holding the books for a ransom and made arrangements for it. A few weeks later he was trapped by officers. He gave an assumed name and denied all knowledge of the affair. Later, when hedged, he confessed the crime, but explained that he stole the books hoping to secure some money in order that he might pay a debt of honor.

The thief proved to be a well educated man speaking five languages. He explained the steps in his reasoning as to how to secure the books, what little cost it would be to the library, and what small cost to the city. Later he would make an anonymous contribution to the library that would atone for the whole matter. He seemed entirely to overlook the crime necessary in order to meet the debt of honor, the dishonor necessary in order to be honorable.

How strange are the workings of the human mind. Why, this fellow was a student of philosophy. Possibly he had not studied ethics.

There is a type of insanity that is not mental. It has little or nothing to do with a breakdown of intellectual processes. It is an emotional insanity, a breakdown of the sense of values, a blurring of the moral sense. And right here is the field of religion. Out of the heart are the issues of life. Mental clarity must be re-enforced by emotional and volitional soundness.

There is an Old Book that specializes in this matter. It is not read and studied as much as it should be. It tells of the double-minded man and the remedy for his condition. It tells of the single-minded man and his majesty. We'd better see about it.

LET JAPAN GO. "The Japanese government intends to warn the League of Nations that acceptance by the assembly of a report condemning this country's course of action in Manchuria will result in Japanese withdrawal from the League," is a news dispatch from Tokyo dated January 25.

While we are not members of the League of Nations, a great many people in this country feel that we should be. At least we have co-operated with it and are greatly interested in it. It is the saner and more gentlemanly way of getting at international affairs.

Now Japan walks in with her big sword, bangs her mailed fist down on Geneva's League table, snaps her fingers in the faces of the nations and says, "If you don't back me and my way of doing things, I am going to bolt the League." Imagining myself sitting there when the bantam strutted in, without any further parley, I would get up, reach up to the hat-rack and say to the upstart, "Japan, here is your hat."

What the League of Nations needs right now is a little moral spine and a little spiritual punch. We trust she will have it. Japan has failed to regisiter the justice of her cause in the minds of the peoples of the world. She is rapidly isolating herself. Even in her own legislative body one of her leaders dares to question the wisdom of Japan's move. They immediately sit upon him and he is forced to speak brokenly of "misunderstanding."

Japan's drive for a place in the sun is out of date and her method of invasion is scheduled for the junk-pile of enlightened peoples. We are learning better.

We are not overlooking the fact that our militaristic spirit and our past history have influenced Japan. For this we repent. And we are not condoning the pitiable plight of China for much of which she is responsible. But China has sought a fair adjustment and has expressed a willingness to lay the matter before the League.

Just now the League of Nations has a chance to prove that world sentiment is mightier than the sword. Let us pray that she may do it.

Japan, here is your hat. Go out there somewhere and cool off. Get out of your "swivet." Then come back and let's talk sense. This League of Nations doesn't belong to you, all of it. We haven't the time, money, men, or gall to put on a war. You know that. But if you will just be steady we can work the whole matter out. We are not mad with you. We think lots of you. We are your friend, and we are trying to do what a friend ought to do.

FOR REAL BUNK, pure and unadulterated, in large quantities and wide variety, commend us to Arthur Brisbane.

Just why should he spoil the many good things he has to say with his ever-recurring load of bunk? Why, sometimes you would take him to be a preacher. At a time like Christmas his page will be headed by a great cut portraying that spirit, and beneath will be many scriptures and poetical quotations bearing upon the great theme. But what will it be next week?

You do not get him at his worst in the daily column of briefs. Occasionally you get it even then. Some of his snapshots are so complete and accurate that they have the touch of finality. Again he presses the bulb at just the wrong moment to give the right impression, or his camera is all out of focus. But you need to look in the Sunday editions of the dailies that carry his page. At the top is a great display cartoon by McKay which serves as a kind of springboard for his message. And in that message the Holy Scriptures are frequently prominent. It should not be forgotten, though, that the manager of the lower regions is rather reliably reported to be somewhat as a quoter of scripture.

But what set us going this time was the Brisbane page in a recent number of a New Orleans daily. The picture is that of a rather thick and high wall following an outline of the United States of America. In fact it is a map of our country. The wall completely surrounds our territory. Within this enclosure shutting out all of the rest of the world, the nearest, of course being Canada and Mexico, is Uncle Sam dressed in his best striped pants and star-spangled swallow tail sitting at ease. By his side, in her rocker, sits Columbia, that demure lady of Revolutionary days, back when we owed the world something. They are talking over the situation that faces the country today. Columbia is knitting—rather out of date—but knitting. In the background may be seen tall buildings, tall as the Rockies whose majestic range lies just west of where Columbia is sitting, along with other evidences of our opulence and self sufficiency. There lies Canada to the north of them and Mexico to the south there a bit from Columbia's feet, and the rest of the world with its wrangling nations, far away and forgotten things. Uncle Sam is enjoying his "independence," for the pioneering spirit of which he is indebted to an earlier generation of Eneases from another land.

Uncle Sam is telling Columbia (who is Aunt Sam) of the boundless wealth of the country, and other sources of power and grandeur, over which they have the honor to preside. He reminds her that while our foreign trade is interesting and important, that, in reality, it is a mere bagatelle and amounts to nothing when it comes to the real strength of our country. "Why," says he, "we export only about ten per cent of what we produce. Just look at England, France, Italy and a few more like them. They are dependent upon others for so much of what they have to have. Look at Texas right down there under your right foot. Our giant State of Texas, intensively cultivated, could not only feed the people of the United States, but all the people of the whole world." Then he goes on to say, "We have inventive genius superior to that of the rest of the world. (We have, we have, we have.) We have, in fact, everything. Really in no sense does the United States need the rest of the world. We are willing, of course, as a kind of accommodation, to trade with them; however, there is a great deal of worry and bother attached to it and they will

WHAT I KNOW ABOUT BEER

By S. J. Duncan-Clark

(As the invited guest of Bob and Harve, creators of the series of economic dialogues on The Alcohol Problem, conducted weekly over Chicago Station WLS by the American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation, S. J. Duncan-Clark, an editorial writer on the Chicago Daily News, spoke at the regular broadcasting hour, 1:30 p. m., Thursday, December 29, 1932.)

Beer is coming back, we are told. There is a jubilant note in the announcement. Beer is to balance the budget. Beer is to banish the depression and restore prosperity. Beer is to revive the discouraged souls of men and renew happiness in human hearts.

Well, I know something about beer. Back in the so-called good old wet days when beer was lawful, I was a police reporter for awhile on a morning newspaper in an American city of about 300,000 population. Beer was plentiful then. I doubt if there was a point in that city from which you could not find your way to a licensed saloon or a beer garden in less than five minutes. It was my business to gather the news of crime, of vice, of underworld activities. I remember that lawful beer played a large part in making that news. It was inseparably mixed up with the brew of lawlessness, of violence, of indecency and corruption out of which came the happenings that made sensational items for the newspaper.

I did not notice that beer was making anybody prosperous but the brewers and the saloon keepers. I did notice that it was making a lot of folks poor. I did notice that it was breaking up homes. I did notice that it was destroying the worth of fatherhood and demoralizing the value of motherhood. True it was contributing revenue to the government, but it was cancelling that contribution by reducing the earning power of workers, eating up their possible savings, preventing them from acquiring property and homes, creating slum neighborhoods and non-taxpaying citizens.

That is why all this talk about the blessings which are to come to us from the return of lawful beer makes no impression on my mind. It may carry some weight with persons who have short memories, or persons who were born too late to know by experience the good old wet days. But to a newspaper man who was a police reporter in times when beer was legalized and made semi-respectable by government sanction, the loud advertising of its virtues sounds like the silliest nonsense.

Beer, Intoxicant?

Let nobody tell you that beer is not intoxicating. I have seen men drunk on beer, and nothing but beer, much too often to fall for that fable. It may take several bottles to produce obvious results, but several bottles is no impossible quantity for a man. I have seen men become morose, quarrelsome, ugly tempered and fightingly stupid on beer. Moreover, beer, with its milder alcoholic content, is the appetizer for more ardent liquors. Alcohol is a habit-forming drug. In beer it stimulates the desire for something with a bigger kick.

You are all familiar with the little pilot light on the gas range. It is a small flame. You cannot boil the kettle on it. But that small flame will set all the big burners ablaze. Beer acts as the pilot light for possible greater alcoholic conflagrations in the human system.

What Law Cannot Do

Congress proposes to call beer non-intoxicating. Our wet friends are fond of saying that you cannot change human nature by legislation. They are probably right. But if you cannot change human nature by act of Congress or parliament, no more can you change the nature of alcoholic beer by a like process.

If 3.2 beer does not have kick enough to produce the sort of feeling which those who want beer want to feel, it will not satisfy them; and if it does produce it, then it will create the desire for stronger liquors. Lawful beer will become the effective screen for bootlegged spirits. It will not end bootlegging. It will not close the speakeasies. It will only make bootlegging easier, and the speakeasy for whiskey and it allied intoxicants more secure from detection.

Our wet friends say they want beer and other liquors made lawful again because prohibition of their manufacture and sale led to all sorts of lawlessness.

If they think they are going to escape liquor lawlessness by licensing the traffic they have either forgotten history of the days not so long past, or they are too youthful to know the record of the traffic when it had the law behind it.

Experience

My newspaper experience taught me that the most persistent lawbreaker in the community was the liquor traffic. It violated every regulation made to govern it. It would not observe restricted hours of sale. It would not obey the Sunday closing law. It sold liquor to drunkards and minors contrary to law. It was the nursery of crime and criminals. My best source of crime news in the old reporting days was the saloon and its bartenders.

Liquor is inherently lawless. It cannot be made to obey any rules. Its part as a factor in demoralizing society, in promoting violence and murder, in encouraging vice was so commonplace that it had ceased to be a matter of news. County option and statewide prohibition were the answer of people in revolt against the law-breaking traffic. Logically they came to the conclusion that a traffic which persistently disregarded the law and fostered crime ought to be outlawed. What can be said for the logic that now argues for legal recognition of a business inherently lawless?

Leaves Statistics to Others

I am not strong on statistics. Too many tricks can be played with figures. I am willing to leave the statistical argument to those wiser than myself. But my newspaper training taught me to observe, and to draw conclusions from my observations. My newspaper experience brought me in contact with every phase of life. Although I am no longer a reporter I have not lost touch with the conditions which surround me. For years as a public speaker I have been accustomed to travel about my city—this big city of Chicago—at all hours of the day and night, and by every means of conveyance. Comparing what I have seen since the liquor traffic was outlawed with what I saw in the days when it was lawful, I am convinced beyond all possible contradiction that things are better now than they were then; that vastly less liquor is being consumed and that much less of woe and poverty and crime are due to its consumption.

In the old days it was seldom that I traveled home at night from a speaking engagement, using train or trolley, that I did not encounter among the passengers one or more persons who were disgustingly and disturbingly drunk. Since the enactment of the Eighteenth Amendment it has become a rare thing in my experience to see such persons. I have seen perhaps half a dozen in the last dozen years. In former times I would see that many in a week. Where have they gone? The street drunk is now a rare sight. He used to be commonplace.

When Beer Ran Free

I recall in those good old wet days that the newspaper for which I worked—it was not in Chicago—used to pay off its men on Saturday after the banks had closed. Newspaper men were proverbially spendthrifts. By Saturday morning their pockets were empty. They could not wait for Monday to cash their checks. The kind saloonkeeper on the opposite corner realized their urgent need and made provision to accommodate them. Each man, as he left the cashier's window in the office, took the shortest cut across the street and vanished through the swinging doors. Behind the mahogany bar stood the friendly saloonkeeper, with an extra staff of bartenders. He smiled a cordial welcome, greeting each man by his name, and cashed the proffered checks. Of course that service called for some recognition. Part of the cash received immediately was spent on drinks. Everybody bought drinks. Treating became general. Conviviality grew. The week's pay diminished. The kind saloonkeeper was happy. He whistled a tune to the accompaniment of tinkling cash register. I knew fellows who have never been in a saloon, never tested liquor until they were given that excuse for entering a bar and sampling its wares. But it was all legitimate—perfectly legitimate. The law sanctioned it. The respectable newspaper proprietor encouraged it by his pay-off methods. He figured that he saved one day's interest on his bank deposits. It did not seem to occur to him that he lost much more than that in the decreased reliability of his staff. He probably deplored the fact that some of his employees drank to excess at times, but in those good old wet days, it was traditional that newspaper men and printers drank. He accepted that tradition as one of the settled facts for which allowance must be made.

Contrast that picture with what became familiar to me after the liquor traffic was outlawed. About nine o'clock each morning the milkman would arrive at the office, and a distribution of pint and quart bottles of milk would begin in the composing room and spread through business office and editorial floor—scores of bottles. Milk had taken the place of beer as a lunch hour beverage.

I stood the other day at a drug store soda fountain, enjoying a soft drink. Touching my elbow was a burly truck driver contentedly disposing of a cup of hot chocolate. I thought to myself how strange that sight was as compared with the old days. And yet that sight has become ordinary since the Eighteenth Amendment was enacted.

The outlawed liquor traffic is lawless. Of course it is lawless. But even so, conditions are vastly better than they were under the lawful liquor traffic that was no less lawless.

But they say they are going to restore lawful beer in order to create better conditions. That is a tragic jest.

(To be concluded next week)

THUMB-NAIL SERMON

By Rev. W. L. Duren, D.D.

"Thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying, This is the way, walk ye in it."

It was indeed a dark day in the faith and experience of God's people, that called forth the tender assurance of these words of the prophet. National disaster appeared to be inevitable, for Jehovah seemed to have abandoned his people to an evil fate. But the words of the prophet make a rift in the low-hanging clouds. He tells Israel that, though God had given them the bread of adversity, He would not fail them in the wisdom and patience of His holy design on their behalf. For the very wisdom that withheld revealed also His patient toil for restoring the nation's inner life; and from the sorrows by which they were oppressed He willed that they should go forward to a more glorious future. And, for the relentless foes whom He had permitted a momentary triumph, the same voice would effect their utter confusion and end in their complete destruction.

Surely here is a message of hope and encouragement for hearts that have been made heavy with the sorrows and distresses of the year through which we have come. There is a voice, if we may hear it, in the very privations that we have suffered—a voice that shall make God more real to our hearts. If we will listen to the patient wisdom of our great Teacher, the sweetness and strength of our spiritual life shall be restored; and we shall see the enemy of our souls in full retreat. But our chastened spirits must acknowledge His message and ministry in the ordeal of affliction that has come to us. Trouble that turns the heart to cynicism and distrust defeats life, but that which refines and sweetens is a stepping-stone to nobler things. Let us gird ourselves, therefore, for the triumphant conquest of the New Year; and the woe notes of our sorrow will be turned into paeans of praise.

AWAKE AND GROW

By G. A. Brown, Jr.

There is nothing wrong with life. It is entirely your point of view. As I sit and look out of the door, I see the working of nature, set in motion by the Divine hand of an All-Wise and All-Loving God. The green grass is beginning to push up through the earth and to throw off a winter's sleep, awakening to the call of spring. The birds are singing, giving thanks to God for the sun to warm them, and for the food God has provided for them. If the birds can't find a worm, they take a bug or beetle. They sing their thanks to God for the bug and don't complain because they couldn't find the worm they wanted. Let us learn a lesson from nature. Let us throw off the winter's sleep of sin and give thanks for the springtime of God's love. Let us give thanks for what He has provided for us, and not complain so much over what we do not have that we cease to enjoy what we do have.

Let us awake to the call of the springtime of God's love and, like the grass, begin to push our heads up above the slime of sin, until the light and warmth of His love will shine upon us and we can grow in Christian love and experience and into a close fellowship with our God.

Awake! And answer the call even as the grass, the flowers, and the birds! And God will let His light shine on you and provide for you even as He provides for them.

OUR CHURCH AND SOUTHWESTERN LOUISIANA INSTITUTE

By Rev. H. N. Brown, P. C.

Our church is maintaining for the young people of Southwestern Institute the Young People's Department of the Church, organized on the plan that puts League and Sunday school activities under one administration. Having weekly meetings of each department, we hold occasional social meetings, to which all the Methodist students are invited. We have a splendid plant, building and grounds, to accommodate the department, and skilled superintendents and teachers. This season we will offer a Teacher Training Course, and regular classes for young people from 17 to 23, and young adults, 24-30. Two members of the faculty help in the Sunday school work, and several more attend, but render no assistance aside from that. Three are on the Board of Stewards.

We have about 120 Methodist students, about thirty of whom reside in Lafayette, as many more commute and the rest board in the dormitory and city residences. This is last year. This year's enrollment is now being made.

Our students co-operate in Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. activities, and prefer that to a Methodist organization in the college. Two of our ladies assist in the Y. W. C. A.

Baptist and Catholic churches have their student activities in separate organizations in the college.

At Natchitoches I found it desirable to have a resident student secretary, but my congregation here is not able to do it, and there is no chance for connectional help. My League is making an aggressive appeal this week to our students for League and Sunday school.

If parents would write me, it would assist in lining their children up with our work.

Once each year, at the beginning of the school year, the churches, when requesting it, are allowed to appear and make church announcements. Aside from this, we get no help from the administration.

✓ AN APPRECIATION

George L. Smith was born in Carroll County, Mississippi, near Bluff Springs Methodist church, January 22, 1851, and lived in the community where he was born all his life. He joined the Bluff Springs Methodist church when he was twelve years of age and was a devoted, loyal member of this church to the day of his death. Much of the time after he was grown he served on the board of stewards, and for fifty-two years was the efficient, capable superintendent of the Sunday school.

His first marriage was to Miss Holloway, who bore him four sons and one daughter. After her death he married Miss Ida Adams, who survives him. One daughter was born of this union, Miss Addie Lou Smith, who for ten years has taught in the Hattiesburg High School. For thirty-four years Brother and Sister Smith lived in a comfortable home near the church, where they made a home for their children and for the preacher. Many has been the time when they have cheered and helped the discouraged pastor in the midst of his trying duties and they counted it all joy.

The two things that held the supreme place in the mind and heart of this good man were his home and his church. All of his interests and his activities centered around these two God-given institutions. He was a kind and diligent father, training his children by example and precept to be of some service to their day and generation. He loved his family sincerely and his love for his church was as deep and genuine as was his love for his home. His highest and richest joy was in serving his family and his church. He did not begrudge the time he was called upon to give to his church. His crops were never too grassy nor the weather ever too hot or too cold to prevent his attendance upon the official meetings of his church, whether at home or at some distant point. Church attendance with him was a happy privilege, not an unpleasant task.

Brother Smith exemplified as fully as any man I ever knew the blessed realities of our Christian religion. He walked with God and, like Enoch of old, had the assurance that his life pleased God. Blessed memory! The world is richer because Brother Smith lived. May God bless his loved ones left behind.

RESOLUTIONS OF FIRST METHODIST CHURCH, WEST MONROE, LA.

In view of the present effort, both state and national, to discredit, repudiate, nullify, amend or repeal the existing laws against the liquor traffic; and in view of the further fact that the amendment, nullification or repeal of these laws will not be an aid to prohibition and temperance as asserted by those actively interested in the amendment or repeal of these laws, to the home, the church, sobriety, patriotism to childhood and the flag; be it therefore resolved, that:

1. Whereas, the opponents of the Eighteenth Amendment are proposing to legalize beer and repeal or nullify the Eighteenth Amendment, and

2. Whereas, the effects of beverage alcohol are the same whether sold legally or illegally, and

3. Whereas, we have no reason to believe the violators of the Eighteenth Amendment would obey the restrictions which of necessity must be a part of such legislation;

4. Therefore, be it resolved, That we ask our United States senators, our congressmen-at-large, and our own Congressmen to vote against all legislation intended to nullify, weaken or repeal the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act, and to vote instead for adequate appropriations for law enforcement and a campaign of education in law observance.

5. Be it further resolved, that we call upon the public to obey willingly the letter and spirit of the law.

6. Be it further resolved, in order to make this meeting of effect today, that we take immediate steps now to enlarge this organization and give it the necessary permanency, effectiveness and support to carry out its objects of support to the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act, to create a more effective and widespread spirit of temperance and law enforcement.

7. Be it further resolved, that we institute at this meeting a movement for wide-spread temperance education.

8. Be it further resolved, That we present copies of these resolutions to our public press in the community, to our various religious organs, and to the various members of both House and Senate in Washington, and to the various members of our own State Legislature.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By Rev. W. R. Lott, Contributing Editor

General Conference brings its ecclesiastical doctors. Here they come from every quarter to "doctor" the church. Some want major operations; others think that some mild spring water will help. Here is the way it looks to me from this point. We had better get over the operation of the merging of the three Boards before we talk about merging others. Commendable progress has been made with the merger, but we have a long way to go to get it out to our people. Now is the time we should steer clear of all divisive issues. Our whole Church needs to pull together to bring us back to a finer spiritual fervor. We are just now coming out the trough from the unification discussion and subsequent political agitation. So many new things have been started in organization and administration until we had better get acquainted with ourselves. If the leadership of our Church is wise it will devote itself to cementing our forces in every field, the restoration of confidences and the fervent teaching and preaching of the gospel.

The Sunday school teacher who will not study is a handicap. It is difficult to get a change. The class drifts away, and yet the teacher does not seem to see the reason. Sunday school teachers have the best helps now that have ever been provided by the Church. Any teacher can become well trained in a few years to do splendid work. A few hours each week will turn failure into success. In graded work it is a tragedy for a teacher to let boys and girls slip through their hands. They usually have them for one year. It should make a teacher ashamed to turn over to his or her successor only half of the pupils he or she started with at the beginning of the year.

GLOSTER, ROXIE AND NEBO CHARGES

Mr. Editor: In last week's Advocate there is an article from Rev. H. G. Hawkins, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, purporting to correct a number of errors made by the secretaries in certain charges in his district in the last Journal of our Conference. While I am averse to making replies to criticisms of the secretaries of the Conference and their work, I am making an exception in this case to say that if correspondence be had with those who are in charge of getting out the Journal, before going into print, it would often result in saving the valuable space of the Advocate, and also convince one that the report in the Journal is in keeping with the reports as made by the pastors. We are quite willing to answer any question that may be asked as to the correctness of reports in the Journal. The original reports are on hand and can be referred to at any time. It may be that reports should be corrected, but the secretaries should not be charged with making the errors before it is ascertained that they are guilty. We are ashamed of every error made by us, and are very willing to hear the blame.

In his report to me concerning the criticisms offered, Brother Harkey makes the following statements, which I am requesting that you publish, even though the author advises against it.

Faithfully,

W. B. JONES, Secretary.

CORRECTIONS IN REV. H. G. HAWKINS ARTICLE IN LAST WEEK'S ADVOCATE, "CORRECTIONS FOR GLOSTER, ROXIE AND NEBO REPORTS"

Gloster Report

The pastor did report $111 as paid on Conference and General Work. The Statistical Secretaries made a mistake and tabulated it as $11. In checking the totals I changed his Gloster total from $2412 to $2312 so as to get a balance. I do not have time to go back and check every item of the posting. (Our error. We are sorry).

The presiding elder says that no credit is given to Gloster charge at all. The above correction is the only difference between what he says it ought to be and what is printed in the Journal. (Not our error. Brother Hawkins failed to read it aright. Sorry).

The pastor reported $1.50 for Mt. Vernon on District work. The Statistical Secretary tabulated it as $1. This is as he should do. Brother Hawkins says it should be $3.50. (Pastor's error).

Nebo Report

The report handed in by the pastor has no entry as paid on District Work, either by Churches or in the total for the charge. The Statistical Secretary copied the report correctly. (Pastor's error).

The pastor does not have a pencil total of $43 for the charge for General and Conference Work. (All other figures are in ink). The pastor did not put any amounts down opposite the names of the churches. The Statistical Secretaries tabulate by churches and not by charges, thus they failed to see the pencil total. They tabulated the report correctly. I changed the totals of the churches to agree with the sum of the figures that were reported. (Pastor's error. Journal O.K.)

Roxie Report

In the District Work column the pastor reported "O" for Greendale and "O" for Knoxville, instead of "$1" and "$6," as Brother Hawkins stated. He did not leave the items blank but put down "O" in each case. The pastor plainly reports $39 on District Work for Roxie and not $10. He made no entry in the Kingdom Extension column, neither by Church nor by Charge. (Pastor's error).

We are sorry that the copyists made one error in tabulating Brother Morrow's report. Brother Morrow is unusually careful in making his reports, and it is seldom necessary to make a correction in his figures. We are sorry that this one error was made, and are glad that Brother Hawkins has corrected it. We are, however, sorry that his article uses the terms "reported," "correctly reported" and "properly reported," with reference to all his suggested corrections except the one as to amount paid on District Work by Mt. Vernon, where he says the pastor made the error. I would suggest that he write the Secretary of the Conference next time before stating that the reports had been so made. In that case there would be no necessity for him to state that his article was in error.

The article calls attention to eighteen mistakes in the three reports. The wording of the article seems to charge seventeen of these mistakes to the Secretaries and one to one of the pastors. As a matter of fact, five of the items are printed as Brother Hawkins says they should be, while he claims they were omitted; the Secretaries make one mistake, while the other twelve are due to the carelessness of the pastors in copying their reports.

not realize that it is a favor bestowed on them by us."

But just at that point Uncle Sam begins to "gripe." His face loses its friendliness while he tells Aunt Sam of the ingratitude of the other nations and their pesky ways. "I have within my borders everything that my people need. I prefer to trade with the rest of the world on good terms, but it is not necessary for us. We can get on without them."

A heavier cloud comes over his face. Something seems to worry him greatly in spite of his independence. He pulls a paper from his pocket containing a speech by a British military authority. (We do not understand why he should choose to quote from a Britisher. What an American authority on the subject would have to say would be much better). Leaning over to Columbia he whispers hoarsely, "But with all these high walls of protection, and with all this abundance of wealth and genius, and all the unparalleled valor and vigor of my 125 millions of people, Columbia, I must tell you something in deep confidence. Don't tell it in Gath, Japan, or even in Kamchatka. I'm afraid. Look here what this Britisher says about the next war and the place of the aeroplane in that war. We just don't have enough aeroplanes to protect all this independence that we have stored up in our borders. It does seem as if a nation's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which it possesseth. Columbia, regardless of the tax burdens upon the people, I want a fleet of high powered high speed planes sufficient to guard every foot of this vast domain of mine. I want them armed with every possible contrivance that will deal quick death to an invader. I want them flying back and forth over the country so that every humble citizen looking up from his corn furrows or work bench can see that he is protected. For you know very well, Columbia, if they find out that we have all this wealth they will be coming over here to get it and destroy all our independence."

Then Brisbane eloquently concludes:

"The next war, fought in the air, will destroy all life with poison gas and high explosives, men, women and children, as ruthlessly as life would be wiped out by the rushing waters of some flood, as ruthlessly as plague or hurricane wipes out lives in its path.

"Uncle Sam and Miss Columbia, happy in their rich country, surrounded by the high imaginary wall, should remember every day that FLYING MACHINES ARE NOT HELD BACK BY WALLS, or by the waters of the oceans, or by kind words.

"Nothing would protect this country except the positive knowledge in the minds of all other countries that any nation attacking us would invite and could not escape immediate retaliation and annihilation.

"We should have the greatest fleet of fighting airplanes in the world, twice as great as that of any other nation. We should have the greatest fleet of fighting submarines in the world, able to cross any ocean, and destroy all commerce of the enemy.

"Above all, our engineers, chemists, all our scientists should concentrate, FOR DEFENSE ONLY, on the art of instantaneous killing, whether by explosives, gas or any other possible means. The safety of THIS country should be the first consideration of THIS Government."

Nothing was said about any confidence in the power of good will and friendliness, and nothing was said of the 14,000,000 men in this country that form the nucleus of a menace to America greater than any imagined invader.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. Jas. T. Harris, new pastor at Rayville, La., is getting the work of, that good charge in hand, and anticipates a great year.

"We greatly enjoy the Advocate. Blessings upon you in the work you are doing. Jas. G. Gallo-way, Crystal Springs, Miss."

Our Alabama friend, Rev. A. H. Williams, Attalla, Ala., has renewed his subscription and thrown in an encouraging word.

We have had a good letter from Rev. E. C. Sullivan, a superannuate of Booneville, Miss. He is still working.

Rev. T. J. Holliday, pastor at Logansport, La., is looking after the interests of the Advocate and is inquiring about subscriptions on his new charge.

Seventy-five were present at the Kingdom Extension Institute at Houston, Miss., from the Aberdeen district, January 18.

Rev. Casper W. Avery, pastor at Hollandale, Miss., writes encouragingly of his work. Among his major threats is a lengthened list of Advocate subscribers. So mote it be.

"I love my church paper, and hope to take it as long as I live. God's blessings upon you." Thus writes Mrs. L. F. Shoemaker, Plaquemine, La., as she renews her subscription.

On January 7, Mr. Heard, a layman of Dry Creek, La., father of Mrs. Frank J. McCoy, wife of our pastor at Leesville, La., passed away. Our sympathy reaches out to these bereaved ones.

Rev. W. W. Murray, pastor of Mentorom circuit, Miss., favors us with some subscriptions. Thank you, Brother Murray. We appreciate your co-operation.

From Dr. W. P. Buhrman, pastor of Tupelo, Miss., comes the quota on the "Save the Advocate" plan. Dr. Buhrman was host of the 1932 session of the North Mississippi Conference.

Grenada Church has a quarterly council meeting with supper for all the workers in the Sunday school and Young People's organizations. Those meetings are well attended.

"Bishop Dobbs' visit here was a great blessing to the entire community. The other churches came and joined us for the evening service. C. D. Atkinson, pastor, DeRidder, La."

Rev. Wiley J. Ferguson, up here at Laurel, Miss., has not quit on the job. He writes a good word saying that the amount from his church will be forthcoming. Thank you, Brother Ferguson.

Under a plan by the Commission on Benevolences the money you collect for Kingdom Extension can be divided; half to go to Nashville and the other to your Conference treasurer to be credited to your Conference collection apportionment.

Mrs. J. E. Wimberly, our good friend at Port Arthur, Texas, takes time to write us a fine letter. Sister Wimberly suffers a great deal. She asks that we pray that God will sustain her and keep her patient. Let's not forget this.

Rev. J. A. Wells, pastor at Glendale, Jackson, Miss., is working hard at his new task. Let us all pull for him as he works with his people toward a great year of achievement. Put some prayer with it.

A fine and friendly letter comes to us from Opelousas, La., where Louisiana Methodism was organized. Rev. J. E. Selfe, pastor, who keeps after the interests of the church all along, the line, sent in a check to "Save the Advocate."

A very successful meeting of the National Convention of Evangelists and Christian Workers is reported to have been closed at Indianapolis, Ind., January 12. A number of internationally known evangelists were there.

The officers of the West Point Church were installed by the pastor, Rev. T. M. Bradley, at a recent eleven o'clock service. Such services emphasize office bearing in the church and bring to the minds of the officers themselves some of their duties.

Dr. A. W. Turner, our Louisiana Prohibition war-horse, tells us that Bishop Dobbs is ready to carry out the request of the late session of the Annual Conference, and that soon after the meeting at Washington, D. C., the call will be made. Let us rally to the task.

In the absence of the editor, Mr. A. A. Edgecombe, a faithful steward of the Algiers, La., church, made a call to our office. He reports that he not only takes the Advocate, but that he reads it. The manager reported that he commended the editor. Thank you, Brother Edgecombe.

We hate to hear about a fellow's being sick. Here comes Rev. R. F. Harrell, pastor at Columbia, La., telling of a three-weeks turn at the bed. He is out now. He stands by for the Advocate and is already threatening us with renewals and new subscriptions.

The Sunday school work at Okolona, Miss., has made great strides during the last few years. Although the building is not adequate for separate departmental work, still the church has made excellent use of the space it has. They are taking care of the three divisions in a splendid way.

We heard the chief pastor at Monroe, La., Rev. W. C. Scott, say a big word for his associate, Rev. Henry A. Rickey. A letter from Brother Rickey tells us to renew the subscription of one of their good women, Mrs. M. A. McHenry, saying that she is very fond of the Advocate, especially the materials on Prohibition.

Rev. J. N. Hinson, pastor on Salem and Friendship charge, Miss., is arranging for a Cokesbury class in every church and a revival in every church on the charge. He is one of the young men admitted on trial at this session of the Conference. You watch the progress of a young man who takes hold of every phase of church work that way.

Rev. J. A. George, pastor, Macon, Miss., is beginning his fourth year in that important charge. Macon has splendid equipment for carrying on the very best type of work. Their building is modern and well furnished. Next to this handsome church building is an attractive new parsonage.

Any church, big or little, that gives a good Christmas cantata does a great service to the participants, the church, and the community in which it is given. Our Leesville church, where Rev. F. J. McCoy is pastor, gave "The Holy Child." A copy of the program hints very loudly of the great occasion it must have been.

A good letter comes from Rev. H. W. Rickey, pastor at Gilbert, La., bringing the completed quota of the Gilbert charge. Thank you, Brother Rickey. When the Advocate calls, you answer. We are happy to know of Sister Rickey's improvement, but regret so much that she has had such a long stay inside. We pray for her rapid recovery.

Rev. S. H. Caffey, pastor at Tunica, has made survey of the field, getting information concerning the talents and willingness of his people to serve. He is planning for a cultivation period for his revival in the spring. He is making arrangements for a Standard Training Class and is calling all his people to rally to every interest of the church. Intelligent purposeful work will tell.

Rev. J. E. Stephens, pastor at Lexington, Miss., has started his fifth year with keen interest in all departments of the church. Large congregations are hearing his sermons. The financial situation is promising for a good year. The services are held at five o'clock, called vespers. Any method which will solve the small congregation situation at night is worth trying.

Rev. S. J. McLean, pastor, Morgan City, La., is courageously and sacrificially undertaking the work of his very important charge. We hope Louisiana Methodists will not overlook his article in last week's Advocate. And then send him a check to help on that boat. We cannot afford to let those people about whom he writes suffer for the Gospel. All of us helping a little bit will help him and them very greatly. Let us do it.

A heartening letter from Mrs. R. H. Wynn, now with her daughter in Houston, Texas, brings her renewal. The Louisiana Conference, regretted so much that Mrs. Wynn was unable to attend the memorial service of the Conference. It is all right for Mrs. Wynn to travel around and visit in many places, but she should remember that she belongs to the Louisiana Methodists, and they do not feel that Texas is big enough for her.

"Things are going fine at Amory, Miss. Our people are trying to be optimistic. Our congregations are excellent and we are having an average of about one hundred at prayer meeting." We can believe just about anything good of Amory. We have been there. One of the most attractive and convenient buildings in the country. Rev. C. T. Floyd is the pastor. In writing us these words he sent quota on the Advocate.

The friends of prohibition in the state of Connecticut, one of the wettest states in the country and one that did not ratify the Eighteenth Amendment, have united in appealing to the prohibitionists throughout the country to join the great demonstration meeting in Washington, D. C., March 7 and 8. At great sacrifice to themselves they pledge a delegation of 500. A great united demonstration, such as is contemplated, will do much to save the day for soberness in our country.

You can imagine what a handicap it is to be hard of hearing. How much of the world is shut out. Well, Mr. F. O. Durbin, Montpelier, La., has been in bed for three years with tuberculosis. A short while ago he lost his faithful wife. He is partially deaf. Can someone give him a lift along the way with a hearing device? Perhaps some reader knows of a good one that might be donated or had for a small price. See about it at once, addressing your communication to Mr. Durbin.

Do you remember Rev. C. W. Wesley? He looks straight into your eyes when he talks to you. And he seems to walk with straight steps to his work. Speaking of his new work, Summit, Miss., he says, "I find a good and loyal people here, and I expect a wonderful year. I find plenty to do, but I find that in every place. I am encouraged by the splendid co-operation of the people." He reports 60 at prayer meeting and says that they are studying the Kingdom Extension book.

The Sunday schools of Tupelo and Aberdeen, Miss., are comparing attendance records during the second quarter on basis of percentage of enrollment. The superintendent at Tupelo is Prof. Capps, and superintendent at Aberdeen is Hon. E. E. Holley. The various department leaders and teachers will make personal contacts between the schools. It is not a contest in the usual way those things go, but a friendly comparison of work being done with the view of helping each other.

Rev. C. A. Parks, up and going pastor of our good church at Indianola, Miss., has his own way of remitting for subscriptions. He receives the cold cash from the subscriber, keeps it, laying it carefully away in his coffers, and sends us his check. He says that he knows the money is good while expressing some doubt as to the check, but says that, in case his check fails to draw down the money, he will send us another one just like the first. We have had no complaint from the manager—yet.

Columbus First Church, under the leadership of the new pastor, Rev. A. T. Mellwain, has taken on new life. Brother Mellwain works with a definite plan to keep a balanced interest in all departments of his church. He plans each year for his people to learn more about the work of the church. This year he is planning for systematic giving, harnessing of every person in some form of activity, a genuine revival meeting and a course in training his working force. Large congregations are hearing his sermons.

The latest minutes show that the ten churches in North Mississippi Conference having the largest enrollment are: Greenwood, 1,245; Starkville, 1,040; Clarksdale, 1,014; Columbus, 1,003; West Point, 959; Greenville, 948; Corinth, 834; Amory, 794; and Water Valley, 689. The ten churches having the largest Sunday school enrollment are: Columbus, 1,141; Greenwood, 785; Starkville, 767; Amory, 708; Tupelo, 671; Clarksdale, 650; Corinth, 620; Greenville, 597; Grenada, 589; New Albany, 515.

He fell for the Advocate. "I am a new man in the Conference, having transferred from Florida. I have been borrowing the Advocate. I enjoy reading it. Here is my subscription along with some others." That is from Rev. Ira C. Williams, P. C., Morton, Miss. We welcome Brother Williams to Mississippi and to our circle of readers. We stand up in our place to say that Brother Williams exercised good judgment in coming to the fair state of Mississippi. Her greater day is dawning.

Dr. D. M. Key, president of Millsaps College, has done two things recently that will speak strongly for his good college. The semester, or half-year, arrangement will be of decided advantage to those high school students who finish at mid-term. Substantial reductions have been made in board and room rent for the second semester beginning in February. A pastor said the other day that he could not see that colleges had kept step with other reductions and prices. He can not say that about Millsaps. We congratulate Dr. Key and his board of trustees.

The Methodist Ministers of New Orleans, together with the Association of Commerce of this city, have formally extended an invitation to the Southern Methodist Church to hold the General Conference of 1934, in the interesting and historic city of New Orleans. New Orleans has enjoyed this privilege but once, and that some seventy years ago. Other cities bidding for this honor are Memphis, Nashville, and Charlotte, S. C. Let us hope that the Committee in charge will see fit to accept the invitation extended by the largest city in Southern Methodist territory for their approaching session.

Six dollars, the quota for our good church at Lexington, Miss., has come. Rev. J. E. Stephens is the pastor, but he disclaims any honor for raising the quota. To Mother Gwin goes the laurel for this achievement. She wrote us that she would do it. Mother Gwin has read the Advocate for 72 years. Brother Stephens is getting under way for a great year. People at Lexington are staying by him. What do you think? At quarterly conference the treasurer reported, "Salaries paid up to date." And there has been no cut in the salaries. And the pastor invites the editor to come if he has half a chance. One-fifth of a chance will be enough.

Rev. H. B. Hines, pastor of the Methodist Church at Lake Providence, La., and Grand Patron of the Order of Eastern Star, was a pleasant caller at the Advocate office recently. He was called to New Orleans to institute two new chapters of the O. E. S., one of them claiming the distinction of being the first and only branch of the Masonic Fraternity in the whole Parish of St. Bernard. While the name of this chapter had not as yet been selected, he termed it a Missionary Chapter and holds great hopes for the future of the Order in this seemingly unfriendly territory. Bro. Hines was recently presented with a sterling silver life membership card by the Lake Providence Chapter, O. E. S., of which he is justly proud.

The Grand Lodge, F. and A. M., of Louisiana, will convene in Annual Session on Monday, February 6, at 2:30 in the afternoon. Many of our pastors and laymen are active in this great fraternity and will be in attendance upon its sessions in New Orleans. Bro. Dave Haas, active layman and member of the Board of Stewards of our Church at Bunkie, is at present serving the Grand Lodge as Deputy Grand Master and will, in all probability, be elected Grand Master for 1933. Dr. Jno. F. Foster, our pastor at Ferriday, has been serving as Grand Chaplain for several years. We hope that our friends who contemplate attending the approaching sessions will take "time out" while in the city and drop in for a hand shake.

BISHOP KERN MAKES A SUGGESTION

Louisiana Methodists, in view of the fact that Easter Sunday is Orphanage Day, have been somewhat confused about what day should be observed for the Kingdom Extension offering.

Bishop Kern, who is in charge of the Kingdom Extension work for our entire church, suggests that the Second Sunday in March be observed for the Kingdom Extension-Benevolence offering. Bishop Dobbs approves this arrangement. And it is satisfactory with Rev. R. W. Vaughan, superintendent of the Orphanage.

We hope our presiding elders will so direct our people. Surely this arrangement should prove agreeable to all concerned.

KINGDOM EXTENSION INSTITUTE, BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT

The Kingdom Extension Institute held in Summit Methodist church January 5 was well attended. There were about one hundred and twenty-five present. The presiding elder, Dr. C. W. Crisler, was in the chair.

W. J. Hawkins, Conference Missionary Secretary, gave some helpful information concerning the program of the church and asked the people to do their very best during the Conference year. He closed the brief message by giving an illustration of how God could use us in doing the things that needed to be done about the church. Dr. R. T. Henry, missionary to China, spoke concerning the work in China.

Dr. C. W. Crisler closed the day's program by giving some stirring illustrations as to how easy it was to carry out the program of the church if every member would do his part. He stated that he was willing to go to any church in the district and help put on the program of our great Church. A rising vote of thanks was given Dr. Crisler for his fine spirit and also pledged him their very best during the year in order that the Brookhaven district might do its part for every cause of the church.

J. W. LEGGETT, JR., Secretary.

CORRECTION OF JOURNAL

Corrections in regard to the Journal of the Mississippi Conference seem to be in order. And since we are getting credit for more than we did, I thought perhaps I had better make a correction. Am just sorry we did not do what the Journal shows. Instead of paying $755.00, as the Journal shows, we paid $237.00 on the Benevolences.

J. H. JOLLY, P. C.

LOOK HERE, LOUISIANA METHODISTS

Mr. Editor: DeRidder is up and going. This morning I received a "check of $50, representing December pro rata of Conference Benevolences for 1933."

Hurrah for DeRidder leading the State! Now come on!

Who is at DeRidder? Why, don't you know "Tug" Atkinson is there.

Yours sincerely,

A. M. MAYO, Conf. Treas.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The church at Okalona is making fine progress in every phase of its work. The church is well organized in all three of the divisions. The pastor, Rev. T. E. Gregory, and the general superintendent, Dr. Luper, together with a corps of fine workers are putting on a real church program that is meeting with a splendid response. It was my pleasure to visit this church recently, preaching for the pastor and meeting with the workers in the afternoon.

A splendid Young People's Union meeting was held at Nettleton in the Aberdeen district recently. It was attended by large delegations from several churches.

It was a pleasure to meet with the workers of the New Albany church recently. This important congregation is going forward with its work in every way. Large congregations are attending the preaching service and every organization of the church is being well attended and is showing growth. This is one of the few churches that paid its budget in full last year. Rev. J. H. Holder and his fine people are not accepting defeat but are pressing the fight with victory.

I am teaching a Standard class at Hollandale this week. The class is well attended. This congregation has a well equipped and adequate building in which to worship and work and they are making good use of it. The pastor, Rev. C. W. Avery, is recovering from a serious operation and is leading this congregation in a forward looking way.

The period from now until Easter is a time for special emphasis on evangelism. Every local church should take advantage of this opportunity. The organization of the local church can be used. At the meeting of the Local Church Board of Christian Education plans should be made for this work. The workers council meeting should be given largely to this cause. We have much fine literature that is free that may be used. The regular periodicals will have many helps in them. This should be a period when we strive to build up the spiritual state of the church and reach out to win others.

Let us pray one for another.

In Memoriam

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

ALEXANDER GODWIN WRENN was born in Homer, La., on September 10, 1857. Joined the Methodist Church at Old Pine Grove, near Minden, at an early age. Married Minnie B. Brown, daughter of Rev. J. M. Brown, who preceded him by several months. Leaves one son, Benny Godwin Wrenn. Lived in Shreveport for the last 36 years. Was a member of Mangham Memorial Church. Had been licensed to preach under Rev. H. O. White, but let his license lapse. He loved to sing and quote poetry. Was a regular attendant at prayer meeting and preaching services. Died in Shreveport on December 30, 1932, at the ripe age of 75 years, 3 months and 20 days.

ALBERT S. LUTZ.

J. S. BALDRIDGE

On December 29, 1932, the death angel entered the home of Mrs. C. L. Hasie, Hampton, Miss., and carrier of our dear husband and father to his eternal home. He was born and reared in Jefferson county, Miss., near Fayette, March 17, 1847. He had reached the ripe old age of 85 years and nine months. He was suddenly stricken with a stroke of paralysis December 27, and only lingered two days and nights ere his spirit winged its flight back to God who gave it. He had made his home with our daughter in Hampton, Miss., for the past few years. He was a faithful member of the Methodist church for about sixty-five years or more. Holding his membership in Vicksburg in the Gibson Memorial Church for a number of years. He was ever kind and good, giving a helping hand to those in need. He leaves a devoted wife, Mrs. Emma B. Baldridge, of Vicksburg, Miss., and two daughters, Mrs. C. L. Hasie, of Hampton, Miss., and Mrs. Irma Baldridge, of Denham Springs, La., and eleven grandchildren with one great grandson. Two sisters survive, Mrs. Jennie Martin, of Longstreet, La., and Mrs. Ike Draughan, of McNair, Miss. Mr. Baldridge was an old Civil War Confederate veteran, belonging to Camp 32 at Vicksburg, Miss. Truly the old veterans are swiftly answering the last roll call and passing over the river on to the other side. Farewell, dear one, till we meet again in heaven to part no more.

ONE WHO DEARLY LOVED HIM.

MRS. MARTHA PIERCE COOK

Martha E. Pierce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Pierce, was born Apr. 1, 1858. Married to Gilbert Morris Cook October 16, 1873. On the evening of January 13, 1933, her beautiful life came to a close. A loving mother who had walked hand in hand with her devoted husband for fifty-nine years, fell asleep. Her husband with their ten children are passing through the first real sorrow that ever came to that happy home. And yet, though the shadows are deep, as they look up through tear dimmed eyes they may rejoice when they think of how greatly they have been blessed in having "Mother" spared to them for so many years.

Fifty-nine years ago she and her husband established a home, and as time passed by, ten children came to brighten the home and their lives. With joy they watched these children grow to manhood and womanhood, taking their places in the affairs of life, each making a success in his chosen occupation and taking an honorable place in society. What greater joy could come to a mother's heart than to be spared to see her children established in life, and feel that they are doing their part to make the world a better place in which to live. Sister Cook joined the church when a child. She, her husband and all their children are members of the Methodist church. She loved her church and was ever loyal, faithful and true.

There are left to mourn her passing, her husband, Gilbert M. Cook, Crystal Springs, Miss.; three sons, W. D. Cook, Meridian, Miss.; G. P. Cook, Canton, Miss.; L. H. Cook, Delta-bridge, La., and her seven daughters, Miss L. Jewel Cook, Washington, D. C., Mrs. Lucy Earl Cook Hastings, Crystal Springs, Miss., Mrs. Belle Moody and Miss Vivian Cook, also of Crystal Springs, Miss., Miss Fannye A. Cook, Jackson, Miss., Mrs. Lena May Brignac and Mrs. Launo Langheart, of Forest, Miss. To these and her fourteen grandchildren all hearts go out in tenderest sympathy.

JAS. G. GALLOWAY.

RESOLUTIONS

C. A. (CAP) POWELL AND MRS. LUNA B. POWELL

Whereas, an all-wise heavenly Father, in the infinite love and mercy, permitted the death angel to come into our midst and take from us our co-worker, friend and brother, C. A. (Cap) Powell, together with his devoted wife, Mrs. Luna B. Powell, both in the prime of life and usefulness, leaving in their stead sorrowing friends and loved ones and a broken up home; and,

Whereas, both Brother and Sister Powell were among our most loyal and active Christian workers, ever ready, willing and anxious to serve when and wherever needed, and at the very time of their going were actively engaged in planning and promoting the work of the church for the new year,

Therefore, be it resolved, by the board of stewards of Court Street M. E. Church, South, of which Brother Powell was a consistent member, that a great loss has been sustained by us, the entire church and the community.

Be it further resolved that we do hereby, as best we can, express and extend unto Brother and Sister Powell's children, and to other loved ones as well, our sincere and deepest sympathy in this, perhaps, their saddest hour.

'Tis true there was among us a home with father, mother and children, all contented and happy, that is now only sorrow and a memory. 'Tis true there are places left vacant that scarcely can be filled. Hearts sad and sorrowful that only time itself can relieve. But, thanks unto God, there is a time and place when and where families, loved ones and friends, may be reunited and live forever, a silvery lining to every cloud matters not how dark, low and heavy it may hang. God is in His heaven and in His own good time and way gathers His own unto himself.

While Brother and Sister Powell are no more among us in the earth and are greatly missed, we know where they are, and to find them need but to follow the footsteps of our Lord and Master, even as they followed him. Earth, indeed, is poorer, but heaven is richer, and our reasons even greater for striving onward and upward, toward the mark of that high calling as in Christ Jesus.

Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be made a part of our records, and copies mailed to members of the immediate families of both the deceased.

Sincerely and sympathetically,

BOARD OF STEWARDS OF COURT STREET M. E. CHURCH, HATTIESBURG, MISS.

WOMAN LOST 20 POUNDS IN 4 WEEKS

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 28 yrs. old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and further more I've never had a hungry moment."

Fat folks should take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—it's the SAFE, harmless way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know.

For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at any drug store—the cost for a bottle that lasts 4 weeks is but a trifle and if after the first bottle you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back.

TRY THIS!

When children won't eat—and won't gain weight—

The youngster who has no appetite, probably has stasis. A little syrup of figs will soon correct this condition—then watch the child eat—and gain!

Mothers should never coax a child to eat. Nature knows best. Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite—get rid of stasis. Children who don't eat are sluggish. Read what the "California treatment" is doing for sluggish, listless children in every part of the country!

A POUND A WEEK. Your child will eat well from the day and hour you conquer sluggishness. But that girl or boy with furry tongue and a bad breath should not be dosed with salts!

Begin tonight, with enough pure syrup of figs to cleanse the colon thoroughly. Less tomorrow, then every other day, or twice a week, until the appetite, digestion, weight, complexion, tell you the stasis is gone. When a cold or other ailment has again clogged the system, syrup of figs will soon set things to right.

When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a bilious yellow, California syrup of figs will gently stimulate the colon muscles—and the child you used to coax to eat will fairly devour his food.

The claims made for California Syrup of Figs are true and it will do the same for you—IF you get genuine CALIFORNIA Syrup of Figs. Don't accept any substitute.

WOMEN AND THE LAYMAN'S REPORT

The Layman's Report in its chapter on Women's Missionary organizations in the Orient, recognizes the fact that, but for woman's work for women and the woman's organization, the women of the Orient would not have been so quickly nor so effectively reached as they have been. This is due largely to the traditional seclusion of women in the Orient, which made it necessary for women to reach them, if they were reached at all. In Dr. Fisher's criticism of the woman's organizations, as written in the Christian Century, he seems to have taken note of this fact.

This excerpt from the Layman's Report in its chapter on Woman's organizations, indicates their estimate of the missionary society in its contract with Oriental women, "In this forward movement of Eastern women, Christian Missions have played a significant role, a fact admitted without reserve by leaders of the Orient."

ASSOCIATION OF SOUTHERN WOMEN FOR THE PREVENTION OF LYNCHING

"Lynch-law—punishment by death without authority and in defiance of law—is the denial of all that civilization represents. This crime peculiarly American, and identified in particular with the South, is one with ignorance, illiteracy, and the debased and primitive society.

"No section of the South is civilized that condones mob violence and the crime of lynching. America stands guilty among nations while her people permit it. Here is reclaiming work for every responsible Southern man and woman."—Mrs. Attwood R. Martin, Ky., Chairman Central Council.

"No official who has ever surrendered to a mob rather than risk his own life as a willing sacrifice can ever regard himself other than as a traitor to his trust. No one who has ever joined in doing to death any human being without trial by jury can ever regard himself as other than a murderer. The only hope of eradicating mob murder lies in the realization of these facts."—Mrs. W. A. Newell, N. C., Supt. Bureau of Christian Social Relations, Woman's Missionary Council.

"We should continue our program of education against mob violence and lynching until there is created a new public opinion in the South, which will not condone for any reason whatsoever acts of mobs and lynchers.

"We believe the forces of law and order are steadily gaining in the fight against the crime and there is reasonable hope that the unholy evil will disappear."—Mrs. L. W. Alford, Chairman, Miss.

CONFERENCE NEWS

Louisiana

"When we know, we care!
When we care, we pray!
When we pray, we give!"

To know, to care, to pray, to give, has been the great privilege of the women of the Missionary Society of the Epworth Methodist Church, New Orleans, New Orleans district, in the giving of a life membership to our dear Mrs. J. D. Koski, Fink Home, New Orleans. Mrs. Koski was a charter member and first president of the Ladies' Aid Society when Epworth was a mission. Although blind and confined to her home she has continued an active member through her prayers and contributions. She has been a regular subscriber to the World Outlook and the Christian Advocate, which are read to her by one of our members. The motive of all giving, "Like unto God's Love." It is in the spirit of love for Mrs. Koski and the love for the "Great Cause of Missions" that inspired our women to honor our co-worker.

Mississippi

Since in the infinite wisdom of God it has pleased Him to remove from our midst our well beloved and honored member, Mrs. Mary King, we the members of the Missionary Society, Vicksburg district, wish to pay tribute to her loving memory. Mrs. King lived a long and useful life, was a loving and devoted mother and a friend to all. She loved and was always loyal to the church and pastor. Keeping a sweet and gentle spirit, always in communion with her Maker. The atmosphere in her daily walks in the community was felt and highly esteemed. Her personality was a blessing to everyone and her influence will be sadly missed, not only by her children and grandchildren, but by the entire community. Therefore, be it resolved that we bow in humble submission to God's will and extend to the bereaved family and co-workers our sympathy and sense of personal loss, and pray that they may be sustained and comforted by that same trust that was hers. YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Conference Council

The spring meeting of the Louisiana Young People's Conference Council and Union Presidents held at Alexandria, January 14 and 15, was most successful. All officers were present, with the exception of Monroe district director. Ten unions were represented, making a total attendance of over thirty.

Mr. E. O. Harbin, of the General Board of Nashville, met with the Council, and proved most helpful as well interesting. Not the least appreciated of all his contributions were the clever new pep songs and folk songs which he taught the group.

The new district organization, the work of the district director of Young People's work, the new Union Constitution, plans for assemblies, Young People's Day, finances, were a few of the things which were discussed by the group. You will hear from the results of these discussions from time to time—for lack of space, we do not include them in this report.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, of Alexandria, led the opening devotional Saturday morning. Other devotionals were led by Miss Hazel Lea Nowell and Miss Pauline Rodgers, respectively. All of these were most inspirational. Mrs. G. W. Pomeroy presided over the entire meeting most efficiently, with the co-operation of the group. The hearty response in the discussions was gratifying to the leaders.

Young People's Day—March 26

Last week, we told you something about the program for Young People's Day. Mr. Harbin tells us that this playlet is entirely different from Anniversary Day pageants which we have had heretofore. It is not hard to produce, is adaptable to the size of group presenting it, and yet very effective. It can be used for any season of the year as well as for Young People's Day.

The Conference goal of $1,000 for Young People's Day offering has been prorated to the districts as follows: Alexandria district, $125; Baton Rouge, $125; Lake Charles, $100; Minden, $100; Monroe, $150; New Orleans, $150; Ruston, $100; Shreveport, $150.

Unions

The Shreveport City Union met December 19, at Noel Memorial Church. An interesting talk on "Dual Personality" was made by Assistant Coach Sebern from Fair Park High School. The talk was opened by the singing of "A Charge to Keep I Have," the speaker commenting on the hymn, and building his talk around it. Fred M. Smith is publicity superintendent of this union, of which Merlin McKinnon is president.

The Sunshine Union of Lake Charles district met January 8 in New Iberia, four churches being represented. Talks by Ralph Agate and Charles Carver, and the union business constituted the program, after which refreshments were served in a nearby hall.

Personal

We are glad to report that Miss Clara Kirtland is much improved in health, and is now visiting in the home of Rev. J. P. Boncarrere at Donaldsonville. Clara has been quite ill, having spent some time in Touros Infirmary.

We have just today received an announcement reading thus: Mr. and Mrs. Perry Lord Lowe announce the marriage of their daughter Mary to Mr. William Paul Cassels on Sunday, January 15, 1933, Minden, La. Paul has been active for a number of years in the J. O. Y. Union, being president this year. Mrs. Cassels, or Molly Lowe, is secretary of the union. Good work, Paul, and congratulations to them both.

Mrs. G. W. Pomeroy, our Conference president, spent last week in Baton Rouge, visiting her mother.

When Your Cough Hangs On, Mix This at Home

Saves $2. So Easy! No Cooking!

The best cough remedy that money could buy can easily be mixed at home. It costs very little, yet it's the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of stubborn coughs, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. To make syrup, use 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, and stir a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and saves two-thirds of the money a family usually spends on cough medicine. Keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the germ-laden phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed membranes, clears the air passages, and thus ends a severe cough in a hurry.

Pinex is a compound of Norway Pine, in concentrated form, the most reliable healing agent for severe coughs. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Bronchial Infections

Need Creosote

For many years our best doctors have prescribed creosote in some form for coughs, colds and bronchitis, knowing how dangerous it is to let them hang on.

Creomulsion with creosote and six other highly important medicinal elements, quickly and effectively stops all coughs and colds that otherwise might lead to serious trouble.

Creomulsion is powerful in the treatment of all colds and coughs no matter how long standing, yet it is absolutely harmless and is pleasant and easy to take.

Your own druggist guarantees Creomulsion by refunding your money if you are not relieved after taking Creomulsion as directed. Beware the cough or cold that hangs on. Always keep Creomulsion on hand for instant use.

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

FACTS ABOUT PROHIBITION

"The Good Old Days"

By the Rev. Paul Jagers of Munfordville and Louisville

I should like to present a picture of the community in which I lived until I was 15 years old. This community was typical of many communities in our city before the days of prohibition. In this community there were twelve saloons. Each one had its gambling table and back room. In practically all of these saloons a 14-year-old boy could buy whiskey and beer over the bar. And several of them could get credit. Many of the boys stole coal from the railroads and sold it to rush the can and hit the bottle. The ambition of the boy was to blow the foam from a glass of beer and to be admitted into the fellowship of the back room. These saloons were open on Sunday. A watchman stood in front of the saloon and gave the signal at the approach of the "bulls" by ringing an electric bell. This, of course, was meant to be a courtesy to the "bull." It would have been embarrassing to the "bull" to see a man stagger out the front door while he was passing. The saloon keeper would not violate the law now if we should give him the privilege of opening the saloon again, and we know the "bulls" would not accept hush money. The boys knew the names of each saloon keeper, the brand of his goods, and the size of his glasses. Mothers, the security of your boys depends upon the return of these conditions.

Not a boy with whom I played went to high school. They were put out to work as soon as they were old enough to get a permit—age 14. Consult the records of the Board of Education for the number of permits granted and the number of boys in high school; compare with the present.

It was the practice of the boys in the neighborhood to pitch in and get a keg or half-barrel of beer for Sunday and to spend the day playing poker, shooting dice and drinking beer. A large per cent of the boys over 13 had a Juvenile Court record. If interested, consult the records for year, 1915.

"WILD YOUTH"

Educators in colleges and high schools of the country are almost unanimous in saying behavior conditions are better and less drinking among students since prohibition, even though enrollments have increased by the millions.

More than 1,075,000 signatures of young people from fourteen to thirty years of age, to a pledge of total abstinence and prohibition support, were presented to President Hoover, December, 1931, by delegates representing the Young People's Branch, Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Jane Addams: "Drunkenness was the worst feature of pre-prohibition dance halls. A recent search of 4,500 dance hall patrons revealed only three flasks.

Judge Mary Bartelme, Chicago Juvenile Court: "Formerly about ten drunken girls were brought into my court weekly; since prohibition they have almost disappeared."

Robert Ropp, chairman of Allied Youth: "For everybody who carries a hip flask there are 999 who will not touch liquor."—Signal Press.

A STAR TO START WORLD EXPOSITION

Light from a star in the heavens 240 trillion miles distant will be utilized to set into motion, the machinery which opens the science exhibits of Chicago's 1933 World's Fair—A Century of Progress Exposition, on June 1, of this year.

The giant star Arcturus, forty light years away from the earth, will supply the light. This light will fall through the powerful lenses of the 40-inch telescope of the Yerkes Observatory at Williams Bay, Wis., and be focused on a tiny photo-electric cell.

The light's impact will cause an electrical effect on the photo-electric cell. Amplified, this will send an impulse over wires to the Exposition grounds which will throw the necessary switches to open the science exhibits.

The light used for this purpose in the 1933 World's Fair will have traveled through space from Arcturus to the earth at the rate of 186,000 miles a second since 1893, the year of the World's Columbian Exposition—Chicago's first world's fair.

Selection of Arcturus for the role of throwing the switch is particularly appropriate. In the forty years since the light which will act on the photo-electric cell left Arcturus, Chicago's spectacular rise to rank among world cities has taken place. In those forty years, too, mankind has made the majority of the scientific advances recorded in A Century of Progress.—A Century of Progress.

Medical writers agree that the important point in the treatment of a cold, or cough due to a cold, is to relieve the congestion in the nose and throat, thereby preventing serious complications which may follow a neglected cold. To stop this congestion Calomel was the accepted and standard remedy until Calotabs, the improved calomel compound tablet was introduced.

Now that science has robbed calomel of its nausea and danger, making it pleasant to take and perfectly safe for general use, over forty million Calotabs are consumed in the U. S. yearly, with only the most pleasant and satisfactory results. In millions of homes Calotabs have proven their superiority in the prompt relief of colds and coughs due to colds.

One or two Calotabs at bed-time with a glass of sweet milk or water. No salts necessary. No nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning the congestion has subsided, your cold or cough is relieved, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish—no danger.

Get a family package of Calotabs, containing full directions, only thirty-five cents. Trial size, ten cents. At any drug store. (adv.)

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

WHO IS GOING TO OBJECT to Mississippi's "no garden, no relief" plan except the fellow who would insist that you shell the corn if you brought it to him? Let whatever objections may be raised to the plan, is it not Mississippi's way of saying that those who try to help themselves are most worthy of help?

Now it is not going to hurt anybody to get back to a little more intimate touch with mother earth. The artist takes a pride in his painting, the musician in his composition, and the craftsman in his work. Can you think of anything that offers any greater appeal to the artistic temperament, or offers a finer practical return? The earth has always stood ready to help mankind. But it takes co-operation. It grows briars just as readily as corn, and, unassisted, will produce them rather than corn.

Did you hear about Lake County, Indiana? "Its committee adopted relief gardening as one of the leading features of its program. It reports that 35,000 unemployed persons voluntarily enlisted in gardening, producing $600,000 worth of food-stuffs for themselves and their unemployed neighbors. Here was a relief garden project which was without parallel in the nation. They were regardful of one another's rights; they organized their own night shifts of volunteer watchmen. And quite apart from the material gain of these gardens, one of the finest things to be said about them is that they kept up the morale and self-respect of the people by providing them with something to keep them busy, something which yielded a worthwhile gain for the time and effort expended."

When a garden, under the hand of the faithful gardener, grows in addition to potatoes, beans, cabbage and turnips, a good crop of "respect for the rights of others," "self-respect" and "morale," it is something to be recommended for universal use. It seems that soils producing these things necessary to man's social welfare are not as common as they should be. Here is a suggestion to our agricultural colleges and our county agents.

BEING A DIRT FARMER by birth, environment and early training, and still having an undying love for the farm, I take some farm papers. One of them has a great deal to say about agriculture, farming, stockraising, and the like. And I thought that that was what a farm paper was for. We ought, as farming people, to know more about the nature of our soil, how to deal with it, and how to get more from less of it with less labor. We used to think that there was great virtue in putting in long hours. It was our boast that we worked from dawn till dusk and all that. But if we had used our brains as much as we used our brawn the situation might have been quite different. We ought to have better stock. We ought to have more of the conveniences that cut down the number of steps to be taken and the number of pounds to be lifted.

But the other paper does not have a great deal to say about farming. It does not seem to be so much concerned about rotation of crops. It is more interested in the farmer than the farm. In its columns I find discussed those problems that mark the points where the farmer becomes related to all other groups in our country. In other words, the isolation of the farm has been broken up and the farmer must find his destiny tied up with that of all other groups. We cannot improve the farm until we improve the farmer. And we cannot settle the farm problem working at it alone. President-elect Roosevelt gave

HE REPEATS IT

Now when we "signed off" in the "Save the Advocate" campaign, we were serious about it. It stands. The campaign is officially closed. But that is not the point. That does not mean that our effort to save the paper has ended.

You remember the good friend of the Advocate who dared us to raise $375, saying that if we did he would give us $370? Well, we did not raise it by February 1. What do you think? He comes back and says that he will renew the challenge to March 1.

This time the dare is up to the Advocate readers everywhere. He says if the friends of the Advocate, 375 of them, will send in $1.00 each, we still may claim his $370.

I am ready to lead off. Come on and let's get it.

a great deal of attention to the farmer in his campaign as did Mr. Hoover. It is time. But the farmer himself will have to undertake seriously and intelligently his own improvement.

MUTT, THAT NE'ER-DO-WELL creation of Bud Fisher, that gentleman who exhausts all his energy in the exercise of his genius to escape the necessity of using his energy at all, was at the hungry end of a two-day's fast imposed by his wife's vigilant rolling-pin guard at the pantry. He confided this condition to his friend Jeff and displayed again the fact that his ingenuity works just as well on an empty stomach. He says to Jeff, "I am going to tell that lady at this house that I want to do some chores in exchange for food because I'm starved—and see what she says." Jeff assured him that the lady would give him a hand-out. "Your story," said the lady to Mutt, "moves me deeply. I'll give you a meal if you will light the fire in the stove for me." With one of his most elaborate and extravagant bows the hungry beggar accepts the chance and follows the good lady, while Jeff, peeping from behind a nearby fence, watches the drama. The lady takes Mutt to the back yard, hands him an axe, points to a pile of wood which appears to be hickory, hard to chop and harder to split, and tells him, "Just chop some of that wood, and—". And at the end of the dash, without waiting to get the completed order, Mutt, with far more energy than might be supposed at the end of a two-day fast, dashed away. As he did so he was seen to exclaim, "A wood stove. I thought it was a gas stove you had lady." And Jeff's heels instead of his head are at the top of the fence as the curtain comes down.

Now, not so much is being said today about the lazy man, the man who won't work. There are so many idle men and honorable that the lazy man is not so disreputable as he was. That is a part of the pity of the situation. We should not forget though that there are still among us those whose energy is being exhausted in telling "what is the matter with the world" without trying to do anything about it. And they will be more than glad to set everything all right again provided it is a gas stove and there is no hickory wood to split, no hard work to do. You and I had just as well face the fact that our spiritual hunger about which we occasionally complain is all a farce unless we are willing to take an axe and get on that pile of hickory wood in our own backyards and prepare some kindling and wood for firing the boilers of spirituality in our own time.

Jesus did not say, "My Father thinketh hitherto, or complaineth hitherto, and I discuss what is wrong with the world." "My Father worketh hitherto and I WORK." And at the end of every day so spent by any of us there is a better world and a better man.

OUR WOMEN AND THE KINGDOM. "Who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?" is the question addressed by Mordecai to Queen Esther at a most critical moment in the life of the Hebrew people. May it not with similar significance be addressed to the women of our Church at this time? When has the situation been quite so critical as it is today? When have the perils been so many and so menacing as today? And can there be any mistaking the dramatic significance of the place occupied by our women?

And just as Mordecai said to Esther, "Do not imagine you will escape inside the king's house, any more than the rest of the Jews. If you persist in saying nothing at this crisis, relief and succour will appear

WHAT I KNOW ABOUT BEER

By S. J. Duncan-Clark

(Concluded from last week)

Beer and Prosperity!

They say this country will drink itself back to prosperity.

Look at any country that has lawful beer today and then tell me is there any evidence that it is prospering through consumption of the amber suds.

Great Britain has lawful beer, and dire poverty stalks in its streets.

Germany has lawful beer, and unemployment threatens the life of Germany.

Economic salvation is not to be found in beer, or else these countries would be in better shape than the United States, and the fact is they are worse off than America.

Employment

Breweries will create employment, they tell us. That is not true. They will shift employment. They will lower demand for soft drinks and milk, and throw dairymen out of jobs. They will, in time, create the unemployable, just as they did before. They will decrease the efficiency of workers, just as they did before.

But the crusade to bring back lawful beer is merely preliminary to the bringing back of lawful spirits, lawful whiskey and gin and all the rest of the bottled trouble that is now an outlaw.

If one could forget for a moment how serious the problem is one would be moved to mirth by the difficulties in which the wets find themselves involved now that they have the promise of the two big political parties to open the road for beer and "repeal."

It is evident that now that the wets have their opportunity to improve conditions they are losing confidence in their ability to make good on the loud promises which have been shouted up and down the land. And they well may lose confidence. They cannot make good. The beer that looked to them so desirable last July when they sickened sensible people by their sordidly maudlin demonstrations in the party conventions looks less like a great white hope now. But we can leave the wets to their worries.

The important thing for us to recognize, it seems to me, is the fact that lay behind the prohibition movement, and that is still a fact challenging our civilization—Intoxicating beverages are an evil and only an evil, and the traffic in them whether sanctioned by law or forbidden, is inherently a lawless traffic, the enemy of individual welfare and social security.

Whatever happens in the next few months that fact will remain unchanged. I am not nearly as much concerned about defending prohibition, as I am about fighting the evil of intoxicant and the traffic that deals with them. I believe it is important to shift the emphasis now from the virtues of prohibition to the evils of liquor. Let the enemies of prohibition say what they please about it—the accusation they cannot answer is that the substitutes they propose will not lessen the evil of intoxicants, will not cure the lawlessness of the liquor traffic. Civilization must face those evils if it is to be able to tackle its other tasks which crowd upon it and threaten its existence.

What Made the Trouble

Our wet friends plausibly declare they are against the return of the saloon. What of it? It was not the saloon that made trouble. It was the liquor the saloon sold. There was no mischief in the bright lights of the old-time bar-room; no perils in the mahogany bar and the brass rail. Some of the pictures on the walls were undesirable, but they drove no man to crime or violence.

Rape and arson and murder were not in the cheer and comfort of the saloon; they did not hide in the free lunch; but they were in the liquor that the saloon sold.

When a man proposes abolishing the saloon but restoring liquor, and thinks himself virtuous, I begin to wonder about the sort of mind he has. It is not the return of the saloon that gives me anxiety. It is the return of liquor, bearing the sanction of law.

I would be in favor of retaining the saloon and abolishing liquor. I think one of the places where we failed was in neglect to provide cheery, comfortable resorts, where there was warmth and light and music, and chances for social gathering and entertainment, as substitutes for the licensed saloon. Man craves those things; they are good things. It was stupid to leave the provision of them to the liquor traffic, which made them traps for men, instead of sources of help and encouragement.

We must not be led astray by the idea that banishing the saloon as one sort of dispensary for liquor, and substituting some other sort of dispensary is going to help the situation. The fight that has meaning is not against the saloon, not against any particular method for selling liquor, but against liquor itself and all methods of lawful traffic in it for beverage purposes.

And we must bear in mind that if beer comes back before the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed—should it be repealed, which is far from being a certainty even in the minds of the wets—it can come back only on the theory that it is not intoxicating; that it is, in fact, a soft drink. That theory is utterly false, but law may be passed to give it support.

And if that is done, what safeguards can be placed around the sale of beer, alleged to be a soft drink, that is not placed around the sale of other soft drinks—of ice cream sodas and malted milk and the like? On what theory will soda fountains be prevented from selling it? How are we to avoid the danger that it will be drunk by children as well as adults? There are no safeguards in the so-called Collier Beer Bill passed by the House at Washington.

Beer with 3.2 per cent alcoholic content may be as easily obtainable by children and grown-ups as orange juice now is. The alcoholic habit may be cultivated under sanction of law in the school children of America. If the distillers of ardent spirits wanted to find a way to create a demand for their destructive decoctions they could ask nothing better.

That is a subtle and dangerous phase of the present situation which demands earnest consideration and vigorous effort.

A New Crusade

I am convinced that one thing we can do, and must do, is to renew the educational warfare against the evils of alcohol as an element in beverages. The crusade of education must be carried into every section of the land. The help of science must be enlisted as never before. This is a scientific age. Our boys and girls are laboratory trained. They respect science. Modern science indicts alcohol. The ablest minds denounce it as a beverage. In the schools, in the homes, in the churches, by spoken word and written word, the inherent dangers of intoxicants must be attacked. Informed sentiment must be created that will deal with the liquor evil more effectively than by any method yet tried or now proposed. We cannot accept defeat in this battle. The war must go on, more intelligently, more vigorously, more persistently than ever.

YUKIO OZAKI'S JOURNEY HOME

By Haywood Broun

Yukio Ozaki is going home to show the warlike Japanese how a pacifist can die.

According to the London Daily Herald, he left England quite certain that assassination awaited him as soon as he reached his native land. Nor can it be said that he spoke without warrant; for his life has thrice been attempted, and in the present mood of Tokio rancor boils against those who seek to criticize the army and its activities.

Ozaki has been honored in the land to which he goes. He was mayor of Tokio and also a cabinet minister. In a letter to his son before he sailed he said, "For a public man the best form of death is to fall victim to the cold hand of the assassin."

"Any first-class public man must be prepared," he added.

Yukio Ozaki walks the deck of a steamer and gazes across the sea to that horizon which presently will be smudged with the first dim outline of the Island empire. He will watch the magic mountain thrust up its cone-shaped head as the rocky coast takes on shape and color. And he will see that Japan which he has loved spread before him and find it good. For it is not within the scope of his plan to seek his rendezvous sorrowfully or to make the tryst as any gesture of negation or despair. He merely adds the necessary last page.

Yukio Ozaki is 73, and before he left the safety of London's friendly fog he said that in his memoirs, "which I leave in lieu of a gravestone I have stated the guiding principles of a second reformation of Japan."

The assassin will probably be quite unaware of the fact that in delivering the final stroke he himself is setting the seal of sincerity upon the book.

Upon many occasions men of blunted vision have made the same mistake. In the effort to stamp out a messenger they have succeeded in sending his messages thundering across the world.

And Ozaki may well believe that his own death by violence will prove the crowning argument in his long protest against a war-like Japan. As long ago as 1920 he made a speech in the Diet against his nation's militarism and said, "Only by its overthrow can the good repute of Japan in the world be restored to its former luster."

Surely no man with a dagger is competent to destroy the truth of this assertion. Indeed, it is the men with swords who invariably clinch the argument against which they think they fight.

It is curious that the world is so slow to grasp the aggressive quality of the pacific principle. Most men seem to think of it as mere negation and surrender. Causes built upon the words of nonresistant leaders have swept the world. Indeed, the first sign of their decline has been the day when these causes themselves became coercive. Christianity, for instance, was betrayed by those later Peters who took up the sword.

Yukio Ozaki, 73 years old and holder of no governmental office, can now by his steadfastness move the minds of his countrymen far more than when he sat in power. Human nature sweeps along beyond artificial geographical and political barriers, and there has been no nation which could fail to be moved by the man who says, "This I believe, and this I say, though you slay me."

Even the sects which scoff at pacifism have frequently been moved to employ its tactics. Any good Communist will tell you that Gandhi is a sentimental visionary whose leadership has impeded real and successful revolution in India. And yet that same good Communist will point with pride to the fact that the hunger marchers in Washington stood their ground and raised no aggressive hand when the police taunted them and tried to lure them into a bloody brawl.

Not only is it human nature, but throughout the animal kingdom a check can be put upon the aggressor by those who neither fly nor fight, but stand their ground.

Yukio Ozaki was the donor of the cherry trees which line the Potomac Driveway, and when spring comes round the blossoms may tell the story of a new day for Japan. And it will be the day of the statesman who believed in the preparedness of unconquerable human spirit.—Washington Daily News.

STATEMENT BY REPRESENTATIVE RANKIN OF MISSISSIPPI

In a statement to the press today, Representative John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, one of the announced candidates for Speaker of the next House, took one of his competitors, Hon. Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, to task for statements made by Mr. Rainey in a speech delivered before the Washington Board of Trade a few nights ago, in which Mr. Rankin said:

"From what has transpired in Washington since Congress convened, one would think that the 'forgotten man' had turned out to be the brewer or the distiller.

"I note from the papers that Hon. Henry T. Rainey announced in a speech here in Washington a few nights ago that if he is elected Speaker of the House, he will recognize someone to move to suspend the rules and pass a resolution to re-submit the Eighteenth Amendment to conventions in the various states, on the first day of the session, in order to expedite legalizing the liquor traffic, thereby denying reasonable time for debate or opportunity for amendments.

"What an astounding statement to come from one who aspires to preside over the destinies of a Congress representing a Christian nation for the next two years!

"We are in the midst of the greatest panic of all history. Our American civilization is shaken to its foundation. Our international trade is dead. Our transportation system is paralyzed, and our factories closed down.

"Our farmers are bankrupt; their homes are being swept away for debts or confiscated for taxes.

"Ten million men who are able and willing to work, are walking the streets, or tramping the highways, begging for employment by which to earn their daily bread. Soup kitchens abound in almost every community. Bread lines are stretching down the streets of practically every city in America, while men and women and children from the best families of our country are begging their bread from door to door—people who won't get the chill of the humiliation out of their blood for two or three generations.

NOTES AND COMMENT

By Dr. V. C. Curtis, Contributing Editor

"A wave of suicide is sweeping over the land, leaving in its crimson wake the wreck and ruin of once happy firesides—mothers killing their children to keep from seeing them suffer and then committing suicide across their dead bodies!"

"Under these conditions, to suspend the rules on the first day of the convening of Congress and pass a resolution to legalize the liquor traffic would, in my opinion, mark the high point of legislative stupidity for all time. In the words of old Ben Hill, it would write a page in our history for tyrants throughout coming ages to read to listening subjects to prove that the people are incapable of self-government."

"The liquor question is not the paramount issue. It does not compare in importance with the demand for currency expansion, unemployment relief, farm relief, and other similar measures that go to the very heart of our present troubles."

"If I am elected Speaker, I will not deny a hearing to either the wets or the dries. But I serve notice now that so long as I preside over the House of Representatives no liquor legislation will be passed under suspension of the rules!"

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL

The twenty-third annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council will be held in the Fourth Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Louisville, Ky., March 8-14, 1933.

Mrs. Huston Quin, 224 Kennedy Court, Louisville, Ky., is general chairman of the local committee.

The Brown Hotel will be Council hotel headquarters.

The meeting will open with a vesper service Wednesday at 5 o'clock, at which time the Holy Communion will be celebrated. At 7 p. m., there will be a fellowship dinner at the hotel. Wednesday morning the executive committee will meet at 9 o'clock, and that afternoon the sessions committees are called for 2 o'clock.

The first business session will be called to order Thursday morning at 9 o'clock.

The program for each of the seven days is full of interest. Among the speakers who will bring inspirational messages are Bishop Paul B. Kern, who will deliver the annual sermon Sunday morning, and Dr. John McDowell, who will deliver an address on Home Missions, Sunday evening. Dr. McDowell will have charge of the noon Bible hour Friday and Saturday, and Bishop Kern, Monday and Tuesday. Bishop McMurry will consecrate the candidates on Monday evening, and Dr. Charming Tobias will speak on the Paine College Jubilee Thursday evening.

Reduced railway rates, according to the Certificate plan, have been granted. This means that a full one way fare of not less than sixty-seven (67) cents must be paid for a ticket to Louisville, and a certificate secured which will entitle the holder to half rate for the return ticket over the same route; provided not less than one hundred (100) regularly issued and properly dated certificates are presented in time to be counted and duly validated. Each person purchasing a going ticket must request a certificate and as soon as possible after reaching Louisville this certificate must be turned over to the secretary of the Council, or her representative, to be counted and properly endorsed. The required number of certificates (100) properly signed by the Council secretary, must be in hand before the railway agent can validate one. When conditions are met, he will validate a certificate any day from March 8-14, except Sunday.

The dates of sale of tickets, except from the more remote points, are March 4-13, inclusive. From the more remote points the dates will be early enough for the purchaser to reach Louisville in time for the meeting. The final date of honoring certificates is March 17.

Publicity agents are requested to take note of these dates, and to urge all who are to attend to purchase tickets to Louisville on the proper selling dates, also to urge those who attend, to travel by rail, that there may be no shortage in attendance.

Round trip excursion tickets of all classes sold prior to or on dates of sale authorized for the convention, from points from which the one-day fare to place of meeting is $2 or more, and round trip clergy tickets may be counted in arriving at the minimum.

If the number of tickets purchased may, as nearly as practicable, reflect the actual attendance at the meeting, our appreciation of the courtesy of the railroads will be expressed. A full attendance will also serve as a guide in determining whether reduced rates are justified another year.

THE BENEVOLENCES. One of the most serious problems before the church is the condition of our Benevolent enterprises. Some may say that the preaching of the gospel is the first consideration and we are in accord with that statement, but how can we preach the gospel to the whole world unless we send preachers? How can we send the preachers without means? The church that is content to take care of self only will not be able to care for its own pastor very long. The Lord does not let the anti-missionary church prosper. History verifies this statement; in fact, they do not even live—they merely exist.

The reason for the disaster in our benevolences is not to be found only in the financial depression; but the depression that has had most to do with it is spiritual. Most any one can discover this fact if they will make investigations in the towns and villages as to the amount of money spent by church people for things not necessary for life nor comfort. Many do not pay to the benevolences because they can not, and many others do not pay because they will not.

There are some changes that we think should be made in our law. An article appeared in the Nashville Christian Advocate of January 27 by Rev. Thomas J. Gross, of Demopolis, Ala., which has some very wise suggestions in it. It is in line with a report of a large committee appointed at the last General Conference to work out a financial plan, but by some parliamentary procedure was side-tracked and another resolution substituted. In brief, the plan is to suggest to the several churches what it is thought they should pay, instead of "assessing" or "apportioning," and give them the privilege of changing the amount they are supposed to pay, if they think it best. This gives them a voice in the matter and the assessment has in it the elements of a contract, or promise to pay. People are not enthusiastic about that which has been "sent down" and with which they have had nothing to do.

We have been interested in the proceedings of one of the Annual Conferences. An ex-president of the Conference College, and who was at that session of the Conference appointed presiding elder, made a motion which was carried, reducing the apportionment for General Benevolences twenty-five per cent. We have no criticism to make further than to say some of us in other Conferences have felt the need of making a reduction, but in the face of the law we have not had the courage (?) to do it.

THE OXFORD MOVEMENT. The so-called Oxford movement, or Buchmanism (from Buchman, the founder), is receiving much comment in the papers. It seems that the spirit and purpose of the movement are not understood. One prominent southern daily had a lengthy editorial recently describing it as an effort to correct financial troubles and lead us out of the depression. Dr. H. E. Luccock, of Yale University, on the other hand, is severe in his criticism of the movement because it takes no notice of the financial and social welfare of the people. Others who are prominent have condemned it in some particulars and commended it in others. We note, however, that it is getting recruits from every walk in life. Bishop Manning, of the Episcopal Church, has endorsed it; many college professors have given it their enthusiastic support; large numbers of college students are active in the meetings. Curtis B. Hall, son-in-law of President-elect Roosevelt, seems to be one of its converts. The Literary Digest reports a recent meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York City with twenty-three hundred present. The movement is not confined to America, but is spreading to other countries.

Our information on the subject may not be sufficient to express an intelligent opinion, but if the report of some of their preaching, as given in the New York Christian Advocate, is correct, we see much in it to commend. We are reminded of the old-fashioned Methodist Class Meeting and Experience Meeting. These people meet together and confess their sins and pray for the direct guidance of the Holy Spirit. There is a frivolity about some of their meetings which is due to the lack of serious appreciation of sin and its consequences. The confessions are made in detail, which we think is very objectionable, and we think will have the opposite effect to that which is desired.

Their strong point is starting with the individual in their effort to get him right with God before trying to correct all the evils of a community as a whole. We think this is well. After the heart is made pure it becomes a proper channel through which the Christian spirit may express itself in correcting the social and financial troubles. Yet, we see an article in one of our church papers in which the correspondent warns the readers against the "Perils of individualistic salvation." in our way of thinking this peril is indeed very remote.

What does this movement and others which have not had so much publicity indicate? It evidently means a heart hunger for communion with God. It is a repudiation of the thought that material things will satisfy the deeper longings of the human soul. The Church has the Bread of life, and why should people turn from it to seek it in other organizations or movements? There is a reason. If the churches were really supplying the Bread of life as we should, people would not be seeking it at other altars. Maybe we of the Church had better do a little self-examining of ourselves rather than decrying the perils of "Individualistic Salvation." it might be better for us to call people to repentance, and emphasize the necessity of personal regeneration and not let some outside organization take our privilege and crown from us.

Columbus, Miss.

HEAR THIS!

The many friends of Rev. J. E. Cunningham, of the North Mississippi Conference, will find opportunity from time to time to address him care of Veterans' Hospital, Alexandria, La., where he has gone for rest and medical treatment at the government hospital.

Everybody loves this fine Christian gentleman, and while he may not feel like answering all communications in person, he will appreciate hearing a word from his many friends.

Our love and prayers follow for his restoration to health.

E. H. CUNNINGHAM.

DR. R. T. HENRY IN MERIDIAN DISTRICT

We were delighted to have Dr. R. T. Henry, missionary to China, who is now at home on a furlough, with us a week on our district. He spoke at Central, East End, Fifth Street, Hawkins Memorial and Poplar Springs, Meridian, Lauderdale, DeKalb, New Hope, Vivville, Quitman, Enterprise, Waynesboro and Bucatunna.

At Bucatunna, Waynesboro, New Hope and Vivville, all day meetings were held, and in addition to the addresses given by Dr. Henry, addresses were given by some of our own district pastors, reviewing the study book, "Christ and the Coming Kingdom."

At these all-day meetings, dinner was served at the church.

Mr. W. D. Hawkins, district lay leader, made the entire itinerary with Dr. Henry and the writer, and rendered valuable service to the cause by announcing the plan of conducting the culture program which is to culminate in Easter Sunday with an offering, and giving a review of one chapter of the Study Book.

All the meetings were well attended. At some points, the attendance was extra large. Judging from the attention given to the speakers, and the favorable comments on the services, I am persuaded that much good was done.

for the Jews from some other quarter, but you will perish, you and your family." So may we speak to the women of our time whose children, whose homes, whose churches and the world are much in their keeping. And their destiny is inseparably connected with that of the world. Her words and deeds will have much to do with tipping the scales of destiny in this time of crisis.

On March 8, our Woman's Missionary Council will meet in Louisville for a seven-day meeting. This makes the twenty-third annual session. This organization, whose history almost coincides with that of the first quarter of the Twentieth Century meets at a time of exceptional meaning for the Church. Our entire Southern Methodism should make special prayer for the session.

Bishop Paul B. Kern, fresh from the Far East, and thoroughly alive to ominous conditions of that section of the world, will be one of the main speakers at the Council. Dr. Channing Tobias, one of the finest products of our work with our colored people, a graduate of Paine College, Augusta, Georgia, will be on the program for an address. Bishop McMurry will consecrate the candidates. In addition to these there will be their own great leaders and speakers.

THE MILLENIUM is not far away. Mr. Burnett R. Maybank, the young 32-year-old mayor of Charleston, S. C., who is reported to have put his ancient city on a sound financial basis by a policy of strict economy and drastic tax collections, drawing a salary of $3,600, the other day blocked a movement in the city council to increase his salary to $6,000. Said he, "In the present conditions, with poverty and distress everywhere, and people being called on to pay taxes while money is scarce, I couldn't think of accepting the salary."

Why is it that we are still so pagan that we think that handing a man some money is about the only way to reward a worthy achievement? We seem to think that we can pay a man for saving a city. And just as soon as we get him paid we straightway forget the man and the achievement. We have paid for it and him. Dr. Gunsaulus, that lion-like preacher and president of Armour Institute of Technology, said that Mr. Armour tried to make him a rich man, but that he refused it and so arranged things as to keep Mr. Armour under obligations to him all the time. He refused to be paid. Armour is still wealthy, we understand, and Gunsaulus is dead, but Mr. Armour has never paid his debt, and he can't with all his millions. To save a city is reward enough.

But I am for rewarding Mayor Maybank. I want it to be known in every city, hamlet and country home in our nation. I therefore move, Mr. Chairman, that a brief statement of what he has done with a good cut of the man be sent to every publication in this country and that 100 marked copies be sent to each mayor and other executives in our country including President-elect Roosevelt and all our governors, and that it be announced over every radio station and from every movie screen.

American citizens generally do not object to supporting their government when they can see the fairness of it and realize that they are getting something besides talk. They are growing tired of filibustering and government by ballyhoo.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. A. T. McIlwain will assist in a revival meeting at Aberdeen, Miss., beginning March 5.

"I am trying to get other subscriptions," writes Rev. J. Noel Hinson, Etta, Miss., enclosing his own renewal.

We appreciate the contribution and good letter from the pastor of our church at Greenwood, La., Rev. H. S. Johns.

Our church at Franklin, La., goes forward under the able and enthusiastic leadership of Rev. C. C. Wier, the pastor.

Rev. R. T. Henry, returned missionary from China, recently spoke before the student body of Whitworth College.

A special donation of $10 comes to us from the Board of Lay Activities of the Mississippi Conference. Thank you, laymen.

We are indebted to Mrs. Frank Filer, Oak Ridge, La., for "Save the Advocate" quota from that church. Rev. W. D. Milton is the pastor.

Rev. W. J. Dawson, Hawkins Memorial Church, Meridian, Miss., sends a contribution and much encouragement. Thank you, Brother Dawson.

Mrs. Susie E. Shell, Biloxi, Miss., sends great encouragement in a letter telling how she is backing the Advocate. Blessings upon her.

Mrs. L. F. Jones, Black Hawk, Miss., and Mrs. Jno. J. Beck, Drew, Miss., are among those renewing their subscriptions and speaking highly of the Advocate.

Good news from home. Mrs. J. F. Hollinger, Meadville, Miss., sends the quota from the Meadville church. Thank you, Sister Hollinger, and the church.

We have just received the renewal of Mr. F. A. Ainsworth, Rt. 3, Jayess, Miss. This marks the beginning of his fiftieth year as a reader of the Advocate.

Mangum Memorial, Shreveport, speaks its support of the Advocate through Mrs. A. R. Killgore, who has sent the contribution. We are very grateful for this response.

We are hoping to get off to the Missionary Council and Paine College Jubilee at Augusta, Ga. If we do we shall tell you something about what happened. Hope to see some of you there.

"It is like a letter from home to get the news from the North Mississippi Conference. Keep up your fight for prohibition." That is from Mrs. R. P. Goar, 567 6th Street, San Pedro, Cal. We are glad to have this renewal.

R. E. Wasson, Highpoint, Miss., sends a good contribution to the support of the Advocate. Thank you, Brother Wasson. If we'll keep at the matter and all work together the saving of the Advocate will be a small matter.

From the Gueydan charge, La., we have received the "Save the Advocate" quota. To the letter the name of Mr. W. L. Doss was signed. This is the noble father of Dr. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Ruston district.

Dr. O. W. Bradley, former pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, in renewing his subscription, writes words of appreciation of the Advocate. On its pages he says he meets again his friends of Louisiana and Mississippi.

We like this. Mr. N. J. McConnell, Rayville, La., whose subscription lapsed through no fault of his, renews, paying up past dues and sending enough to give some lift to the Advocate campaign. We appreciate this sort of support.

We regret to learn that Rev. J. E. Cunningham, one of the beloved pastors of North Mississippi Conference, now retired on account of illness, has been taken to U. S. Hospital at Alexandria, La. His brethren will remember him in their prayers.

Rev. H. E. Carter, Sherman, Miss., has his shoulder to the wheel. Finding five preaching places on his new charge he is measuring himself against the task and is beginning a great year. Along with a renewal came the "contribution."

Dr. Ballard, faithful friend of the Advocate, renews some subscriptions and makes a contribution that is much appreciated. He suggests that this contribution be used in renewing subscriptions of widows of preachers. How thoughtful and worthy.

We don't like to throw Coldwater on anything but a growing plan that is seeking bigger life. So it is in order to receive word from Rev. W. C. Beasley, Coldwater, Miss., put the contribution sent in on the Advocate. Brother Beasley says he is happy at Coldwater.

The Grenada Rotary Club had as its speaker a short time ago Dr. Jas. H. Felts, pastor of First Methodist Church, Grenada. Report says that Dr. Felts declined to follow the usual stock "uplift" type of speech, but talked to the men as "regular fellers." Probably that was more uplifting.

Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle, who is building a house out two and one-half miles from Longview, Miss., on the Starkville road, is inviting his friends to a "House-Raising" real soon. Hold yourselves ready. He sends best wishes to all readers of the Advocate. Let's all go to the house-raising.

On a nice white piece of paper, no address given, we find the "Save the Advocate" contribution listed, and the name, Mrs. Florence Ellis, signed. To her getting this contribution to the Advocate was more important than the address. But we congratulate that church for a member like Mrs. Ellis.

Rev. Roland W. Faulk, son of our pastor at Abbeville, Rev. J. W. Faulk, recently returned from Duke University, where he did graduate seminary work, is now at Rochelle, La. Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences are to be congratulated upon the number of well equipped young pastors coming into the Conference.

Rev. E. P. Craddock, Arcola, Miss., criticises the Advocate. He says he wants more of it. We'd like to be able to say, Brother Craddock, we are going to give you more, but we cannot say it yet. But we do say that just as soon as the people of Louisiana and Mississippi say by their contributions and subscriptions to do so we shall do it.

Some contributions toward the boat for Rev. S. J. McLean, Morgan City, La., have come to this office. With great appreciation we are sending them on to Brother McLean. Let us help him with his navy. You cannot imagine how much you will enlarge his ministry and how much you will help a very needy people. We thank you.

To Rev. A. R. Beasley goes the honor of renewing the subscription of Rev. R. S. Lawson, Memphis, Tenn. We know it will be greatly appreciated by Brother Lawson. Brother Beasley (Minter City, Miss.) reports that his people are completing plans for financing the 1933 crops and that things are looking brighter in that section.

Dr. John Brandon Peters, formerly of First Church, New Orleans, now of Druid Hills, Atlanta, Ga., writes a strong word for the Advocate and tells of the joys of his pastoral work in Atlanta. Louisiana cannot surrender her claims to Dr. Peters, who gave such a good number of fine years to that Conference. We wish him enlarging success.

Rev. Waldo W. Moore, Bucatunna, Miss., sends quota from his Sunday school and speaks highly of his reception on the charge. He is being pounded and treated to many things of value to a preacher; and people, other than those of his own churches, have joined in the pleasure of these good things to the pastor. Thoughtfully and abundantly, he says the people have given.

Dr. J. R. Countiss, editor of the Journal of North Mississippi Conference, has been chosen by his Conference for thirty years successively. His Conference appreciates the splendid type of work he gives to the task. He studies the various journals of Methodism and incorporates improvements each year as he finds them. It is remarkable that with so much detailed matter so few suggestions of correction occur.

Again we must take off our hat to Rev. F. N. Sweeny, Franklinton, La. He has the "Advocate complex" and it won't come off. The other day we received a long list of subscriptions from him. It has become a habit. He is all the time pulling for the Advocate. Certainly, though superannuated, he refuses to get out of the harness. And when he signs off, "Yours faithfully," every letter in the word counts.

From a church that has suffered much and still faces its difficulties comes the quota. From the treasurer of our church at Carthage, Miss., we had a good letter from which we take the following paragraph: "We don't believe there is a church in either Louisiana or Mississippi in as bad fix financially as we are, and if we can get up our quota we are sure all the others can. In a short time you ought to be able to report it all paid."

Dr. W. P. Buhrman, pastor at Tupelo, Miss., is threatening us with some subscriptions. We dare him to do it. We promise to put just as much good reading material on the pages as possible. The church year is getting under way encouragingly. The pastor is giving special attention to the development of the men of the congregation. An active Brotherhood is in operation, and the pastor has succeeded in inaugurating a plan with his stewards for visiting the entire membership of the church.

Rev. T. C. Cooper is another fellow who gets mighty close to the editor. He pastors our work at Collins, Miss. The other day he sat down and wrote us a long letter; good, too. Had a good list of subscriptions in it. He was telling about the splendid sermon to his people preached by Rev. J. L. Sutton; and he was bragging on his presiding elder, Dr. J. T. Leggett, telling about his great sermon on "Show Us the Father?" Then he hinted strongly that he would like for the editor to visit him. We are looking for the chance.

Miss Louise Taylor, a sister of Mrs. Donald Caffery, of First Church, New Orleans, and for years organist and most valuable church-worker in our church at New Iberia, was killed in an auto accident in New Orleans, January 7. On the Sunday night following the funeral the people of the New Iberia church and her friends gave enough in cash to erect a brick Sunday school annex as a memorial to her. What a fine tribute to so rich and worthy a life. Thus she will live on to bless the church and community in which she served.

Mr. Thomas H. McNish, one of the best-loved men of the Publishing House staff of workers, died January 1, at Orlando, Fla. After a service of forty-five years at the Publishing House he and his wife had gone to Florida for recuperation. Brother McNish was widely known throughout the church, having visited many of the annual conferences. He was buried from his home church, City Road Chapel, Madison, Tenn., funeral being conducted by Rev. B. S. Fielder, assisted by Drs. A. F. Smith, W. B. Taylor and A. P. Walker. He was buried at Spring Hill Cemetery, Nashville.

Bishop Dobbs and Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, presiding elder, Shreveport district, were speakers at the class banquet of the Hunter Men's Bible Class at Park Avenue Church, Shreveport, recently. Rev. R. T. Ware is pastor, having already served this good church for a number of years, returning to it this year. During the new year he has received 36 into the church, 11 on profession of faith. More than 200 are in Sunday school, a great Epworth League, and a congregation of 400 is in regular attendance. Congratulations to pastor and people.

Mrs. C. E. Blackwell, mother of Rev. W. L. Blackwell, DeSoto, Miss., died in Meridian, January 19. She was buried at the Montrose Cemetery, her pastor, Dr. L. L. Cowen, Central Church, conducted the funeral, assisted by Revs. C. M. Crossley of Newton and Geo. H. Jones, a local preacher; and Dr. Melunis, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Newton. Sister Blackwell has been a constant reader of the Advocate since its beginning. The Advocate staff joins with those that mourn at the going of their loved one and friend and our friend. Obituary will appear later.

A preacher gone to the penitentiary. Well, you can't keep them all out. Rev. J. H. Moore, Tutwiler, Miss., has been elected chaplain of the Mississippi State Penitentiary. He has made a round of almost all the penitentiary camps and has preached twenty times this month. Now, I am strong for parents letting the pastor at our college towns know about their sons and daughters there. Let me rise this time to ask that we assume our full responsibility with reference to prisoners from our communities. If there is a boy from your community serving time, let Chaplain Moore know about him giving him such information as will make his service of most value to that boy.

Will Rogers is not the only man who "reads the papers." We found this the other day: "A little 'missionary' arrived in the community last week, starting in at the preacher's home to live her 'gospel of love,' which will very soon spread out to include all, if she grows to emulate the example of her worthy parents, Rev. and Mrs. C. E. McLean, who have so endeared themselves to the people of Franklinton, La., in their residence here. The little daughter was born Friday the 13th of January, and her name is Margaret Lucille. She and mother are reported doing well." Nothing is said about the father, but we presume that he had gone fishing when the reporter came. Anyhow, we congratulate him upon the Good Luck of "Friday 13."

DR. PAUL W. QUILLIAN AT CENTENARY COLLEGE

Dr. Paul W. Quillian, pastor of St. Luke's Church, Oklahoma City, will lead in the revival to be conducted at Centenary College, February 14-18. In addition to the Chapel Hour from 11 to 12 each morning, Dr. Quillian will visit the various student organizations, speaking to these smaller groups, and giving personal interviews to as many students as his time will permit.

We know of no one whom we regard as better fitted for this particular task. Dr. Quillian's training, experience and religious life make him peculiarly adapted to this type of work. The faculty, students and surrounding community face an opportunity of unusual proportions.

Dr. W. Angie Smith, president of the College, says, "I wish you would ask the people of the state of Louisiana to remember that particular week in their prayers." We would expand this to take all Centenary graduates and ex-students throughout the country. Let us all pull for a great meeting.

W. D. HAAS, JR., ELECTED GRAND MASTER OF LOUISIANA MASONS

The Grand Lodge of Louisiana, F. & A. M., at its recent Annual Communication held in the Masonic Temple, New Orleans, February 6-8, elected Mr. W. D. Haas, Jr., of Bunkie, La., to the highest honor at its disposal, that of Grand Master.

Mr. Haas is the youngest son of Dr. and Mrs. W. D. Haas, and is a member of the Board of Stewards of the Methodist Church at Bunkie. He is a graduate of Tulane University and the University of Colorado, having specialized in Sugar Chemistry, his father being one of the largest sugar planters in the "Sugar Bowl" section of Louisiana.

Mr. Haas has been actively engaged in the banking business, farming and sugar manufacture. He has also been active in the civic affairs of the community, taking a most important part in the Red Cross work, especially during the flood of 1927, when he had entire charge of all relief work in this section.

His rise in Masonry has been rapid, but secure. He is the youngest sitting Grand Master in the world, and one of the few youngest Masons to ever have this high honor conferred upon them, being but 35 years of age.

The Advocate congratulates him, and wishes for him a most successful and harmonious administration.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT INSTITUTE

The Greenville Kingdom Extension Institute was a season of information and inspiration. The messages by Dr. Manget, fresh from the field in China, were indeed helpful. The Institute was well attended, and a fine program was rendered.

Dr. E. Nash Broyles, presiding elder, added much to the success of the meeting by his courteous and dignified manner of presiding. We of the Greenville district love our elder, and are determined to follow his able leadership in the district's program for a greater Conference year in 1933.

We really had an unusual day, and wish you could have been with us. The addresses were all fine, and Rev. Melville Johnson and his congregation at Cleveland left nothing undone in furnishing the Institute with wholesome entertainment. Rev. C. A. Parks served capably as secretary of the Institute. The only way we could get him in the Greenville district was to take his Indianola church with him. Both he and the church are valuable additions.

ACTIVITIES OF THE MACDONELL SCHOOL DURING CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS AT HOUMA, LA.

On December 22, the MacDonell School presented a pageant which expressed very beautifully the Christmas Message. This presentation, a gift of the school to the community, is an occasion dear to the hearts of our people and is one that enriches and uplifts those who participate.

Just before the students left for their homes on Friday their hearts were made happy over the gifts that were received from faithful, loving friends of the work.

In the afternoon of December 23, our activities shaped themselves into a colorful event. Members of our faculty and several students, together with Miss Hooper and our pastor, Brother Booth, went to visit the Indian school at Dulac, about 20 miles below Houma.

Upon entering this one-room school, which Miss Hooper, together with Rev. B. H. Andrews and Mrs. Deforest, was instrumental in organizing, we were deeply impressed with the joyous atmosphere existing among these children who had so long been deprived of an education.

This celebration was simple but impressive. It was an inspiration to hear these children, who just two months previous could speak no English, utter the Lord's Prayer. As they sang Silent Night one could not doubt that they felt something of the joy about which the Heavenly Host sang.

As they proceeded with the program, they gave the impression that they were reaching out for religious education as one would reach out for a Pearl of Great Price. Their hearts and lives are aglow with the hope of a new life being offered them by those interested in their spiritual and physical welfare. A few of our students sang Christmas Carols for their benefit. Then came the distribution of gifts, at which time these interesting children could hardly control themselves, so great was their delight at seeing the bright colored toys and candy bags. Their parents were eager and happy, too.

Out of this group, no doubt, will come leaders who will be active in spreading the gospel of Christ. They will also prove a power among their own people who have been so long kept in a background of ignorance and superstition.

The following day, Saturday, we resumed preparations for children of other communities. On Saturday evening it was our privilege to co-operate with two colored Sunday schools in putting on a Christmas Service for the little Negro children of a near-by community. The melody that rang out naturally in the hearts of these children was an inspiration to those present. Their contribution to the program showed how they were developing under the influence of the gospel.

Christmas Day found us on duty in our own French Mission Field. In the morning a special program was put on at Lockport. Emphasis was given to the message of Peace and Goodwill to all mankind. A small gift to each added to the happiness of the occasion.

In the afternoon a group of workers went to Point-au-Chene, where a short message and a gift made glad the hearts of some of the finest people in Methodism.

Other communities were reached at various times and in divers manners with the glad message of God's love in giving His only Son to the world. It was a joy to us to have the privilege of serving so many, and we wish to express our appreciation to all those who helped to make possible these activities.

TO MOTHERS whose children won't
EAT

Nature knows best. Never coax a child to eat! Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite. When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a bilious yellow, don't give small children a constipating cathartic that drains the system. California syrup of figs is all the "medicine" they require.

Specialists will tell you that a sluggish appetite almost always means the child has a sluggish colon. Correct this condition called stasis, and see how quickly a listless, drooping boy or girl begins to eat—and gain! The only "medicine" such children seem to need is pure, unadulterated fig syrup.

Children who get syrup of figs, now and then, soon have the appetite and energy of young animals! They keep well and avoid colds and sluggish spells.

Nature never made a finer laxative for children; and they all love the wholesome, fruity flavor of the real California syrup of figs. It's purely vegetable, but every druggist has it all bottled, with directions. Begin with it at once. The very next day, your child will be eating better and feeling better. Keep on with the syrup of figs a few days and see amazing improvement in appetite, color, weight, and spirits.

The promises made by the bottlers of California Syrup of Figs are true, and it will do the same for you, IF it's genuine CALIFORNIA. Don't accept substitutes.

Church," leaflet No. 89-B, which is free.

The reports from the workers are showing a healthy attendance in the Sunday schools. For this increase we are all devoutly thankful. It is wonderful in the face of the weather to have such good news.

The Meridian District Institute has been held. The district directors presented a fine program. We had more churches and more people than last year.

The pastor and people of Enterprise were lavish in their entertainment. Brother Scott is in high favor with his people. The reports from his charge are most favorable.

Enterprise holds many boyhood memories. It is here I joined the church, and it is here in the old Hawkins grove that God consciously spoke to my childish heart. To me this is a most lovely spot.

It was my privilege to speak to the quarterly conference at Central Church. This was a good quarterly conference. The reports were better than last year's first conference.

There are two objectives that we want every church to hold before them constantly: an active Local Church Board of Christian Education and definite support of the District Board of Christian Education.

The support of the mission cause improved some last month. We trust that this month will also show some improvement.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Union News

The J. O. Y. Union of Minden district met January 15 in Sihley, with an attendance of 97 from Cotton Valley, Pine Grove, Bethel, Sibley, Benton, Plain Dealing, Houghton, and Pleasant Valley. A splendid musical program was rendered. Each church represented promised to send a representative to the Kingdom Extension Institute in Minden, January 19.

Personal

Announcement has been received of the arrival on December 28 of Evelyn Merele Jackson, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. P. Jackson, of New Orleans. Mrs. Jackson, better known as Violet, has been quite active in the work of Young People, particularly in the field of Recreation. We rejoice with them and congratulate them most heartily.

Another announcement of interest to many Louisiana young people is that received from Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Harbin, of the General Board of Christian Education at Nashville, who have adopted a six-month-old baby boy, whom they call Thomas Elvin, or Tommy. We are very happy for the child and congratulate them upon finding Tommy.

ONE YEAR OLD SUPERANNUATE

You see, Mister Editor, it was like this, on the morning of December 24, 1931, about 4 o'clock, "Mister" Shipman found himself a very sick parson and so remained for about forty-eight hours. About that time I began to take notice, but not sitting up. I was advised by my good Dr. Ervin not to sit up. His advice I followed with a glad mind and heart.

I was starting in on my fourth year at that delightful station, Inverness, at the end of which I expected to ask for a superannuate relation, sick or well, but this spell hurried me up a bit.

I called my good elder, Rev. W. N. Duncan, from Greenwood, to come over to see me, that I was sick. He came, it seemed, in a flying machine. Well, he excused Mr. Shipman right now, and had a fine tall, black-headed handsome, bright young fellow there before you could say "Scat," and on the first day of January, 1932, late in the afternoon, Mr. Shipman was loaded up for a new experience, but safely landed at his dear daughter's, at Lamhart, Miss.

This was the first time my dear children had ever seen father sick, and of course it stirred them to the depths, and they have done everything that was necessary to make me comfortable and happy, and all this I have been.

You know that I take to a do-nothing job better than I thought I could. I rather like it. You know I was tired and didn't know it? I rather expect others had made that discovery, likely too, after one has been on the go for about sixty-five years. You know fifty years is about long enough for an ordinary preacher to ask for work. Of course, a bishop can go longer, and then have the nerve to look his bunch of P. E.'s in the face and talk about "this cabinet looks rather old." Well, so may it be.

I never wanted to go limping to Conference. You know I have seen the dear old fellows limp through a hard year's work, but a month or so before Conference they would get out their old bottle of "snake ile," and vigorously rub in, and by Conference would have their old joints supplanted up, and come up to Conference champing the bits, and raring to go. Well, so may it be again. A happy good year this first year has been, and I feel like I could do just about as good work as a lot of the fellows that are trying to put it across, for they are very tired, but don't know it, and you dare not say, "Old boy, you better take out." Man, they would rare like a mustang.

Well may our people hurry up and learn very quickly that the press is the successful means on which the arm of progress leans, and send you five thousand subscribers before breakfast.

May our God greatly bless you and cause his face to shine upon you.

"MISTER" SHIPMAN.
Lamhart, Miss.

SLOW BUT SURE

In the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, these interesting words are found: "Women are not impatient of arriving at results by the long method of education, line upon line, precept upon precept. It may be a biological difference. The mothers must have faith in slow processes." But in spite of this fact there comes a time when education upon a certain point crystallizes into actuality. The Women of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, feel that such a crystallization is about due to take place, after their long cultivation of the idea of full laity rights for women in the church, which would include clergy rights. At one moment one laughs, at another moment one cries over the arguments used in opposition to full freedom in the church of Christ for women. Why not apply pure logic and reason to the question? When the attitude of Jesus is considered in his relation to people we must wonder at the contrast, that our methods of limiting freedom and personality in the church, show when compared with the recognition of persons.

CHILDREN, SCHOOLS, AND UNEMPLOYMENT

The National Child Labor Committee points out that over three million children from 7-17 are not in school and over two million are gainfully employed, and at a time when eleven million adults are in desperate need of work.

At the same time states are cutting desperately on school funds—the last place where any cutting should be done. There was never so great need that a coming generation should be prepared for citizenship. The women should be especially alert on this; know where budgets are being cut; cutting out the teachers should be the last act.

The National Child Labor Committee is pressing for vigorous action through local committees in various states to effect legislation for child welfare along these lines. There should be no let-up in compulsory attendance, and if necessary age limits should be raised both for the sake of the children and the adults who need employment.

The National Child Labor Committee sends out the following statement: "Over three million children from 7 to 17 years of age are out of school, and over two million boys and girls of this age gainfully employed, while from ten to twelve million adults are in desperate need of work."

"The wise builder of a home looks well to its foundation to the end that both the building and the family dwelling therein may be secure in time of storm or flood. The builders of this nation have been of one accord in singling out universal education as the most essential underpinning for our democracy. The foundation is now threatened as it has not been in generations."

"While there must be economies in governmental expenses in such a time as this, economies in school budgets are touching a vital subject and should be planned with extreme care. Where possible they should be restricted to the elimination of unessentials. Where further cuts are unavoidable, it is urged that they be not concentrated on services to older children, thereby tending to throw on the market a flood of cheap child labor and to add to existing unemployment. Rather should such economies be wisely spread."

Mrs. Grady May, zone chairman, presided over the meeting with Mrs. V. M. Creekmore acting as zone secretary. The program for the day was given over entirely to the Lauderdale auxiliary, with Mrs. Ernest Brown acting as chairman.

Lovely piano and violin music, with congregational singing was an attractive feature of both morning and afternoon sessions. Inspiring devotionals were given by Dr. Hunt, of Lauderdale, and Rev. Wedgeworth, of Porterville. The theme of the morning session was "Mississippi Missionaries." The lives and works of these were very interestingly given by the members of Lauderdale society.

Noon lunch was served by the Porterville Epworth League.

During the afternoon session two very well prepared and appropriate playlets were given. A lovely vocal solo, "This Is My Task," was rendered by Mrs. Scruggs, accompanied by Miss Louise Hunt, violinist, and Mrs. Vandervender at the piano.

During a brief business session presided over by Mrs. May, nominations of Mrs. Winstead, of DeKalb, as zone leader for 1933, and Mrs. Grady May, of Electric Mills, secretary, was accepted and Mesdames Hammack, of Scooba, and Creekmore, of DeKalb, as alternates.

PROGRAM FOR MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

Columbus District, North Mississippi

The Methodist ministers of Columbus district met with the district stewards at Stakville, Miss., December 6, 1932, and voted to continue the association, elected officers and V. C. Curtis, H. F. Brooks and J. T. McCafferty were to present a program at our Missionary Conference at Ackerman, Miss., January 19, to be used at our regular February meeting. This meeting will be held in Starkville, Tuesday, after the second Sunday in February, which is February 14, 1933. It was

BEWARE HALF-CURED COLDS!

They Expose You to a Weakened System and to the Dangers of Serious Complications!

DON'T temporize with a cold. Don't take remedies that merely allay the cold instead of getting it thoroughly out of the system. A half-cured cold is a cold never cured and a constant source of danger.

Attack a cold from the inside and attack it with a remedy that does the four things necessary for complete relief.

The Four Things Necessary

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine knocks a cold and knocks it quickly because it does the four things required.

First of all, it opens the bowels gently but thoroughly, the first step in expelling a cold. Second, it kills the cold germs in the system and reduces the fever. Third, it relieves the headache and grippy feeling. Fourth, it tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

This is the treatment a cold calls for and anything less is only playing with a cold.

RESOLUTIONS

The Ashmore Circle of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Church of Crystal Springs today has passed resolutions setting out its regret and sense of loss in the death of MRS. MATTIE PIERCE COOK, long a worker in the organization and a local religious leader of note, who died several weeks ago.

Whereas, we of the Ashmore Circle of the Missionary Society, who have been associated with Mrs. Cook through the years, she being a charter member, feel a deep sense of loss in her going from us.

Whereas we appreciate her many fine qualities as a citizen and as a member of our church and who exemplified the high principles of a Christian woman, therefore,

Be it resolved, That we as members of the Ashmore Circle of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Church, do hereby express our deepest sympathy to her family and loved ones, because of this great sorrow which has come to them in her sudden passing.

Be it resolved further that a copy of this resolution be sent to her family.

How CARDUI Helped Weak, Nervous Woman

"I was nervous and weak and my back hurt," writes Mrs. Emma Nichols, of Murfreesboro, Tenn. "I could hardly rest. I had a nervous, weak trembling in the lower part of my body, and a bearing-down feeling. I had read of Cardui and decided to take it. After my first bottle, I felt better and kept taking it. It helped me. I took three bottles, and by then I was much improved and rid of the nervousness, so much so that I have recommended Cardui to my daughters and friends. I think it is a splendid medicine to build up the whole system."

Take Cardui to give you a better appetite, to give you more strength from the food you eat—to build up and increase your feeling of well-being. Aches and pains go away as you build up with the help of Cardui. Sold at drug stores here.

MAKES WOMEN LOSE FAT

Miss Rea M. Haines of Dayton, Ohio, writes: "I weighed 180 so started to take Kruschen. I never was so surprised as when I weighed myself the first week—I lost 7 pounds. I just bought my 3rd jar and am down to 145—am still taking them and never felt better in my life." (June 17, 1932).

To take off fat—take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—one bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a few cents—get it at any druggist in America. If this first bottle fails to convince you this is the SAFE and harmless way to lose fat—your money gladly returned.

But be sure and get Kruschen Salts—imitations are numerous and you must safeguard your health.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

CONTINUING TO THINK MISSIONS might be given as the theme of the recent session of the General Missionary Council, which met in the historic city of Augusta, Georgia.

No book of recent date has stirred up quite so much thought and general discussion as "Re-Thinking Missions—A Layman's Inquiry After 100 Years," which came from the press toward the closing days of 1932. The book was greeted with almost every attitude except indifference. Criticisms range all the way from bitter opposition to near-approval. Some, after reading into it, have tried to shake clear of it, saying either that it is lacking in authority or that we had already thought of all that any way. Be that as it may, we dare not pass it by without careful consideration. It is to be judged upon its inherent worth rather than by any external standard.

But that is not our story just now.

It was not the business of our Missionary Council to act upon this report. However it must be measured more or less by things brought forward in that report. What is the attitude of our Church toward missions?

Our church knows no way of being Christian or Methodist without being aggressively missionary in thought and action. Of course, there is the non-thinking attitude which marks many of our people, resulting in indifference. There is what might be called the unthinking of missions, or the attempt to explain away our responsibility for missions. But there is also the thinking attitude. The thinking of missions at all involves "re-thinking." There must be re-examination from time to time. Changes must be recognized and changes still to come must be anticipated. To rely upon past achievements and methods, however glorious, is to rely upon a declining momentum with which this generation has had little to do.

The address by Bishop Paul B. Kern, "The Missionary Imperative in the Orient," is reported by those who heard both, to have been the greatest since that of the sainted Galloway in the city of New Orleans in 1901. The emphasis of that was that we continue to think and act missions with ever-increasing comprehensiveness and sacrifice.

PAINE COLLEGE, with whose founding and development are linked some of the greatest names in the history of our church, dedicated to the task of preparing preachers and teachers for the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, stands as a monument to the fidelity of the white and colored Methodists of the south each to the other. Furthermore, it is one of the most convincing exhibits of the effective missionary efforts of the M. E. Church, South. In no field, at home or abroad, can it boast a greater triumph.

Beginning as an effort of the Southern Methodists to help a people who had been denied a chance for development and self-realization, it has grown into a great enterprise of co-operative helpfulness by which each race is to realize its highest destiny in our section. It stands as a prophecy of the satisfactory solution of the problems of race relations in our Southland. It is a laboratory of practical Christianity in which the principles and practices of Jesus are being reproven for our generation.

The final test of any enterprise is its product in manhood and human values. The test of a textile mill is not cloth but what it makes of its owners and workers. John Wesley Gilbert, Bishop R. A. Carter, Drs. Channing H. Tobias and W. A. Bell, graduates of Paine College, are men whom any college might be proud to have upon its records. Their scholarship, character and service give them a ranking of very high order.

THRILLING IS THE WORD that might be used in describing the experience of those two fine and consecrated young Louisiana and Mississippi girls, Misses Weber and Stephens, who have charge of the Bethlehem House of Augusta. This noble enterprise is sponsored by the women of our church for colored people, and is the greatest of its sort.

These two young ladies seem to have settled two great problems of life: a field in which they can spend their lives most effectively, and a religious experience that has escaped the fogs and is buoyant, enthusiastic and satisfying.

HOW WILL YOU TAKE YOUR BEER?

It seems that those Senators and Congressmen whom we have sent to Washington and hired to do our thinking for us are making such a mess of it we are going to have to take the job back.

Now, aren't they having a time with the Beer Measure? Seems that prohibition is going to be about as hard to put down as it was to pick up.

Are you willing for a drunk man to tell you how much alcohol it takes to make you drunk? Well, it seems that several have been greatly impressed by the statement of a British commission's report that 3.05 per cent beer is not intoxicating. The Senate Judiciary committee approved it. Do you think that Britain, Germany, France or Italy is qualified to define intoxicating beverages for us? We don't seem to like their plans for paying war debts, but some of our contemporaries are all ears when they begin to talk about beer and wine. And it might be observed in passing that it does not take as much to make a Yankee drunk as it does a German or a Britisher.

Along comes Mr. Borah with an amendment to the measure, saying, "it shall be unlawful to give or sell any of the above beverages to persons under 21 years of age." And the committee approves that.

Then up speaks the man waiting with his empty mug, "Why, if it is not intoxicating, why shouldn't children as well as adults be permitted to take a swing at it? If it does intoxicate it can't be put through so long as we have the Eighteenth Amendment. If it won't intoxicate there is no use to prohibit it to youngsters. And if it has no 'kick' in it the grown-ups won't drink it."

It looks as though the wets and the dries both will fall out with the Senate's fumbling. But was that not to be expected? Our positions are the same. Wets want the Eighteenth Amendment repealed and no limit set to the kind or amount of liquor. They want wide-open. The dries do not want the Amendment repealed because they do not want intoxicants at all. The only reason the wets are willing to consider for the present a small quantity of alcohol is that they hope to make this the entering wedge to repeal or nullification. We had as well face that. We demand that something better than the Amendment be offered before we will consider a vote on the matter. And as soon as something better is offered we shall lead the way in demanding a chance to vote on it. That has always been characteristic of prohibitionists. Local option was all right till they saw a better way. They are always ready for the better way.

Wets, if you have something better than the Eighteenth Amendment, bring it out. We are wasting a lot of time. We ought to be ashamed to waste so much time about this matter when so much more important matters are pressing us. Our people want bread and jobs. Will you give them beer?

A SCHOOL OF COURTESY, I suppose you would call it. The police force of New Orleans, whose business it is to stand at the street crossings and direct the traffic, "where the races of men go by," were called in and given instructions about how to deal with traffic and how to be polite to the people who pass. I said to myself, That is a good thing. Those old boys certainly need some attention along that line.

You know how gruff a cop can look, just watching for a chance to step up on your running board and give you a ticket and a hard look and several hard words. "Can't you tell the difference in a red light and a green light?" "Didn't you hear my whistle?" "Where is the fire?" He just seems to be out there to make things unpleasant for people, a regular joy-killer.

A STATEMENT CONCERNING THE FINANCIAL SITUATION OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS

By W. G. Cram, Gen. Sec. Board of Missions

Having before me the final financial statement of the Board of Missions for the year 1932, I am now in position, and it is my duty, to give to our membership the exact situation which is confronted by the Board of Missions in carrying on the missionary work of the Church.

The income from the usual sources for 1932 for the General Board, according to the treasurer's statement, is $771,711. (A slight discrepancy between this and previously published figures is due to the delayed receipt of certain funds). This is $188,920 less than was received from the same sources in 1931.

Since 1929 the income of the board from regular sources has been steadily declining. In that year the total receipts were $1,452,658. So by comparison, we see that in the three years ending with 1932 there has been a decline in income of $680,947.

Every effort has been made, during these three years of terrific decline in income, by the bishops in charge of the fields, and by the administrative secretaries, to bring the budgetary requirements for each succeeding year within the amount received from the Church. In this we have been only partially successful, and the reason for it is that under no circumstances could we reduce the work as rapidly as the income fell, and keep from destroying the work which the board and its missionaries had built up over a period of eighty-six years.

Even though we have observed every precautionary measure, we were not saved from incurring a bank indebtedness which amounted to $450,000 at the end of 1932. One hopeful feature is that this indebtedness was increased by only $14,008 during the year 1932.

Having received during 1932 only $771,711, we cannot expect more than that amount for 1933. While the normal budgetary requirements for 1933 are in excess of $900,000, by every legitimate process of cutting and elimination, we have reduced the budget for 1933 to $773,198, which is $246,680 less than was spent in 1932. Thus you will see that our proposed expenditures for 1933 of $773,198 is approximately the same amount received from the usual sources in 1932; thus, balancing our budget unless we suffer a further decline in our income.

How have we arrived at this figure and what will be the consequences if we fail to secure even this amount for our missionary work?

On October 13 the executive committee of the board appointed a special committee to study the whole field of required expenditures for the calendar year ahead of us. This committee reported to a special and enlarged meeting of the executive committee on November 28 and formally adopted the readjusted budget for 1933 as represented by the total figure of $773,198.

The question arises: How was this accomplished?

1. By cutting the salaries of the secretaries and the employees of the board at headquarters, not only once, but twice.

2. By cutting down overhead operating expenses, and conference promotion in the annual conferences.

3. By taking advantage of the gain in exchange on the regular work budgets in the Oriental fields.

4. By a reduction in missionaries' salaries in all fields.

5. Our missionaries in the Oriental fields recommended that the board reserve to itself, instead of passing on to their fields, the advantage now being gained in the favorable rate at which American money is exchanged for the national currency. This has been done. It means, in effect, that we pay our Oriental workers not in our own money, but in the money of their fields, which is now depreciated in value and can be purchased cheaply in the international market. The result is that the board has made large savings, while the missionaries have suffered large cuts in their incomes. In so far as they spend their national currency for national products this indirect cut is more or less equalized by lower prices, but when American goods are required, as is frequently the case, the loss of exchange constitutes a salary reduction of large proportion and necessitates the utmost self-denial.

6. By cutting out schools and other institutions in the foreign fields in Europe and in the home mission work here in America.

A special committee composed of the bishops of the fields and several others is still studying the question of the whole range and scope of our work and will be prepared at the meeting of the Board in May to begin the process of closing fields and calling home missionaries if the churches do not meet the absolute irreducible minimum represented by the action of the executive committee.

Up to the present moment we have conducted the reductions of our budget from year to year in an orderly way—without the semblance of a rout or a retreat.

We are not attempting to fix responsibilities, nor to charge lack of loyalty to the program of missions, nor to indict the Church for a fading missionary passion. For we know too well the calamities and distresses that have come upon us, but we cannot be true to our trust nor to the Church and its individual members without calling aloud to everybody to heed the Apostolic exhortation, "having done all to stand." We must hold our lines, suffer no rout or confusion and bring to the support of our missionary enterprise every possible sacrificial offering in order that we may not retreat from any spiritual victory which we have won so dearly in the past.

To make the case clear in the minds of all our people, repetition is necessary. We cannot increase our bank indebtedness. Therefore, the Kingdom Extension offering now on, through the new plan to save the benevolences, and the regular sources of income must yield to the Board of Missions in 1933 $773,198, plus $100,000 to take care of curtailment on the bank indebtedness, if we hold the line which we have every right, under the leadership of God's spirit, to expect of the Church. If we fail in this, the inescapable consequences will be the confusion of a disorderly retreat. We humbly and confidently wait the response and the verdict of the churches.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

Many years ago there was a man in North Mississippi named Bates, commonly known as "Jim Bates." If my memory does not fail me, he was a local Methodist preacher. He was a popular conductor on the railroad from Memphis to Grenada, and the town of Batesville was named for him. He was a good man, and everybody liked "Brother Bates." Many stories were told of him, and here is one: In those days the railroads used wood for fuel, and trains would stop along the way and take it on as needed. On one occasion the train stopped to re-fuel, and the crew was loading the wood, when one of the passengers, a northern man, walked back and forth along the track, blurting out his profanity and denouncing the "slow-poking southerners." Some one told him to be careful, the conductor was a Methodist preacher; but that only made him swear and "cuss" the louder. At last Brother Bates told him he must stop his profanity, as there were ladies in the cars. At that he flared up, and said: "If you were not a Methodist preacher I would make you eat your words." Quick as a flash, Bates snatched off his coat and threw it on the ground, saying, "Methodism, lie there till I whip h-ll out of this fellow." He suddenly knocked the man down and as he fell, Bates gave him a kick that sent him rolling down the high embankment. He picked himself up, and climbed back into the train and sat down as silent as the seat he sat on. Served him right, as the loud laughter of the spectators attested.

Brother Bates was an emotional saint and his cup often ran over. On one occasion when the North Mississippi Conference met in Grenada they put me up to preach Sunday night. Brother Bates was in the "amen corner," and I had not been preaching long on the text, "Sir, we would see Jesus," when Brother Bates began to explode, "Amen! Glory!" As I warmed up, he did, too, and soon his exclamatory piety, I could see, became annoying to people sitting near him. All at once he exclaimed, "Glory, hallelujah! Tell it all, Sam!" I said, "Brother Bates, if you'll keep quiet, I'll do my best." He quieted down for a little. General E. C. Walthall, a distinguished Confederate officer, was seated on the front pew just in front of the pulpit. He was an Episcopalian and accustomed to "Ah-mens" in church; but not the red-hot sort Brother Bates shot, and he was visibly annoyed by the emotional explosions in the "amen corner." He told me afterward that he was just about to go over and sit by Brother Bates to try to quiet him, for fear he would disturb me, when I squelched, or rather smothered him for the moment. But there was no reason to fear "amens" would disturb me. They always helped me, fanned the fire, and made it blaze higher. Brother Bates held in, saying, "Whew! Whew!" until as I approached my climax, he suddenly jumped up and said: "I can't stand it any longer. Glory, hallelujah!" That exploded the suppressed feelings of the congregation. The whole audience leaped to their feet, and "Hallelujahs" rolled back and forth over the church. Somebody started the hymn, "I'm Bound for the Promised Land," and the church trembled with the billows of praise. General Walthall was one of the first to reach the pulpit and grasp my hand, his whole frame quivering with emotion, and tears streaming down his cheeks.

Alas, the "amen corner" is silent now, and we hear hallelujahs only in memory, like far-off and receding music. But even there they are sweet!

One of the girls gave me a radio at Christmas, and on a recent Sunday I "listened in" and heard five sermons, one in New York, two in Shreveport, and two in Texas. All the messages were good, but they were not the shouting sort. Even the saints are not going to shout over technocracy, or economics, or debt adjustments, or even the ethics of Jesus; but let some preacher who has religion himself swing out on "God forbid that I should glory, save in the Cross!" and sacred fire will begin to burn in the depths of the soul, and the first thing you know, it will leap to view like the volcano's tongue of flame! I am glad I grew up when "amens" bubbled up in meeting.

TOO MUCH OR TOO LITTLE

Too much machinery and overhead; too little love, the kind that "weeps with those who weep." Too much place seeking and personal desire for honors; too little peace, the kind that wells up from within like a fountain of pure water. Too many ordinary men, often painfully ordinary, carrying tails to their names decidedly too heavy for either adornment or use; too little work and study, the kind that makes a man forget the passing hours. Too much zeal without the necessary knowledge and will to convert into sustained effort; too little atmosphere, the kind that sends thrills of hope and joy and desire into one's heart. Too much paid on salaries for the amount paid on benevolences; too little preaching, the kind that expects some one to be converted while the message is being delivered. Too much entertaining, trying to compete with the world; too little church-going, the kind that carries the worship idea with it. Too much talking and neighbor-skinning in the house of God when we meet to worship; too little appreciation, the kind that makes a fellow desire to do better and be better. Too much indifference as to whether our fellow-men are going to heaven or hell; too little faith, the kind that is undergirded with courage. Too much laziness and talk of sacrifice; too little honest-to-goodness effort at putting over programs of real worth. Too much talk and writing about "flaming youth;" too little attention to our young people, the kind that commands respect and begets holy desire. Too much help offered lazy preachers; too little investigation that includes close study of God's Word. Too much depression talk by men who have three meals per day, good beds to sleep on, a water-tight roof over them, schools for their children, and generous friends all about them; too little sense of personal responsibility, the kind that gets under loads and distributes tasks to the largest number.

Too much selfishness, the kind that gives platitudes and promises where cornbread and cabbage are needed; too little teaching, the kind that makes racketeering, hold-ups, and disregard of others all but impossible. Too much politeness of the kind that has no brotherly love and sympathetic helpfulness in it; too little honor, the kind that generates self-respect and respect for others. Too much politics, even among preachers, the kind that gives out little, measly, mean insinuations, seeking to profit by every turn of the tide of sentiment; too little debt-paying, the kind that includes the whole range of human experience. Too much Conference voting to do certain things promptly; too little remembering, allowing our votes to die before they are cold.

Too much homeopathic soup, shadow soup; too little of the kind that has body and nourishment in it. Too many dead men among us. O. Henry claims to have found a country where the inhabitants are dead at twenty-one, spending the rest of their days snoring. He may or may not have known that people who snore are generally on their backs and breathing through the wrong hole. It takes an expert to snore in the pulpit. Pew snoring is more common (?). I know of one man who was accused of snoring a lie. Page Mr. O. Henry, please. Suppose we consider going back to first principles. Quit spending money that does not belong to us. Live inside our incomes. Use less theory and more fact. Give the Lord's cause a chance to function through us, not over us. Rediscover the happy state St. Paul wrote about—"in whatever state I am, therewith to be content." Men of the world give their all for pleasure. Shall we offer less for Christ?

"ONE SOWETH, AND ANOTHER REAPETH." FIRST PARSONAGE OF SOUTHWEST AT FAYETTE, MISS.

The words of the Master given in the 38th verse of the 4th chapter of John, "Other men labour, and ye are entered into their labours," find ready material illustration when one visits the parsonage at Fayette, Miss. John G. Jones, the historian of Mississippi Methodism, writing in 1875, said that the parsonage at Fayette was the first in the Mississippi Conference, which means that it was the first in all the Southwest. In the same connection he indicates that there had been a home for the preacher at Fayette for forty years. Therefore, the present Fayette parsonage property has been in existence as such for about one hundred years. The first house was on the present lot, though not exactly on the same part of the lot as its successor, the home of today, stands.

The writer frequently during the past fourteen months has enjoyed the comforts of this parsonage as the guest of the present occupants, Rev. and Mrs. T. B. Cottrell; and he sometimes wonders how many itinerants have passed in and out of that front gate. One of our present honored Bishops, H. M. DuBose, was pastor at Fayette.

One of those early preachers must have planted, and his followers nurtured, a pecan tree, which is now a monarch, and has been known to bear a thousand pounds of nuts in a single season, of good size and choice meat that opens well. Later pastors have nurtured two younger trees; and the three together the past season yielded 800 pounds, of which 600 pounds were from the old tree. These nuts had a rather wide distribution through sales and as Christmas gifts to the pastor's children. They went to Norfolk, Va., Richmond, Va., Birmingham, Ala., Meridian, Miss., Vicksburg, Miss., and Texas. The largest shipment was of 200 pounds to Richmond, a sale that came through the interest of Mrs. Collins Denny.

Let us of today not forget those who will occupy it ten years from now, fifty years from now, one hundred years. Who knows the longevity of a pecan tree. The present writer has started to growing at Vicksburg two figs, and two Japanese persimmons. By the way, America ought to learn how the Japanese prepare the persimmon for eating. Nothing is more delicious.

ATTENTION PASTORS, GENERAL AND ADULT DIVISION SUPER-INTENDENTS!

By Mike T. Mickal

A great many of us may be still wondering what benefits are to be derived in the creation of a Wesley Fellowship Group to be composed of the younger members of the Adult Division. The last General Conference made provisions for such a group and some of us may look upon it as "another organization." If we should take time to study and read materials that are available, it would then create in us the desire of getting something done in that direction. This newly acquired enthusiasm would be passed on to others and then the way is paved for the organization to become a reality.

Major Benefits

There are two major activities provided for this group which are as follows:

1. A continuous program of Christian Education. It has been realized that this group would want to have some devotional programs and this has been made possible by the use of the "Fellowship Service for Adults," which appear in the Adult Student or any other program that may appeal to the local group, this to be held at any time that is most convenient.

2. Activities of the group can be carried on through six committees. The lack of activities for this specific age group has caused about 500,000 persons to drop out of church life altogether. By having these activities, it is a means of keeping those members who are over the Epworth League age active in church work.

Our Procedure of Organizing

I would like to relate briefly our plan of procedure in getting this group organized at St. Mark's. Having learned of this organization, we began thinking and reading about it. A meeting was called one Sunday afternoon of the pastor, general superintendent, Adult and Young People's Division superintendents, presidents of the Adult Department and all prospective members of the new group. There were lengthy discussions on different problems and the final decision was to go ahead and organize. Some came into the meeting with a "pessimistic" viewpoint, but at the end were "optimistic." We organized a week later. Our beginning was very small, but we have grown quite a few in numbers and expect to keep doing so.

The above illustration may be workable in any church, but the course will be left to the discretion of those concerned in formulating plans to meet their own local needs.

City Federation Organized

A meeting was called of the organized groups (3) on November 17 for the purpose of forming a Federation. Rev. V. D. Morris (who now is our conference president) gave explanation on the new organization. Our district director, Rev. H. P. Wall, then took charge and spoke in favor of a federation, which was agreed to by the groups. The following officers were elected:

Mike T. Mickal (St. Mark's), president; Louis C. Gelbke (Carrollton), vice-president; Miss Nell Campbell (Epworth), secretary; Walter A. Blackwell, Jr. (St. Mark's), treasurer.

It was also decided to have a monthly meeting on the third Thursday of each month beginning at 8:15 p. m. The meetings are to be opened with a devotion in charge of the local church group. We now have five organized groups and meetings will be held in these churches alphabetically.

At the second meeting the following were elected chairmen of four of the six committees: Mrs. Joe Heck (Second), Mrs. V. D. Morris (Gentilly), missionary education and Christian secretary; Henry King (Epworth), recreation; Miss Connie Martinez (Carrollton), evangelism and church loyalty. The remaining two may be incorporated with some of the above or two may be named later as chairmen.

Since there are no set "Constitution and By-Laws" suggested by Nashville for this group and that each group may form its own policy, it was decided at the last meeting of the Federation to have our own policy which will serve for each group as well as the Federation. The following policy was adopted:

1. To pray without ceasing in seeking divine help and guidance in striving to live clean Christian lives and to fulfill our tasks in the very best manner possible in promoting this new undertaking of our Church.

2. To be ever-ready to co-operate as a group with the local church as much as possible in helping to carry on its program.

3. To go over church rolls and make a list of all eligible and try to get them to attend the meetings and become active members.

4. To assist in whatever ways possible in helping to organize a Young People's league in churches where there is none.

5. To assist in organizing an Intermediate league wherever possible.

6. To become missionary inclined and to have mission study courses and to subscribe to as many shares as possible in the "Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise."

7. To have a revival once a year specially for the members of the Adult Division so that it may add to our spiritual development.

8. To provide recreation that will be adaptable to the group.

We were also desirous of having our own benediction with which to close our meetings. The benediction which we adopted is: "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy spirit, O Lord, my strength, and my redeemer." This will be known as the "Fellowship Benediction," which is to be used in local and Federation meetings. We hope that it may be used throughout our Conference so all may have the same one and not each one its own.

Our officers and committee chairmen were installed at this meeting.

Remarks

We are happy over our accomplishments thus far and we are expecting the other churches of our city to organize as soon as possible. We know that the benefits are many and this has been a long-needed program for this specific group. We have taken on "new life" in knowing that we have been provided with this opportunity and are being held responsible for the development of this new field. We are endeavoring to make our organization attractive in order to bring back into the fold those who have dropped out of church life and to keep those who are to come to us from the Epworth League. Special plans are being made to increase the membership of our groups through the medium of banquets, parties, etc. Our beginning is small, but the fields for expansion are unlimited.

IS THIS NEW ORGANIZATION WORTH WHILE?

I would suggest that you get as soon as possible, leaflets 401-B "The Adult Division in the Local Church," and 402-B, "Young Adults in the Local Church," and study thoroughly. You may secure these from Dr. M. Leo Rippey, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., or from me, as I have a few copies on hand. No matter how few members you have to begin with, it is worth while to start even small and then grow. DO NOT LET THIS SCARE YOU, FOR THE RETURNS ARE GREAT.

I hope that this article has meant a little in bringing you to know that no time should be lost in getting this group organized. We are hoping that the Louisiana Conference will lead other Conferences in this new field. If I can help in any way please feel free to call on me any time. My address is 1311 St. Claude St., New Orleans, La.

START THINGS HUMMING.

THOSE "CORRECTIONS"

I believe in reporting and printing in our "Journal" the finances by churches; and also I believe that even with careful attention some errors are likely to occur, and there ought to be some agreed-upon method of correcting as far as correction is possible.

I do not know why in my article I made the error of saying that the Journal showed nothing paid on C. and C. work by Gloster charge, as the Journal printed $30, which should have been $130.

I was writing upon the supposition that the statistical reports handed me by the pastors were exact copies of those handed to the secretaries, of which I should not have been so sure. The blanks handed me must have been in some cases more correct than those which went to the secretaries.

Possibly I should have written the secretary, instead of the Advocate. One pastor and I did think of wiring the treasurer; but we were changing treasurers; and one or two of the pastors were urging quick corrections, since the Journals were being distributed, with showings as if some of the moneys paid had not been applied. This was causing nervousness.

I did not charge the secretaries with error; I said there were mistakes in the Journal. Summary: I made an error as to the above $30; the secretaries made some errors; the pastors in some cases "incorrectly reported." Moral: All of us should be more careful.

APPRECIATE YOUR BLESSINGS

We never miss the sunshine
Til the days are dark and drear,
We never miss the springtime
Till cold winter hovers near.

We never miss our happiness
Until some gloomy day
Sorrow lays its hand on us,
And drives all our joy away.

We value not our friendships
Til our friends pass from our sight,
And leave us with aching hearts,
Turning our day into night.

We never miss our robust health
Til disease knocks on our door
And blots out all the sunlight
That was in our souls before.

So in this brief life let us be
To helpful service given,
With hearts attuned to God's will
And the hope of winning heaven.

Good for you, Mr. Cop. You need to go to a School of Courtesy, and after you have had several years in it with laboratory practice, then you should take a postgraduate course. You seem to forget that I grew up in the country, and that we don't use those fool lights out there. And we pay no attention to whistles. And who in the world could understand those lights anyhow? Some places you let a fellow go on a green light, and at other places he has to turn on the red one. At least you should be polite to strangers and guests of the city.

Then one day I got out there and stood by one of the cops and imagined myself assigned that station to direct the flow of traffic. You know traffic is just people, just ordinary mortals, some of them sub-ordinary and sub-ornery. After I had watched them a while I began to figure on an endowment for a School of Courtesy for the folks who drive cars and for all the races of men and women who cross the streets on foot. Cops will have to be supermen and saints to keep patient with them.

Let us all matriculate in that school. We all need it. There is no substitute for politeness and courtesy all along life's road and especially at turns and where you meet other people. It is a kind of oil for the wheels of life.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

You'd be surprised to know how cold a fellow can get without freezing when a spell like the recent one comes upon us.

Rev. E. W. Corley sends in the quota from the Pine Grove charge, La. Thank you, Brother Corley.

Rev. T. J. Holladay, pastor at Logansport, La., says his people have given him a good reception on the charge.

From First Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., which is pastored by Rev. Wiley J. Ferguson, comes the "Save the Advocate" quota.

Rev. J. T. Lockhart is serving his seventh year as pastor of our church at Charleston, Miss. The longer he stays as pastor the more he is appreciated by his people.

Dr. Theodore Copeland, general evangelist of Dallas, Texas, recently began a meeting in the city of Dallas. In March he will hold a meeting in Wesley Memorial Church, Atlanta, Ga.

We went to the General Council meeting at Augusta, Ga. It was a great session. We shall tell you something about it shortly, even though we may not get it to you this time.

One hundred and thirty-five attended prayer meeting on a Wednesday night recently at Amory, Miss. The pastor, Rev. C. T. Floyd, is carrying forward an excellent type of work in that great church.

"Faith and Works" was the sermon topic of Dr. R. H. Harper on a recent Sunday morning at our First Church, Baton Rouge. We note in the bulletin names of certain people received on profession of faith.

The good pastor at Heidelberg, Miss., Rev. T. H. King, renews his subscription and sends along a strong word for our paper. We very much appreciate these good words from men with whom we have journeyed along through life.

Revs. J. Lloyd Decell and Ben. L. Sutherland, of the Mississippi Conference, and Revs. J. D. Wroten and R. G. Moore, of the North Mississippi Conference, were among those who attended the General Missionary Council at Augusta.

The churches of Columbus, Miss., are to enter into a city-wide simultaneous revival preceding Easter. The power of a simultaneous effort is readily seen. It gives each church a chance to develop loyalty, initiative, and zeal in the Kingdom.

Again we rise to thank those noble pastors and others who gave themselves so loyally and so royally to our "Save the Advocate" campaign. Rev. F. J. Jones, Washington, Miss., recently sent in an additional contribution handed him by Mrs. Janie Cooper.

Rev. E. M. Sharp, pastor at Rienzi, Miss., came rushing in at the last minute, all out of breath, waving his check and crying, "Better late than never." Thank you, Brother Sharp. He reports that he has been royally received by the good people of Rienzi.

May I not forget this. The other day a dear lady in her seventies, half invalid, and without abundant means, wrote, "I wish I might help; but you have my prayers and my heart's warmest wishes in all your efforts." I call that "help" and we deeply value that kind.

You will be pleased with the contributions of Dr. V. C. Curtis, presiding elder of the Columbus district, and contributing editor to the Advocate. Be on the lookout for them. You have already been introduced to Rev. Jas. W. Sells, our new contributor from the Mississippi Conference.

What has become of Rev. J. Henry Bowdon? O, yes; here he is. Pastor at Arcadia, La., he is moving steadily forward with his new assignment. He closed January with an average attendance of 58 at his prayer meeting and 224 per Sunday at the preaching services. Boys, are you beating that?

A carload of dairy cows were shipped from Aberdeen, Miss., February 1, to be given to the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, Miss. Rev. W. C. Galceran, Jr., pastor at Strong, Miss., secured the donation of these cows from people at Okolona, Aberdeen, West Point, Prairie, Strongs and Hamilton.

Miss Lela Mims, Minden, La., commends the suggestion that the Christian forces get together for the great conflict of our time, and joins in the dream of that day and the journey that leads that way. Her good mother, Mrs. D. S. Mims, shows her faith in the Advocate by sending a much appreciated contribution.

Rev. V. C. Curtis, P. E., Columbus district, is putting on a campaign of speaking in the interest of the Kingdom Extension and Benevolences during February and March. Three of the pastors will speak at each one of the larger churches of the district. The teams will cover the entire territory by the last Sunday in March.

There has been a great improvement in the manner in which records are kept in our church. This is true of church records, quarterly conference and district records. There was a time when quarterly conference records were hardly ever brought to district conference for inspection. Now it is not unusual for all of the records to be brought for review.

Mr. J. P. Drake, layman of Bay St. Louis, through whose town we passed early this morning while it was making a vain effort at its claim to being a "winter resort" while the icicles mocked it, has renewed his subscription. Take a word from him: "I derive much pleasure from reading it, and I look forward with pleasant anticipation to its welcome visits."

Among Louisiana Conference men at the Council meeting were Rev. H. N. Brown, Missionary secretary, and Dr. W. Angie Smith, pastor at First Church, Shreveport. Dr. Smith was on the Council program for an address on "The Missionary Imperative from the Pastor's Standpoint." None who know Dr. Smith need to be told that this part was well done.

A plan is being proposed in Mississippi that each pastor try to secure at least one girl for Grenada College or Whitworth College and one boy for Millsaps. That looks easy and is certainly a goal worth trying for this year. Let every pastor pick out a fine boy and girl and set to work to get them. We Methodist people must get behind our own colleges.

Rev. S. L. Pope, pastor at Belzoni, Miss., joins those sending in the quota. In his letter was a good word about a member of his church: "Brother W. M. Teague is the oldest member of our church at Belzoni. He came to me and said, 'I want a part in helping save the Advocate.' It will be a shame if the Methodists of Mississippi and Louisiana let their church paper suspend."

"The Hymnal Commission, have completed their work, save for the somewhat laborious editorial and musical attention that the hymns must yet receive at the hands of a continuation committee," writes Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker, a member of the commission. We feel that Dr. Parker has made a most valuable member of the commission and that we shall find much joy in the new hymnal.

Rev. J. T. Harris, pastor at Rayville, La., writes that he reads our editorials and that he likes some of them. To prove that he does read them he asks just what 14,000,000 men we were talking about in the closing paragraph of the editorial ending on page 4 of the February 2 number. To be quite frank we lost a word. We meant to say "14,000,000 unemployed men." Now, that's better, Brother Harris. Thank you.

Gangway for Millsaps College Band. The boys, thirty-six strong, are shining their horns, tightening their drums, and quickening their steps in the final preparations for their trip to Washington, March 1, where they will participate in the inaugural ceremonies that usher President-elect Roosevelt into office on March 4. Congratulations to Millsaps and the boys. We'd like to go along and hold the music for the bass-drummer.

Pastors of North Mississippi Conference agreed at their Conference at Tupelo to give the offering received from one revival meeting this year to the cause of Conference Missions. Rev. Melville Johnson is the treasurer of the Board of Missions. The salaries received by many of the men on our circuits make us wonder at financial wizardry they and their families display in carrying on the work so well. The money the pastors send in this way will be a great help.

Dr. P. J. Rutledge, professor in the religious education department at Millsaps College, will teach a standard class in "Worship" at Aberdeen, Miss., April 23-28. The many workers in Mississippi who heard Dr. Rutledge in the course for the editorial department of the church on "Curriculum Materials" last summer at Grenada College will recall how delightful were those hours spent in his class. The workers in Aberdeen church have a treat in store for them.

"I can't get along without the Advocate," writes Rev. Claude P. Jones, 2604 Homan Avenue, Waco, Texas, pastor of our St. John's Church at that place. Brother Jones went from Biloxi, Miss., to Bollinger in the West Texas Conference. Bishop Hay prevailed upon him to go to St. Paul's Denver, where he served for a brief time, but finding the altitude too much against him, he was returned to the Central Texas Conference, where he is now happily located at St. John's, Waco.

Thank God for mothers who never lose their good influence over their boys. "Wait a minute," calls Brother F. E. Collins, cashier of the Coffeeville, Miss., bank. "A few days ago my mother called me to get up a collection for the Advocate. So she deserves some credit for the enclosed contribution. I took her advice, and everyone I asked gave something. Give the Coffeeville church and Sunday school credit for the check." Then he said something about the editorials and other materials of the Advocate that was mighty fine. Think we shall keep it handy to reread when the days are not so bright.

We are greatly grieved at the tragic death of our editor-brother, George Malcolm Lawrence, editor of the Grenada Sentinel, who was recently killed in a car accident between Grenada, Miss., and Memphis. Mr. Lawrence was a young man, but had already come to fill a large place in the life of his community and state. He was a member of our church at Grenada, and his pastor, Dr. Jas. H. Felts, conducted the funeral. We greatly value these fine editors of our county papers. It is impossible to measure their influence for good. We join those that mourn the untimely death of Brother Lawrence. As a brother editor the flags of our hearts are at half-mast as we salute a brave spirit.

CHURCH EXTENSION COMMITTEE MEETS

The executive committee of the Mississippi Conference Board of Church Extension will meet Tuesday, March 7, at 2 p. m., at Capitol Street Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss.

Write to Rev. I. H. Sells, Carthage, Miss., for blanks.
W. M. WILLIAMS, Chairman.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

By Dr. V. C. Curtis, Contributing Editor

WESLEY FOUNDATIONS. Since its organization, the Methodist Church has been interested and active in the field of education. A great deal of money has been raised to establish and maintain colleges and universities. It is the privilege of Methodist boys and girls to attend schools founded by their own church whose academic standing is second to none. We hope the depression will not reduce the support to the extent that these institutions cannot continue their work. However, we are convinced in our own mind that no money is spent for Christian education where the dollar counts for more and brings larger returns than that which is invested in the Wesley Foundations when there is a competent secretary to direct. In particular we have in mind the Wesley Foundation at the Mississippi State College for Women. Miss Moore, the secretary, has a religious experience and is orthodox; she is a woman of fine poise and common sense. There is no effort to teach any of the college curriculum, but her work is directing the religious life of these three hundred girls. Maybe these girls should be in our own Methodist institutions; but they are not, and it is the duty of the church to follow them with its assistance. The modest salary paid Miss Moore is money well invested.

HALL OF RELIGIONS TO BE BUILT AT CHICAGO WORLD'S FAIR

One of the outstanding features of the great century of Progress Exposition to be held in Chicago this year will be a large and beautiful Hall of Religions. This building will be erected on the Lagoon, adjacent to Lake Michigan.

The Hall of Religions will house the exhibits of and be the headquarters for Protestant denominations. The growth of the Protestant Church during the past century will be vividly portrayed through exhibits brought from all corners of the earth. Statistical data, such as has never before been placed before the public, is being compiled and will astound those critics who declare that Christianity is on the wane—and that the "Church is losing ground." Refutation of these unwarranted assaults against the church in general, is the main object of the Committee on Progress through Religion in the erection of this beautiful building.

A program of many conferences will be directed to clarifying the objectives and methods for the solution of present social problems. Emphasis will rest upon co-operation and not upon propaganda for special religious affiliations. These conferences will have for their subjects many phases of religious education, the attitude of youth toward religion, changing forms of worship, the methodology of charity and social service, the co-operation of religious bodies for peace, and the organization of religious leaders for the reduction of poverty.

In the light of these possibilities the Committee on Progress Through Religion bespeaks the co-operation of the religious bodies of today, with the purpose that together they may make visible the service which religious bodies have rendered in the past and the continuing service which the new century may be expected to open unto them.

In order to fully realize the opportunity here presented one must visualize the tremendous and awe-inspiring spectacle of hundreds of beautiful buildings, now constructed or in progress of realization, occupying over 700 acres of land—all devoted to progress during the past century—religious, scientific, agriculture, education—in fact a complete coverage of the wonders of the past century—all portrayed in the great buildings of the World's Fair.

It is estimated that during the five months—June to November, 1933—over seventy-five million visitors from all corners of the earth will attend this Exposition. Hundreds of thousands will attend in the interest of gaining knowledge for the betterment of their fellow men. Volumes could be written, and no doubt will be, so that future generations can read that which is possible for us to see and enjoy.

The World's Fair is to be held during vacation time. For the purpose of assisting church groups and individuals planning to attend, a Tour Bureau has been established so that by a system of easy weekly payments your vacation can be enjoyed, without a large financial outlay, all expenses provided for when you leave your home, to enjoy a never-to-be-forgotten visit to one of the most beautiful cities in the United States and the Chicago World's Fair, without worry or anxiety. Applications may be made through the business department of this paper or direct to George P. Magill, D.D., 10 N. La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill. It is hoped our readers will ask for this information as many church groups are already planning for the summer of 1933 in Chicago.

POOR OVERWORKED WORDS

Dr. Frank H. Vizetelly, in a recent address, commented on the growing habit of the writers for the daily newspapers overworking words. Among other wise conclusions he declared:

"Some writers work words to death. Nowadays one never devises a plan; it is always evolved. Nor do people arrive at an agreement or arrange a program or work out a course of action. These things are invariably evolved. Among many over-used words is proposition. Not content with using it to drive proposal unto oblivion, its devotees employ it to identify anything from a condition to a person. 'He's a difficult proposition' is actually said by persons who regard their English as passable, while its substitution for 'problem,' 'situation,' and even 'prospect' is common. Here's the latest gem that has been left at my door—I contacted Jones and propositioned him, but he suspected me of trying to double-cross him."

"The English no longer compare, contrast, examine, experiment, explore, inquire, investigate, search or study—no, these words are all suffering from unemployment; only one term is in popular use, the blessed word research, and we have followed suit. Every month or so someone springs an unusual word upon the public to divert its attention from the political excitement of the time. First the people focussed their attention on the important subject of immigration when they might have concentrated it and have been better understood. Next they toyed with the word mobilize, and they mobilized credit, mobilized gold, mobilized bank reserves, and on the mobilization established a Central Reserve Bank.

"A few years ago, the term vast was mistreated by writers of English prose wherever the English language was used. This term was followed by flair; then came intrigue. 'Not one, but dozens of the budding novelists thought they were wanting in literary style if they did not crowd in somewhere that they were intrigued by a thought, an action, a spectacle, or some dubious behaviour. In Victorian days, to intrigue meant to perplex or render something intricate. Today it simply means to interest a person or attract him.

"This was followed by emerge. Once a man used to come out of a room. He rarely does so nowadays; he emerges. He emerges from a train; from a plane, and even from a parachute. One amateur got him even to emerge into a room.

"Among the other words that have been 'done almost to death' with us are alibi, synthetic, and sophisticated. The man who remembers his Latin resents alibi when used as if it meant 'excuse,' for it means 'other- or elsewhere,' and in law is the plea of being somewhere else.

"Of synthetic, the meaning is 'place together,' from the Greek syn, together, and titheimi, place, yet some of our writers use the term as if it meant 'something false.'

"The absurd length to which other persons will go is best illustrated by the ridiculous associations in which the word sophisticated is found. To speak or write of sophisticated furniture, calories, or peppermints is foolish even as it is to do so of a sophisticated countryside. In fact, to use the word sophisticated in any sense but relation to an individual is silly.

"Sophistication is tainted with casuistry, chicanery, fallacy, hair-splitting, prevarication, quibbling, subterfuge, immorality, and trickery, so that the sooner copywriters get to know this the better. Then they may decide to use some word that does not connote so much of adulteration and deception as the one which they have overworked until it is hopelessly involved.

"If the words are what the poet Donne once described them to be, 'the subtlest and most delicate outward creatures composed of thoughts and breaths,' we should remember that they are our best means with which to win our way in life.

"Mistakes, and I make my full share, may be avoided by concentration upon what we have in hand, even if we do use a language that enables us to say, 'If Mr. Henderson, who sat for this constituency will consent to stand again and run, he will probably have a walk-over and sit in Parliament.'—Editor and Publisher.

POETICAL THOUGHTS

By Mrs. George S. Brown

And the common people heard him gladly.—Mark 12:37

THE COMMON PLACE LIFE

"A commonplace life," we say and we sigh;
But why should we sigh as we say?
The commonplace sun in the commonplace sky
Makes up the commonplace day;
The moon and the stars are commonplace things,
And the flower that blooms and the bird that sings;
But dark were the world and sad our lot,
If the flowers failed and the sun shone not;
And God, who studies each separate soul,
Out of commonplace lives makes His beautiful whole.

—Susan Coolidge.

We are told in the Scriptures that during our Saviour's ministry on earth "the common people heard Him gladly." More and more is this fact borne upon us as we look in at religious gatherings. It isn't the society folks; it isn't those high in political power, nor is it the celebrities who gather to hear God's word expounded and to offer their services in ministry to others—it is just plain every-day folks. During great revivals when an evangelist pleads with his vast audience in language elegant in its simplicity you can always note the working men who go forward to say they want a clean, pure heart; the tired mothers with little children clinging to their skirts, the plain every-day people such as gathered about Jesus when He preached and such as He chose to be His disciples.

It is the ordinary men that make up the world. That is, they seem ordinary to us, but God, who looketh not on the outward appearance but deep down in the heart, sees great possibilities and works wonderful transformations. He who seems small to us may be great in God's sight, for if a man be clean, brave, honest, strong and kind, it matters not if his name remain unknown. His influence is felt here and his name is recorded in The Book of Life.

In the Merchant of Venice Portia says:

"That light we see burning in my hall,
How far that little candle throws its beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."
A candle light in these days of electricity seems most insignificant, but sometimes electricity fails us at a most inopportune hour, and then we are glad of the candle. As a lesser light, we may be necessary, so let us shine with all our might, and by doing our best we become a greater light.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

Two district Christian Education Institutes have been held, both of them were better attended than last year. At both there were definite forward steps that will mean much to the entire district program for this year.

The Meridian district planned for one Standard Training School, one Standard Training Class and for four Cokesbury classes. They also planned for eight sub-district institutes to be conducted by the district directors.

The Newton district institute planned for one Standard Training School, six Cokesbury Classes and ten sub-district institutes to be conducted by the district directors.

At both institutes there were those present who asked to be allowed to put on the training program without cost to the board. This is cheering indeed. Certainly we must GO FORWARD WITH GOD.

Eighty delegates were present at Enterprise and ninety were present at Rose Hill.

We ought to begin now getting ready to observe Young People's Day. The young people of our Conference need the offering that will come from this day and the various churches that these young people will put on. Encourage your young people to begin now to get ready for this celebration.

Plans should be maturing to hold Sunday School Day. The board has secured a most usable program. Any kind of a church can use this program in part at least. The Conference board is ordering a sample copy of the program sent to every pastor and to every superintendent of a Sunday school. Please examine it and begin work.

The Sunday School Day Honor Roll will be an offering equal to 10 cents per active pupil enrolled in your Sunday school. On circuits it will be an offering from each school on the circuit. There are churches that should make a large offering to the board. I trust there will be such churches.

The board will be pleased if there are churches who can hold the day early and send in their offering.

SUNDAY SCHOOL DAY IS APR. 30.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Rev. Walter L. Stormont, presiding elder of the Sardis-Grenada district, is going about his work with definite purposes and plans. He has gathered definite information from the pastors concerning every local church and community through a questionnaire. This information will be used in his plans for the work of the district. Watch this district grow.

A standard training school will be held at Oxford March 5 to 10. The following courses will be offered: Principles of Teaching, Rev. J. E. Stephens, instructor; Primary Department Administration, Miss Lynda Ramey, instructor; and The Teaching of Jesus, Rev. R. G. Lord, instructor. This is the second standard school for Oxford and it is under the management of the local church board of Christian education.

Two fine Young People's Unions were held recently in the Sardis-Grenada district under the direction of Rev. Roy A. Grisham, the district director. The first meeting was at Hernando, where ten churches were represented by over 75 young people, and the other meeting was at Charleston, where three churches were represented by about 40 young people. These unions meet quarterly and are doing splendid work.

I enjoyed a visit to the Durant charge. The pastor, Rev. W. B. Baker, had several of his brethren to assist him in leading his people in the study of the book used in the Kingdom Extension cultivation period, and I was with them for the last lesson. Though it was a very bitter cold night, we had a nice crowd present. After the lesson the officers and teachers of the Sunday school remained for a brief meeting, when plans were perfected for a standard training class March 12 to 17.

Rev. C. A. Parks, who is serving as Conference director of adult work, is mapping out some plans for this important work in our Conference. Watch out for the announcement of these plans and be ready to take part in them.

Are you making any plans for training the leaders of your church? The church that seeks to train its leadership always goes forward. Without an exception in this Conference, the churches that have had most leadership training are leading in every phase of the work of the church. This fact is a matter of record. The rural churches that have been and are being abandoned are those that have not made any effort to have trained leadership. I do not know of a church in this Conference that has kept up its Cokesbury training work to be abandoned. On the other hand, there are many instances where this work has saved rural churches. We are prepared to help you, and if you want help get in touch with us.

With prayers for all.

To make Children

EAT

Don't force children to eat! The girl or boy who has no appetite has stasis—which means the child is sluggish. But cathartics have caused more constipation than they ever cured! The "California treatment" is best—just pure syrup of figs. Try this for a few days, then see how eagerly your youngster will eat.

Stimulate the colon and that child with a finicky appetite will devour everything set before him. Here's the simple treatment that does more for babies or older children than all the diets, fad foods, or tonics.

Nature has provided the "medicine" you'll need to stir your child's colon muscles into proper action. California syrup of figs. Pure, delicious, harmless. It acts on the lower colon—where the trouble is. It has no ill effects on the intestines.

Begin tonight, with this marvelous "California treatment." Any druggist has California syrup of figs, all bottled, with directions. Use enough the first time to cleanse the clogged colon of every bit of poison and hard waste. Then just a little twice a week until the child's appetite, color, weight and spirits tell you the stasis is gone. Whenever a cold or other upset clogs the system again, use this natural vegetable laxative instead of drastic drugs.

WARNING: There are dealers who practice substitution. Be sure to protect your child by looking for the name CALIFORNIA on the bottle.

CONFERENCE NEWS

Mississippi

Narcissus, jonquils and other spring flowers were used by members of Broad Street auxiliary, Hattiesburg, when they were hostesses to the zone meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the churches of Hattiesburg, Petal and Bonhomie, of the Hattiesburg district, which was called to order by the president, Mrs. J. T. Wallace. Rev. J. B. Cain, pastor of Main Street Church, conducted the devotional, using as his text, Matt. 28:16-20. He urged that there be no amending or annulling of Christ's commands to teach all nations. Rev. W. T. Griffin, of Bonhomie church, led in prayer. Important business was transacted, after which Mrs. J. T. Leggett led the discussion: "Children and Young People's Work in Our Churches." Several members from different churches made helpful suggestions. Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, of Fayette, president of the Conference, and the guest of the afternoon, addressed the meeting in the most inspirational manner, outlining in full the conference organization for the child, young people and adult in the church and through these to make Christ real in our lives. She also discussed the helpful literature of the organizations. Sandwiches, salt nuts and tea were served by the hostess to one hundred and twelve members and the following pastors: Revs. J. T. Leggett, B. H. Clegg, J. B. Cain, W. T. Griffin and B. H. Williams.

The members of the auxiliary of Quenton, Brookhaven district, met in the home of Mrs. W. H. Towns and elected officers. Mrs. W. H. Towns is president for the new year. Though small in membership every activity of the organization is carried on and every obligation met, this being made possible through able leadership, splendid co-operation and interest. A fancy work bazaar was put on by members early in December, the sale of articles amounting to $13.80, which will be used for local purposes. The mission study, "Korea, the Land of Dawn," has proven exceptionally inspirational and informative. To have part, even though small, in carrying "the good news" is a privilege that calls for consecrated lives.

The regular quarterly meeting of zone No. 2, Meridian district, was held at Hawkins Memorial Church, Meridian, with a splendid attendance. Rev. T. J. O'Neil, presiding elder of the Meridian district, opened the meeting with prayer. Mrs. J. E. Williams, of Enterprise, called the meeting to order for a short business session. This being the time for the election of officers, upon the suggestion of Mrs. H. M. Ivy, district secretary, it was voted to have the same officers, Mrs. J. E. Williams, of Enterprise, as chairman, and Mrs. W. M. Harwell, of Pachuta, as secretary. The roll call showed a total of seventy-one members and ten visitors present. A very interesting program was given by the Enterprise auxiliary, with Mrs. O. H. Scott as leader. Devotional: Luke 9:23-30, by Mrs. Daisy Price, subject: "Bearing the Daily Cross," closing with song: "I Can Hear My Saviour Calling," sung softly. Two special features were an inspirational talk by the district secretary, Mrs. H. M. Ivy, and a playlet, "The Grumblers' Meeting." Mrs. G. W. Benson, president of the hostess auxiliary, welcomed the zone to Hawkins Memorial and invited the guests to the League Hall, where coffee and sandwiches were served.

The young people's circle of the Fayette auxiliary, Vicksburg district, was entertained by Mrs. T. B. Cottrell recently, with fifteen members and pledge cards signed for another year. A report of $69.01 was given through pledge, week of prayer, etc., last year. Six new members were added. A special feature of the circle is the local social relationship work done during the past year. This work is done, not through a committee alone, but by every member of the circle. Two members of the circle have volunteered for life service work. Miss Mathilde Killingsworth (the first president), entered Scarritt College last fall. Officers were elected and various plans discussed for the coming year.

To End a Cough In a Hurry, Mix This at Home

Saves $2. No Cooking! So Easy!

Millions of housewives have found that, by mixing their own cough medicine, they get a purer, more effective remedy. They use a recipe which costs about one-fourth as much as ready-made medicine, but which really has no equal for breaking up obstinate coughs.

From any druggist, get 2 1/4 ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. The syrup is easily made with 2 cups sugar and one cup water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and makes the most effective remedy that money could buy. Keeps perfectly, and children love its taste.

Its quick action in loosening the phlegm, clearing the air passages, and soothing away the inflammation, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its healing effect on throat membranes. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

IN MEMORIAM

On December 7, 1932, about 3 o'clock in the morning, Brother J. J. WATTS, Rockport, Miss., heard the call. "It is enough, come up higher." Brother Watts was born September 16, 1846. Of the long life of four score and six years, he spent seventy-two years of it in the Methodist church. He served his church and his Christ as a faithful official in the church for more than forty years. Brother Watts loved his church. And because of his great love for his church and his Lord, he was ever loyal and true to his pastor. During the dark days following the war between the states this servant of God had his life made happy and his way made bright by the entrance into it of Miss Mary Margaret Simmons as his life companion. Sister Watts was the daughter of Rev. Thomas Simmons, and the sister of Rev. W. W. Simmons, of the Mississippi Conference. This union was blessed with four daughters and five sons. Sister Watts and two daughters, Mrs. S. A. Page and Mrs. G. W. Swilley, preceded him to the Father's House. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. D. H. Bird and Miss Effie, and five sons, J. F., F. M., W. A., T. M., and E. L. Loving and tender hands placed his body in its last resting place at Old Behala Chapel to await the resurrection morn. Not only will Brother Watts be missed by his loved ones, neighbors and his church at Oma, but the entire Georgetown charge will feel his going. He is gone, but he is not dead.

His pastor, L. T. NELSON.

The following resolutions were passed by the Woman's Missionary Society of the Midway Methodist Church, Jackson district, Miss., following the death of MRS. H. S. SWAYZE, which occurred on Wednesday, November 16, 1932.

Since in the wisdom of God it has pleased Him to remove from us one of our honored and well-beloved members, Mrs. H. S. Swayze, we the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Midway Methodist Church, consider it a privilege to pay this tribute to her loving memory.

Mrs. Swayze was a devoted mother and an inspiring friend. She lived a long life in constant communion with her maker and she kept her sweet and gentle spirit until the end of this life. She created a Christian atmosphere in her daily walk in life and was highly esteemed in the community. Her superior personality was a blessing to everyone, and her sweet influence will be missed not only by her children, but by the entire community.

Therefore, be it resolved, that we send a copy of these resolutions to the family, one to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and that a copy go on our records.

Testimonies of members—good received from work and fellowship in Missionary Society.

A lovely plate lunch was most delightfully served at the noon hour to about a hundred guests.

Roll call of auxiliaries: Benton, 14; Bentonla, 6; Eden, 3; Germania, 1; Midway, 7; New Hope, 3; Sataria, 1; Union, 4; Vaughan, 13; Yazoo City, 24. Every auxiliary in the zone was represented, a fine record.

A singular honor was conferred upon Mrs. W. E. Phillips, of Belle Prairie. The zone presented her with a life membership. Each auxiliary had a part in this presentation, using the funds derived from their blessing boxes for this life membership fund. "Mother Phillips," as she is known to the zone, and even to the entire Jackson district, is one of our most outstanding Christian characters. She has ever been faithful, loyal and earnest in her untiring efforts in missionary work in the Methodist Church. The zone is proud to have a member of such spiritual influence in its midst. Mrs. C. F. Stubblefield presented Mrs. Phillips with the life membership in behalf of the zone.

A letter was read from Mrs. W. F. Mahaffey, district secretary.

The next meeting will be held at Benton, the first week in May.

The first zone meeting for the new year, 1933, Grenada district, convened on Sunday afternoon, January 15, in the Vaiden church. The meeting was opened with a prelude played by Miss Juanita Boyett, followed by singing, "Come Thou Almighty King." Rev. W. W. Bruner had charge of the devotional, reading Matthew, 5th chapter, he made an inspiring talk. A duet, "Lift Up Your Head," was sung by Mesdames Simmons and Holmes. Instead of the usual program, Rev. Henry, a returned missionary from China, was present and made a great talk. He has served as missionary to China for nearly fourteen years. There were delegates present from four societies, Winona, 14; Kilmichael, 4; Columbian, 3; Vaiden, 10, and visitors, 62. Splendid reports were made by each society. BILIOUSNESS

"My trouble was biliousness—the whole spring and summer I was almost down, felt so sluggish, tired and dizzy," writes Mr. S. W. Taylor, of Joplin, Mo. I am full of pep and get out on the farm and do a real day's work, so I feel that I owe my good health to the use of Black-Draught."

Beware the Cough or Cold that Hangs On

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

Medical writers agree that the important point in the treatment of a cold, or cough due to a cold, is to relieve the congestion in the nose and throat, thereby preventing serious complications which may follow a neglected cold. To stop this congestion calomel was the accepted and standard remedy until Calotabs, the improved calomel compound tablet was introduced.

Now that science has robbed calomel of its nausea and danger, making it pleasant to take and perfectly safe for general use, over forty million Calotabs are consumed in the U. S. yearly with only the most pleasant and satisfactory results. In millions of homes Calotabs have proven their superiority in the prompt relief of colds and coughs due to colds.

One or two Calotabs at bed-time with a glass of sweet milk or water. No salts necessary. No nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning the congestion has subsided, your cold or cough is relieved, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish—no danger.

Get a family package of Calotabs, containing full directions, only thirty-five cents. Trial size, ten cents. At any drug store. (adv.)

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

THE MISSIONARY COUNCIL AND BEYOND. To me there is always some difficulty in getting beyond an official and scheduled meeting of the church. It is hard to keep from taking it too much as a matter of course. It is so easy to ride forward on a momentum initiated a great while ago. Taken for granted, it is difficult to give it a fair appraisal. Meeting it with this frame of mind much of its impact is lost. That is, I find it hard to get at the heart of things, the spiritual meaning, and the responsibilities involved.

The recent session of our General Missionary Council was interesting in a number of ways. The place of the meeting, the historic city of Augusta, Georgia; especially important in the progress of our Church, and the seat of one of its most significant and successful projects—Paine College.

Who was there? In addition to our fine staff of secretaries and workers from the General Board of Missions and of the Woman's Council, missionary secretaries from the various conferences, and the editors, all of our bishops except Arthur Moore, H. A. Boaz, W. N. Ainsworth and U. V. W. Darlington, were present. There was fine intermingling of the great spirits from the scattered sections of our Church.

Programs? Those who arranged the program surely did not arrange for a vacation. The whole time was filled. Beginning at 9:30 in the morning the schedule was crowded till 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Then the evening program began at 8 and ran beyond 10. And there were no slack periods. In fact it was almost too much for the ordinary mortal to follow effectively without considerable discipline for such a schedule.

Speakers? In addition to the noble men from different sections who conducted the devotionals preceding each program the following were those who helped to score the high marks: Bishop Candler, W. A. Bell, Dr. Perry, Dr. Bruce R. Payne, Dr. Channing H. Tobias, Dr. W. W. Alexander, Col. Jno. E. Edgerton, Bishop R. A. Carter, Dr. W. F. Quillian, Mrs. J. W. Downs, Dr. R. L. Russell, Dr. E. C. Peters, Dr. W. G. Cram, Bishop Jno. M. Moore, Dr. W. P. Few, Dr. W. Angie Smith and Bishop Paul B. Kern.

Of this number Bishop Carter, Dr. Channing H. Tobias and Dr. W. A. Bell, are graduates of Paine College. These three men, with the late John Wesley Gilbert, who assisted Bishop Lambuth in the founding of our African Mission, make up a quartet of brain soul and service that would be monumental credit to any institution in the country. Paine College, with such products as those mentioned above, with the thousands of others who are filling places of effective service, is the most convincing testimonial to the effectiveness of our Church's co-operation with the Negroes of our Southland. Nowhere can be found a missionary enterprise that parallels it in achievement. Begun as an effort of our church to discharge its obligation to the thousands of colored people who were members of the Methodist Church before the Civil War, it has grown into a great cooperative undertaking in which the two races in the South are proving the effectiveness of friendly relations in our country.

We Southern Methodists, however, of this generation, need to re-discover Paine College and the great work of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. Unforgettable were the friendly chidings of Bishop R. A. Carter, who, in attempting to remind us of our relationship, said, "You must remember that the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church is your black daughter, and that, when she was born, you named her 'C. M. E.' " (See me). This was done with such skill and fine humor that everyone must have felt, with some regret, that he has not known more about the C. M. E. Church, its great work, and our obligations to it.

Dr. W. G. Cram, with his assistants, deserves great credit and commendation for this remarkably effective program and Jubilee celebration.

Features. The spirituals contributed by the singers of Paine College must linger in the memories of those council days. In them we could see the history of a great people, and hear the steady march toward the greater day that our religion assures. Among them abounding in soul-gripping melody we heard, "Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray," "Little David, Play on Your Harp," "Go Down Moses," "I Know the Lord Laid His Hand on Me," "Hush, Somebody's Collin' My Name," and the immortal "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot."

Climaxing the Jubilee celebration of Paine College was the pageant, "Marching On," presented by the faculty and students of the college, depicting the past two hundred and fifty years' history of the Negroes in America. We wish that this wonderful portrayal might be presented in every community in our country, especially through our own Church.

Bishop Paul B. Kern, fresh from the Far East, delivered the great missionary address of the occasion.

POINTS BEYOND. While the Council meeting and the Golden Jubilee celebration were delightful reminders of achievements in our field of missionary effort, they also gave us pause, and drew great interrogations in our minds, and set up great anxious yearnings in our hearts. Have we done all we might have done? Have we faithfully followed the lead of such men as George Williams Walker and John Wesley Gilbert and Bishop Candler and others of that earlier day in the Christian development of race relations? Are we ready to re-examine ourselves in the light of the sweeping changes and threatening forces of our time? Are we ready, under the leadership of Christ, to advance to the greater missionary conquests of our day?

SAVING THE BENEVOLENCES. Our Bishops, the Board of Missions, and many other thoughtful church people recognize the peril faced by our benevolent enterprises. Our General Commission on Benevolences leads the way in asking us to face the serious consequences of the plight in which we find ourselves and the hopelessness of further efforts if conducted after the methods of the past. A new situation demanding new vision and new method has arisen. It is a situation that is going to make "re-thinking" imperative. The sooner the better.

A study of the matter will more than likely reveal the fact that the condition is not due entirely to the crisis in the outside world's affairs. Heretofore we have tried to satisfy ourselves, when financial reverses have come, by explaining that there has been a decline in the spiritual life of our people. This may mean less and more than we think. It has been a good while since we have seriously undertaken to define spirituality and its relationship to material things. Surely it is time for us to learn that spirituality is no vague, ethereal and foggy something existing apart from the world in which we live every day, and above the law and orderliness of other matters. Have we any way of expressing spirituality except by the use of material things? Jesus never meant for us to abandon the use of material things, but to make them means to a spiritual end. This was the attitude toward material things that he asked the Rich Young Ruler to take: translate them into spiritual effectiveness. May we not see that our economic life is inseparably bound up with what we are pleased to call our spiritual life? Do we not see that the church must have the use of material things to accomplish its ministry?

Is it not time for us to see that the Church has just one task in the world, and that all our interests and obligations must be reduced to the simplicity of that single task? And that task is to wage relentless war upon the evils that make the fullest development of human life impossible, and to penetrate every field of legitimate human interest with the saving word of the Gospel. We have just one world to save. That world begins at our church door and reaches to the uttermost bound of human needs.

We seem to become entangled in our terminology and methods. We continue to

THE ADDRESS OF THE BISHOPS TO THE CHURCH

Semi-Annual Message

These are days of uncertainty, discouragement and despondency for many of the people of this country, and all countries. The question naturally arises, what can and will the Church, the Christian Church, the Methodist Church, do to change this state of mind and life? The world awaits the sound of a steady authoritative voice and leadership, charged with intelligence, faith and courageous hopefulness. Where threatening clouds and perplexing confusion abound, there heavenly vision and enlivening assurance should more abound. The voice of reality in life should ring clear and commanding, and the hearts of men should be brought to beat with finer hope and higher confidence. How can this be? Get men to the sources of light, and power, of truth and religion. The world's temptation today, as always in its hunger, is to look to bread alone for its comfort, its restoration, and its abundant life. The mission of the Master never got under way until he established the throne of God as the decisive and ruling power in all his plans and action. Methodism can and will serve this day and generation just so far as it lifts to view the divine perspective and makes imperative the call to the divine will and purpose.

Nothing heartens people more than achievement in a worthy task, and nothing will more quickly relieve dejection of spirit than engagement in high effort in worthwhile service. Nursing self-pains and coddling self-pity is an unprofitable occupation. When people are really doing what they can do, they throw off the distress which comes from a sense of being unable to do what they once did. People must be got away from their moanings over what was, into the hilarity of the possibility of what is. They need employment at church tasks that call forth enthusiasm, joyousness and the consciousness of rendering, beneficent service. They should have new things to do and new ways in which to do the old. The mother pacifies the crying child, not by mending the doll's broken head, but by turning its attention to the attractiveness of another plaything. The paralyzed man does not restore his walking by healing the brain cells that control that walking, but by calling into action other cells that command other muscles. A paralyzed church can often be put to going by bringing into action members who had previously been dormant. Adventure is the effectual antidote to low spirits, and the high road to increasing courage. Up the incline of the lesser tasks people may be brought steadily to the capability for the major and the primary. All this calls for resourceful, capable, courageous, cheerful leadership.

The long look and the far look have made Methodism. Localism is near-sighted, and soon closes out the finer vision and the richer experience. Living to one's self, or for one's self, or with one's self, shrinks the soul. Men who think selfishly, whether in the church or out, think narrowly. All this is true of individuals, of churches and of countries. Our greatest debts are not on our property, private or church, but on our souls. That is the philosophy of Methodist connectionalism with its world-wide program. The tree with the broadest branches suffers most from the storm and the frost, but the spread of the branches sends deeper the roots and makes more luxurious the bloom and more bountiful the fruit. It is the reach of the Church that measures its place in the world. This comes through enterprises, interests and agencies which teach, promote, protect and heal in expression of the common life of the Church. Conventionalism and apportionments and benevolences symbolize vital matters to every thorough-going, conscientious Methodist.

With local obligations pressing the Church, it is not always easy to maintain loyalty to the larger interests. But the man who takes money that belongs to missions, or other sacred causes, to pay a church debt, shifts the mortgage to his own soul. To sacrifice any Kingdom interest for any local reason, is to impair, if not to destroy, the great structure of Christian ministry. The entire circle of interests deserve and should have full consideration and proportionate support. It is a matter of deep regret that many of our great interests are now in grave peril. Our missions are in serious distress. The income from the apportionments has steadily decreased for three years, and our missions face immediate danger. A special effort is being made to bring in between now and Easter Sunday sufficient funds to save our mission work and other interests just as important, from calamity. Unless the Church heeds this call and out of its reduced income lays upon the altars of the Lord a generous and sacrificial offering, we will be not only recalling missionaries, but surrendering enterprises of God's Kingdom at home and abroad which have been built up through years of toil and faith. This would be a tragedy. We therefore urge upon all our people the heartiest co-operation with those in charge of these plans which are now being promoted by the Commission on Benevolences.

Intelligence is essential to any adequate devotion to a great cause or service in its promotion. No less a prophet than Hosea said, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge." That is a principle capable of universal application, and well attested by the experience of the human race. Yet, many people, and even most, are willing to go on without knowledge. They make themselves content with what they have and often become critical, if not cynical, toward those who could teach them. In nothing has our church shown greater excellence than in its program of education. Our college and universities do us honor in the service which they are rendering, even at the biting sacrifices of many of the teachers. Without them, Methodism would soon be reduced to an impotent force. They merit our enthusiastic acclaim and support. The program of religious education which is being carried out in every Annual Conference and throughout the Church, is of the highest significance and value. No presiding elder or pastor can afford to neglect this program nor fail to co-operate with his conference leaders in Christian Education. The road to intelligence in life and religion is the highway to the mountain-tops of vision and experience in the Kingdom of God.

We would not have anyone lose sight of the fact that the religious life of a church, its ministry and its membership, is the main thing. Nothing can take its place and very little avails when it is low. With the religious life healthy and vigorous and enthusiastic, all else has a broad basis of exhilarating hope. Nothing has happened in these recent years to destroy or even reduce the provisions for such a religious life. People may complain that material possessions have been taken away, but none have suggested that spiritual values have been made to suffer thereby. On the other hand, some very wise men have declared that the world's greatest depression is not in its economic life, but in its moral and spiritual ideals. The awakening of the spiritual sense and the quickening of the moral consciousness are essential to the climb of the world's people to any proper plane of adequate human living. The Church's chief task is to bring about this awakening. To that end all energies should be directed. If failure comes here, any other success will become but mockery. But failure there need not be. The rise of religious experience awaits but the dedication of the human life to Christ, and His Kingdom. Such a dedication will make every church a home for the soul and a dwelling-place for the Most High.

PROHIBITION ANNIVERSARY STATEMENT

By Edwin C. Dinwiddie, Superintendent of the National Temperance Bureau

The Eighteenth Amendment has been in effect thirteen years today. It came after every other method of liquor control, known then or since, had been tried under favorable conditions in one or more States. Thirty-two States were under a prohibition policy of their own before January 16, 1920.

Drys helped to try out the regulatory methods of high and low license, local option by wards, municipalities, counties and States, and also all sorts of control under permissive systems, and every one of these methods had failed as ingloriously as the rampant wets today claim national prohibition has failed. The liquor traffic has been through the years a persistent and consistent violator of laws. It will also violate promises and will seek to compel all it can control to do likewise. Witness the present spectacle in Congress and before the country! In order to gain a hearing, they have declared since 1920 that the saloon was a bad institution, should have gone, and ought never to return. These statements were reiterated and emphasized over and over again by the leaders of the wets, including high-ups like Raskob, Smith, and even the President-elect. But now, when charged with power, they disregard all these solemn protestations and demand straight-out, naked repeal. They asserted the righteousness of full protection of "dry" States from encroachment from wet ones when they were trying to win the people by attacking prohibition, but now, when faced with power and responsibility, they want only unconditional repeal.

They claimed the country was overwhelmingly wet, and yet had to summon political party support to bolster up their program and bring them needed help by threats to both major parties from the monied interests of the nation by refusal of campaign contributions unless prohibition repeal were promised. They now insist on party regularity, trampling under foot the equally binding and obligatory promise of protection to dry territory and continued outlawry of the saloon system.

Prohibition has not failed. It has been denied by its enemies anything resembling a fair chance, and yet by the very poorest test of efficiency and success this policy is proved to be the best in operation ever tried for solving an admittedly difficult local and national social problem. No other criminal statute has attained similar success in actual enforcement. Our greatest trouble lies in the acknowledged failure of democratic government in our big foreignized cities and the corruption of officialdom therein, much of it the product and all of it a "hang-over" of the old-time saloon system.

It was quite easy for the liquor crowd to rail at Prohibition, to magnify its shortcomings and to belittle its accomplishments. They are finding it increasingly difficult to find a satisfactory substitute which even they believe the American people will be willing to accept.

CLASSES IN EVANGELISM

By Rev. J. Fisher Simpson

Reports from different sections of the Church indicate that numbers of groups are engaged this winter in the study of Evangelism. Numerous adult classes are using the elective course, "Winning People for Christ," now appearing in the "Adult Student" with teachers' helps in the "Church School Magazine."

One pastor in Alabama says he is using this elective on Wednesday evening to supplement Dr. Chappell's text, "Evangelism in the Sunday School," and that several of his people will take credit for the Standard Course on Evangelism. Other pastors are also taking advantage of this period of evangelistic emphasis to lead their workers in the study of this task of the Church.

Gradually people are coming to think of the total program of the Church as evangelism. Whatever helps people grow in their religious experience and helps them to have the mind of Christ in their relations to others belongs to evangelism. The pastor who will lead his workers to an enlarged vision of their work in these terms will make an investment that will bring returns through the years.

Why not make use of the Standard Training Course in a study class? The text, Chappell's "Evangelism in the Sunday School," now sells for 65 cents. A number of free leaflets are available upon request from the Service Department, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. Those who may want to take the examination for credit may do so. Write the Division of Leadership Training, 810 Broadway, for questions before you begin the class. Some excellent reference materials for the leader, and the class are "Winning People for Christ," now appearing in the "Adult Student" and the "Church School Magazine"; "The Harvest and the Reapers," North; "Motives and Methods in Modern Evangelism," Goodell; "When You Enlist," Slattery; "New Youth Evangelism," Cowan; "When We Join the Church," Ryan; "Education in the Christian Religion," Shackford; "Building the Kingdom," Chappell.

SAFETY SIGNALS

By Rev. S. J. Davies

It was an eventful day in the life work of the Master while on earth. He was returning from the home of the loved family in Bethany. On the wayside approaching the holy city was a barren fig tree. To the ever observant eyes of Jesus it was an opportunity to impress on the disciples a lesson of intense import. This occasion was a miracle of acting as well as speaking later on. He must have known full well there was no fruit on that barren tree. But the lesson must be taught impressively. Approaching the tree He must appear to be looking for fruit. This was a part of the lesson. Then after the seeming search says, "Let no fruit be borne henceforward." Before him lay the city. Then sending his disciples for the ready prepared colt, the triumphant entry amid the acclamations of the multitudes and the cleansing of the temple. Heavy with days work they start on the return to Bethany. On the road the observant Peter remarks, "Behold, the fig tree, how soon withered away." The Master answered, "Have faith in God," and then those tremendous figures of removing the mountain and learning all things through faith. The evangelists differ somewhat in the order of events just here, but the supreme facts in the case remain. "Have faith in God." The faith this event teaches is to trust Him, in life, in death, here and hereafter. We need not set any bounds thereto, for He has set none, for He is Lord of all things, and His power extends to the utmost limits of human thought and human need.

Science has just about lost itself in the infinity of its discoveries. Geologists have discarded the time table, and now say aeons upon aeons innumerable are written upon the rocks. A boundless universe is about the best and latest the astronomers can tell us about. Economies and sociology are giving us a new baby, "technocracy," and the press is proclaiming his birth, but almost everybody knows nothing of his pedigree and parentage. Well, I might go on. But hear me. Science, unmixed with faith in God, is a delusion and a snare. I prefer my astronomy guided by the Star of Bethlehem, my geology founded on the Rock of Ages, my sociology taught by the Golden Rule, and my entire relation to God and man shot through and through by the lesson of the miracle on Bethany's road.

And all this is very comforting to me, and I am assured not to me only but also unto all them that love His appearing. For the Lord of the life in the fig tree is the Lord of life in man and all the vast reaches of man's life and destiny. For in Him is life, and this life is the light of men. Beyond this none may go.

I wrote a letter to an old time friend and his faithful wife through the years. I closed that letter with a verse from Whittier's little gem of poetry, as even I close this Signal. May it ward new hope and joy to all who read:

"I know not what distant islands far
Lift their fronded palms in air;
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond His love and care."

SAYS MY SUB-CONSCIOUS MIND

By Rev. R. E. Smith, D.D., Contributing Editor

Watson, the Behaviorist, declares that there is no such thing as reasoning or thinking. What you really are doing when you imagine you are "thinking" is merely "talking to yourself." Everything is our reaction to external stimuli. Stick a pin in a frog and watch him squirm and kick—he reacts to my pin (stimulus). Hold a nice job dangling before a voter—watch him change from me to my rival. That is reacting to stimuli. No reasoning—no thinking, says Watson—just talking to ourselves. Meditation or day dreaming is talking to ourselves—only we do not use words.

Now, laying Watson carefully in the garbage can, I am going to listen in on my sub-conscious mind. It has a way, lately, of rising to the surface and speaking out. Here, it is right now insisting on being heard:

"You claim to be a Methodist preacher, eh? Follower of John Wesley? You do not like to be disturbed. Wesley for more than fifty years traveled, mostly on horseback, 5000 miles a year over bad roads to preach to poor miners who paid him no salary. Where his horse could not carry him he walked—often twenty-five miles a day, preaching five times a day! Nor did he neglect his studies while so engaged—whether riding or walking. When you are interrupted or away from home you excuse yourself from study, don't you?"

"But whenever any stranger rode up he always laid aside his book and tactfully led the conversation to the point of enlisting the man for Christ. He lost no opportunity for personal evangelism—do you?"

"If Wesley had your charge—what do you think he would do?"

Does any one blame me for turning off this peevish voice? My sub-consciousness doesn't seem to make any allowance for our modern age, the many demands made upon us just now. It expects me to do the absurd things men did 200 years ago. Still, after all, I'm not quite able to shake off some of the suggestions.

SCIENCE AND RELIGION

(Some time ago we heard this story. It impressed us so much as indicating the happy wedding of Science and Religion that we felt that we must share it with our readers.—Editor.)

Across the street from my home, a beautiful little girl recently fell into a strange paralysis. Some accident at play might have caused a pressure on the brain, it was thought, and she was taken to a hospital in the city. I went to the hospital and as I walked down the corridor I met the surgeon who was to operate.

A slight, frail man he is, with a shock of iron-gray hair. He has quite a reputation in our city, and the child's father, himself a physician, was willing to trust his child's life to him. And that day I learned two reasons why.

One is that his hands, as small and delicate as a woman's, can lay bare the mysteries of a child's brain, and start her on the road to health and childhood's joys. The other—well, as I met him that morning, he asked me to go into a room across the corridor from the room in which the child was. I expected to see some other patient of his. But there was no one in the room. The surgeon closed the door and said something like this: "I have a very critical operation, and you know how much depends upon it. I am accustomed to go to God for help at such a time, and I want you to kneel here and pray with me."

We knelt by the hospital bed and I prayed that the God who marks the sparrow's fall and numbers the very hairs of our heads would direct the surgeon's knife.

The little patient is now in school, and has made great progress toward complete recovery.

From that hour by the hospital bed, I have had infinite respect for that surgeon. Should not the institution where the mysteries of life and death are unfolded, and men and women dare to deal with human life, be the place of prayer? Should not that institution be in the hands of those who trust in Him who said, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly?"

PERSONAL APPEARANCE AND THE COLLEGE MAN

It is a common phrase that the "surface" does not count—that it is not what a man looks like that matters, but rather, it is his character that matters. Yet, the personal appearance of a man can so far affect his confidence as to make him a strong personality or a shiftless nobody. It is a logical thought that when one does not feel that his appearance will meet any scrutiny, he is ill at ease, and much of his assurance and poise are gone.

Therefore, to college students who are in the character-forming years of life, it is especially important to form the habit of presenting a neat appearance at all times. Of course, no one has much money with which to buy clothes, but new clothes and a carefully assorted wardrobe are not necessities to neatness.

Neatness consists in always appearing clean and well-groomed, with clothes freshly pressed and laundered. A clean, neatly dressed person has added an air of pleasant attractiveness and a surety of ability.

Even if it does not seem worthwhile to oneself to exert an effort toward a good personal appearance, it is a duty to Centenary. People outside the college atmosphere and its charm cannot appreciate its activities. They can only judge the college by the personal appearance and achievements of its students.

Those students who dress slouchily and go about with a "don't care" attitude are a reflection on Centenary college.

A little time spent in an effort toward a neat appearance would pay big dividends.—The Conglomerate, Centenary College.

A SURE HAVEN—THE FAMILY ALTAR

Every thinking teacher, minister and parent would have all safe-guards possible thrown around the children and youths of our country during these days of social and moral peril. All know that there are more attractions outside of the home today than ever before. The home, the family circle, must be a mightier magnet than ever before if it holds in safety those near and dear to it.

There is nothing that can take the place of the family altar in the home. It is God's plan. It must be reasonable. He wants this holy altar restored to the home and established among His people that both the home and His Church may be a sure haven in the time of storm!

It is a rare privilege and a peculiar joy for parents to day by day lead their children to a throne of grace. The family altar binds the members of the family together, and sacred memories of this simple worship follow us as a guiding hand on through the changing scenes of life. A congregation made up of people from prayerless homes will always be worldly and will make a prayerless church. Such a church is a burden and a grief to any true pastor's soul. If every Sunday school teacher and pastor will teach the importance and great safe-guard of the family altar, there will be born in the peoples' heart a new life and power, and a deeper love for God and mankind.

When did you hear a sermon on this subject? Kindly write me a word about your family altar.

"MY BOY AND I"

'Twas a winter evening between sundown and dark, the time we call twilight, when a peaceful hush seems to fall on all nature.

The house was still and there were only two occupants at this time, my boy and I.

"Mamma, turn out the lights," said the young lad of some 12 years, who was ill with influenza.

"Why, dear, do they worry you?" I asked, wondering, for usually the child wanted light rather than darkness.

He instantly replied, "I just want to look at the moon and stars and see how beautiful they are, and think about Jesus."

When I attempted to say something my boy didn't give me time, but went on: "Mamma, I just want to tell you that I'm not afraid to die; no, not a bit. I feel that Jesus would be right there to carry me home to Heaven. And Mamma, I know lots of folks in Heaven, don't I?"

Oh, how this stirred my heart; but, wishing to let the little soul express itself, I showed no signs of emotion.

He continued, "Mamma, I believe that must be the reason some mothers grieve so over their big boys and girls; they are not sure that they are saved. Now, please don't grieve so for me, if I should die, for I'll be with Jesus."

I told my little boy how happy this made Mamma feel, and we, too, just rejoiced together.

Mothers, wherever you are, let me tell you this was one of the happiest experiences of my life. You know, for every mother's heart has a beat closely akin.

Then and there I praised God for having erected and kept a family altar all these years, for taking time to pray with him over so many things, for having always permitted him to say his prayer by my knee every morning of his life before he goes to school. I used the word "permitted," for I believe he'd rather go to school without his breakfast than that asking God to protect him.

Mothers, may we not neglect our jewels, our precious jewels, in the rush of life!

Does it pay? All the patience, sacrifice, and toil—oh yes, it pays.

A MOTHER.

KEEPING THE ADVOCATE SAVED

The period from March 15 to May 15 has been set aside by the three patronizing Conferences at which time a special effort is to be made to secure the renewals of all present subscribers and to add to the list at least one new subscriber for every ten members on the church rolls. separate our church responsibilities from the standpoint of giving to the Local Church obligations and the Benevolences. What justification have we for this? Does it not cultivate the feeling that we as local churches may select the field of support? Is the support of any part of the program of the church optional with us as Methodists? Are we free to support the local church and neglect what we call its connectional interests? Do we not see that the local church cannot save itself except by losing itself? If every local church met its local obligations and stopped there has it much of which it may boast after all? Imagine evil gaining the ascendancy and a mighty tide of darkness enveloping the world. Would not the local church with its balanced local budget be swept away along with other institutions to oblivion? We cannot any longer live to ourselves. We are all in one great house, Americans, Chinese, Indians, Europeans, and the rest. To be sure, we may be in separate rooms, but we cannot burn down one room without damaging the house.

Let us face the fact that we are obligated to do the whole task of the church and that we do not have the choice of supporting one or the other, the local or the benevolent causes. Save our Benevolences? By all means. But not as some separate entity. Let them be incorporated in the thinking and acting of the local church.

Naturally, our method takes the direction of our thinking and terminology. We have our separate allotments for the Benevolences. They become detached from the interests of the local church. We grow accustomed to a low percent on the Benevolences and the cheapened Benevolent Dollar comes to be taken as a matter of course.

Finding ourselves under financial pressure with reference to our benevolent work our General Conference sets up the Kingdom Extension work with its "cultivation period." The situation is sufficiently critical to demand emergency measures. But the Kingdom Extension plan is carried through one quadrennium and is then revamped for another. From year to year it must be altered in order to make some further appeal. Now, behold, we find not only that failing, but that our regular and more dependable Benevolences are imperiled.

Is there not a factor here that must be placed alongside the financial crisis in the world and the lowered spiritual morals to be reckoned with in meeting the whole situation?

Let us look into it. What is the Kingdom Extension period for? It began as an emergency measure. It has been extended until it has ceased to have that meaning. Furthermore, it was designed to meet financial stringencies with reference to those objects that are already included in the Benevolences. Pretty soon there was complaint that the period not only occupied time out of proportion to other interests, but that the cultivation period was to be climaxed by a "collection." Surely we need the cultivation, but when thus tied together both education and offering seem to be defeated.

Is it not time to "re-think" this whole situation? Let us take our laymen into full confidence, unify our terminology, methods and effort, and with a prayer to God, who is ever more eager to move forward than we, and advance.

THE EASTER TRIP. Only a few have applied to us for the little booklet of devotional readings to be used during the Lenten period. These will be mailed out in a few days. We shall be able to mail as many as 100 singly to individuals. Those desiring more may order them from The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life, Room 913, 287 Fourth Ave., New York City. They are three cents each, or two cents when as many as 100 are ordered.

We should be glad to know the names of all who join in this devotional journey to Easter. This season this year commemorates the nineteenth centenary of the Sufferings, Death and Resurrection of our Lord. It is peculiarly fitting not only because of this, but because of the great need of our individual souls, and of the world today.

Our Easter ship sails Saturday, March 1, and will arrive at Easter, Sunday, April 16.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Mrs. Lou Clark, Waynesboro, Miss., is among those renewing and making a contribution.

Preparations are on for the mid-year training school at Grenada College. It grows in interest.

Miss Earl Deane Brannon, of Woodville, Miss., has been named May Queen of Whitworth College.

"I don't know how we would get on without the Advocate. This paper seems like a part of our family," writes Mrs. Odelle G. Chapman, Archibald, La.

Rev. R. F. Witt, superannuate of Meridian, Miss., writes a good word longing for the Advocate to regain its original size. May that day be hastened.

Rev. L. L. Roberts, pastor at Philadelphia, Miss., was among the members of the Mississippi Conference present at the General Council meeting in Augusta, Ga.

Rev. J. E. Cunningham is now in the U. S. Veterans Hospital, Alexandria, La. He will probably be there for some time. Interested friends may reach him there by mail.

A contribution from the Woman's Missionary Society, First Church, Monroe, La. We thank these ladies who made their kindness known through Mrs. F. C. Brown.

A letter addressed to the Advocate by some good member of Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, brings a contribution saying, "This is to help save you." Thank you, Anonymous.

Our office is rather frequently made happy by the call of some friend. Recently Rev. C. C. Wier, pastor at Franklin, was with us. He had been in the city for the meeting of the Grand Lodge.

Messrs. De Loach and Fountain, Methodist and Presbyterian laymen, Greenwood, headed north last week for the markets. Of course, they had to pass through Grenada, the gateway of the Universe.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Hutchinson, Caspiana, La., announce the marriage of their daughter, Margaret, to Mr. Wendall C. McClellan. The Advocate joins the many who wish these fine young people a happy life voyage.

Rev. W. W. Woollard, pastor at Ripley, was in Grenada recently, en route to Jackson to attend the Millsaps Trustees meeting. He was looking well and in fine fettle. A real man, with well-balanced brain and heart.

In various states prohibition meetings are being held and constructive plans laid for the support and advancement of this great work. It is now time for the prohibitionists to recapture the offensive and move forward.

Mississippi Methodists should be happy that their state is on the 1932 honor roll of the states that were free from lynching. We congratulate them. This is an achievement worthy of notice and comment and perpetuation.

According to reports from a recent meeting of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College, Dr. D.

M. Key, President of the College, is extending further inducements to students who take seriously their college work and make good records.

Miss Ora Hooper, rural worker of the Louisiana Missionary Society, wants a bell for the Port Barre Church. If you know of one, second-hand, that can, with clear tone, call people to church and worship, write her at Port Barre, La.

Some people take every occasion to pull for the Advocate. Mrs. W. H. Cheairs, Michigan City, Miss., is one of that kind. She renews her own subscription, sends a subscription to a friend, and makes a contribution direct to the "cause."

Get ready for the Mansfield Assemblies. Christian Adventure Assembly, June 13-19, for young people 12 to 15 years; Young People's Assembly, June 20-26, for young people 16-23. $10 will pay the entire cost of a delegate to either assembly.

Let us all get in on the Kingdom Extension work. Let us all, preachers and laymen, look the matter squarely in the face and respond to the need in such a way as to re-prove, to the world our interest in missions and the other causes represented.

Rev. Jas. T. Harris, pastor at Rayville, La., in addition to securing the "Save the Advocate" quota, turns in an extra dollar or two. Furthermore, he has enjoyed a great increase in his prayer-meeting and the year is opening most encouragingly.

Rev. A. Y. Brown, pastor at Calhoun City, Miss., is still making good use of the columns of the local paper. From time to time he presents matters bearing upon the active work of the church. Recently he was discussing the Kingdom Extension program.

It is reported that New Orleans is still in the running for the 1933 General Conference. Jackson, Miss., also has her hat in the ring. Let's see to it that one of these places is selected. It would be great to have our greatest conference to meet within our territory.

Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor of Trinity Church, Ruston, La., is back into full swing after a tough siege of flu and pneumonia. He reports growing interest especially as to the Kingdom Extension work. The study books have been sold and a strong committee is on the job.

Rev. H. N. Harrison, one of the superannuates of the Louisiana Conference, now living at 7449 Hampson street, New Orleans, was a caller at this office last week. He asks us to say to his brethren of the pastorate that he stands ready to be of any assistance he may to them.

Mrs. W. B. Baines, 810 N. President St., Jackson, Miss., is chairman of the Christian Literature Committee of Grace Church. Already she is making plans for the circulation of the Advocate. With such enthusiasm as she manifests there will be no difficulty in this good church.

Bishop Dobbs was the preacher for the Anniversary occasion at Park Avenue Church, Feb. 19. Rev. R. T. Ware is the pastor. Through his untiring efforts the lovely new building whose Fifth Anniversary is being celebrated passed from dream and prayer into glorious reality.

Whitworth College gets the air. The Fine Arts Department, through an arrangement of the Millsaps System of Colleges, recently broadcast an excellent program over station WJDX, Jackson, Miss. A feature of the program was a brief but interesting address by Dr. G. F. Winfield, Dean of the college.

We just want to go out and give our hand to these Presiding Elders who are pulling for the Advocate. Dr. Walter L. Stormont, of the Sardis-Grenada District, writes that he is telling his preachers about it. With this sort of help, we anticipate a great increase in the circulation during the period allotted to that, March 15-May 15.

Dean Pipkin, of the Graduate School of Louisiana State University, is seeking a way to more economical and effective local government. He is finding much of the machinery now in use antiquated and expensive. Why not look for a new day in local government? Much of the wider troubles of the country might receive effective solution at this point.

Can you beat it? There is to be an egg-laying contest at the Century of Progress Fair at Chicago, staged by the honorable hens of all parts of the United States. With contestants from the different States, Canada and elsewhere, the contest is to run for six months. Methodist preachers ought to be interested in any movement that looks toward more and better friers.

Dr. Chas. W. Crisler, Presiding Elder of the Brookhaven District, reports most encouraging responses from the people throughout his district. They have determined to make a success of this year, both spiritually and financially. Some land is being set aside to be sown and cultivated for the church. A strong effort is being made to raise a large part of the Benevolences by Easter.

The American Bible Society has just been celebrating in a happily successful way one hundred years of Scripture distribution in China. In discussion of the matter in China, after referring to what has been done by the older Bible societies, a Chinese pastor said, "We shall hope by the end of another century to have put the Bible into every home in China and to have given every Chinese an opportunity to read these Scriptures for himself."

Last Sunday marked the close of a six weeks' attendance campaign conducted by the Men's Bible Class of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, New Orleans, of which Mr. Wm. H. Black, prominent layman of this city is the teacher, and Dr. Benj. F. Rogers, the pastor. Their efforts were rewarded can readily be seen by the fact that the attendance was increased from an average of sixty before the campaign started to that of 178, the largest number of men ever to assemble in a Methodist Bible Class in New Orleans.

Mrs. Chas. H. Thompson is Superintendent of Literature and Publicity of the Woman's Missionary Society of Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss. How happy we are made by a letter from Mrs. Thompson that she is taking her task seriously and that she intends to stimulate interest in our church periodicals. Already she is circulating sample copies, including the Advocate. Mrs. Thompson's work will be especially timely for the Advocate during the circulation period now being announced.

"Looking forward to this year's Golden Rule observance of Mothers' Day, The Golden Rule Foundation, Lincoln Building, New York City, announces a prize of $50 to the High School boy or girl who will prepare and submit in poetry, prose or song, the best tribute to mother. Suitable certificates of merit will also be awarded to the best entry received from each State and County." Boys and girls, you had better get in on this. The effort will be worth all put into it regardless of the recognition that may be received.

Mrs. S. D. Pearce, wife of Judge S. D. Pearce, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, died January 20. Mrs. Pearce was a Christian woman of exceptional devotion and rare talent. For twenty-five years she was the organist of Trinity Methodist Church, giving up the work about ten years ago because of failing health. Her death was sudden, bringing great sorrow to a wide circle of friends. She was buried from Trinity Church, the Rev. R. W. Vaughan, assisted by Dr. W. L. Doss, Jr., Rev. H. L. Johns and Rev. S. E. McFadden, officiating.

Rev. C. M. Morris, our pastor at Mangham, La., has secured Rev. John A. May, of Montevallo, Ala., one of our general evangelists, to hold a community-wide revival in the High School Auditorium at Mangham, La., beginning Feb. 26, and closing March 12, 1933. This Mangham High School has an enrollment of over 700 students and the auditorium a seating capacity of 1200, which is expected to accommodate the Mangham citizenship, with the school enrollment. Let this good work continue. If in need of help in your revival any time this year, write Rev. John A. May, Montevallo, Ala.

Notwithstanding inclement weather, the Christian Education Institute of the Vicksburg District, Feb. 16, was attended by twelve of the pastors of the district: Revs. J. A. Moore, J. F. Campbell, J. L. Sells, L. J. Snelgrove, T. B. Cottrell, F. J. Jones, W. A. Hays, M. M. Black, J. H. Morrow, Percy Vaughan, W. B. Hollingsworth, J. E. J. Ferguson. The Fayette Sunday School, as host, served a splendid luncheon. Rev. W. W. Cammack, a superannuate, was present; and, as it was his eightieth birthday, at the close of the program, an offering, amounting to $6.50, was presented to him.

Through the Federal Council of Churches twenty-six Protestant denominations were called upon to observe Feb. 12 as Race Relations Sunday. "In these days of unemployment many racial groups, particularly Negroes, Indians, Mexicans and Orientals, suffer even more acutely than other distressed people because of the added hardships due to racial prejudice and antagonism. Subtle race prejudice now permeates all ranks of our society, even including the churches. As members of churches and allied organizations, we are called upon to exert ourselves as never before to prove our belief in peaceable means of bringing social changes and of settling racial conflict."

Rev. R. T. Henry, a missionary of the M. E. Church, South, to China, now at home on a furlough, in company with Rev. H. G. Hawkins, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, visited in that district from Feb. 12 to Feb. 17, delivering during the period in churches and schools twenty addresses, which were much appreciated by his audiences. Much of Brother Henry's work has been in connection with an institutional church at Sookhow, which is supported in large degree by Chinese citizens, both Christian and non-Christian. During the undeclared war at Shanghai last year he witnessed the air battle in which the young American aviator, Bob Short, lost his life. Brother Henry is a great friend of Rev. W. B. Burke, one of our missionaries who has been in China over fifty years, and whose work has been so much appreciated by the Chinese citizens that they erected a monument in his honor some years ago. Mrs. Burke, now deceased, was Miss Addie Gordon, of Port Gibson, Miss.

NOTES AND COMMENT

By Rev. V. C. Curtis, D.D., Contributing Editor

COLLEGE DEGREES. Great stress is being placed upon degrees in the field of education. There is nothing wrong in this, since it is necessary to have standards and give recognition to those who have accomplished certain tasks. But the mere fact that a man has a degree is no guarantee that he will succeed in his life's work. He may have passed all the examinations in a satisfactory way to secure the coveted honor and then not know how to adapt himself to existing conditions and solve the real problems that he has to face. The practical element is not emphasized in many schools as it should be. It is a fallacy for any one to assume that he is educated when he finished four years at college. He has made a good start, but if he stops there he will be left behind in the race of life, and wonder why his ability has not been recognized. With the facilities which are available to the average boy and girl, there is but little reason for their not getting this start.

Some have made their mark in the field of education who have not had these advantages, but that does not prove that they are not qualified. They are exceptions, but their success proves that it is not the degree that is conferred that counts, but the work that is done. They do not have to have a diploma to hang on the wall to prove to people they have been to college, but they have better methods than that to demonstrate their ability. It is not necessary to dig up musty records to ascertain whether or not they are qualified. Dr. Walter Williams, president of the University of Missouri, never attended college as a student. Dr. Edward W. Berry, Dean and Provost of Johns Hopkins University, did not go to college. Clarence Darrow, whose intellect in some regards is outstanding, never attended college. At least ten of the Presidents of the United States did not graduate from college. These and many others who are prominent have been "worrying" along without a college degree, except the honorary degrees which have been conferred, not in recognition of what they were prepared to do, but of what they have done.

REPORT OF SOUTHERN GROUP MEETING, MERIDIAN DISTRICT

The meeting was called to order by Dr. T. J. O'Neil, P. E., who also conducted devotional. Rev. W. C. M. Baggett led in prayer. Bro. O'Neil gave a brief review of the first chapter of the mission study book, viz., "Christ and the Coming Kingdom." The third chapter, "Christ and the Ministry of Teaching," was discussed by Rev. W. D. Hawkins in a very acceptable manner.

Dr. Henry, returned missionary of China, delivered a heart-stirring message to a large crowd of enthusiastic hearers. Rev. W. F. Baggett, of Daleville, closed the worship service with prayer.

Rev. T. B. Winstead, pastor-host, announced that dinner would be served by ladies of New Hope; all were urged to stay. The good ladies demonstrated their skill to gratify both the eye and appetite. The benediction was pronounced in Chinese by Dr. Henry.

The afternoon session was preceded by Quarterly Conference of De Kalb charge. The discussion of the mission study book was resumed. Rev. W. J. Dawson, pastor of Hawkins Memorial, gave a brief review of chapters 4 and 5: "Christ and the Ministry of Building," and "Christ and the Ministry of Healing." Rev. P. M. Caraway, of East End, closed the review using the last chapter, "Christ and the Coming Kingdom."

Dr. O'Neil called for a nomination of a group chairman, and Brother Winstead was nominated and elected for the fifth year. Dr. O'Neil nominated Rev. W. C. M. Baggett as secretary and treasurer of the group, and he was elected. Dr. Hunt, of Lauderdale, invited the group to meet at Lauderdale, which invitation was gladly accepted, and the date was fixed as March 2. Benediction was pronounced by W. H. Lane, of Wesley Chapel, was pronounced by Rev. W. H. Lane, of Wesley Chapel, Meridian.

AND POSTERS

Mrs. Sudle J. Lingle, of Shreveport, La., writes of a unique poster contest: "We have thirteen circles with a 'World Outlook' agent in each circle who made or was responsible for a poster from that circle. Their interest, enthusiasm, and co-operation could not have been excelled, as they expressed the bigness of our work while they studied the Council Minutes and 'Looking Into the Missionary' Dollar.

"Since this was our first experience in making posters, we decided to begin at home and learn about our work in America first. Two or three people worked on each poster, thereby increasing the number gaining the information.

"Some of the subjects for posters were as follows: The World Outlook, Rural Work; Cotton Mill, Factory, and Community Centers; Our Work with Negroes, Gulf Coast Work, etc.

"The posters, together with written descriptions, were presented to the Woman's Missionary Society, and it was recommended that a custodian be appointed, who would place a poster with the respective circle hostess each month till all have been used. Several of our talented young people—young women and men, high school students—kindly gave touches of art that made our posters very attractive.

"The posters have already been spoken for, to be used in our Annual Conference."

Hummel, 3622 West Broadway, Louisville, for information concerning hotels and boarding places. CONFERENCE NEWS Mississippi

Zone 2, Hattiesburg District, met in Leakesville, February 1, with a good attendance. Auxiliaries from Richton, Piave, Leakesville and Lucedale were well represented. Mrs. John Pulford, of Piave, presided. Rev. W. A. Terky, of Richton, led the morning devotional, emphasizing our lack of strength, faith, character and will to do God's will—admonishing us to be strong, and of good courage to meet life's problems, perplexities. Mrs. W. F. Mudge, of Piave, read an interesting paper on "Our Opportunities and Responsibilities." A playlet, "Modernizing Young Mrs. Patton," was given in story form by Mrs. Wilson, of Richton, and "Mrs. Porter Tries Publicity," was presented in a splendid way by the young people of Lucedale. A musical number by Miss Anderson, of Leakesville, was enjoyed. After discussion of the new "Good Will" project, Rev. J. M. Corley dismissed for lunch. After the fine dinner served by the Leakesville ladies, the afternoon session opened, Rev. Mr. Corley leading the devotional, reading the latter part of the fourth chapter of St. Mark, presenting a great parable that can be applied to us as a people, showing us that we must adapt the Word to different kinds of hearers, and can be applied during our evangelistic drive; reminding us that we may expect to meet those who are unprepared, incapable and pre-occupied and that we must study the problems so as to be able to interest them and prove to them by our lives that we have walked with Him by the wayside. Mrs. Sufflin spoke on "Publicity Pays." A round table discussion followed. Each auxiliary resolved to remember Brother Ellis, zone superannuate, each month with substantial gifts. On account of illness, the district secretary, Mrs. S. E. Shannon, was unable to attend and was very greatly missed. The Prohibition Question was ably discussed by Mrs. J. M. Corley, of Lucedale, as she presented some interesting facts. Mrs. W. F. Mudge, of Piave, was re-elected secretary.

The members of the Pass Christian auxiliary, Seashore District, met recently in the home of Mrs. Bishop for an all-day quilting of a quilt that they named "The Friendship Quilt," because it contained the names of friends who had contributed to the support of the society. Mrs. W. D. Robinson, one of the members, composed the following lines as an expression of her observation, of what took place during the day:

"THE FRIENDSHIP QUILT"

By Mrs. W. D. Robinson

The famous Friendship Quilt, 'tis done,
To quilt it was just lots of fun;
They worked and laughed and gossiped gay,

But the banner went to winsome Mae
(Mrs. Barksdale).

Puzzled at first, 'till Minnie (Vaughan) showed 'em,

Then the best of all was Mrs. Odom.
Now girls, be careful; please don't hurry.

This advice came from Mrs. Flurry.
Some had chairs, some a hench;
The outstanding member was Mrs.
French.

Mrs. Bishop, the hostess fair,
Used neither bench, box nor chair,
All were sweet, not one contrary,
The sweetest one was gentle Mary (Epperson)

No whispered sounds, but even tones;
The softest came from Mrs. Jones.
The dinner served was the best of all,
Each one ready for the call.
But when the quilt was "down and out,"

You should have heard the girls all shout.

They viewed it up and viewed it down,
And sold it at last to Mrs. Brown.

My task is done, I thank my teacher,
And donate this to Mrs. Preacher.
(Mrs. Allan)

North Mississippi

The zone of the Corinth District, composed of New Albany, Sherman, Myrtle, Potts, Cornersville, and Ecu, held its first quarterly meeting at Potts Camp, with Mrs. H. E. Carter as chairman. This was "Officers Training Day," and helpful discussions were led by Mrs. H. E. Jones, district secretary, and Mrs. Lester Greer, conference superintendent of Christian social relations. The young people of Potts Camp gave a playlet, "The Reference Book," emphasizing the need of "The World Outlook." The zone has a specific project this year—a full quota of subscribers for each auxiliary. The meeting closed with a consecration service.

A zone meeting of the Columbus District was held at Salem, with fifty-five members from the various societies present. Macon answered the roll call with 17 members; Salem, 12; Shuqualak, 12, and Mashulaville, 7. The devotional was given by Mrs. Tridell, followed by a prayer by Mrs. E. Marsh, Jr. Duties of officers were given by Mrs. Robert Weyburn, of Macon, followed by Duties of Superintendents, given by Mrs. Van Luke of Shuqualak. Stewardship was given by Mrs. George Russell of Mashulaville and Mrs. Tom Jeff Dugan of Shuqualak, gave the "Need of the Church To-day." The program was closed by a prayer by Mrs. Marvin Jones. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the members of the Salem society. The next meeting will be held in April in Macon.

A Blood Builder

PIMPLES, boils, and blotches disappear when you take that safe blood enricher and tonic which has enjoyed sixty years of success—namely Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

Read what Miss Lillie May Lyles of Route 3, Florence, Ala., wrote: "I had the 'flu' and pneumonia and then an abscess. The doctor said he could not benefit me and every one thought I was going into a decline. I was so poor. I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. After the first bottle I was much better and after taking a few more bottles I was sound and well and felt better than I ever did in my life."

Do this for Your Child in
TWO WEEKS

How to rid any boy or girl of sluggishness or constipation and build a big appetite.

The trouble with children who will not eat is usually stasis. The symptoms are a tongue that's always coated, bad breath, poor color, dull eyes that are often a bilious yellow. No appetite, no ambition—even for play. Hard to get to sleep, hard to wake in the morning.

There's an absolute remedy for this condition. It gives listless youngsters the appetite and energies of a young animal. They eat! They gain! They keep well!

It's not the stomach, but the bowel condition that keeps children from eating. But the trouble is in the lower bowel—the colon. California syrup of figs is the only "medicine" that is needed to stimulate the colon muscles. The very next day, your child is eating better and feeling better. Keep on with the syrup of figs a few days and you will see amazing improvement in appetite, color, weight and spirits.

Any drug store has the real California syrup of figs, all bottled, with directions. Nature never made a nicer acting or nicer tasting laxative. (It is purely vegetable.) Remember California syrup of figs when sickness, a cold or any upset has clogged a child's bowels.

WARNING: Even when it's something to give children, some stores will try to substitute. So be sure the bottle says CALIFORNIA Syrup of Figs.

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

CAPUDINE--Liquid

A medicine that brightens people's lives

Fortunately for most of us, a state of happy health does not depend on strength. But like any other piece of machinery, the human machine must be properly regulated to run right.

There is a simple means of regulating the system. It makes an amazing difference in the way your organs function and the way you feel.

It pays most men and women to try this regulation. You may consider yourself in fairly good health today, and after only two weeks' regulating realize you were only half alive.

This means of stimulating the system to new life is a prescription, and it is known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It's derived from fresh herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. Every druggist keeps it on hand. Get some today, and take some tonight. One spoonful drives away a bilious headache. A larger dose relieves any constipated condition. A little now and then keeps an older person protected from auto-intoxication. And it may be given any time to sluggish children.

Whole households have blessed this family doctor's prescription. It has saved old and young from sluggish spells—and from downright sickness. It's the only tonic you may need; the only laxative you need. It is the most likeable and remarkable medicine you ever tasted.

Try one bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and compare your condition with how you felt before!

A LETTER TO JAPAN

Dear Japan:

On this lovely morning, newly born, I am unable to see a single cloud in the whole sky. It is such a day as makes a lover of the world that God has made glad.

But there are wider horizons than this limited dome of blue that overarches my place of work. It is the horizon of international life and relations. On that horizon the day is not so clear, for I see a cloud even now larger than a man's hand. In fact, I can see lightning, and already I hear the distant rumblings of thunder. It is ominous and strikes me with dread. I am alarmed because you seem to be the major factor in bringing on the storm. Can it be averted? That is the matter that suggests my letter to you.

I trust you will understand that I am writing, not primarily as a citizen of a particular nation, but as a citizen of that larger world for whose welfare all men everywhere are jointly responsible. For the time I am trying to forget, as far as possible, my country and its traditions. I confess to you that it is not easy.

You will further understand that I recognize something of the handicaps under which I try to write you these lines. You know I am dependent upon newspapers, magazine articles, a few books and some public addresses, for my information. And having read such materials in times past under similar circumstances, I confess my misgivings. I would give you the advantage of some of my doubts. You know editors and newspaper men, at times, become more or less irresponsible and forget how very much the world relies upon them. They will print what they wish to print; and sometimes they so organize, place, and headline their matter as to convey a wrong impression. No doubt your country, as well as our own, is cursed by this practice.

But, after allowing for these shortcomings of the public press, we must confess that it is a great mirror in which we find much reflected that challenges our attention and arrests our thinking, and in a greater or less degree, determines our convictions and attitudes.

I have been following with great interest and with increasing anxiety the reports that bear upon your activities for the past two years. Of course, anything two years old these days is ancient history. But in this matter there seems to have been a consistent and determined continuity. It is about these matters that I am writing you today.

You will, I feel sure, take my words in the same friendly spirit in which they are written and intended. I confess my fondness for your great people. It was my privilege to have as classmates some of your noble sons. Surely their character and conduct reflected nothing but your glory. They were clean, intelligent and noble. One especially, I recall, who was most eager to catch the spirit of America. When buying a suit of clothes he would ask, "Is this suit truly American?" At all this I smiled with becoming pride and appreciation. For you know that we think Uncle Sam is somewhat. And I have always taken pride in the fact that your people have been called the "Yankees of the East."

Then, too, I have known missionaries who have gone from our shores to you to aid you in the larger life of your great people. We have tried to send our best, feeling that only such could fittingly represent us and measure up to the quality has been taking place in your country in recent months. I confess my deep anxiety. I am shocked. So secure has my confidence been that I have given little heed to what the jingoes have been saying. No doubt you have some people, just as we have, who seem to take delight in fomenting strife between nations in order to coin the blood and carnage of the brave into gold to glut their own greed. But I do not regard these as patriots, and I do not regard them so in your country. As you know, these war-minded citizens can see no glory except that symbolized by the gleam of bayonets and the brutal bristle of military power. They are a liability to both our countries.

And I understand about your need of room for your expanding population. That is a real problem. And I know about your irritation at the slow-moving Chinese, and the miserable divisions that curse them and make international relations so difficult. However, you would be foolish, it seems to me, to underrate a people who have maintained a civilization so long, but have come into the family of modern nations belated and at much disadvantage which she has not yet been able to correct. You have not forgotten what Napoleon said about the "sleeping giant." All of us might keep it in mind.

And, of course, the reports that I have been receiving recently may not have been altogether fair to you. I can see how Lord Lytton's commission might have overlooked some things that were important. And, too, without any pride I say it, you may have taken a little too seriously some of the things that my Uncle Sam did in days gone by. You know he is not perfect, and is far from sainthood, but he has come a good way.

Pardon my timidity and hesitancy in arriving at the point of this letter. But it is all to say that I think you are about to make the colossal blunder of your great history, and that you are preparing for an anti-climax to your development. I must put it thus bluntly. Otherwise you will think me a time-serving diplomat. I am pleading the cause of no nation as such. I am pleading for our world community just now beginning to take shape. And, as a friend, I frankly confess that I do not see how it can be built without you, but that I see how you can jeopardize its prospects and seriously delay its coming. It is a situation that cannot be handled with soft words, a disease that cannot be cured with pink tea. As a friend, I warn you.

I call your attention to the fact that you had much to do with the making of the League of Nations, that first great attempt of nations, sobered by the gigantic losses of the World War, to build a better world. We take pride in the League, feel-

Our three Conferences, by unanimous vote, extended the time of the "Save the Advocate Campaign" to February 1 in order that all charges might have the opportunity to secure their quotas. That period has expired, and you have read the results in the Advocate.

By unanimous vote these same Conferences authorized March 15-May 15 as the circulation period, during which time our people are to give determined attention to extending the circulation of the Advocate. That period is upon us. Are we ready?

Through your Publishing Committee and by Conference action we have been authorized to carry on. This we have done, relying upon you to carry out your part of the contract. With the proper effort we should encounter little difficulty in securing a paid-up subscription list that will insure continued operation.

We want to keep all our old friends and secure a long list of new ones.

Remember the time: March 15-May 15.

of your people. And I feel that what Bishop W. R. Lambuth, Dr. J. C. C. Newton and others did in your land has further bound us together. Furthermore, in times of some of your major disasters, our people have come to your assistance. Thus our destinies have been bound together by strong cords.

And we know about your great Kagawa and his heroic Kingdom of God Movement. I regard him as, in the fullest sense, a modern apostle.

And you need not be told that I have had little patience with the ever recurring hint that my country must have war with yours some day. In fact, I have counted on you to stand with my country and some others as the knightly guardians of the peace of the world.

All this, with the friendly relations we have enjoyed so long, makes it all the more difficult for me to understand what

WILL THE PEOPLE LEGALIZE THE BREWERIES, DISTILLERIES AND SALOONS?

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., Chairman, and Dr. Eugene L. Crawford Secretary of the Board of Temperance and Social Service of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, issued the following statement:

"Shall the brand of the criminal be removed from the liquor traffic? Shall the country return to exactly the same condition as existed before the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment, including the legalized saloon? Congress has submitted this question to be determined by conventions elected by the people of the forty-eight States.

"There was little doubt as to the action of Congress after the lawless law-makers of the House of Representatives and of two great committees of the Senate violated their oaths of office to support and maintain the Constitution, by deliberately voting to legalize the intoxicating, and therefore unconstitutional, beer.

"Now the responsibility has been laid squarely on the conventions to be determined entirely apart from everything else. Do the people desire to legalize again breweries, distilleries and saloons?

"The wet rebellion against the Eighteenth Amendment was inaugurated at San Francisco in 1920 by Tammany leaders, Alfred Emmanuel Smith and Burke Cockran, and Smith, backed by certain powerful groups has been the blatant, unscrupulous foe of prohibition, and was the leader of the wet forces in 1924, 1928 and 1932. He, himself a bigoted Roman Catholic, in the last campaign denounced Methodists and other advocates of prohibition as an 'aggregation of bigots,' and then deliberately and openly appealed to Roman Catholics to vote so as to rid the country of prohibition.

"Through three conventions, 1920, 1924 and 1928, Southern Democrats defeated Smith's wet planks, but in 1932 their jaws locked by political expediency, they sat in the Chicago convention like dumb driven cattle. Now that we are faced with this tremendous responsibility, will our Southern people, to say nothing of the rest of the nation, permit Tammany Hall and other groups led by Smith to bring back conditions which existed before 1920? Do they want the legalized liquor traffic to dominate once more the political life of the nation? Will they forget how seriously liquor disturbed our race relations in the South?

"The provision to protect dry States is worthless. Once the manufacture and sale of intoxicants are legalized anywhere in the nation it will be impossible effectively to protect dry territory or prevent the return of the saloon.

"Our people must face the facts. Do they desire the principles advocated by Smith and the group he represents, or the principles advocated by the Federal Council of Churches, by other great church conferences, assemblies and conventions, and organizations like the W. C. T. U. and Anti-Saloon League of America to dominate the political, economic, social and moral life of the nation?

"This is one of the greatest battles in the great warfare with alcohol, the age-long enemy of our race. We must go into this battle with banners flying; no surrender, no retreat; no compromise.

"We can defeat ratification in at least one-half of the States. But if we do, we must organize thoroughly, give the people the facts, make the issue clear, then deliver the dry vote at the polls. Thus and thus only can we suppress the wet rebellion inaugurated and led by Alfred Emmanuel Smith.

"WE CAN, WE MUST, WE WILL."

LOOK OUT FOR THAT GOLD BRICK!

By Georgia Robertson

If we heed the slogan of The Better Business Bureau, "Before you invest investigate," we shall not take that gold brick being forced upon us. Before election it was declared worth two billion dollars, now only one and a half or two million! Investigation proves it is a gold brick and a deadly boomerang!

"Beer is the poor man's drink," and to get even two hundred million in beer revenue would take from pockets of wage-earners about five times that amount—one billion dollars—leaving them and their families that much less for food, clothing, shelter, and other necessities and comforts. Also earning power and hence buying power of drinking workmen would be further decreased.

According to a statement of S. W. Luitwieler in the Contributor's Column of the "Boston Evening Transcript," founded on figures from the Census Office, "It takes 484 men in ordinary industry to produce as much as 100 men produce in the brewing industry." Loss to other industries of one billion dollars spent for beer would throw many laborers out of jobs while taking on slightly more than one-fifth that number in the beer industry. So the return of beer would increase unemployment!

Diverting one billion dollars from productive industry to beer would retard business recovery.

Furthermore, an appalling amount in taxes and private charity goes for medical, nursing, and hospital care for the poor, and drink would increase their number. Wet physicians admit "Alcohol is a poison," and there is much of it even in 3.2 point beer in the quantity ordinarily drunk, and it slowly but surely poisons the body and injures health.

• The National Tuberculosis Society stated, "Alcohol opens the door for tuberculosis," the disease that until our intensive campaign against it carried off more victims than any other disease. Money spent for beer instead of food results in under-nourishment, malnutrition, sickness and disease among the members of the family.

Beer of low alcoholic content will not be revenue producing; if high it will be intoxicating—as will also a large amount of beer of low alcoholic content. What matters it to you what per cent of alcohol is declared non-intoxicating if one who is easily susceptible—the amount varies with different persons—is just enough affected so he cannot stop his car instantly, resulting in the death of you or your child?

It will be easier for bootleggers to avoid detection with beer legalized than under prohibition, and brewers have already asked to be protected if beer comes back. They tremble at the thought of what the racketeers will do.

The wets are now silent about the return of the saloon; they know it will return with legalized beer.

Underneath all of this cry for the return of beer and repeal the real underlying motive is greed. It is the brewers, liquor interests, and those holding stock in these interests who are clamoring for the return of beer and for repeal, and some millionaires who want to shift taxes to the shoulders of the working people, and also want to pave the way for the return of high-powered legalized intoxicants for themselves, also some foreign-born, the smart set, and those who ape them.

Shall we rob millions of our children of food, clothes, health and happiness to enrich brewers, liquor dealers, and millionaires? Will our church people stand idly by and see our children robbed, and the souls and bodies of our people sold for an illusive liquor revenue? Are we as a nation willing to fall so low? It is unthinkable! If we do, shall we not hear the voice of God saying, "Thy brother's blood crieth unto Me from the ground."

THAT LAYMEN'S INQUIRY

By Rev. Carroll Varner

It is rather surprising to note that the editor of one of our Conference Advocates should have suggested that the report of the "Laymen's Inquiry" into foreign missions now published in book form under the title, "Rethinking Missions," might be profitably used in mission study courses and Adult Bible classes. For my own part, the fewer of our people of the rank and file that read it will be the better. Not that it is not finely written and adroitly conceived, but rather because it is so splendidly and brilliantly written as that the average person is liable to be misled into believing that all of its conclusions are sound and safe. As the editor of the Missionary Review of the World puts it, "the truth is that comparatively few clergy or church members are well enough acquainted with real facts of missions to enable them to form a discriminating judgment on the subjects under discussion."

To begin with, how can this little group of men and women, who are specialists in other lines and far removed from the various mission fields in their life and work, presume to tell the various Mission Boards and missionaries how to carry on their work when they themselves made only a flying visit to a few of the mission fields of the world? It appears to me as just another one of the many instances of which we have had so many in recent years of "experts" and "specialists" appearing suddenly on the scene and telling the preachers and the churches what's wrong and how they ought to do it! What a happy day it will be for preachers and their individual churches when they are free from such interferences and are allowed to carry on according to their best judgment after much prayer and meditation. We are in great peril of ignoring the Holy Spirit altogether and turning to purely human sources for guidance.

Again, one is shocked at the high-handed way in which this "Report" disparages the work and personnel of the missionaries themselves. It condemns the greater number of them as unduly weak and of limited outlook and capacity! This sounds more like it might have come from rabid anti-missionary agitators than from Christians who profess themselves to be great friends of missions. As Dr. Robert E. Speer says in his most convincing reply to this Commissioner, "thousands of homes which have sent out their own children, and the churches and colleges and universities which have sent out their best young people, and who know them well, have been deeply aggrieved at the sum total of the Commissioner's judgment," and, continuing further, "we who know our missionaries one by one and over periods not of six weeks or three months, but ten, twenty, forty years, are not willing to have them discredited all over the world, as they have been, by this Report." And do we not all feel the same way about it? Judging by the young men and women whom I have known personally in college and seminary and those missionaries whom I have come to know during their furloughs in the home land I have had the very highest regard for the intelligence and character of those who have gone to the mission fields. And, indeed, it has come to be almost a common remark that it seems that our missionaries are the choicest men and women amongst us. One has only to run over in his mind the names of some of the missionaries in the various fields of our own Church, not to mention those of other denominations, to be reminded anew of the very high type of men and women who have been the ambassadors of the Cross to these distant lands. Moreover, we know of no board or organization of any kind more discriminating in its selection of its representatives than are the Mission Boards; nor could one hardly expect a stricter check-up on its workers than the strict watch kept by these Boards over the missionaries.

But, finally, the chief battle-ground in this Report is its theological contentions. Of all the amazing statements made by this Commissioner none is more shocking than that concerning the theological basis upon which all mission work should rest. It does not recognize the Christian religion as the final religion, but rather as a sort of earnest search along with the other religions of the world for a final religion. Therefore, it seems to suggest that the only proper method of mission work is that our missionaries should approach the followers of the other religions of the world, as if theirs was almost if not altogether as good as our own, and then join hands in a search for a final religion; or else attain it by a sort of melting-pot process in which each will put in the best from his own Faith!

Such an attitude as this is enough to cause every evangelical church in America to rise up in loud and earnest protest against this much-talked-of Report. And, indeed, it has almost come to that among the Christian Churches abroad; as there is grave concern, so I understand, among the English and Continental Churches, over the publication of this Report. It is to be feared that it will most surely upset the faith of some who are not too well grounded, and occasion much questioning among others. If ours is not a final religion, why would we not be just about as well off if we embraced Islam, or Hinduism, or Judaism, or some of the other religions of the world! Our Lord himself settled that question for us when He declared: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, I am the door of the sheep. All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers." And, as some one pointed out, all the other Faiths were here before Jesus came, excepting Islam. No, we hold unwaveringly to the glorious conviction that ours is the final Faith; that there is nothing beyond, that Christ is not only the Word, but the last Word. If our missionaries do not hold to this view, then why send them out as missionaries of the Christian religion; they might just as well go out under the auspices of some humanitarian or philanthropic or social organization!

Surely our people will not take "Rethinking Missions" seriously, but for fear lest they should our religious leaders, and Mission Boards in particular, should hasten to warn them of its mixture of good and evil. All honor to that stalwart defender of the Faith, Robert E. Speer, for his masterly and unanswerable reply to this report of that Laymen's Commission in the December issue of the Missionary Review of the World. It would be like a new day for the Church in this land if every preacher should read and re-read that great defense. It is not surprising that the particular Mission Board of which he is the general secretary has been the recipient of so many large bequests of money from time to time. I dare say his own personality and marvelous devotion to Christ has been the chief cause.

SOCIAL PROBLEMS AT MILLSAPS

(At its mid-year meeting, held in Jackson, Miss., Feb. 7, 1933, the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College requested publication of the following extract from the Report of President D. M. Key, the problems at issue being of interest not only to the college, but to the Church which fosters it.—J. R. Countiss, Assistant Secretary.)

The morale, studiousness, and conduct of students have been excellent with the exception of one or two serious problems which have confronted the faculty. First, there is an intense social life in the city, as in many other Mississippi communities that absorbs the interests of young people of high school and college age. Dances and card parties are frequent and widely attended. Our local students and their college friends are drawn into this social life with results that are very damaging to our college work with them in many ways. These social activities are fostered by alumni organizations of fraternities and sororities and also by some of the leading people of our own churches and of other churches. We have required that our fraternities and sororities abstain from participation as organizations in such dances and card parties and formally they have complied. But students attend them very generally, and the newspapers publicize the gatherings as college affairs. We have now requested of each of our fraternities and sororities that they ask their alumni chapters to abstain from giving dances and card parties in Jackson during our school session. If such co-operation cannot be secured, and if types of social life more consonant with our aims as a church college cannot be fostered by the fraternities and sororities, I shall be ready to recommend to you the abolition of these organizations at Millsaps.

I am aware that such a step would not solve the problem of social dissipation among our students. The high pressure social life of our times will go on. Perhaps with no contact or influence upon it through fraternities we should have even greater difficulties.

The college has not neglected the effort to combat these influences by cultivating social and intellectual life on the campus. There are so many organizations in the college community itself of combined social, intellectual and religious nature that no student needs to go outside of them for his diversions. There are debating clubs, dramatic and literary societies, five or six musical organizations, all kinds of athletics, science clubs, study clubs. And the students are so generally concerned with these interests that even the college organizations are to some a distraction from class room studies. Our churches and other churches successfully appeal for the interest and activity of very many of our students. Many of them, participants in church affairs are the same young people who are drawn into the dances and other frivolities of the society sets. Many of these young people also, with their teeming interests in a variety of things, are the very same ones who achieve brilliantly in the work of the class room and have helped to establish the reputation of Millsaps for sound and thorough scholarship. I want the Board to understand the aims, purposes and difficulties of the faculty in dealing with these academic policies.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

Rev. W. R. Lott, Contributing Editor

If every member of the church would take the time each morning for a week to read the twenty-sixth psalm there would sweep over our church a wave of re-consecration. To read that Psalm brings to our hearts all that is good and true. In there we stand before our God and talk to Him of our lives and of His wonderful works. We see clearer our duty to all that is about us. The mists are driven away. The church becomes a living spiritual house for the soul's nourishment and the ways of sinners seem so terrible and unattractive. The picture is of one standing with eyes up and beaming face looking unto God and pledging himself to be a stronger, better, truer life. All around are blessings more than can be numbered. Go read it for your soul's health.

There is a word which I have written on the opening page of many of my note books. The word is "Dependability." It is written there for no eyes other than my own. It is to remind me daily that some one is depending implicitly upon me. There is no worthier virtue. All of us are guilty of being unreliable at times, yet that should not keep us from trying to attain the goal. Just to know that when a task is given it will be performed is reassuring indeed. We all know people in whom we have no confidence in their words or their dependability to take care of a task when it is assigned them. The steward, Sunday school teacher, choir singer, who develops the virtue of being dependable becomes an asset to the church which no one can measure. It is worth more than talents or gifts. Give me a dependable worker in the Kingdom and you may have all the unreliable talented persons.

Along with the revival which we are all praying for at this time there should come renewed emphasis on systematic giving. During the period of inflation many churches lost that very much needed cultivation. I doubt very much the spiritual value of a collecting steward going into a store and securing money from a disgruntled member for the preacher whom the member has not heard preach in six months or more, or out to a home where the people do not love the church and have no real interest in it. That is the best we can do in many cases, but there is a far better way. The task of training our people to bring their money to the church as an offering unto God is something worth our time. It can be done in more places than we think. Instead of the money question being a deadening effect it becomes a ministry. Many of our people really enjoy giving to the church and they had rather bring it and receive the joy which is due them. No man breathes all the air he needs for the year nor drinks all the water at one time. It is not the best for a person to give all he is going to give at once. It does not cultivate his spirit of liberality. Regular systematic giving is the best. Give as God prospers and then giving becomes a living act and fruitful of all the virtues promised in the Word.

The "Art of Pastoral Visiting" has been a subject often discussed in religious journals. In medical training a course is given on the use of personality for the benefit of the patient. In our courses for young preachers we have books and lectures on the pastoral art and ministry. Yet so many of our young men are not seminary men and at the beginning they have no training for this delicate work. When conference is over and they have their appointments they are plunged immediately into the work. Their first duties are to the homes of their people. The sick and needy are on every hand. This first year is the most important of their lives. During that year not only do they develop the type of sermonizing they will use for life, but they take a liking for or against pastoral visiting. There is no work among men which takes more talent, tact, nervous energy and spiritual resources, than consistent devoted pastoral visiting. Back of it is love for the average person. A man must have that sixth sense to know when to go and when to leave; what to say and what to lead to; how to show love and not be patronizing; how to keep people from being afraid of him when they have been negligent. There should be no conflict between a good pastor and a good sermon builder. In fact pastoral visiting should keep the preacher's heart warm to make his sermons living messages.

A THOUGHT ON RELIGION

By Frank E. Henning

An inquiry into the laws which God has prescribed to the human mind, to organized bodies, and to inanimate matter, lead at every step to a new display of his power, wisdom and goodness. But men who pursue it without any aim or desire to apply it to its highest use, that of heightening their reverence for the Great Creator by a nearer acquaintance with his glorious attributes, only become lost in the contemplation of second causes, and though they may admit the instance, learn to deny the superintending care of the First Cause. Others seek refuge in unbelief, as many of the Jews did in the days of Christ, who loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil and would not come to the light lest their deeds should be reproved.

There are many persons who from various causes advance only part of the way on the road to infidelity, and stop short at different stages of doubt and distrust.

Concerning unbelievers and doubters of every class one observation may almost universally be made with truth; that they are little acquainted with the nature of the Christian religion, and still less with the evidence by which truth is supported.

The question then which remains to be answered is this: are there leading circumstances attending Christianity, circumstances generally admitted, and resting on independent proofs, which seems scarcely capable of being accounted for on any other supposition but on that of truth, and consequently furnish so strong a presumption of its being divine revelation as to render those who doubt, or deny it, not merely imprudent but criminal, if they do not seriously inquire into evidence? When all these circumstances are considered, and they are such in general, unbelievers are ready to admit, it seems nearly impossible not to come to the following conclusion: that a religion of such an origin, and morally driving at such objects, a religion thus destitute of all worldly means of credit and support, thus provoking and experiencing every kind of worldly opposition, could scarcely ever have obtained belief and acceptance of its pretensions, had it not been founded on irresistible truth. Consequently its establishment under these circumstances affords so very strong a presumption that it is true, as to render every competent judge to whom it is known, and who doubts or disbelieves Christianity guilty in the sight of God if he does not carefully examine into the specific evidence by which that religion is supported.

PREACHER'S AND LAYMAN'S MEETING, BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT

The Southern part of the Brookhaven District had its first "Group Meeting" for the year, January 29, at Meadville, Miss. The meeting was well attended, and a helpful program was given.

Dr. R. T. Henry led the devotional. The theme for the meeting was "Christ and the Coming Kingdom." "The World Today" was discussed by Rev. C. W. Wesley; "Christ and the Ministry of Missions" by Rev. S. H. Watkins, and "Christ and the Ministry of Teaching," by Hon. R. E. Bennett.

At the eleven o'clock hour Mr. R. T. Henry spoke concerning the work in China.

In the afternoon Rev. E. L. Ledbetter spoke on "Christ and the Ministry of Healing." Dr. C. W. Crisler, presiding elder, closed the day's program with a message concerning the work of the district. Rev. C. W. Wesley, chairman, announced that the next meeting would be held at Bogue Chitto, March 28.

The ladies of the Meadville Methodist Church served a very delightful lunch in the parsonage. The dinner served a two-fold purpose, in that it was the wedding anniversary dinner of their pastor and his faithful wife, Rev. and Mrs. J. O. Ware. Brother Ware seems to be in good favor with his people.

ing that it is a product of American idealism, regardless of the indefensible attitude Uncle Sam has taken toward it. Until we have taken a different attitude toward international relations I shall feel that we have fallen far short of the noble ideals of our great war-time chief, Woodrow Wilson. That this concord of nations might come into being he died just as any loyal soldier of the Great War died. (I know that this is a delicate family matter, but I am trying to be frank with you.)

You helped to make the rules of the great international game, and you were willing to abide by them for some years. Now, because the League refuses to endorse your plans and approve your conduct toward a sister nation, you wish to change the rules or bolt the game. It is not sportsmanlike. It is puerile. You get mad, throw down your marbles, pull your cap over your eyes and walk off home. Why, you ought to realize that what you did in making the League of Nations was your way of trying to save yourself in just such a crisis as this. Better consider what you are about.

Furthermore, I call your attention to something even more recent than the League of Nations. And it is even more important. Not a great many months ago, you, along with a host of nations, under the inspiration of a great ideal, set your seal and signature to the following age-making pledge:

"The High Contracting Parties solemnly declare in the names of their respective peoples that they condemn recourse to war for the solution of international controversies, and renounce it as an instrument of national policy in their relations with one another.

"The High Contracting Parties agree that the settlement or solution of all disputes or conflicts of whatever nature or of whatever origin they may be, which may arise among them, shall never be sought except by pacific means."

Have you forgotten that? You threaten to withdraw from the League. This will take two years. This should give you time to sober up. But you cannot withdraw from the Kellogg Pact that way. Had you thought of that? I have a copy of that immortal document here before me. Your name is there. You cannot scratch it out.

And don't begin to imagine that there is a particular kind of Oriental international ethics by which you may break away and abandon your international responsibility and violate your sacred word. The ethics of international relations are not matters of geography, or continental boundaries, or national ambitions. The day for such is past. Our international health is in your keeping and the future of the world is in your care.

If you insist on your ruthless drive into China, you are not only going to forfeit the moral respect and confidence of the nations, even though you should annex the whole of China; even though your armies should come marching home with victory perched on every rippling banner, and triumph ringing in every bugle note; you are going to lose your own soul. This you cannot balance with all of your achievements however great they may be.

You must remember, Japan, that this making of the brotherhood of nations is a long, slow and painful process. Surely you will not for yourself destroy this tiny offspring, born of the travail of time. Surely you will not say of growing Peace and International Goodwill, "Let them be crucified. Let their blood be upon us and our children."

I beg of you to listen to your Kagawa and others of your great men who love you more than their own lives. Do not close your ears to that noble minority which speaks for your nobler future.

It is from a world calamity that I would save you.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Is anything going on in your city, town, village, neighborhood, church?

Rev. J. Tillery Lewis, Hazelhurst, Miss., is reported as cheerful and hopeful. Have you written him a card? Try it.

We are happy to receive the renewal of Mrs. J. M. Morse, Jackson, Miss. She is a long-time reader of the Advocate and keeps very close to its interests.

Rev. C. K. Smith, pastor at Crowley, La., has been delivering a series of sermons to his people. Subjects last Sunday were, "The Open Door," and "Sacrifices."

I'll tell you things are beginning to happen around in this little old world of ours. Are you keeping your eye on Japan, the League of Nations, Hitler, Uncle Sam, and a few others?

From "Jerrianna Farm," Route 3, Hammond, La., comes a letter from Mr. E. S. Upton. He says he receives cheer, inspiration and information from week to week from the pages of the Advocate.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McGarr, of Algiers, La., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Iris Nevada, to Mr. John A. Hoefflin. Miss McGarr is New Orleans District Secretary of the Young People's Division.

The bulletin from First Church, Greenwood, Miss., Rev. E. H. Cunningham, pastor, indicates a growing church life. Recently on "New Members' Day" eleven were received into the membership of the church.

Be on the lookout for a word from Wesley which our good friend, Rev. W. A. Betts, recently dug up and brought out for airing. It is the great Wesley's word about liquor. Dr. Betts lives at Bamburg, S. C.

A good, healthy list of subscriptions has just been received from Rev. C. W. Wesley, pastor at Summit, Miss., accompanied by this word, "I am trying to sell the Advocate to my folk, and shall continue to keep it before them."

Let the Editor ask your patient indulgence if obituaries and other material do not appear in our columns as early as you would like. We have just been "swamped" the last few weeks. What we need is a bigger Advocate.

Dr. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Ruston District, reports that his work, regardless of the bad weather and some other hindering causes, is getting under way encouragingly. He and Mrs. Doss are happily located in their new home.

"Judging from the kindnesses extended by the people, this is certainly one of the choicest congregations to be found anywhere." That is the way Rev. B. H. Andrews, pastor at Ponchatoula, La., writes about his people. His church work is moving on nicely.

We hear good news from the charge of Barlow, Miss., and its good pastor, Rev. A. S. Byrd. But lest an unbalanced impression get out, it is reported also that he has a most excellent wife and a wonderful people. Who couldn't be a great pastor with all that?

Dr. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, and never failing friend of the Advocate, says: "I have been stressing the importance of the circulation of the Advocate over this district, and I hope we may get results. The work has started well in the Hattiesburg District."

Rev. T. R. Holt, at Leakesville, Miss., has a good heart in him. Says he, "You are giving us a good paper, and I am going to do my best to put it in more of our Methodist homes." His best is all that we ask. He enclosed a clipping on "Holding Out on God." Look for it some of these times.

"The New Vigilantes of America," under the leadership of Captain Edgar Page Gaston, hope to keep Washington, D. C., sober for the presidential inauguration. We trust that the effort may be successful and that Mr. Roosevelt and his official family may be received in a manner creditable to our great nation.

We want to know Rev. Carroll Varner, pastor of Union Avenue, Memphis, Tenn., a little better. He sends us an article on "The Laymen's Inquiry," asking that it be published if it passes our censorship. He encloses a check, saying that he knows that it will be acceptable. We hope to publish the article with some editorial word.

Epworth Church, New Orleans, where Rev. Martin Hebert is the pastor, is "hitting on all four." Congregation, Missionary Society, Sunday School and Young People's Division, have sent in their quotas to "Save the Advocate." We are grateful to this good pastor and congregation. We heard from the Board of Stewards through Mr. O. G. Dunn.

Bulletins from First Church, Brookhaven, Miss., Rev. Osmond S. Lewis, pastor, indicate that the church is well organized in all of its departments, well manned, and in condition to carry out a large and effective program. The names found on the Board of Stewards and officers and committees in other departments are enough to give great encouragement to a pastor.

Rev. W. W. Cammack, an honored superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, writing from Fayette, Miss., says: "I am now entering my eightieth birthday. I have been a reader of the Advocate ever since I learned how to read. I cannot live much longer, but I hope the Advocate will continue to live and be a blessing to future generations, as it has been to me."

Rev. B. L. Sutherland, presiding elder of the Jackson District, has a notion that the Advocate ought to be read by the people of that great district. "I hear expressions of appreciation of you and the paper all over the district. I am asking them to put their appreciation into something more tangible than words," he says. That means that words are going to blossom into deeds.

The fight is on. Rev. C. T. Floyd, pastor at Amory, Miss., and Rev. G. H. Boyles, pastor at Houston, Miss., are trying to see which can have the "biggest and best" prayer meeting. Boyles admits that Floyd's is quite unusual, but dares to claim that his is still better. Boyles has a membership of 332. His prayer meeting attendance is 156. Well, we are for both of them.

When you want a plow-point sharpened you take it to a blacksmith. When the organ of your church needs attention you cannot conveniently take it anywhere, but you can call or write T. J. Williams, 405-A Bouny Street, New Orleans, whose ad appeared at the bottom of page 5 last week. Mr. Williams is a Methodist steward, and knows what to do for your organ. We know him.

It is reported in some sections that a preacher will play golf with his Elder all through the year, but that, near Conference time, he never allows himself to beat him. Perhaps Dr. C. W. Crisler, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, does not play golf. Rev. Osmond S. Lewis, pastor at Brookhaven, is reported as attending some of his quarterly conferences with him. And he speaks most highly of Dr. Crisler's eldership.

Now just where are we going to come out? Mr. Roosevelt, it is reported, has appointed a woman on his Cabinet. Can you beat it? Seems that records and precedents mean nothing much to him. We welcome Frances Perkins as Secretary of Labor. In private life she is Mrs. Paul C. Wilson. Now you ladies come on. Take a big interest in government and let's steady Uncle Sam's goings during this new administration.

We are indebted to Dr. E. G. Mohler, pastor of our church at Drew, Miss., for a valuable suggestion. He has found that "Broadcaster," a very timely temperance paper, published at Marissa, Ill., a most valuable assistant in the cause of temperance education. He has secured copies for distribution to his congregation. A copy came to us, and we are prepared to commend the paper and this use of it. Better write to the company and ask about it.

Mrs. M. E. Owen, our neighbor up the I. C. here at Osyka, Miss., renews her subscription, saying that she enjoys all of the Advocate.

Miss Jessie Vickers, who is in her senior year at the Mississippi State Teachers College, Hattiesburg, Miss., and daughter of Rev. D. E. Vickers, our faithful pastor at Pachuta, Miss., underwent a double operation at the Methodist Hospital, Hattiesburg, Miss., on the twenty-second day of February. The prayers of the readers of the Advocate are much desired for her.

Rev. Jas. W. Rogers, who asks that his Advocate be directed to 205 West Gladys Avenue, Tampa, Fla., after speaking a good word for the Advocate, writes warmly of his connection with the brethren of this section, especially of the North Mississippi Conference, where he formerly served as pastor. He mentions the names of Drs. W. L. Duren and Marion S. Monk with much appreciation. Brother Rogers is a brother of our good pastor at Carrollton Avenue, New Orleans, Dr. B. F. Rogers.

It interests us very much to get mail from away off like New York. We have had a good letter from Mr. A. F. Godat, 36-06 Thirty-first avenue, Long Island. He reads the "New York Times," we observe from a clipping he sent. But he speaks a great, warm word for the Advocate, daring to say, "You are making a very fine paper despite the handicaps."

In connection with the phenomenal attendance at the Men's Bible Class of Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, where all records for attendance were smashed last Sunday, we are told that the whole church, inspired by this record, is going out after a fuller attendance at the worship hours. Is there anything a great Men's Bible Class might not do? Mr. W. H. Black, cashier of the Federal Reserve Bank, is the teacher; J. R. Rogillo, president; V. R. Patterson, vice president; R. B. Bradley, secretary, and E. Neuwirth, treasurer.

Rev. R. E. Smith, D.D., one of our Contributing Editors of the Louisiana Conference, Professor of Bible at Centenary College and teacher of the great Foursquare Bible Class of First Church, Shreveport, threatens us with a series of articles under the title, "Subconscious Says." One appeared last week. By all means read them. Having known and been rather intimately associated with him for a large part of twenty-five years, we can assure you that when Dr. Smith speaks it will pay you well to listen, and that when he writes you are fortunate in having a chance to read it. Out of a life of mature scholarship and consecration he brings us words of wisdom and life.

STATE-WIDE PROHIBITION MEET

At the late session of the Louisiana Conference the following resolution was adopted:

"That this Conference request the Bishop and Presiding Elders to call a meeting of the Prohibition organizations and friends of Prohibition to meet at some central place at the earliest convenient date after January 1 to map out a program of action for our State."

We are informed that this meeting has been called for March 28 in the city of Alexandria. Among the speakers for the occasion will be Judge H. H. White, of Alexandria, and Dr. M. E. Dodd, pastor of First Church, Shreveport.

Let the friends of Prohibition arrange to make the most of this date.

SEASHORE DISTRICT GROUP MEETING

The Pastors-Laymen Group meeting of the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, held its first meeting at Coalville church February 21. Beginning at 10 a.m., with Rev. W. H. Lewis, vice-president, in charge, in the absence of Rev. L. J. Power, president, the following program was carried out:

Business session.

"Basis of the Missionary Appeal," W. H. Lewis.

"Relation of Missions to the Home Church," J. L. Neill.

Missionary Address, R. T. Henry.

Devotional—Dr. Shearer.

Address—R. T. Henry.

Announcements and adjournment.

During the business session it was decided that four meetings of the group will be held during the Conference year and others subject to the call of the presiding elder.

The following pastors were present: G. P. McKeown, J. L. Neill, W. H. Lewis, C. H. Gunn, J. C. Jackson, pastor-host, G. E. Allan, E. J. Coker, Roy Wolfe, Otto Porter and E. P. Simpson, with Dr. L. J. Power arriving later. Besides laymen and laywomen from the district, the following visitors were welcomed: Dr. Shearer, of the Central Texas Conference, and Dr. R. T. Henry, of the China Conference, who brought the principal address of the day.

A splendid meal of fine quality and proportions was served on the grounds by the splendid people of the Coalville charge, with Rev. J. C. Jackson the very effective pastor-host.

R. L. WALTON, Secretary.

BISHOP HOYT M. DOBBS COMING TO NEW ORLEANS

On Sunday evening, March 12, at 7:45, Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, will speak to the Methodists of New Orleans in their annual meeting of the New Orleans Methodist Church Extension Society.

This anniversary meeting brings together our people throughout the city, each pastor adjourning his service for the evening and participating in the meeting.

Bishop Dobbs, who is greatly appreciated by the Methodists of the Crescent City, is also scheduled to preach at the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church at the morning hour of the same day.

WESLEY AND LIQUID FIRE

"We may not sell anything which tends to impair health. Such is, eminently, all that Liquid Fire, commonly called Drams of Spirituous Liquors. It is true, these may have a place in medicine; they may be of use in some bodily disorders, although there would rarely be any occasion for them, were it not for the unskillfulness of the practitioner. Therefore, such as prepare and sell only for this use, may keep their conscience clear. But all who sell them in the common way, to any that will pay, are poisoners in general. They murder his Majesty's subjects by wholesale, neither does their eye pity or spare. They drive them to hell like sheep. And what is their gain? Is it not the blood of these men? Who, then, would envy their estates and sumptuous palaces? A curse is in the midst of them. The curse of God cleaves to the stones, the timber, the furniture of them! The curse of God is in their garden, their walks, their groves; a fire that burns to the uttermost hell! Blood, blood, is there! The foundation, the floor, the walls, the roof, are stained with blood! And canst thou hope, thou man of blood, though thou art clothed in scarlet and fine linen, and farest sumptuously every day, canst thou hope to descend down thy fields of blood to the third generation? Not so, for there is a God in heaven, therefore thy name shall be rooted out, like as those whom thou hast destroyed body and soul. Thy memorial shall perish with thee."—J. Wesley.

I DO THANK YOU AND WILL THANK YOU

I do thank those who responded to my former notice in the Advocate about your Group Insurance, and sent in the remittance due, but will thank those who did not respond to the other notice, to respond to this one and send it in by next mail; this was due on February 10th, and is payable in advance. It will save time and expense if each one will respond to the notice in the Advocate; then I will not have to spend postage to send a personal notice. Please let me have your remittance.

DEMOCRACY'S CHIEF ENEMY SET BACK NINE POINTS

Encouraging educational statistics have recently been made public by the U. S. Census Bureau. Due to compulsory education, adult and immigrant education and constant agitation, the illiteracy rate has been reduced from 13.3 per cent in 1890, to 4.3 per cent in 1930.

The Census Bureau defines an illiterate to be any person over ten years of age who is unable to read or write in any language. In 1930, the report shows that there were 4,283,753. A significant disclosure is the comparatively small number of illiterates under twenty-one years of age. Below that age there were only 420,538, while over that age there were 3,863,215. The highest percentage, that is, 9.7 per cent, were over sixty-five years of age.

The number of illiterate females was less than the number of illiterate males. Due to poorer school facilities in the rural sections, where the native American stock lives, it is revealed that these children are less literate than the children of immigrants who reside in urban sections, where the school facilities are much better.

Though there is reason to feel encouraged for the nine-point decrease in illiteracy during the past forty years, it should be remembered that the United States is still tenth place among the civilized nations in literacy. Furthermore, that literacy as defined by the Census Bureau is not intelligence. It is but the primary step in obtaining enlightenment. Democracy's greatest hope lies in the path of universal enlightenment. Only by the creation of a Department of Education with a Secretary in the President's Cabinet can this hope be realized. Such a department will keep before the school authorities the latest and best experience in education; the latest and best physical equipment for our schools at the least cost, and in the press and by radio the ideals of education will be constantly emphasized.—Scottish Rite News Bureau.

ECONOMY IN GOVERNMENT

The movement for a radical reduction in the cost of government in the interest of the overburdened taxpayers will be opposed by six classes of people:

1. Those who are holding political jobs.
2. Those who are seeking political jobs.
3. The families and other dependents of those who hold or expect to hold political jobs.
4. Those who expect to profit by governmental appropriations.
5. Politicians who pay off their political obligations with political patronage and governmental appropriations.
6. Superficial reformers who do not understand that the enormous cost of government is shifted to the millions of poor consumers and is not paid by the rich and by big business.

Every intelligent, informed, patriotic American citizen will give his unqualified support to the great movement to reduce radically the cost of government, and thereby lift the unnecessary, unwarranted and inexcusable burden that the poor man is forced to carry in order that twenty millions of people may draw their living from governmental jobs.—Southern Agriculturist.

CAPUDINE--Liquid

TRY THIS!

When children won't eat—and won't gain weight—

The youngster who has no appetite, probably has stasis. A little syrup of figs will soon correct this condition—then watch the child eat—and gain!

Mothers should never coax a child to eat. Nature knows best. Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite—get rid of stasis. Children who don't eat are sluggish. Read what the "California treatment" is doing for sluggish, listless children in every part of the country!

A POUND A WEEK. Your child will eat well from the day and hour you conquer sluggishness. But that girl or boy with furry tongue and a bad breath should not be dosed with salts!

Begin tonight, with enough pure syrup of figs to cleanse the colon thoroughly. Less tomorrow, then every other day, or twice a week, until the appetite, digestion, weight, complexion, tell you the stasis is gone. When a cold or other ailment has again clogged the system, syrup of figs will soon set things to right.

When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a bilious yellow, California syrup of figs will gently stimulate the colon muscles—and the child you used to coax to eat will fairly devour his food.

The claims made for California Syrup of Figs are true and it will do the same for you—IF you get genuine CALIFORNIA Syrup of Figs. Don't accept any substitute.

the preachers of the district but three were present. There were 27 churches represented. There were three visitors.

The ladies of the Long Beach church were like the Executive Secretary; when they saw the cold, windy day, they feared there would be few out. They had a lunch that was a real delight and all present bragged on it and enjoyed it.

Long Beach has a good plan for real aggressive work, and from all indications they are using it better and better as time moves on.

Brother Porter has a group of preachers backing him all the way and there are every indication of a good year. We trust that the plans made at this Institute will make a distinct contribution to the ongoing of the work in the district.

The next day, Thursday, February 9, was a continuation of cold and wind. The sun was out, making the day look more pleasant. 55 persons met us at Petal for our Institute. Nine of the pastors were present, and 9 churches were represented. The workers in serving dinner were in the basement and were not counted in this number.

The three district directors were present and presented a most wonderful and worth-while program. Their messages were received well and the response was all that one could ask.

The dinner served by Petal was a joy to the hearts of all. I found a real sure-enough "hoe cake" hidden away. I fished it out and tried to hide it again so I could finish it without help, but as soon as it was discovered it melted. All that was lacking for a perfect dinner, from my point of view, was turnip greens. From the looks of the plates when helped and when the plates were turned back, cold weather has nothing to do with one's appetite.

I heard from many gracious reports of the work of the new presiding elder, Brother Leggett. We are trusting that this will be a forward-going year for the Hattiesburg district.

Plans were made for the district directors to go forward with their work throughout the district.

Somehow we must reach more churches and get them interested in the Home and Foreign missionary enterprise. Most of our churches know this project by the name of the fourth Sunday offerings. The future of your Board depends upon two things—the observance of Sunday School Day and the Fourth Sunday collections. This month the offerings are practically half what they were this month last year.

Bad weather, short collections, other interests, have about rooted this cause entirely out. I am appealing to every friend of the Board of Christian Education to be interested in this most worthy cause.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

It was my pleasure to be with Rev. Roy A. Grisham, of the Sardis circuit, recently, and to assist him in the organization of a Sunday school at Cold Springs. This school has run intermittently for years, but there seemed to be a determination to make it a permanent school. Brother Grisham is doing splendid work as district director of the young people's work of the Sardis-Grenada district.

Rev. E. M. Sharp, of the Rienzi circuit, is beginning a fine year's work there. It was a pleasure to visit in the home of the fine young people. Brother Sharp is working with the presiding elder, Brother J. M. Bradley, in the educational work of the district. Some very definite plans have been worked out to be announced later.

The people of the Amory church believe in prayer meeting as well as every other activity of the church. It was my pleasure to be present for the prayer meeting service last Wednesday. The attendance was not so high that night as on previous nights, but 75 were there. This is the largest prayer meeting that I have heard of in the Conference. Every phase of the church work is being looked after by Brother Floyd and the good people of Amory. It was one of the few churches to pay its budget in full last year, and its leaders are determined to do so this year. The Sunday school had an average attendance last year of over 350, the largest of any school in the Conference.

I visited the church at Oxford last Sunday and preached for the pastor, Brother W. H. Mounger, at both hours. There is a fine spirit in this great old church. The Sunday school is growing. I was present and spoke to the young people at the evening hour. They have a splendid organization there. Recently, at the prayer meeting hour, a group of the people began the study of the book, "The Bible, Its Origin and Growth," by Harrell, led by Dr. A. W. Milden, of the University. There is a fine interest in this work, and the meetings are being largely attended. The workers of Oxford are looking forward and making every plan for a great training school the first week of March.

Every Young People's organization in the local churches should prepare for and observe Young People's Day, March 26. This is a fine opportunity to present the work of the young people to the church. This was formerly called Epworth League Anniversary. The offering taken at this service goes to support the young people's work: 75 per cent of it in our Conference and the balance in the General Board. Watch the Epworth Highroad for helps and suggestions.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Young People's Day—March 26

Yes, you are going to hear about this every week from now until every church in Louisiana Conference has observed the day! In the plans made at the Conference Council meeting, it was suggested that unions present the pageant, "World Builders," at their February or early March meeting. We know of one union (there may be more) whose president reports that they are planning to follow this suggestion by presenting the play at the March meeting which is held on the first Sunday. This is the Elizabeth Langford Union of Baton Rouge district, and Lydel Sims, president, also reports that Council has planned their Union programs for a quarter in advance. Splendid!

Summer Assemblies

The program committee for the Christian Adventure Assembly met last week, and you are going to be thrilled with the things they will have to tell you in a few weeks. We hope you are definitely planning to have delegates at this Assembly—June 13-19, as well as at the Young People's Assembly—June 20-26.

Training

The training program of our church is a flexible one, and includes features which can be used by every church group, regardless of size. We hope that every church will avail itself of the opportunities offered for training its young people. If impossible to have a union institute or training conference, there is still the possibility of a Christian Culture Class, put on by the young people of any local church. For further information, write:

Kentucky Man Tells Why He Prefers Black-Draught

"I have tried other medicines, but haven't found any of them that has given me the satisfaction that I have found in taking Black-Draught," writes Mr. W. N. Futrell, of Hickory, Ky. "About three years ago, I began suffering from constipation that made me feel dull, tired and worn-out. I did not feel like I could keep going. I tried remedies but not anything that gave me the satisfaction that Black-Draught has given, and I have laid them all aside for Black-Draught. I am truly glad to recommend it to others, for it is a good medicine for constipation."

CONFERENCE NEWS

Mississippi

To the Members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Ladies: A new source of income can be secured to obtain the money we urgently need for the continuance of our Wesley House programs, and the money can be so simply and easily made that no Methodist should fail to give us whole-hearted co-operation.

The plan by which this income can be secured is simplicity itself. It is proposed, first, that each member of this organization shall make a thorough test of the improved high quality of the pure cane sugar put out by the Henderson Sugar Refinery of New Orleans—granulated, light brown, old fashioned brown, XXXX Powdered—

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

Mothers, Mix This at Home for a Bad Cough

Saves $2. So Easy! No Cooking!

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough. It's no trouble to mix, and costs but a trifle, yet it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water for a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, put it into a pint bottle, and fill up with your sugar syrup. The pint thus made costs no more than a small bottle of ready-made medicine, yet it is the most effective remedy that money can buy. Keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It soothes and heals the inflamed membranes, loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and clears the air passages. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep.

Pinex is a compound of Norway Pine, in concentrated form, famous as a healing agent for severe coughs. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Night Coughs

Nothing stops a night cough as quickly as Piso's. For Piso's does the needed things. Swallowed slowly it clings to the throat, soothes inflamed tissues, and loosens the mucus. Working internally Piso's destroys the cold germs and breaks up infection. Contains no opiates. Safe for children. 35¢ and 60¢ sizes, all druggists.

PISO'S For Coughs and Colds which she will be able to obtain at the same price as other well-known brands—and convince herself by actual use that she can conscientiously recommend Henderson sugar to her friends. Then, assured of its quality, it is proposed that each member of this Society shall urge as many of her close friends and relatives as she possibly can to use Henderson sugar, telling them that they will not only be getting an extra-good product at the same price, but that they will also be doing your Society a real favor.

In carrying out this simple plan you will find retail grocers generally perfectly willing to obtain a stock of Henderson sugar if they do not happen to have it already in stock, and to co-operate with you in every way they can, if you ask them to do so.

The Henderson Refinery has a number of sales representatives throughout south Mississippi who will be continuously active in the sale of Henderson sugar to wholesalers, and so help you to reap the full benefit of the demand for Henderson sugar that you create.

Terms of payment based on the volume of business done by the Henderson Refinery in south Mississippi Conference territory and which will produce several hundred dollars a month revenue for us to use in paying off our debt and carrying on our Wesley House work if you individually do your part, have been worked out to the satisfaction of your Conference officers; and a report of results secured will be made to you each month.

This money is very urgently needed and must be raised in some way, so we ask and urge you to co-operate with us in the successful carrying out of this plan and to advise us at once of your willingness to do so.

Jackson, Miss., Feb. 8, 1933.

My Dear Auxiliary President:

With the close of 1932 our grand total of Octagon coupons was $18,000, with December showing a shipment worth $1200.

Would it not be fine if every month in 1933 could be made to equal that of December, 1932? How easily it could be done if every Methodist woman could get that "little loyalty" in her heart which would drive her to buy nothing in cleaning products but Octagon.

We have the same contract with the Colgate Company as formerly, except that we do not get quite as much for our coupons. We get 40c per hundred instead of 50c as formerly; $4 per thousand instead of $5. This represents a 20 per cent reduction to us, whereas all their products have reduced in prices 50 per cent and more.

We are asking if every auxiliary president and Circle leader will pledge, first of all, to use nothing in her own home but Octagon Products; then, will she ask her members to join her in this? This alone would show wonderful results. Too, we keep a strict account of the amount of money given by each member; may we keep as strict account of the amount of coupons turned in by each for, in this, coupons are cash, and we should wish each record to speak for itself. May we ask that these be turned in every month, not holding them back. With the observance of these little requests we will be getting the movement on a more systematic basis. I know one woman who has gone out and pledged fifty families to the use of Octagon Products and every month this woman collects from these fifty families. If each of us could pledge five other families, how that would mount!

In Jackson, all school cafeterias use Octagon Powder in their dishwashing machines and give us the coupons. All of the larger State Institutions are using Octagon in some form at our request. There is much along this line that every auxiliary can do. Nothing is better than Octagon Powder for scrubbing the concrete of filling stations, and the country is spotted with these.

The moving picture of the Orphanage has been given to us by the Colgate Company. If you wish it to come to your church, write us and some one will bring it. Electric lights and a night engagement is all that is necessary—no expense whatever to you. Let us remember we are saving the Orphanage in this, the year of 1933. That is what this means. With heartfelt thanks from the children for what you have already done, and looking forward to still better results, I am,

Yours,
(MRS.) ALMA G. RILEY.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. MARY ROBERT HOLLADAY, daughter of the late Col. Robert McKelvin and Mary Elizabeth Naylor, was born at Oak Grove, in Kemper county, Miss., January 3, 1863, and passed from this life December 30, 1932. In 1887, she was married to Dr. W. W. Holladay, of Oak Grove. Her last illness was of short duration, her death occurring while she and Dr. Holladay were spending the holidays in their Meridian home. When a little girl, Mrs. Holladay professed her faith in Christ and united with the Methodist church, where she remained a loyal and consistent member as long as she lived. Surviving her, besides her husband, are two sons, Drs. W. R. (Continued on Last Page.)

How Doctors Treat Colds and Coughs

Medical writers agree that the important point in the treatment of a cold, or cough due to a cold, is to relieve the congestion in the nose and throat, thereby preventing serious complications which may follow a neglected cold. To stop this congestion calomel was the accepted and standard remedy until Calotabs, the improved calomel compound tablet was introduced.

Now that science has robbed calomel of its nausea and danger, making it pleasant to take and perfectly safe for general use, over forty million Calotabs are consumed in the U. S. yearly with only the most pleasant and satisfactory results. In millions of homes Calotabs have proven their superiority in the prompt relief of colds and coughs due to colds.

One or two Calotabs at bed-time with a glass of sweet milk or water. No salts necessary. No nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning the congestion has subsided, your cold or cough is relieved, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish—no danger.

Get a family package of Calotabs, containing full directions, only thirty-five cents. Trial size, ten cents. At any drug store. (adv.)

A COLD PASSES THRU 3 STAGES

And It is Far Easier Relieved in the First than in the Second or Third Stages!

A COLD ordinarily progresses through three stages: The Dry Stage, the first 24 hours; the Watery Secretion Stage, from 1 to 3 days; and the Mucous Secretion Stage. Once a cold gets beyond the first stage it is far more difficult to relieve.

Fourfold Effect for Immediate Relief

The wise thing to do when you feel a cold coming on is to take Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine stops a cold quickly because it does the four necessary things. It opens the bowels. It kills the cold germs and fever in the system. It relieves the headache and grippy feeling. It tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack. That is the treatment you want—complete, thorough and effective. Anything less is toying with a cold.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is absolutely safe to take. It contains no narcotics and produces no bad after-effects. Every drug store in America sells Grove's born June 10, 1894, being a member of a family of twenty-two children, her father having been married twice. She was one of the children by the last marriage. Through the providence of God she passed from this life into the life beyond on December 23, 1932.

Both of her parents died when she was a mere child and she made her home with a maternal aunt, Mrs. H. P. Hopper. When but a child she joined the M. E. Church, South, and from that time forth she grew in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. She never testified to having backslidden, but always lived that consistent Christian life. The writer of this obituary never knew a finer Christian character anywhere than was to be found in this splendid young woman. Her constant aim and prayer seemed to be, "I would be like Jesus." When her mother lay on her deathbed she called her entire family to her bedside and bade them good-bye, saying that she saw Jesus and her babies in Heaven. Miss Bessie never forgot that, and she always said she wanted to live so she could be with Jesus and her loved ones.

Her vocation in life was teaching in the public schools. At the time of her death she was a member of the faculty of the Bay Springs, Miss., elementary school. She gave her talents in the work in the public school during the week and the church school on Sunday. The children loved her, and all who knew her loved her because of her sweet and beautiful life. She is gone from the community, the church, and the home, but her sweet influence still lingers and will be a blessing to those whom she knew and loved.

On December 25, 1932, at 11 o'clock, the funeral services were held in the Saucier Methodist church, conducted by the writer. The large number attending the funeral services spoke of the esteem with which this saint of God was held. Interment followed in the Saucier cemetery. Gone but not forgotten.

Her pastor,
ROY WOLFE.

ROBERT TAYLOR GIBSON passed from this life December 19, 1932; he was born February 4, 1911. Joined the Methodist church at Newton, Miss.; he was the son of Rev. R. M. and Clara C. Gibson; he leaves a mother, two sisters, and two brothers, his father having preceded him to the grave about seven months. Robert was a likable boy, made friends with young and old. During his sickness of several months he was so patient, never complaining; his prayer was to get well, but was willing for the Lord's will and not his be done. After his father's death and during his months of suffering, he was drawn closer to his Saviour, and promised to be a shining light for Jesus. During his sickness, he continued to read the Christian Advocate. It seemed he was just getting ready to live, and was thinking more of the higher things of life when the call came to him. Again we are reminded, "In the midst of life we are in death." May God's richest blessings abide upon the devoted mother, sisters and brothers.

CHURCH, DITCH, AND ROOF

By Rev. R. T. Hollingsworth

One of the most interesting things in the world to me is a church. I love everything about a church. All churches need roofs. Some churches need ditches. Our church here at Brooksville is one of the most beautiful churches for a small community that I have ever seen. Beautiful—but it needed a roof that would not leak—that's the chief purpose of a roof. Beautiful, but it needed a ditch, because the furnace cellar contained seven feet of water. That much water is not good for a furnace. Beautiful church, but a debt. I do not like debt. I do not even like people who owe debts and can pay them and won't. I despise debt. I hate debt. But I love to help pay honorable debts. The debt on our church is honest and honorable. The Lord help us to pay it.

Our church has a ditch now. The way we got that ditch is interesting. I can't tell about it. It would make this article too long at both ends, but if you will visit us we will show it to you and tell you about it. It drains the cellar all right—that was the purpose for which it was cut. It took 125 days to dig that ditch. It's all paid for and the cellar is dry.

We have a roof on the church now that does not leak. It is paid for, too, and we believe we are going to pay the church debt; but we are not going to neglect everything else to do it and thereby transfer the mortgage to our own souls—thanks to Bishop Kern, in the last issue of the Christian Advocate. So, Mr. Editor, we will get around to you by and by. We like our paper. After all, isn't it lots of fun to live, dig ditches, cover churches and try to pay debts? I like the job.

THIS WOMAN LOST 35 LBS. OF FAT

Miss M. Katner of Brooklyn, N. Y. writes: "Have used Kruschen for the past 4 months and have not only lost 35 pounds but feel so much better in every way. Even for people who don't care to reduce, Kruschen is wonderful to keep the system healthy. I being a nurse should know for I've tried so many things but only Kruschen answered all purposes." (May 12, 1932).

To lose fat SAFELY and HARMLESSLY, take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—don't miss a morning—a bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle—but don't take chances—be sure it's Kruschen—your health comes first—get it at any drugstore in America. If not joyfully satisfied after the first bottle—money back.

A new feeling for men past fifty

If you've let yourself grow systematically old, here is a way to stimulate yourself without the slightest harm, and, in fact, with effects beneficial to the entire body.

This method of stimulating a sluggish system to new life is a doctor's discovery, so no one need hesitate to try it or believe in it. It is a sane, sensible way to keep keenly alive.

The only medicine you take is a most likeable and remarkable syrup made with fresh herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. The benefits are many, and far-reaching. Its immediate effect on the lower bowel gets rid of lingering poisons better than a powerful laxative. In fact, you will need no other laxative if you take an occasional spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

If you regard yourself in fairly good health now, you might still find after a week or two of this gentle stimulation that you were only in a state of half-health before. It makes an amazing difference in the way one feels, especially at an age when one inclines toward auto-intoxication. (Daily headaches, failing appetite and tiring too easily are apt to be symptoms of a toxic condition.)

Women, too, get decided benefit from a few weeks' regulation with this simple prescription that can be had at all times at any drugstore. Mothers give this same syrup to children, and raise their families without a day's worry over chronic constipation, or even the sluggishness so common in childhood. The bowels move like clockwork.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is perfectly safe for anyone of any age.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

HAIL TO THE CHIEF! Last Saturday, amid the acclaim of a nation of one hundred and twenty million people, Franklin D. Roosevelt laid his hand upon the open pages of a Bible which has been in the family for 287 years, and upon which he has twice taken the oath as governor of New York, and took the oath of President of the United States of America. The chapter was I Cor. 13.

A number of interesting circumstances combine to make the occasion one of the most arresting in the history of our republic. Mr. Roosevelt was elected by such an overwhelming majority that it is calculated to fill the President with awe rather than hilarity. He has just escaped an assassin's bullet. Mayor Cermak, who received the bullet intended for him is dead. Senator Walsh, slated for the Attorney-Generalship, has passed on. On the day of the inauguration the banks of forty states close. This throws about his life a cloud of solemnity and providence.

In the world at large conditions could hardly be more critical. War debts, international relations, the far eastern situation, with other matters combine to make the situation tense with possibilities of a direful sort. 15,000,000 men in our own land are out of work and one-third of the families of the nation are affected by unemployment. Hovering like a spectre of gloom over the whole scene is this ever-present and well-nigh universal economic depression. It is difficult to imagine a moment of more critical importance to the world, at home and abroad, as the present.

Mr. Roosevelt faces a task in comparison with which Washington's was child's play. And it is easy for us now to stand back and watch him change the whole situation over night into what we feel that we need. And many of us are ready, upon any failure or delay, to abandon him to this colossal and impossible task for any human being living.

President Roosevelt deserves our fullest support and it is imperative that he have it. What he is to accomplish depends very largely upon the patience and co-operation with which the citizenship of the country unites with him at this time.

THE SPIRIT OF MR. ROOSEVELT commends him most highly to our country and to the world. So hearty has been his attitude that those always ready to criticize harshly have been disposed to say that he does not take the situation seriously enough, and that he is disposed to make a picnic of a most critical period. They say he betrays an ignorance of the tragic possibilities involved.

It is difficult for us to combine soberness with a smile. If a situation is serious one is supposed to "look serious." But surely we should know by this time that the serious look and the "poker face," add nothing of encouragement to the situation and is rather slow to rally enthusiastic support. Mr. Roosevelt's smiling face is winning confidence. Surely he must be aware of the seriousness of the problems he faces, but he does not appear to be afraid of them. It is that spirit that we all need just now and in liberal measure.

FLANKING MR. ROOSEVELT is one who promises to be a great Secretary of State, Senator Hull, of Tennessee. We Southerners should be interested in him at once, both because of our sectional pride and because of the quality of the man. His position with reference to prohibition in the Chicago Convention commends him. A part of the time he was almost alone, but he was firm, steady and unafraid.

"This nation henceforth must play its full part in effecting the normal restoration of national economic relationships and in world commercial rehabilitation, from which alone business recovery in satisfactory measure can be hoped for," he is quoted as saying a few days ago before he took office.

Of course this sounds the commercial note quite loudly, but we may depend upon it that Mr. Hull is fully aware that the situation is not wholly economic or that economic conditions can be divorced from the other factors involved in international relations and world recovery.

The statement, "This nation henceforth must play its full part" in international affairs, sounds as if the new Secretary of State proposes to begin where the Wilson administration left off and to carry out the pledges made and implied by that administration. We remember how Wilson gave his full strength to the organization of the League of Nations and became the spokesman for the new and better community of nations. But political reactions at home kept us out of the organization for which, in large measure, he gave his life. We are still out of the World Court.

Each time there is a meeting of an international character our country is embarrassed as it is not a part of the world organization. Uncle Sam has to come in a side door. We "sit in" at the League meetings, but are prohibited from sharing fully in either the plans to be followed or in the responsibility for the conduct of those plans.

We join Mr. Hull in the declaration that "This nation must play its full part."

CAN WE DEPEND UPON THE WOMEN for the "Ideals for the Post-Jazz Age?" Mrs. Walter Ferguson, in the Pittsburgh Press, discusses the matter under the topic: "Wanted: Ideals for the Post-Jazz Age."

This good lady seems to have some misgivings in the matter. She feels certain that the men are bankrupt so far as the task is concerned and that it is useless for us to look in that direction. On the other hand, she fears that the women, by their previous conditions and training, are hardly fitted for the undertaking. She remarks how woman cannot trust her own convictions, having been schooled and steeped in the traditions of "male superiority" so long that she has lost confidence in her own ability to think, plan and execute an enterprise so high and worthy.

Mrs. Ferguson seems fully awake to the need for some ideals for the "post-jazz age." In this we agree. While we are talking so much about a "new deal" for humanity we might use a little of our energy on a study of a "new ideal" for humanity too. Before getting too far in the discussion, since I am not so sure that we have entered the "post-jazz" era yet, I move that the "jazz age" be adjourned sine die.

Now I am not so hopeless about the women as the writer seems to be. Of course there is much about the modern woman that is discouraging. But we should not prematurely indict a whole generation because of the prominent freaks and failures among them. I, to save my soul, cannot stir up much hope for new and better ideals from the woman with a cigarette in her mouth and surrounded, not by a halo, but a smoke-screen from which looks out all that is ugly and unwomanly. But I don't consider such women fairly representative of their sex. Their chief value to us is their convincing exhibit of what women ought not to be.

Furthermore, I am not sure that women, notwithstanding all that inferiority business and the subordinate place they have had, have ever been hookwinked into thinking that man was superior. They may have been forced to admit it but their fingers were crossed. The fact that woman has the ballot today and many other larger liberties and responsibilities indicates clearly that she has been doing some thinking for some little while. Men, convinced of their own superiority, did not go to women and force them to take the ballot and other privileges.

And still furthermore, if woman has been schooled in anything at all, it is for the very thing for which this writer pleads. Men have always been willing for her to assume responsibility for the matters that required ideals. Has she not been the maker of the home? And has she not been the school-teacher for our children? And have not men generally given her wide liberties and responsibilities in the field of the church and religion?

Yes, we are in a new era. We must have new and better standards of value. And the supreme values of our time must be

MISSIONS ARE DOOMED?

Not yet, brethren. Four students at the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass., who intend to work in the mission field, have drawn up the statement here printed.

In our opinion it is quite as significant as the Laymen's Inquiry, and, for the ordinary Christian who is not a philosopher, a good deal more satisfying.

"Having declared to the Department of Missions our intention to serve the church in foreign mission fields, we present, for the prayerful and personal consideration of this school, our convictions:

I. The spirit of Christ is inherently missionary. Recognizing the lack of Christianity in this country, we are convinced that there are other lands equally in need of an opportunity to hear the gospel. There should be no frontier; yet, for lack of pioneers, many remain outside the knowledge and love of God. The gospel is for all men.

II. The church of Christ must be missionary. Static Christianity cannot live. Hand in hand with the emphasis on beauty of fabric, which has engrossed our church of recent years, must go a depth of spirituality manifested in missionary zeal. Our interests and expenditures must include others to an ever increasing degree.

III. Missionary advance stimulates and invigorates domestic advance. Seeds sown in foreign lands have always borne fruit at home. Our present revaluation of Christianity has received a great impetus through contact with, and criticism from the religions which have put on the defensive by Christian missionaries. The Christian message has also been enriched by the thinking and personalities of those who have received the gospel, and have brought it back to us.

IV. The world is in a molten state. Especially is this true of our foreign missionary fields. These agricultural nations are feeling the impact of the industrial revolution. Their slow movement is being quickened by the rise of the rationalistic spirit. Their ancient philosophies are being abandoned for scientific dogma. In one generation they are facing the development of centuries. Now is the time to act. Metal can be molded most easily in the liquid state. Every effort made now is worth two later. Every opportunity lost now is irretrievable. God has brought forth fields white unto harvest.

V. The laborers for communism are many. They are zealous missionaries, working especially in the very lands in which we are carrying on missionary enterprise. They are self-sacrificing, well organized, and intelligent. Their program is forceful and clear-cut. They spare no effort. We are not yet awake to the fundamental opposition between communism and Christianity, which lies not so much in communism's antagonism to religion as in its philosophy of force and hatred. Our generation may see the tide turn in either direction.

VI. The gospel of love must go forth. It must be all things to all men. Any special abilities we have for service can be used to greatest advantage in countries where trained men are rare. The field is open for social service, for medicine, for education, for rural work.

VII. Finally, our church must carry the gospel. We feel that it is pre-eminently fitted to serve the Church Universal. By its episcopal government, it is raised above the purely parochial. It moves as a body, in communion throughout the world, by the life-giving fellowship of the Spirit, externally manifested in the sacraments. In worship, it transcends the intellectual differences of men.

With these convictions before us, we are forced to recognize our own inadequacy. Yet with these same convictions before us, we feel we can do no other than enter upon this work. For we can do all things through Christ who strengthens us. Therefore, asking the prayers of this school, we ask also that others join us in the great work which lies ahead, in the foreign mission field, and sigh ourselves humbly for the service of Jesus Christ our Lord.

EUGENE MARSDEN CHAPMAN ('33) India;
JOHN DEFOREST PETTIS ('33) China;
LESLIE LINDSEY FAIRFIELD ('34) China;
CLIFORD L. SAMUELSON ('35) Japan.

This is an unusual statement, but it does not represent an unusual situation. From many years of experience with missionary candidates, we can certify that it is fairly characteristic of the upper fifty per cent of prospective missionaries.

And that brings us back to what we said about the Laymen's Inquiry. The wonder is not that laymen have found mission work something less than perfect; the wonder is that anybody should thereupon say "missions are doomed!"

Not while such young men as these four are offering themselves, and know so clearly why they do it.

This group is in the Episcopal Church. But every church with a missionary tradition and spirit has them. God be praised!—The Christian Advocate.

THE FAITH THAT KNOWS NO SURRENDER

By Rev. Wm. H. Nelson, D.D.

There is a wonderful verse of Scripture in the book of Hebrews, the 11th chapter and the 35th verse. It reads, "Others were tortured, not accepting their deliverance." Moffatt translates it, "Others were broken on the wheel, refusing to accept release," but Dr. D. A. Hayes, of Garrett, says that the word "tortured" there is from a word which means a heavy club, and the correct translation would be, "They were beaten to death with bludgeons, but under the slow and terrible torture their faith never faltered. They never accepted the deliverance which was offered, and was possible at any stake in that slow, brutal murder; for they were sure they would obtain a better resurrection."

We have in this graphic Scripture here a great truth which many people are grasping for. The problem of suffering is an unsolved problem. We don't like to suffer, and it is natural that we shouldn't like it; but all the same it comes to us in life and no one can study the New Testament without seeing that a life of suffering seemed to go with the profession of Christianity. It was a recognized fact that Christianity and this world didn't mix. This world was no friend to grace. The picture we have here is one of a long line of men who stood out for the truth, who suffered, not because they were sinners, but because they were doing the work of God in the world. If they had been less righteous they wouldn't have suffered at all.

Now, it is easy enough to do something heroic and make a great stand and be snuffed out in a moment. Most folks if they had their choice of the way of dying would want to go out like a light. There isn't much suffering in that because it is over right away. But here is the figure of a man tied up by the arms, which gave Moffatt the notion that the man was on a wheel, and the persecutor has a club, and hits the victim a blow, which possibly bruises him, and then tells him he will let him off if he will only give in. And as soon as the pain of that blow begins to go down he hits him another one. It represents a long drawn-out process of torture, with the victim never out of pain.

This is exactly the sort of thing that many folks are going through, and it is the hardest thing in the world to hear, this day-after-day and hour-after-hour of suffering. Most folks feel that they would do almost anything to get relief, and if relief were offered us, how quickly we would take it. And thus we are enabled to see the real quality of these folks, who could have had relief at any time, but who preferred to be beaten to death with clubs rather than take deliverance at the price of their convictions.—Pacific Advocate.

NOTES AND COMMENT

By Rev. V. C. Curtis, D.D., Contributing Editor

THE COLOR LINE. That the color line is drawn in both North and South, no one can deny. Theories are one thing and practice is another. This does not mean race prejudice is general or race hatred is countenanced by the leading citizens of either North or South. The true representatives of the white race recognize the good elements of the colored race and, instead of having a disposition to retard their progress, it is their purpose to lend any assistance they may in working out their destiny. We know many colored people whose integrity is above reproach and many who are making their marks in the intellectual pursuits. But all this does not mean that it is best for two races which are so different in so many particulars to intermingle in a social way which must inevitably lead to intermarriage. Every true white man condemns any irregularity or miscarriage of justice to our colored brother; but he may not think it wise for the colored brother to visit his daughter or for his son to visit the daughter of a colored man.

But why mention this in "Notes and Comments"? It is because of the attitude of many in the North towards this question who are very critical of the South's attitude towards the race question. We remember the resolution passed by the last session of the General Conference of the M. E. Church (North) in determining not to meet in any city that did not recognize the Negro delegates on the same basis as whites—in other words, entertain them in the same hotels. Recently there has been dedicated a Y. M. C. A. building in Harlem (New York City) for Negroes which has cost one hundred thousand dollars and affords every facility for health and character building. After commenting on the speeches made by different ones at the service of dedication, the Editor of the New York Advocate seems to think that since it was erected for Negroes alone, it should not have been built. He expresses himself as follows: "The building is a monumental evidence of a line of cleavage which could not be disregarded. . . . Others expressed the hope that one of the purposes for which the institution might serve was a 'better cultivation between the races.' Yet, how can such interracial understanding be arrived at, if the opportunities of mutual contact, conversation and exchange of thought are constantly narrowed?" Until conditions have been changed entirely, it is well for both races to work out their social destiny along parallel lines, but we do not think anything is progress, either for the one or the other, which has any tendency towards amalgamation of races. This writer is of the opinion that the churches had as well recognize that and not take positions that will hurt the church and impede the progress of the Negroes.

PICTURES OF LIFE IN A HOSPITAL

By Rev. D. B. Boddie, Chaplain

More than two years ago I was visiting in Ward 6-A in U. S. V. Hospital No. 27, Pineville, La., and met a sick man, whose name I am withholding. This man was converted and later joined the church. He became much interested in the good news that the Bible contains, and he not only was a constant reader, but read it to other patients. He was designated as Ward Missionary, as he kept me posted as to the spiritual needs and also secured customers for Bibles. He would always tell me which person was able to pay and those who could not pay, as the American Bible Society is glad to furnish Bibles free of charge to those who are not able to buy.

A few weeks ago he became worse and kept growing weaker, till a few days ago I had prayer with him and heard him say that he was "ready to go, and good-bye," and that he "loved me." I shall miss him.

A few nights ago I had prepared for bed and was very tired, when my phone rang. It was a call from a nurse in the hospital, asking that I go to the hospital to see a very sick man, who had asked for a Methodist preacher. I went and sat by his bed and held his hand while we prayed. He said, "I am ready to go, but hate to leave my wife and four little children"—a daughter 13, who is the oldest, and three boys. I had a good talk with him and saw him close his eyes and go to sleep. I shall not see him again this side of eternity. I am glad I had this chance to answer the call for a dying man, who wanted a Methodist preacher.

Dr. N. E. Joyner and I had a beautiful service the other day with Rev. J. E. Cunningham, a patient in the hospital, and his wife. We observed the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in his sickroom. Yes, God was near that day.

We have had the foundation material for our little chapel, "St. Luke's By the Road," delivered on the grounds near the hospital and work is started on the building. We do not have the funds for the balance of the material, but have faith that it will be forthcoming. We have purchased for our church a most beautiful lot, with 100 feet frontage on concrete highway No. 71, just one-half mile from the hospital, situated in the center of a new community, which is composed of wives and children and some sick patients themselves. The husbands in most cases are patients in the hospital.

PARK AVENUE, SHREVEPORT, CELEBRATES FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

On Sunday, Feb. 19, Park Avenue Methodist Church celebrated its fifth birthday. It was exactly five years ago that the congregation held its first worship in the new building, and friends of the church as well as its members came together to make it a memorable occasion.

Despite the inclement weather, Rev. R. T. Ware, the pastor, preached to a large congregation at the morning hour. Special numbers were rendered by the choir under the able direction of its leader, Mr. Tom McKenzie, and it was indeed a service befitting the day.

But the zenith was reached at the evening hour. The church was never more beautiful. Mellow lights, the greenery of potted plants on the chancel and low strains of music only enhanced the natural beauty of the large auditorium. Again the robed choir aided in the singing of old hymns and with special anthems. Directly above the piano an electrically lighted cross gleamed, while in front of the altar in branched candelabra burned five tall white tapers. These candles were lighted by L. A. Shirley and C. H. Treadwell. Then, in only the soft glow of the candles and the cross, the thank offering was made. A little child, representing the Sunday School, made the first offering. While the organist played each one went forward and made his contribution, after which the candles were extinguished by Mrs. L. A. Shirley and Mrs. Walter Daniels.

The speaker of the hour, Dr. Angie W. Smith, of First Church, was then introduced by Brother Ware. His sermon, beautiful and inspiring, was on the subject, "Songs in the Night," from Acts 16:25, "And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God." Bringing out the deep value of songs in the face of disappointment and how praises in song have been handed down through the ages, Dr. Smith brought a message of spiritual helpfulness to every one present.

Park Avenue is proud of these five years of achievement and looks forward to many more birthdays like the one just experienced.

BOX FACTORY MISSION

Perhaps you haven't heard of the "jungle" in Hammond, and perhaps if you have, you've only heard that it's a place where the homeless stay.

Maybe that's all the attention you've paid to it. After all, we know that in these times there are thousands of families and individuals, victims of the depression, who wander across the country, looking for part time work, and banding together in makeshift quarters, long ago named "jungles" in the days when only tramps and hoboes were homeless.

Hammond has its own "jungle" in the old box factory. That in itself is not a story. But the fact that those who live here have felt more than hunger for food is a story, and a heart-warming one.

It is the story of some forty wanderers, who live in the old box factory. It is the story of a worn Bible, and a few tattered hymn books. And it's a story of a prayer meeting which will be held there tomorrow night.

Yesterday four of those who live in the old factory, waiting for berry season, came into the Courier office. They were a young couple, a Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miller, and their seven-months-old daughter, Beatrice, who has been christened the "jungle queen," and a Mr. Walter Cook. They wanted a few strips of lumber. Questioning revealed that they wanted to make a few benches, for seats to hold religious services.

"None of us are preachers," Miller said, "but we had a Bible and some hymn books, and last Sunday we held services. We've been practicing singing some since then—we aren't dressed for regular church—and we're going to have services Friday."

Dr. W. U. Holley, of the Federated church is going to conduct the services, he said.

And so, in an old box factory in Hammond, forty wanderers will hear the Word of God. There's that Miller family of five, the Terrell family, of five, six members of the Rodrey family, Mr. Cook and his son, T. J. "Shorty" Nolan, seven young boys who have been staying there, and perhaps as many as fifteen transients who were there earlier this week.

The old box factory is their home. As far as possible they have made it homelike—clean-swept floors, newspaper-covered tables and walls, and a baby. And tomorrow night it will be both home and church.

There's nothing of bitterness and despondency in their conversation. They are waiting for the berry season. They are glad to have visitors. The baby, a blue-eyed, chubby girl, is already the pet of the "jungle" and has presents from wanderers from twenty states.

It is a comforting story, and a reassuring one. "Wherever two or more are gathered together in His name..."—Hammond (La.) Daily Courier.

THE NOBLE DOWER OF A BOOK

It is an old, old truth and as true today as it ever was, and quite as much ignored and neglected: the way you look at life and the attitude you take toward it just about decides everything as to both your happiness and your success in it. If you are unhappy it will not be because you haven't this good thing or have too much of the other thing that isn't so good from your point of view, but because you haven't learned to be something of a philosopher in regard to the things that you haven't. You can live a very happy and a very useful life with only a small minimum of the things that are generally thought of as likely to bring happiness, and you can live a very unhappy and futile life with your lap full of them.

Being philosophical about life means making a sensible and appreciative use of the things you can have and not spending too much thought and anxiety over those that you cannot very easily have. And, after all, the number of things that you can take into your life and find all sorts of happiness and satisfaction in are very many, and the things that are absolutely necessary to happiness and satisfaction that fate will keep away from you are likely to be very few indeed. Every really happy person that has lived ever since the world began has had some great sense of apprecia-

KEEPING THE ADVOCATE SAVED

Our three Conferences, by unanimous vote, extended the time of the "Save the Advocate Campaign" to February 1 in order that all charges might have the opportunity to secure their quotas. That period has expired, and you have read the results in the Advocate.

By unanimous vote these same Conferences authorized March 15-May 15 as the circulation period, during which time our people are to give determined attention to extending the circulation of the Advocate. That period is upon us. Are we ready?

Through your Publishing Committee and by Conference action we have been authorized to carry on. This we have done, relying upon you to carry out your part of the contract. With the proper effort we should encounter little difficulty in securing a paid-up subscription list that will insure continued operation.

We want to keep all our old friends and secure a long list of new ones.

Remember the time: March 15-May 15.

tion for the things that were simple and convenient and easy to lay hold upon, and every unhappy person has let himself get into the habit of asking for the moon and refusing to be satisfied till he got it.

These thoughts came to us while we were meditating upon books and the poor use some people made of their opportunities in regard to them. Books are among the commonplace things of this modern life of ours. Even if you haven't any money, you can still get the reading of books, all kinds of them, and the very best that are to be had in any and every class. And as you will get into the habit of reading them, and will make anything like a reasonably intelligent choice, they will bring enjoyment and satisfaction, the broadening of your vision, the kindling of your imagination and the quickening of your very soul. It is very true, of course, that some people get through life quite comfortably without reading books, but life would be altogether different for them, and they would be quite different people. If they didn't thus slight their great opportunity, and we still insist that life will be very much made or marred, full or empty, according to what one does about books. And we insist on this, too, that no man has any great complaint against life so long as it gives him good books to read.—The New Outlook (Canada).

MORGAN CITY AND THE BOAT

Dear Advocate Readers—

Some weeks ago our good paper mentioned the Morgan City field and its needs. We must not lose sight of this appeal. This is one of our fine fields that has been independent of the Mission Board, and, then, the change came. Industrial failures caused great losses to the people. The work should be supported by the Mission Board. They wish to do so, but their funds failed. The pastor down there is one of the most sacrificing men that we have. Let us as individuals get under the efforts and help the work until it again becomes self-supporting, or until the Board can help out once more. If twenty-five of our Pastoral Charges will send only an average of $2 per month, it will help support the work and also rebuild the boat. Do it now. Sit right down and write the Advocate just what your congregation will do. I served there four years. We must hold that point. Thank you.

Yours fraternally,

C. C. WIER.

the night services, but this one is helping to give the people a real music service at night.

Dr. S. H. Werlein, one of our preachers, formerly of Louisiana, now living in Houston, Texas, was a visitor in the city during the past week. Dr. Werlein is still quite vigorous in mind and fully alive to what is taking place in the world.

The Alexandria district conference meets at First Church, Natchitoches, April 4 and 5. Preaching for the occasion will be ably done by Bishop Dobbs, Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, presiding elder of the Shreveport district, and Rev. G. W. Pomero, pastor at Oakdale.

Our office was favored with a very pleasant visit by Rev. Hugh W. Jamieson, associate pastor of Trinity Church, Los Angeles, Calif. Brother Jamieson, formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, was on a visit to his mother, who lives in New Orleans.

The choir in the Methodist church at Winona, Miss., is recognized by that congregation as being a genuine asset to the work of the church. The preaching services morning and night have this added feature of splendid music. Rev. E. S. Lewis is the pastor at Winona.

Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, presiding elder of the Shreveport district, has been suffering some discomfort from throat trouble recently, but in spite of this he speaks enthusiastically of the work on the district, especially the effort to get the Kingdom Extension message to the people.

Bulletins from First Church, Natchitoches, La., of which Rev. B. C. Taylor is pastor, indicate a wide awake and vigorous pastor and congregation. Among recent sermon topics we notice these: "What's the Use of Being Good?" "Does Religion Pay?" and "Honoring Father and Mother."

The Grenada church recently met its annual installment on the debt on the educational building. The church is to be congratulated that each annual payment has been in hand when it was due. This educational building is one of the very up-to-date buildings in the North Mississippi Conference.

Rev. J. F. Mincy, Corinth, Miss., requests sample copies of the Advocate, desiring to promote its circulation in his section. Brother Mincy is recovering from a recent attack of flu. He reports that he is ready to be used anywhere he may render service, asking only his fare and a place to stay.

Mrs. J. E. Hearn, Standard, La.; E. S. Upton, Hammond, La.; Rev. and Mrs. H. C. Murphy, Campti, La.; Mrs. Sam Gwin, Lexington, Miss.; Mrs. R. O. Grace, Hereford, Ariz.; Mrs. A. E. Wooten, Winona, Miss., and Mrs. W. E. Addison, Provencal, La., have joined the party taking the "Trip to Easter."

A tract entitled, "Repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment," by Dr. M. E. Dodd, pastor of First Baptist Church, Shreveport, La., carries a very strong and timely response to the late challenge of the liquor forces. Copies of same may be had by writing Mr. Jno. S. Ramond, First Baptist Church, Shreveport, La.

Rev. C. K. Smith, our pastor at Crowley, La., should be remembered in our deep sympathy and prayers. In January he lost a brother by sudden death. Mrs. Smith, for some weeks, has been confined to the hospital quite seriously ill. Let us not forget those who are so pressed by sorrow and suffering.

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, who has been ill since Conference, is reported to be well again and "raring to go." Brother Lipscomb has had a very successful ministry in all his charges and now in his new charge, Louisville, Miss., we can expect him to lead that fine congregation to greater heights of service.

Rev. A. Y. Brown, North Mississippi Conference director of Golden Cross, is planning a series of institutes over the Columbus district during the months of March. Rev. R. P. Neblett is the district director. These men plan to go to a number of the charges and simply present the message of the church concerning our hospital cause.

"In a recent lecture, Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, speaking of the Church's responsibility in the matter of world-peace, said: 'It is an issue whereby the Western Church must either stand or fall. If the Western Church cannot arrest the god of nationalism, it will simply follow the churches of Asia.' Something worth listening to, thinking about, and acting upon."

The finances of the first church at Corinth at the close of the first quarter were well up. This is one of the few churches which paid everything in full last year. When you consider that Corinth has had no barks and that the money situation has been acute there for several years it speaks well for the interest of the people. Rev. A. C. McCorkle is the new pastor of that great church.

Our church at Cleveland, Miss., has recently enjoyed the ministry of Dr. John Middleton, a great painter. Having studied under some of the great artists and specialized in Palestinian and Biblical scenes. Dr. Middleton prepared for class study, "The Good Samaritan," "The Flight Into Egypt," "The Magi," "Christ in Gethsemane," "The Sea of Galilee" and "The Return of the Prodigal."

Rev. and Mrs. R. P. Neblett are delighted with the Pickens and Goodman charge. In fact the entire work is progressing under the leadership of the new pastor. At Goodman there is the large junior college. Brother Neblett has talents for working with those young people. Pickens has always been recognized as a live, loyal congregation. The parsonage at Pickens is a "joy forever."

Mrs. A. F. Callaway, Oxford, Miss., writes of her desire to get up a club of Advocate subscribers at her church. We are delighted to hear of this and trust that this club may be raised in a short while. Mrs. Callaway tells of the very profitable course, "The Bible; Its Origin and Growth," conducted by Dr. A. W. Milden, of the State University faculty, meeting every Wednesday evening.

"You will always have my prayers and best wishes," writes Mrs. R. R. Bridges, Route 3, Crystal Springs, Miss., as she renews her subscription.

"We are having a delightful session at Grenada College with a strong faculty and a superior student body. The Trustees plan an aggressive campaign for a full enrollment for the coming session," writes Dr. J. R. Countiss, Dean of Grenada College. Now we like that idea of the trustees taking this hand in the enrollment of the college. It is bound to count strong for the college.

Rev. Carroll Varner, recently transferred from Florida to Union Avenue Church, Memphis, landing there during the extremely cold spell of weather, reports that he has not thawed out yet. Let us hope for warmer weather for him. He is very happy in Union Avenue and writes that the people are responding with large congregations. The prayer meeting is getting well on toward the 200 mark.

Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor, First Church, Brookhaven, Miss., accompanied by Mrs. Lewis, Dr. Geo. F. Wirfield, President of Whitworth College, and Rev. F. L. Applewhite, pastor at Wesson, attended the Christian Education meeting at Jackson. The principal speaker was Dr. W. M. Alexander, from the General Board of Christian Education at Nashville. These meetings are made up chiefly of pastors in our college towns.

Rev. W. C. Newman, pastor at Eupora, Miss., makes use of his varied talents in many ways. Brother Newman can lead a choir, direct boy scout work, athletic events, Young People's camps, and other types of group activities. He is much in demand as preacher for commencement occasions and pastor of churches. He was recently elected president of the Pastor's Association of the Aberdeen district.

Rev. J. R. Muff, pastor at Kilmichael, Miss., now serving his second pastorate in that charge, has been received with genuine appreciation by the people and has set himself to the tasks before him. He is putting on the Kingdom Extension cultivation in all of his churches. Near the Methodist church building at Kilmichael, in connection with the town authorities a city park is being formed for the use of the young people and children of the town.

"An event unique in the annals of the Marks Methodist Church," is the way the local reporter speaks of a barbecue supper at that church. And it does sound a bit unusual, doesn't it? The victims were pigs and chickens with trimmings furnished by Dr. V. D. Franks. Our pastor, the Rev. J. C. Wasson, acted as master of ceremonies. An interesting feature of the evening was a talk by Rev. E. C. Hecksher, pastor of the Lula Baptist Church. Brother Hecksher is a native of Denmark.

Let us all take advantage of the Lenten period for a re-examination of our religious faith. While "re-thinking" has come to have some prominence in church circles in these days why not apply it to our own religious lives? A little thinking and meditation, accompanied by appropriate action, is the best possible preparation for the coming Easter. Quite a number have joined us on the "Trip to Easter." We trust that many others have secured the booklet and will journey with us to the Cross, the Sepulcher and beyond.

Dr. Lawrence L. Cowen, pastor of Central Church, Meridian, Miss., has received forty-one new members into the church since conference, and is now in the midst of a great pre-Easter campaign of personal evangelism. He is enjoying a most fruitful ministry at Central. In addition to these activities Dr. Cowen is leading in a thorough and complete reorganization of his Sunday school. Plans for same have been completed and are calculated to promote a much more effective program of Christian education in that church.

Mr. G. A. Christian, a life-long member of our church and staunch supporter of the Advocate, died Feb. 15 at his home in Grayson, La. He was 86 years of age, and while seated, laughing and talking with his friends on Wednesday, the 15th, he passed away. Brother Christian was not only a soldier of the Confederacy but a faithful champion of the cause of Christ. He is survived by his wife, a daughter, Mrs. May Harper, Pineville, La.; and two sons, Jas. A., Grayson, La., and J. Howard, of Fort Worth, Texas. His body was accompanied to the cemetery by a host of friends. We lower our flag to half-mast in salute, remembering with great appreciation the interest of Brother Christian in the Advocate.

Surely Dr. Samuel W. Irwin, of the Christian Commonwealth Farms, New Llano, La., has been in my office. Sorry I was out. Upon my return I found his tracts if not his tracks. Dr. Irwin recently conducted a meeting for Rev. Philipp Pallotta, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, New Orleans. Dr. Irwin is engaged in a most interesting project. He feels that "It is Christian Co-operation in American life or Communist Atheism" ultimately. What do you think about it?

PULPIT EXCHANGES

Bishop Paul B. Kern, Director of our Benevolent Campaign, has arranged a plan whereby several hundred preachers will exchange pulpits between this date and Easter. Schedules of the suggested changes have been sent out to all pastors and presiding elders.

Bishop Kern requests that cases of adjustment should be settled between the pastors involved themselves, and not referred to his office in Nashville, since the matter is too complicated for all suggested changes to be made by his office.

If, therefore, any pastor cannot open his pulpit, or cannot go to the place assigned to him, he should take the matter up with the pastor, or pastors, involved, and work it out satisfactorily, instead of reporting the fact to Bishop Kern's office and asking the Bishop to make the adjustments.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE PRESIDING ELDERS ACT FOR THE ADVOCATE

At a meeting of the bishop and presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference held in Shreveport on February 14, action was taken pledging co-operation of the presiding elders of Louisiana to whatever plan for promoting the interests of the New Orleans Christian Advocate might be adopted by the Publishing Committee and the management of the paper. Each presiding elder is earnestly desirous of promoting the interests of the Advocate in his district.

W. L. DOSS, JR., Secretary.

MAKE YOUR PLANS NOW TO BE THERE THEN

On Tuesday morning, March 28, at 11 o'clock, in the City Hall of Alexandria, Louisiana, all the friends of Prohibition in Louisiana are invited to meet for the purpose of discussing our duty and responsibility in this hour of crisis. Wise and united effort, with strength and courage, are necessary. The meeting will close promptly at 1 o'clock.

Will all the friends of this great cause take due notice, and govern themselves accordingly?

Let each church, Missionary Society, W. C. T. U., and any other group interested in the cause, see to it that it is represented. By all means the women should be well represented.

CHILDREN'S WORKERS IN NEW ORLEANS CHURCHES ORGANIZE

As results of Training School held at Rayne Memorial, last October, the Children's Divisions of the city decided to form an organization and the workers were led in this movement by Mrs. J. H. Carter and Mrs. R. S. Crichtlow. In spite of a rainy evening more than sixty officers and teachers of the children's divisions of the churches met on Thursday, January 5, at Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church. Mrs. W. W. Holmes, superintendent of the junior department at Rayne Memorial, was asked to preside, and Mrs. Thompson of Carrollton Avenue gave a most inspiring devotional.

The name of the organization is to be decided upon later. The object is for the workers to come together once a month to make plans for programs, exchange ideas, learn new songs, hear appropriate stories, and to prove generally helpful to one another.

Mrs. W. W. Holmes was unanimously elected president. Mrs. George S. Brown, secretary, Miss Mott, librarian, Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Teague, pianists. It was decided that this organization go down in history as one that did not need a treasurer. The meetings will be held at the different churches, the church where meeting is held to provide refreshments and social hour.

The president will appoint necessary committees, and group meetings will be held, each department electing its own officers. Mrs. Lundy will be chairman of the junior group; Mrs. Hayes of the primary group, Mrs. Tomlinson of the beginner group, and Mrs. Cayard of the nursery group.

The fourth Friday night in the month was chosen as date of meeting, and Rayne Memorial will be next hostess, assisted by Louisiana Avenue.

We were honored by having present Dr. W. W. Holmes, pastor of Rayne Memorial; Dr. B. F. Rogers, pastor of Carrollton Avenue, and Mr. J. H. Carter, general superintendent of Carrollton Avenue Church school, and each of these made encouraging and appropriate remarks.

Mrs. Carter and Mrs. Crichtlow, assisted by the Carrollton Avenue Church ladies, served ice cream and cake, and all left feeling that the time had been pleasantly and profitably spent.

MRS. GEO. S. BROWN, Secretary.

COKEBURY SCHOOL AT ATHENS, LA.

During the week beginning February 26, there was held in our church in Athens, Louisiana, an approved Cokesburg school at which twenty credits were issued. The total enrollment in the school was thirty-seven, while the largest attendance any one night was reached on the last night when seventy-five persons were present.

The subjects taught during the school were the Bible Unit on the Life of Christ, taught by Rev. J. H. Bowdon, our pastor at Arcadia, and the unit on The Meaning of the Christian Religion taught by Rev. R. L. Clayton, pastor at Athens.

Every night during the five day school a fine group of young people came up from Gibsland, chartering one of the school busses to make the trip each night. Representatives were present from the Sunday schools of our churches at Gibsland, Athens, Wesley Chapel, and the Baptist and Presbyterian churches in Athens.

Rev. A. K. McLellan, our Executive-Extension Secretary was on hand to give the school a great start off, and in addition preached in our church at Athens on Sunday night. Five pastors were present, and included, in addition to those already mentioned, Rev. A. C. Lawton, Gibsland, and Rev. Mr. Griffin, pastor of the Arcadia Circuit of the Methodist Protestant Church.

A devotional service was conducted each night in addition to the class work, under the direction of Rev. R. L. Clayton, and a period of recreation was held during the class intermissions.

At the close of the school credits were issued by the instructors to members of their classes at the "graduation exercises" after which the young people of Athens served delicious refreshments.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

The Christian Education Institutes were a delight to my heart. We had no little money to advertise them with and had no money to secure extra help. God was with us and in many respects it was as good as any series of Institutes we have ever had. Only a very few of the district workers were out of place and each of them did a good piece of work. The entertainment of these Institutes was all that one could wish. It seemed that each place tried to outdo the other. The spirit of the Institutes was all that could be asked.

All the presiding elders were present and took active part in the program. Plans were made that will advance the work in a great way and I think in a permanent way.

The Brookhaven Institute had the following present: 11 pastors, 3 visitors, 15 churches represented by 65 persons, a total attendance of 80.

The Jackson district figures are as follows: 20 pastors, 8 visitors, 21 churches represented by 64 persons, total attendance 93.

The Vicksburg district had the following: 12 pastors, 7 visitors, 16 churches represented by 53 persons, total attendance of 73.

The total for the Conference as follows: 7 presiding elders, 192 pastors, 29 visitors, 126 churches reached, 459 representatives, total attendance 597.

Work arranged for at the Institutes was as follows: Two hour Institutes to be conducted by the district directors, 54; Cokesbury classes arranged to be taught by volunteer workers, 25; Young People's Unions arranged for, 21. These are divided among the districts as follows:

Brookhaven district: 8 Institutes, 4 Cokesbury classes and 2 Unions. Hattiesburg district, 7 Institutes, 3 Cokesbury classes and 4 Unions. Jackson district, 12 Institutes, 5 Cokesbury classes and 5 Unions. Meridian district: 8 Institutes, 2 Cokesbury classes and 2 Unions. Newton district: 10 Institutes, 4 Cokesbury classes and 2 Unions. Seashore district: 8 Institutes, 4 Cokesbury classes and 3 Unions. Vicksburg district: 5 Institutes, 3 Cokesbury classes and 2 Unions.

There were several churches that had extra large groups at the Institutes, the largest local attendance was at Rose Hill, which was 40.

First Church Brookhaven had 15. Crystal Springs had 18. Court Street Hattiesburg 11. Glendale, Jackson, 11. Waynesboro, 10. First Church Gulfport, 15. Kreole Charge, 12. Pleyune, 11. Noho, 7, which was all the workers at that church but 1. Gloster, 8. In no case is the preacher counted. One or two groups may not have been counted correctly, but an effort was made to do so. Several churches evidently made a sacrifice to have as many persons present as they did.

The Missionary offerings for this month is just a little over half of the amount collected for this month last year. It is not amount we are so intensely interested in so much as it is number of churches that are observing the day and sending in the money. We are trying every way we can to get more and more churches to observe the day. We cannot hope to do for the work what ought to be done if we do not somehow secure the co-operation of a larger number of churches. May we have faith to pray that we may hold the line at least in this important matter.

One great piece of news to me was the number of those who are now getting ready to teach Cokesbury classes in order that they might serve, without money or reward. Most of these have come to me and asked to do it, they have not been solicited. God will carry forward His work.

Pray for the workers and the work.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

A Christian Culture Class was held last week by the Young People's Division of Bossier City, Shreveport district. The course studied was "Prohibition," taught by Mr. A. H. McKinnon, of the Bossier City High School.

Miss Pearl Hattie, Conference secretary, reports that the series of chapel addresses by Dr. Paul Quillian at Centenary College, were unusually fine, and that the effect on the student body was the very best. Dr. Quillian is pastor of St. Luke's Church in Oklahoma City, and presided over the sessions of the Young People's Associate Council of the Educational Council at Nashville in December. He conducted a series of chapel addresses at Centenary, these being his subjects: Tuesday, February 14, "The Changing Attitudes and Conditions in College Life." Wednesday, "What Does it mean To Be a Christian?" Thursday, "Hearing God's Voice." Friday, "What's the Use of Trying to Live Up to the Highest and Best?"

The Anna Pharr Turner Union (Intermediates) of Shreveport met at Cedar Grove, Thursday evening, February 16, with sixty-five present. The meeting was exceptionally good, with a program on "Music in Worship," and much singing afterward. The young people were most enthusiastic.

An announcement of interest to many in Louisiana is the following: "Mr. and Mrs. John W. McGarr announce the marriage of their daughter, Iris Nevada, to Mr. John Albert Hoefflin, Tuesday, January 24, 1933." They are at home at 717 Verret St., New Orleans. Iris has for several years been district secretary—now district director!—of Young People's Work for New Orleans district. Johnny is also very active in the work of the City Union, and of the district. We extend them heartiest congratulations and best wishes for a long and happy life together.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Wooten, of Memphis, Tenn., are being congratulated on the arrival of a daughter, Mary Elizabeth, called Maribeth for short, on January 29. Mrs. Wooten was formerly Miss Rosa Langford, sister of Miss Elizabeth Langford, of Monroe.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DAY

We have most encouraging news concerning the observance of Young People's Day. Several districts report that both unions plan to present the play, and that most churches in the district will observe—either with the play, "World Builders," or with the program in the Epworth Highroad. Mr. Towner writes that for those groups not desiring to present a drama, there is a program in the March Epworth Highroad, page 34, "Modern Youth—His Difficulties and His Call."

We are definitely working toward a one hundred per cent observance which means the program put on by the young people in every local church, either on March 26, or on the nearest Sunday to this date when the pastor can be present. Our congregations need to know what their young people can do, and they need to have a small part in the carrying on of this splendid young people's program. Don't fail to do your part.

Conf. Director of Y. P. Work.

THERE MAY BE POISON IN YOUR BOWELS!

STEP out tomorrow morning with the fresh buoyancy and briskness that comes from a clean intestinal tract. Syrup Pepsin—a doctor's prescription for the bowels—will help you do this. This compound of fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other pure ingredients will clean you out thoroughly—without griping, sickening or discomfort.

Poisons absorbed into the system from souring waste in the bowels, cause that dull, headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that, gently, harmlessly, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you.

Dr. Caldwell studied bowel troubles for forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commend it to everyone. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative drugstore sell.

TO MOTHERS whose children won't EAT

Nature knows best. Never coax a child to eat! Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite. When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a bilious yellow, don't give small children a constipating cathartic that drains the system. California syrup of figs is all the "medicine" they require.

Specialists will tell you that a sluggish appetite almost always means the child has a sluggish colon. Correct this condition called stasis, and see how quickly a listless, drooping boy or girl begins to eat—and gain! The only "medicine" such children seem to need is pure, unadulterated fig syrup.

Children who get syrup of figs, now and then, soon have the appetite and energy of young animals! They keep well and avoid colds and sluggish spells.

Nature never made a finer laxative for children; and they all love the wholesome, fruity flavor of the real California syrup of figs. It's purely vegetable, but every druggist has it all bottled, with directions. Begin with it at once. The very next day, your child will be eating better and feeling better. Keep on with the syrup of figs a few days and see amazing improvement in appetite, color, weight, and spirits.

ARE YOU THE PREACHER?

Dear Editor: I am sending you a letter just received from Sister R. P. Goar, who now lives in California. Brother Goar was a local preacher near me in 1878, when I held the meeting in which Rev. T. W. Lewis, his sister Nannie, and W. E. Lewis were converted. Brother Goar helped me in the meeting and afterward joined the Conference. We were great friends, and he was a great man.

I don't think it will be long before I am ready to publish my book. The "Introduction" will be written by Rev. W. A. Shelton, of Grace Church, Atlanta, Ga. I hope those who are wanting one or more will drop me a card at once, as it will help me greatly.

I got a card from a preacher in Louisiana last week, but have lost it. He will do me a favor to drop me another. The prices will be: one for 50 cents, 5 for $2, $4.50 per dozen.

Yours in Christ,

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 28 yrs. old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and further more I've never had a hungry moment."

Fat folks should take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—it's the SAFE, harmless way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know.

For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at any drug store—the cost for a bottle that lasts 4 weeks is but a trifle and if after the first bottle you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back.

Truly a great mother in Israel has fallen. MRS. CATHERINE ELIZABETH EVANS, born March 11, 1841, passed to her reward November 14, 1932.

In her early girlhood she was gloriously saved and joined the Methodist church and was a loyal member during the many years of her life. In early young womanhood, Miss Catherine Elizabeth Price met young Dr. Alfred Evans, and they were happily married. Moved to the doctor's farm near De Soto, Miss., where they reared their children, 1 daughter and 5 sons, all to be grown. The daughter, Mrs. W. A. McCarty, of Quitman, Miss.; R. S. Evans, also of Quitman, and Alfred Evans, an active worker in the Methodist church in Columbia, are left to mourn her loss. Her devoted husband died some twenty or more years ago. Sister Evans, Aunt Kate, as she was affectionately known, was not only a mother to her own children, but to her grand and great-grandchildren as well.

The writer of this sketch was her pastor four years and always found her door open to her preacher and his family. Her Christian sympathy went out to everyone in her community, and her home cares were never such as to keep her from answering the call from the sick and needy. She was active up to a few months before her death. We know where to find her. A large congregation gathered in her home church, McGowan Chapel, where her pastor, Rev. T. C. Cooper, assisted by the writer, paid glowing tributes to her memory, after which her body was tenderly laid in the grave in the beautiful little cemetery near the church.

LIFE MAY 20, 1932.

Not so many months ago
He left this earth below
To dwell with the Father above,
Where all is love
In Heaven.

He, indeed, suffered much,
But he knew "all is well" such
As the Heavenly Father doeth;
So he kept the faith
Of Heaven.

Such as comes from above—

Dead, no! Not dead.
He lives on in our lives.
May those who knew him strive
To carry on the work he did love,
And to meet him above

IN MEMORIAM, REV. R. M. GIBSON

Rev. Raleigh Melton Gibson, a local preacher in the M. E. Church, South, was born August 19, 1883, departed this life May 30, 1932; was converted and joined the Methodist Church at the age of about 17 years; married Miss Clara Cammack Hagan, November 7, 1907. To this union were born five children; his wife and children survive him. Brother Gibson felt the call to preach early in life. He was licensed to preach in May, 1920, and matriculated in Clark Memorial College; graduated in 1925, and supplied the Trenton charge, Newton district, Mississippi Conference, for three years, 1926-7-8, and the Nebo charge in the Vicksburg district, 1929. Brother Gibson really loved to preach as long as his health would permit. He preached as opportunity offered. He was a real brother, interested in church work to the last. I was associated with him for nearly four years as neighbor and minister. To know him was to love him fervently. Brother Gibson was one of the best men the writer ever knew. He lived the gospel every day; gave of his time and means to the ongoing of the Kingdom. He was happy when he could be thus engaged in the Master's work, calling sinners to Jesus Christ and ministering to others. Ofttimes he would forget his limited strength, overtax himself to complete exhaustion. Shortly before he passed away he was asked if he had anything to say. He answered "I am ready to go." We know where to find him. Sleep on, my brother, the "battle is fought, the victory won." God bless the bereft ones.

J. W. PRICE,
A Brother Minister.

MRS. TULA PATTON CARATHERS passed away on January 4, 1933, following an operation in a Shreveport sanitarium. Interment was in the Lisbon Cemetery. She was 54 years of age, and had been a member of the Lisbon Methodist Church since the early age of ten years, devoting her time and energy to its development, and to that of the Woman's Missionary Society. She held various offices in the latter as corresponding secretary, superintendent of supplies, superintendent of publicity, and zone program leader. She taught a Sunday school class for 25 years. As Miss Tula Patton, she was married to Shelton Mack Carathers, December 10, 1901, by the Rev. Blox Williams. To them were born four children, Shelton Mack, Jr., who died in infancy; John DeWitt, Marguerite and Laura. She is survived by her husband and these three children, her mother, Mrs. T. F. Patton, and two brothers, H. E. and M. S. Patton, besides numerous other relatives throughout Louisiana. Out of our home a loved face has gone, never to light with tenderness and sympathy

GOD CALLED ANOTHER FRIEND

Mr. C. C. BRAND was born October 26, 1866; died, December 5, 1932. He was married to Miss Annie Harriis, August 31, 1893; she preceded him about five years. Mr. Brand was of one of our most prominent families. A family that looked well to the best interest of the community and state. He united with the M. E. Church, South, in early manhood. Mr. Brand had been in failing health for some years. On the evening of December 5, he walked for a little fresh air, and the family was notified of his death, so unexpectedly; he came to the end while on that stroll. Five children and other kin, with a host of friends, mourn his going, but God said weep not as those who have no hope.

The writer had charge of the services.
H. N. McKIBBEN.

MRS. KITTIE SMITH PATTERSON was born December 2, 1839, in Fayetteville, N. C. At the age of six, her parents moved to Mississippi. When a young woman, she was married to Mr. Sanford Patterson; to this union was born one son, Smith Patterson. Both husband and son preceded her some years. She was familiarly known as Aunt Kittie, and Aunt Kittie united with the M. E. Church, South, in early life. She loved her church, and was always loyal and faithful. In her last years she was a constant sufferer, but never lost her patience, nor love for the human family; and to the end she met her friends with an outstretched hand and such happy smile that everyone who came her way became her friend. Our loss marks the going of another of the most outstanding characters of our country. She died December 1, 1932, and was buried December 2, on her 93rd birthday. This writer conducted the services.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

TO ARMS! TO ARMS! Let the bugles of enlightened civic and Christian conscience sound the assembly call throughout the land. And let all the forces of righteousness and the friends of soberness in our national life fall in for a major offensive. The barrage is on and the zero hour is upon us.

The following resolution has been passed by both houses of our national Congress:

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each concurring therein) that the following Article is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by conventions in three-fourths of the several states:

"Section 1. The Eighteenth Article of amendment to the Constitution of the United States is hereby repealed.

"Section 2. The transportation or importation into any state, territory, or possession of the United States for delivery or use therein of intoxicating liquors, in violation of the laws thereof, is hereby prohibited.

"Section 3. This Article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by conventions of the several states, as provided in the Constitution, within seven years from the date of the submission hereof to the states by the Congress."

Once more the people of the country are called upon to act upon prohibition. The people are called upon a second time to speak their convictions regarding the matter. It is time for counsel and clear thinking. It is a time for intelligent, constructive and heroic action.

Let it be remembered that the wets have insisted that prohibition was forced upon the people; that it cannot be enforced; that it is responsible for the crime wave; that the revenue to be derived from the legal sale of liquor is an important item in balancing the nation's budget. And our minds probably are already made up as to the validity of these claims.

Let it be remembered that we are not waging a partisan fight. Our conflict is in behalf of the whole country, and victory will be as great a blessing to the foe as to the friends of prohibition, even though they may not think so. This is a war in which victory for the enemy will be defeat for both sides, and victory for our cause will be a victory for both sides.

Let it be further remembered that it is necessary for us to hold only thirteen states. However, we should not allow this number, because of its smallness, to deceive us or render us overconfident. It will not be enough to secure no more than this. And let it not be forgotten that the battle means far more than retaining the Eighteenth Amendment. It is no smaller task than lifting the scourge of intoxicating liquor from our land. Let it be done once and for all.

Therefore, let our forces forget political and religious differences, and let us close all cleavages in the ranks of those who go forth to battle. Let the leadership be unified and enthusiastic.

Let us incorporate something more in our program and purpose that just prohibition. The negative suggestiveness of prohibition must be displaced by a great positive, comprehensive and constructive objective.

Let us have something more than mere propaganda and shouting of slogans and shibboleths. Let us have a program of information and education. Let us challenge the foe to open combat on the merits of the matter.

Let us remember our obligations to those who have waged the battle thus far, and let us remember those who are to come after us. Let us transmit a saloonless nation and a stainless flag to the rising generation.

Let us thoroughly organize down to the last ward and precinct, and rally all of like mind to the cause that calls us.

And let a deaf ear be turned to all taunts of "politics and religion." And let every obstacle stir us to finer action.

"Lead on, O King Eternal, the day of march has come;
Henceforth in fields of conquest thy tents shall be our home.
Through days of preparation thy grace has made us strong,
And now, O King Eternal, we lift our battle song."

THIS IS NO MARBLE GAME and the players are no longer in short trousers.

It is easy for us to damn with silence or scant praise the defeated, and it is easy for us to draw our contrasts so sharply that there is unfairness at both ends.

The Republican administration has closed and Mr. Hoover, the only living ex-president, has taken his way to the West and to private citizenship. One speaker recently said, "The administration closed unwept, unhonored and unsung."

It is too soon intelligently to appraise the Hoover administration or to assure final and complete triumph of the new administration, but let us take our cues from the chief actors in the drama of state, Messrs. Hoover and Roosevelt.

An ex-candidate for the presidency of the United States yesterday said, "The Hoover Administration, with all its faults, was the least imperialistic of any we have had in some time." While it is true that Mr. Roosevelt broke precedent by conferring with his predecessor before inauguration regarding matters of government, at the same time, it might be remembered that Mr. Hoover, the retiring president, was equally hard on precedent when he invited such a conference.

Perhaps the retiring administration was long on information and short on action. Still we might be reminded that action without dependable information is a gamble with destruction. A volume or two of the information secured by the Hoover administration will be referred to for some weeks yet, perhaps longer. The "Wickersham Report" and "Social Trends" contain material worthy of at least casual perusal.

While some are hinting at the possible critical attitude toward the new administration that might be assumed by Republicans Mr. Hoover commends the new president in the critical matters with which he is dealing at this time, saying, "There is just one thing to do: that is to support the President's proposal." That is brief enough in statement and big enough in meaning to satisfy the most critical.

No, this is no marble game. It is the big game of national destiny. And these two national chiefs are great men.

WE IGNORE AT OUR OWN PERIL the spiritual significance of these days through which we are passing. It is a time for a thoroughgoing re-examination and re-appraisal of standards and values. Do we wish to revamp the world with a few new parts on an antiquated and obsolete and inadequate pattern? Or are we ready to do the more heroic thing of going to the foundation of things and building according to the more daring pattern of a new day? Let us avoid putting new patches on the old cloth and new wine into the old wineskins.

Was there ever such a challenge to the pulpit and such an imperial call to the Church? The times are tense with destiny-making dynamic. Very slowly have we come to realize it.

In what was perhaps the last article of any length or deep seriousness issued by Woodrow Wilson, there was this arresting closing paragraph: "The sum of the whole matter is this, that our civilization cannot survive materially unless it be redeemed spiritually. It can be saved only by becoming permeated with the spirit of Christ and being made free and happy by the practices which spring out of that spirit. Only thus can discontent be driven out and all the shadows lifted from the road ahead." ("The Road Away From Revolution," in the Atlantic Monthly).

But this is not the only time our people have faced a crisis of rather large dimensions. Our own Southland has nothing of which to be ashamed in this particular. It is now time for the sons and grandsons of that noble generation to write a new volume of the same quality as that which

CAN WE AFFORD REPEAL?

A representative group of men and women, including industrialists, educators, leaders of youth movements, clergymen, lawyers, social workers, and other men and women of affairs met at Hadson Hall in Atlantic City on January 5-7 in a two-day Consultation on the Liquor Problem and in individual and unofficial capacity reached the following conclusions:

Guiding Principles

Recent political developments have confused the public mind on the liquor issue, and national legislation is being proposed, which, instead of improving the unsatisfactory situation, is bound to bring chaos into the control and restriction of the liquor traffic. This group unanimously believe that the present system of liquor control must not be abandoned until a constructive substitute acceptable to the large majority of the people has been developed. Whether we should have Prohibition or some other form of control of the liquor traffic is admittedly a controversial question, but there are few persons who do not recognize the growing perils arising from the use of intoxicating beverages in our increasingly mechanized and complicated society.

We are unreservedly committed to one central objective, namely, to reduce progressively the demand for and the consumption of intoxicating liquor. No method of dealing with the liquor problem is worthy of support unless it is designed actually to diminish the demand for and the consumption of intoxicating liquor. We believe that all liquor legislation should be tested by this clear principle. We are open-minded toward any method which would conserve and strengthen values already won and further reduce the consumption of liquor.

We believe that all socially-minded citizens will accept this principle and that they stand ready to appraise proposed legislation by it. We await hopefully any indication from Washington that current legislative proposals accord with this principle. Failure at this point threatens a return of the old evils of the traffic, is against the public interest, and is an affront to the conscience of the nation.

Educational Program

In solving such a question of social conduct as the liquor evil, the limitations of legal enactments are recognized. Laws will be impotent unless they are supported by a spiritual idealism which recognizes that every loyal citizen should make the highest good of the nation as one great family his guiding principle; this idealism must be undergirded by persistent education. We are, therefore, convinced that a progressive program of education grounded in research is indispensable to the achievement of our major objectives. Such a program must be conducted primarily among the successive generations of youth, for only through them can there be developed either a willing obedience to law or an informed public opinion that will bring about a progressive reduction of the demand for intoxicating liquor.

Such a program should appeal to the whole personality—the emotional nature and creative activity as well as intelligence—with presentation of differing points of view and of authentic facts. Moreover, emphasis should be laid on developing and carrying out the entire program by and through the youth-led organizations.

The creating of authoritative books and pamphlets and the production of motion pictures regarding the effect of alcoholic beverages on the individual and on society, and the promotion of the use of such educational materials by educational, social, civic, economic and religious organizations is one of the most important features of the program.

Continuation Committee

In order to conserve the values of this Consultation and to build upon and give full effect to the foregoing findings, the chairman and vice chairman are authorized to appoint a Continuation Committee of approximately fifteen persons who shall report in due time to a second Consultation. Among other things, we desire that they inquire into the educational programs of various organizations and explore the possibilities of effecting closer co-ordination of effort among them.

It is believed that the constructive work of this Committee will afford an authentic lead for thought and action on the part of all agencies, groups and individuals concerned with this national problem.

On Behalf of the Consultation,

John R. Mott, Chairman.

Frank E. Garnett, Vice Chairman.

W. Roy Breg, Executive Secretary.

Henry E. Wilson, Recording Sec'y.

TO OUR PRESIDING ELDERS, PASTORS AND PEOPLE

The Commercial National Bank, one of the largest in Washington, in which the General Board of Temperance and Social Service of our Church has carried its account for many years, without any warning went into the hands of a receiver on February 28. All of the funds of our Board were deposited in this bank. All of the February bills are unpaid. Nothing will be available for the work of the Board for months, and the amount finally paid depositors is uncertain.

The General Conference of 1930 instructed our Board "to accomplish the purpose of its declarations" * * * "to enlist our every power to maintain in full force the Eighteenth Amendment." At no time has there been greater need for the active work of our Board than now. But it is impossible to carry on any form of activity without money.

We appeal to our presiding elders and pastors to take a cash collection for the work of our Board at the earliest possible date, and to send the amount contributed, no matter how small, by postal money order (not check), payable to E. L. Crawford, Treasurer, 50 Bliss Building, Washington, D. C.

Sincerely,

JAMES CANNON, JR., President.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE NOTICE

By Rev. Leon W. Sloan, Supt

The United States Congress, by large majorities in both houses, has proposed an amendment, No. 21, which, if adopted by 36 states, repeals outright the Eighteenth Amendment. The liquor barons, representing the wine growers of Europe, the alien population of our big cities, Tammany Hall, Wall Street, the United States Brewers' Association, and the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment are now "in the saddle" in Washington, and are riding their maddened steed at a terrific pace. Ratification of the proposed Repeal Amendment is now "up to the States" to be voted on in State Conventions, called by Congress or State legislatures.

It is now high time for God-fearing, law-abiding, home-loving, patriotic people to do "something more than merely sing Psalms and join in a chorus of toleration." "It is time to fight or surrender! But surrender is no part of the Christian patriot's desire or duty." "God Almighty expects something more from us than acknowledgment of defeat." Let us show by our present action that "the blood which courses through our veins comes from arteries that never gave birth to defeat." The Stars and Stripes never yet have dipped to the enemies that are now besetting our beloved country. And, with God's help, they never will bow in defeat! Surely, the red blood in our veins, the courage in our hearts, the gray matter in our brains, will now leap into action for "God, home, and native land."

The Anti-Saloon League is beseeching our pastors and other Christian leaders, if you have not already done so, to immediately call together your men and women into dry groups which will co-operate with like groups in other churches and communities for the purpose of organizing your parish, ward, and precinct for the purpose of electing dry delegates to the State convention (soon to be called) to vote and work against ratification of the repeal amendment.

Enclosed, find sample enrollment cards, which we hope you may find serviceable. You are at liberty to have duplicates printed in any needed quantities. Will you be kind enough to drop our office a postal card, indicating your reaction to this appeal, which comes to you in the name of our God, our home, our churches, our schools, and our social, moral and economic salvation?

POINTED PARAGRAPHS

By Rev. John W. Ramsey

Dr. D. M. Key, in his report to the mid-year meeting of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College, states that he has required the fraternities and sororities to abstain from dances and card parties, and that these organizations request their alumni chapters to cease giving card parties and dances during the school session. Dr. Key is to be commended for his courageous action and should have the undivided support of the trustees and the patrons. Dr. Key adds that if the co-operation of the fraternities and sororities cannot be secured he will be "ready to recommend the abolition of these organizations." In the opinion of the writer, if Dr. Key maintains his present attitude, his recommendations of abolition will follow in the near future. Only a few years ago, by legislative enactment, fraternities and sororities were banished from all State institutions. If there are certain essential and fundamental evils associated with such organizations which render them unfit for State colleges, why should they be tolerated by our church institutions?

In the Advocate of March 2, Rev. Carroll Varner has a timely article in criticism of the book, "Rethinking Missions." If you have not read it, you will be well paid for your trouble if you will do so. The book is nothing less than a thrust at the ability and work of the missionaries of all the churches. Moreover, it places the Christian religion on a par with other religions, whereas, as Brother Varner says, Christianity is the final religion—it is that or it is nothing; and, I must add, it is intolerant of all other religions. Speaking of the theological content of the book, Brother Varner says: "Such an attitude as this is enough to cause every evangelical church in America to rise up in loud and earnest protest." To all of which I say, Amen!

A recent writer in the Nashville Advocate, whose name is not known very far from his home town, being in a bloody frame of mind, wants to perform a major operation upon the ritual for the burial of the dead by the elimination of the following phrases: "Looking for the general resurrection in the last day," and "At whose second coming in glorious majesty to judge the world, the earth and sea shall give up their dead"; and then asks two questions: "Who knows that the earth and sea are going to give up their dead?" "Who believes, anyway, that our future existence and happiness are conditioned on the physical resurrection of our bodies?" The answer to both questions is, All Christians who believe the Bible and whose minds have not been befuddled by the teachings of materialistic Modernism.

The famous Java "Ape-man," or pithecanthropus erectus, now turns out to be a woman, according to Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, noted anthropologist. This particular guess is based upon a piece of skull, thigh bone, a lower jaw, and three teeth. Astonishing to the ordinary man are the vagaries and surmises of scientists!

The toll of young life, which was fifty boys, taken by football last season, resulted in a change of rules of the game intended to safeguard life; but, despite the new rules in force this season, thirty-seven young men were killed, not counting the injuries received by many others which crippled them for life. Modify rules of the game so as to eliminate fatalities, and football would be no longer football, the game being essentially brutal.

Do you know what Evolution is? Well, here is Mr. Spence's definition: "Evolution is an integration of motion, during which the matter passes from an indefinite incoherent homogeneity to a definite coherent heterogeneity, and during which the retained motion undergoes a parallel transformation." Will some one please page Bishop John M. Moore?

The one thing that should differentiate Christian colleges from State institutions is the emphasis placed by the former upon the higher ideals—Christian ideals! Unless this is done, there is no room for the Christian college in the field of education. For this reason, student publications of church schools should not compromise the church by carrying cigarette propaganda among their advertisements. If such advertisements are necessary for their continuance, they should suspend publication.

Dr. W. P. King, editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, in a book review in that periodical, said: "We are not concerned about the question of a universal flood, but about the universal brotherhood of man." If by "universal brotherhood" he means any brotherhood other than that of consanguinity, his statement is opposed to the teachings of the Bible.

In this day, everything, however beautiful and sacred it may be, is being commercialized. Mother's Day is no exception, and for this reason should be allowed quietly to pass. Taking their cue from the way Mother's Day has been commercialized, the haberdashery trade is now boosting Father's Day with the slogan, "Show Dad You Remember."

MEMOIR OF MRS. R. V. FULTON

The subject of this sketch, Pauline Boyd Fulton, was born in 1881 at Calhoun, La., and was married while very young to J. A. Gililand, who passed away in 1915, leaving her with six minor children—Marion, Pearl, Lola, Berta, Henry and Claude. All of these survive their mother except Pearl, who died at nine years of age.

During the following eight years, Mrs. Fulton made a noble effort to rear her children in the way of righteousness, and, to her praise be it said, she succeeded most wonderfully, and they "do rise up and call her blessed." They were well fitted to become "parsonage children," when, on Sept. 2, 1923, their mother became the wife of Rev. R. V. Fulton, a valued member of the Louisiana Conference. He assumed the full share of responsibility, and today they are worthy members of the Methodist Church, with the exception of the eldest, who remained in the Baptist Church, which was their faith before the second marriage of their mother.

Mrs. Fulton helped actively in every way she could as a minister's wife. During the four years while they were with the writer on the Ruston District she was always loyal and accepted even hardship with grace. When suffering intensely in the Spring of 1931, she did not complain, and during her long illness was hopeful almost to the last. When she knew her time was near to go, she did not talk about it, not wishing her children and husband to grieve.

She hoped to attend the Conference at Ruston, but rapidly grew weaker and passed away the twelfth of December, 1932, at the Choudrant parsonage.

The funeral was held from the church at 9:30 a.m., Dec. 13, and although the weather was cold and dismal, a great throng from nearby communities bore testimony to the place in their affections held by this good woman and her family.

The service was in charge of Dr. W. L. Doss,

Jr., with the prayer by Rev. R. M. Brown and the talk by Rev. Wade Cudd.

Her body was laid to rest by the side of her loved ones in Drew Cemetery, near West Monroe. By her former presiding elder,

ROBT M. BROWN.

Minden, La., Feb. 17, 1933.

GREAT OPPORTUNITY AT GOLDEN MEADOW, LA.

On Tuesday, February 21, a very impressive and outstanding service was held at Golden Meadow, in the home of Mr. Hunter, when two of his brothers, with their wives and children, became members of the Southern Methodist Church.

Golden Meadow is in a most thickly populated section of the French Mission territory. Our pastor, Brother Andrews and Brothers A. D. and A. M. Martin, have, during the past ten years made contact with these people, and by their splendid efforts established the nucleus of a church.

It is estimated that there are approximately fifty families, or two hundred people, ready to come into the church. Of the six thousand or more people living along lower Bayou Lafourche, only about one-third are regular attendants of any church. The challenge is a commanding one. Mr. Hunter has donated the lot for a church, but so far the Mission Boards have not been able to supply the funds for the building. A move has been made to get donations among the people, but of necessity the offerings will be small.

The workers at the McDonnell School have had a large part in bringing these people to a sense of their greater need. They have visited in the homes, aided in sickness, comforted in sorrow, and, by their help, interest and advice, brought untold joy and happiness to troubled hearts. Several children from these homes are enjoying the privileges, advantages and training of the school.

This particular Tuesday afternoon was chosen for the service in order that members of the Advisory Board of the Mission School and other visitors meeting in Houma at the time, could have the privilege of attendance. Brother Andrews, the beloved ex-pastor, was given the courtesy of conducting the service. He was assisted by Dr. Duren, presiding elder, Brother Booth, the new pastor of the French Mission work, and his assistant, Brother A. M. Martin.

The neat little home, attractive in its freshness with colorful pictures and hangings, was taxed to take care of the guests and friends of the family. The cordial, friendly welcome gave one a feeling of Christian brotherhood, mingled with a deep responsibility.

Other guests enjoying the privilege of this service and bringing words of greeting and welcome into our great church were: Mrs. George Sexton, Jr., State President of the Woman's Missionary Society; Mrs. Ledbetter, State Con. Sec., both from Shreveport; Mrs. D. B. Carre, Mrs. Duren and Mrs. Rump, from New Orleans; Mrs. B. H. Andrews, from Ponchatoula; Mrs. J. A. Pharr, from Berwick, and Misses Hooper and Kendrick from the McDonnell Mission School in Houma.

JESUS ON INVESTMENTS

By a Layman

No other subject, perhaps, has been given more thought and consideration and no other subject has caused more worry in the past three years than the question of investments. Investments that were considered good by people who were supposed to be experts in this field have turned out to be worthless and men have lost billions of dollars by bad investments.

When Jesus said lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth, He did not mean to discourage sane thought and sane preparations for the future in material things. He was discussing life investments, and He warned His hearers against an undue stress on material things as life investments. Material things have a place in the world, but it is a very subordinate place. They are simply means to an end. They are good only as they are effective in helping those who use them achieve higher things. When they are made an end in themselves they become a stumbling-block in the road to real achievement and defeat the real purpose of life in this world. The man who sets his heart on material things is lost, because these things are temporary at best, and he who invests his life in temporary material things will perish as they perish. Hence the statement, lay up for yourselves treasures that are permanent, that will not pass away, that are safe investments.

Heaven as used in the above statement means "the seat of an order of things eternal and perfect." It is not a place entirely cut off from this life. It is accessible to those who want to come within its investment. It is the privilege of every Christian to form a connection with this eternal perfect order here and now.

The Great Authority on Investments urges us to discriminate between good investments and bad investments, and warns us against the danger of losing all—not only the specific investment, but the life of the investor—by investing in things that are temporary and in the nature of the case must pass in a little while. The man who gives his life to this type of investment may succeed or fail as the world measures success. The great majority fail. But whether he succeeds or fails, he loses, and as a rule the greater his success the greater his loss.

Then why not place your investments where they will count? Why not invest in a bank that can't fail, a bank that thieves cannot enter, a bank that no depression can affect? For God himself is president of the bank and His name is on all of the securities. This bank always pays big dividends and they begin here and now.

Every one may make several deposits every day. For the deposits are not in silver and gold and currency, but in good deeds, in kind words to all, in charitable consideration of the feelings of others, in words of encouragement to the downcast, in acts of charity, in the cultivation of noble aspirations, in faith and love and prayer. As those who patronize this bank make their deposits from day to day in spirit, they join in the prayers expressed in an old familiar hymn:

"Change and decay in all around I see;

O thou who changeth not, abide with me."

THE NORTHERN GROUP OF NEWTON DISTRICT

The pastors in the northern part of the Newton district met at Carthage Feb. 21, which was for pastors and their wives only. There were seven pastors, the presiding elder and the wives of several preachers present; also one visiting preacher, Bro. D. R. McDougal, from the North Mississippi Conference.

This was one of the best group meetings that we have had.

The following were on the program: Rev. D. R. McDougal, Rev. L. L. Roberts, Mrs. J. W. Sells, Rev. W. M. Sullivan, Rev. J. F. McClellan and Rev. J. W. Sells.

Lunch was served by the ladies of Carthage.

Rev. W. M. Sullivan spoke on "The Preacher and His Relation to Beneficences," and Rev. J. W. Sells on "The Preacher and the Pulpit."

These subjects were well thought out by the speakers and delivered in a most helpful way. Those who were absent don't know what they missed. We trust we will have a one hundred per cent meeting next time. The time and place for the next meeting will be announced later.

T. E. NICHOLSON, Secretary.

MEETING OF COMMITTEE ON ENTERTAINMENT—GENERAL CONFERENCE POSTPONED

Dear Editor: The Committee on Entertainment of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for 1934, has unanimously decided to postpone the meeting of the Committee, heretofore set for March 21, 1933, at Montgomery, Alabama, to a date to be hereafter fixed, of which due notice will be given you.

This decision was reached after a conference with a number of conservative Methodists, and after communicating by wire with each member of the Committee.

The nation-wide business difficulties, the strong probability that some of the Committee would be unable to attend the meeting, and that some of the inviting cities might be unable to send representatives, made it clear that it was best to postpone the meeting.

Yours truly,

marked the men who, from the ashes of a dead day, built an enduring monument to heroic endeavor.

In words that sound strangely contemporary, that might have leaped from the pages of your morning paper, Mr. Lincoln, in 1862, said, "The dogmas of the quiet past are inadequate to the stormy present. The occasion is piled high with difficulty and we must rise to the occasion. As our case is new, we must think anew. We must disenthrall ourselves and then we shall save our country."

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

We'll come out of it. So let us pull together, pull for each other, and all pull for Uncle Sam.

Rev. L. W. Cain, Winnsboro, La., continues in the company of Advocate readers with renewal for the year.

"I enjoy the paper very much and consider it one of my helpers in my church." R. E. Wasson, High Point, Miss.

Rev. J. B. Granhling, pastor, Mer Rouge, La., was a very welcome visitor to the Young People's Standard Training School in New Orleans.

"Minden District Messenger," official paper of the Minden District, Rev. R. M. Brown, Presiding Elder, brings interesting news from that district.

One hundred and eighty Methodist men were present at a men's meeting and luncheon at Tupelo, Miss., recently. Rev. W. P. Buhrman is pastor.

Miss Mary Searles, Director of Young People's Work, Louisiana Conference, attended the Young People's Standard Training School in New Orleans.

Rev. A. Y. Brown and Rev. R. P. Neblett are traveling over the territory of the Columbus District March 5 to 24 in the interest of the Golden Cross.

Rev. A. K. McClellan, Conference Secretary of Christian Education, was in the city of New Orleans for the set-up of the Young People's Training School.

Latest reports from Rev. J. E. Cunningham at Veterans Hospital, Pineville, La., are not as encouraging as we should like. Steady him with your prayers.

Mrs. R. P. Moore, Treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Society of Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., sends the contribution for saving the Advocate.

Mr. J. C. Cavett, Secretary of the Mississippi Sunday School Association, renews his subscription and sends words of encouragement. Thank you, Brother Cavett.

"Our work is showing a healthy condition. We are planning a pre-Easter revival." This good word comes from our pastor at Abbeville, La., Rev. J. W. Faulk.

The following people joined the Easter Party during the past week: Mrs. A. A. Smith, Dumas, Miss.; Fannie C. Moore, De Kalb, Miss.; Mrs. O. S. Mincey, Peason, La.

Rev. George Tucker is engaged in a town revival at Belzoni during the month of March. He recently conducted a revival in the courthouse at Holly Springs, Miss.

We are hoping that the W. C. T. U. and other women's organizations working for Prohibition will be well represented at the Louisiana State-wide Meeting at Alexandria, March 28.

Don't forget a man when he gets sick. Rev. E. W. Day, pastor at Greensburg, La., is recovering from an operation for appendicitis in a hospital in New Orleans. He is doing fine.

"I am in full agreement with your position concerning the Benevolences and local interests of the church as expressed in a recent issue." Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Mississippi Conference Lay Leader.

ATTENTION PASTORS, ALL THREE CONFERENCES

Our great Church was never more in need of a medium of expression than it is today. The liquor battle must be refought. Our missionary enterprises and other benevolent causes are in serious straits, and unless we are able to reach the rank and file of our membership and keep before them the seriousness of the situation, precious and essential interests of our glorious Methodism will be wrecked.

Now is the time for every loyal Methodist to rally to the cause, and face the task with a determination that the efforts and sacrifices of our forefathers will not have been in vain.

You will recall that the three great Conferences served by the Advocate voted unanimously to set aside the period of March 15-May 15 for the yearly circulation of their official organ.

That time is upon us. With the proper effort we should encounter very little difficulty in securing a paid-up subscription list of at least 10,000, which number a few years since was considered small for a paper serving three Methodist Conferences boasting a church membership of more than 200,000.

A letter, outlining the plan, is being mailed to every pastor in the territory, and we sincerely trust that you will give it your immediate and serious consideration. If the plan prepared by your Publishing Committee is carried out in detail the future of the Advocate, now in its 80th year of service to our Church, will be assured.

"There can be no failure except in no longer trying."

In the Bulletin from the Belzoni Church, Rev. S. L. Pope, pastor, we get the news that a course in tithing and stewardship is being given. The study materials are on the back of the bulletin.

Rev. Frank N. Neal, General Evangelist, is engaged in a revival at Amory, Miss., March 12 to 26. One of the most successful revivals ever held in Amory was led by Evangelist Neal in 1924.

Let our preachers and people in Louisiana remember March 28 and the statewide Prohibition meeting to be held in Alexandria that day. Mississippi, with her Governor, is moving steadily up the line.

Miss Margaret Miceli of New Orleans has succeeded Miss Kathleen Roebuck as nurse in charge of the Whitworth College Infirmary. Miss Roebuck has been appointed as Lauderdale County Health Nurse.

Rev. A. T. Mellwain, pastor at First Church, Columbus, has sounded a bugle note against the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. The daily paper of Columbus declared editorially that the message was a "powerful sermon."

Good congregations are meeting Rev. R. E. Rutledge, pastor at Homewood, Miss. The people of the circuit have given a warm welcome to the pastor and are yielding to his leadership. Bro. Rutledge promises a larger Advocate club.

Let us ask our friends to be conservative in the preparation of obituaries and memorials. Our space is limited. Put down the essential things in as few words as you can creditably do it. We want all to have space. Let us remember one another.

We have received a splendid mimeographed news-letter from the Macon, Miss., Charge setting forth matters of great interest and importance to the charge, and much of it of value to any charge. Rev. H. D. Suydam is the pastor of this good work.

Our friend and official representative at Franklinton, La., and honored and beloved superannuate, Rev. F. N. Sweeney, recently favored us with 12 renewals to the Advocate. We vote Brother Sweeney a Distinguished Service Badge, and urge others to follow his example.

Wedding bells. Rev. Thurmon Spinks, our pastor at Sibley, La., was recently married to Miss Mary Sue Garland, the ceremony taking place at the District Parsonage, Minden, La., the Presiding Elder, Rev. R. M. Brown, officiating. Congratulations and good wishes.

The friends of Prof. and Mrs. C. C. Giffin will be interested to know that they have organized a Junior College at Van Wert, Ohio, known as Giffin College. Mrs. Giffin, before marriage, was Miss Katie Strait, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Strait, who live near Brookhaven, Miss.

Centenary Church, McComb, Miss., is moving forward under the leadership of Rev. B. M. Hunt. A training class for church membership for boys and girls is being held. Special effort is being made looking toward an ingathering at Easter. Decision Day will be observed March 26.

Rev. E. O. Harbin, from the General Board of Christian Education, Nashville, has been instructor in the New Orleans Young People's Standard Training School this week. Other instructors were Dr. F. L. Wells and Rev. D. B. Raulins. Dr. W. W. Holmes conducted the Devotional Services.

"The Optimistic Church," bulletin of our First Church of Minden, La., of which Dr. A. S. Lutz is pastor, brings a most interesting and promising program for that church during the months of March and April. What could be better than a carefully planned program to cover several weeks such as is here given?

A good report comes from the pastor of First Church, Crowley, La., Rev. C. K. Smith. "Our congregations are much larger than at any time in the four years I have been pastor. The financial condition is fine, and we are actually expecting a better year than we have had during our entire pastorate," says the pastor.

Dr. H. R. Wren spoke to a congregation of 79 at Park Avenue Church, Shreveport, La., at the regular Wednesday evening service. His subject was "True Religion." Dr. Wren insisted that true religion touches a man at three places, his heart, his head, and his pocket-book. Dr. Wren is a very valuable churchman, qualified experimentally to deal with the topic he used.

Holly Springs, Miss., recently had a great meeting under the leadership of Evangelist Rev. George Tucker of Jackson, Tenn., assisted by his song leader, Mr. Turbeville. The evening services were held in the Courthouse. For three weeks the meeting ran. Numbers, it is reported, will apply to churches of their choice for membership. The moral and spiritual tone of the town was greatly lifted.

Mr. E. H. Bradshaw, Chairman of the Mississippi Commission to the World's Fair, Chicago, speaks enthusiastically of Mississippi's exhibit. We learn that Mississippi has reserved 2000 square feet of space in the Hall of States for the exhibition of its agriculture, industries, raw materials, health, recreation and education. "Few people," says Mr. Bradshaw, "realize the great advantages that Mississippi offers to American youth in the way of opportunity, natural beauty, recreational advantages, and health. And we intend to show them here."

I said to my friend, I wish I knew something about money, its value, "how it gets this way," and so on. He replied, "The less you know about it the better off you are." But I am unwilling to take it that way. A thing that causes such a rumpus as we are now passing through in this country needs to be known about, even by us "men of the street" and "of the dirt road." Many of those whom the people trusted need a new stock of integrity, and we citizens need some dependable information so that we may become less gullible. What do you think?

"The wets say that the dries should not try to prevent repeal by holding thirteen States. Does anyone think that the wets would have given up fighting the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment if the dries had gotten it ratified in 35 States and the wets could have held the other 13 States? The wets never stopped opposing the ratification of the Eighteenth Amendment, even after it was ratified by 36 States. They fought ratification bitterly in New York State and in the nine other States that ratified the Amendment after it had gone into the United States Constitution."

REV. J. T. LEWIS GOES HOME

On the night of Wednesday, March 8, surrounded by his three brothers, Revs. H. P. Lewis, of Rosedale; J. M. Lewis, of Louise, and O. S. Lewis, of Brookhaven, and his sister, Miss Pattie Lewis, also of Brookhaven, Rev. John Tillery Lewis went home to be with God.

Funeral services were conducted from Gallo-way Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., Dr. J. R. Countiss, assisted by Dr. J. L. Deceil, officiating.

BISHOP DOBBS DEDICATES OAKDALE CHURCH

On Sunday night, February 26, Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs dedicated our splendid church building at Oakdale, La. Rev. A. M. Shaw, pastor at Vinton, under whose pastorate the building was erected, participated in the dedicatory exercises.

In addition to the other churches of the city that accepted invitations to attend the ceremonies, our churches at Elizabeth and Glenmora, with their pastors, Revs. Alonzo Early and H. L. Nease, respectively, attended.

Rev. Geo. W. Pomeroy, graduate of Yale Divinity School, and one of our most promising young men, is the present pastor.

BROTHER MAYO AND EASTER PARTY OFF ON TRIP

I have invited 65 to take the "Trip to Easter." While I have not heard from all, I trust they are aboard, and several who have been told of the "Fellowship" have asked to join us and we have let them aboard.

Today's "lap" on the journey is most helpful and encouraging.

Yours,

MAYO.

E. STANLEY JONES HEADED THIS WAY

To the Readers of the Advocate:

I am sure you will be interested to know that Dr. E. Stanley Jones, famous Missionary to India and other fields, the author of several books, will hold a series of great inspirational meetings in the bounds of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. There will be five of these meetings—Winston-Salem, on March 26th; Atlanta, on March 27th and 28th; Memphis, on March 29; Dallas, on March 30, and at Nashville, on April 1st and 2nd.

The program for these meetings will be a three-hour conference with preachers, a public mass meeting and a banquet for laymen. Dr. Jones has just returned from China and will make a tour of the United States on behalf of missions. We had Dr. E. Stanley Jones with us as one of the speakers at the International Missionary Conference in Memphis, January 1 to 3, 1929, and I am sure that all who heard him then will want to hear him again.

I hope it will be possible for many of our people to hear Dr. Jones, and probably Memphis will be the nearest place for most of us.

Yours very sincerely,

W. D. HAWKINS, Missionary Secretary.

KINGDOM EXTENSION PLANS

We have at last found a plan that seems to work in the Missionary cultivation study, or at least gets to the membership with it.

Mrs. Woodruff, Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. A. G. Sledge, and Miss Mag Edwards, of the W. M. S., put on a pageant, with some young people and children representing the peoples of our different Mission fields, which brought out the largest crowd that the church has had in a long time.

After this the pastor spoke on the first two chapters of "Christ and the Coming Kingdom."

It was pronounced a great service. People were there who have not been to church before since my pastorate here.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

We plan to speak, or have some one to speak, at each Sunday evening appointment instead of the regular sermon, until we have covered the entire book.

The Missionary Society is co-operating in this work.

CORRECTING CORRECTIONS

In regard to the errors mentioned by Brother Hawkins in Roxie's report, wish to say that my copy of the report in my files is correct, and just as stated by Brother Hawkins. I am a book-keeper of some years experience. Have worked in a R. R. office, Marks Rothenburg, Meridian, and Hinton Brothers Lumber Co., Lumberton. Auditors have seen fit to compliment my work. I am ashamed that after all this experience I can still make mistakes. The worst part of it is, I helped the statistical secretaries on this very sheet. If Brother Harkey had not looked at the report and written about it in the Advocate, I should have been inclined to have said, I know I had it right, for here it is exactly right in my files. We paid $19 on District Work, and $41 on Kingdom Extension. Am so glad the money did just as much good, even though I did copy it wrong. I still believe in being correct.

PERCY VAUGHAN.

MRS. H. B. THOMASSON ILL

Dr. Briscoe Carter, Presiding Elder of the Alexandria District, reports that Mrs. Thomasson, wife of Rev. H. B. Thomasson, a supernumate of the Louisiana Conference, is critically ill with little hope of recovery. Brother Thomasson needs not only your prayers but your material help. Stand by for him.

AT YOUR POSTS, LOUISIANA PREACHERS

In view of the state-wide prohibition conference in Alexandria, March 28, it has occurred to us that it would be a great thing if all our pastors would preach a special sermon on prohibition on or near Sunday, March 26, and at that time urge our people to attend that state-wide meeting in great numbers; or, if it is not possible, to preach on the subject, at least to give ample announcement to the state-wide meeting.

A SERMON CONTAINING A PROTEST

By Rev. R. T. Pickett

Text. 2 Tim. 2:5: "And if a man also strive for masteries, yet is he not crowned, except he strive lawfully."

There are rules governing every game of life. The editor has lost his crown. He has broken the rules of the game. This applies to the Louisiana Conference, I know, if not to the two Conferences in Mississippi. At a recent session of this Conference a member of the Board of Missions severely took to task a brother soliciting funds outside his charge for his mission, and the Bishop summoned this brother to meet the Cabinet, etc. So that's that. The brethren were instructed against raising special funds by correspondence, or otherwise.

Now here comes along Dr. Raulins sending out through the Advocate an S. O. S. for Brother S. J. McLean, of Morgan City, to repair his boat, etc., saying the Mission Board in some way overlooked this work.

In fairness to the persons to whom this might appeal, they should know that this brother's charge paid him $1235 last year, and that a great many charges paid less than this, a considerable number not half this amount.

If you are going to continue a policy of this kind, put in my application (as my charge paid less than this, and I have many members unable to pay anything) for contributions to repair my car and two of my brother friends, who have had to quit using their autos.

Now that boat business will likely appeal to some one way up in the hills, while the preacher at his door just as badly needs an autogyro so that when he comes to the mud and cliffs and rocks and gullies he can fly. This might appeal to some about Morgan City.

The Mission Board knows pretty well how to use what funds they have. They cut mine for this place, dividing it by three; and since this is the policy of this Conference and the movement to have the pastors with better salaries help those with the poor ones failed, that puts the responsibility upon each charge to support its own pastor, which is best.

We do not forget cases that constitute real emergencies on account of sickness, etc. The reason, Brother Editor, our Conference thinks best not to make these special appeals is they will divert contributions from our regular organized work, all parts of which are hard pressed for funds at present.

It is my experience that if a preacher will do his work faithfully, not studying statistics, his people will take care of him. We may need for a while, because some hard-headed, good people, "from Missouri" will not pay for work till it is done.

If you don't call this off, you will be swamped with appeals for old cars, books, clothes, spectacles, etc.

Springfield, La.

(I leave the above accusation and statement to my friends and enemies, if they are not all dead. Let them pass upon the merits. In the meantime let me urge that we continue to help Brother McLean on his boat. He cannot wade the bayou to reach those inexpressibly needy people. He has expended enough time and labor on improving the equipment of his charge to convince anyone of the worthiness of the appeal. And I shall, notwithstanding the warning, continue to make such appeals as I deem wise until our Bishop or Cabinet advise otherwise. —Editor.)

"Swimming" of the Head

From Constipation

"I used to suffer from spells of swimming in the head," writes Mrs. Carrie Brown, of Meridian, Miss. "Everything would go 'round and 'round. When I stood upon my feet I would be almost blind with dizziness. My stomach was upset. These spells, I believe, came from constipation. I suffered torture from the effects."

"My mother had taken Thedford's Black-Draught for a long time, and she suggested to me that I try it. While I was feeling so bad, I took half a teaspoonful, put it in some water and took it. I found it was just the thing to relieve the suffering from constipation. Now I always keep it in my house. I take it whenever I need a laxative. I have used Black-Draught in my home now for twelve years, and feel it is a great help in keeping my family in a healthy condition."

MAKES WOMEN LOSE FAT

Miss Rea M. Haines of Dayton, Ohio, writes: "I weighed 180 so started to take Kruschen. I never was so surprised as when I weighed myself the first week—I lost 7 pounds. I just bought my 3rd jar and am down to 115—am still taking them and never felt better in my life." (June 17, 1932).

To take off fat—take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—one bottle that lasts 4 weeks—costs but a few cents—get it at any drugstore in America. If this first bottle fails to convince you this is the SAFE and harmless way to lose fat—your money gladly returned.

But be sure and get Kruschen Salts—imitations are numerous and you must safeguard your health.

EAT

Don't force children to eat! The girl or boy who has no appetite has stasis—which means the child is sluggish. But cathartics have caused more constipation than they ever cured! The "California treatment" is best—just pure syrup of figs. Try this for a few days, then see how eagerly your youngster will eat.

Stimulate the colon and that child with a finicky appetite will devour everything set before him. Here's the simple treatment that does more for babies or older children than all the diets, fad foods, or tonics.

Nature has provided the "medicine" you'll need to stir your child's colon muscles into proper action. California syrup of figs. Pure, delicious, harmless. It acts on the lower colon—where the trouble is. It has no ill effects on the intestines.

Begin tonight, with this marvelous "California treatment." Any druggist has California syrup of figs, all bottled, with directions. Use enough the first time to cleanse the clogged colon of every bit of poison and hard waste. Then just a little twice a week until the child's appetite, color, weight and spirits tell you the stasis is gone. Whenever a cold or other upset clogs the system again, use this natural vegetable laxative instead of drastic drugs.

WARNING: There are dealers who practice substitution. Be sure to protect your child by looking for the name CALIFORNIA on the bottle.

Delegates—Register with Mrs. H. Ogden, 509 West Pine Street, Hattiesburg. Delegates will pay for the noon lunch.

BREAKS IN THE RANKS

Again I must write you of a break in our ranks. On January 19, Mrs. Chappell left us to join that innumerable company.

She was among the group we thought of as "the old guard" for she had been a member of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions before our Council came into being. Through all these years, our missionary work was a vital part of her life and no one among us carried it more earnestly upon her heart. It is needless for me to ask you to remember Dr. Chappell and her children in prayer. The last thing she said was: "Everything is so beautiful."

Again we are reminded that we must gird ourselves anew for a task that falls heavily upon us as our friends pass on. * * * There has never been a time when I realized more keenly the need of a Power that transcends all human power and wisdom than at this present time.

With abiding love,

CLARA T. PERRY,
Council President.

called to his Heavenly Home. He had "fought a good fight, had finished his course, and had kept the faith." Reunited with beloved parents who had long awaited his coming, a devoted wife, brothers and sisters all on the other shore, his earthly cares and sorrows ended, he sits at the feet of Jesus, learning of things divine and true while "the river of life flows close by the throne of God." He waited long and patiently for the summons, and was ready when it came. We have been lonesome without him, but with bowed heads, and breaking hearts, we are submissive to His will, and await our summons to the Heavenly Home.

For us a year on earth with him above,

Second, That her family and friends are submissive to the will of our Heavenly Father for we know that He always calls His children home when their work is finished. The vacant seat will ever remind us of her faithfulness and her love for her church and all religious services.

Third, That we earnestly pray that her children and grandchildren may be comforted by the assurance that when the call came she was prepared to go, for she had no fears of death.

MRS. ALBERT MUNNINGHOFF

"Both my grandmother and my mother always took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My mother has six daughters and we all use it too. If I ever have a daughter I shall certainly give it to her. I never felt better in my life."—MRS. ALBERT MUNNINGHOFF.

Perhaps your mother or your grandmother depended upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, too. Thousands of women do. They give it to their daughters as they come to womanhood—they take it before and after childbirth—they rely upon it at middle age. It must be good when 98 out of 100 women say, "It helps me."

"My mother took your medicine the greater part of her life, especially at the Change. She is now 63 and in good health. I took it for weakness when I was single. I also took it before childbirth and I have two lovely girls. I highly recommend the Vegetable Compound especially during pregnancy. It makes childbirth very easy."—MRS. Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

AFTER 40 BOWEL TROUBLE IS MOST DANGEROUS

Constipation may easily become chronic after forty. Continued constipation at that time of life may bring attacks of piles and a host of other disorders.

Watch your bowels at any age. Guard them with particular care after forty. When they need help, remember a doctor should know what is best for them.

"Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin" is a doctor's prescription for the bowels. Tested by 47 years' practice, it has been found thoroughly effective in relieving constipation and its ills for men, women and children of all ages. It has proven perfectly safe even for babies. Made from fresh, laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients, it cannot gripe; will not sicken you or weaken you; can be used without harm as often as your breath is bad, your tongue is coated; whenever a headachy, bilious, gassy condition warns of constipation.

Next time just take a spoonful of this family doctor's laxative. See how good it tastes; how gently and thoroughly it acts. Then you will know why it has become the world's most popular laxative. Big bottles—all drugstores.

ters, Mrs. E. C. Richardson, Colfax, La., and Mrs. M. O. Yeager, Grayson, La. A large number of relatives and friends remain to mourn his passing. In the death of this good man, which is one of the best the writer has ever known, Grayson church and community have lost one of its most beloved citizens. He was for many years a member of the Methodist Church. Uncle Geo. was deeply interested in the work of the church and community and in every move for the betterment of the country. I am glad to say that one of our young preachers, Rev. Jolly Harper, is the grandson of Uncle Geo. and he, as well as the writer, has been inspired by the Godly life of this good man. To the family and loved ones there will be a vacant place at the post of duty where he once stood. Services were conducted in his home at Grayson by his pastor, assisted by the following ministers: Rev. D. B. Boddie, Pineville, La.; Rev. Mr. Kitchenham, Baptist pastor of Columbia, La.; Revs. W. W. Lantrip, I. L. Yeager, Jolly Harper, E. H. Grant, J. W. Lee, and Arch McKeithen. His remains were laid to rest in the Welcome Home Cemetery near Grayson, there to await the call that shall bring the children of God together to ever be with the Lord. May we all follow Christ so that we, too, may say when we come to the end of life's journey, we are ready to go, as Uncle Geo. did say.

BENJAMIN LEE HOUSTON was the son of Henry and Rozalla Houston. He was born December 16, 1892, at the old Houston home near Reids, La. He was educated at the State Normal at Natchitoches and received his degree in 1930. Teaching school was his profession and he was a very fine teacher. During the World War he served as a soldier. He was a patriot. On August 19, 1925, he was happily married to Miss Leona Wagner, and this marriage was blessed with a sweet little girl, who is hardly old enough to realize her loss. He joined the Methodist Church near Reids, at the age of twelve and remained a true and faithful member throughout his life. At the time of his sickness he was teaching near Lake Charles, La., and he found pleasure in being superintendent of the Moss Bluff Sunday school. He came back home last spring thinking he might recover his health under the quietness of the parental roof, but it did not prove so. He was taken to the Veterans Hospital at Gulfport, Miss., where more could be done for his recovery, but even here it was impossible for him to gain. He died while at Gulfport, February 13, 1933. Brother Houston leaves to mourn his passing his wife and little daughter, father and mother, three sisters: Vicie, Birtie and Mrs. Grover Beard, and many relatives and friends. Funeral services were conducted at the old home church near Reids, on Monday, February 20, Rev. Alonzo Early, assisted by Rev. Paul Leeds and Rev. Mr. Baggett, of Kinder, officiating. Interment took place in the cemetery near the church.

After spending about 40 years, the latter part of his life, in Hickory, Miss., his immortal spirit took its eternal flight to that home whose Builder and Maker is God. He was married first to Miss Nannie Wall, and this union was with one child, both having preceded him to the better land. A few years later, May 1, 1910, he was married to Miss Sallie Clark, who survives him. "Uncle Billy" was a man of sterling qualities. To love and appreciate him was but to know him. He loved his church, and nothing gave him greater pleasure than to see the work of the church in a prosperous way. His

Fire insurance on church and parsonage property may be neglected because of the many other interests calling for attention. Just now when money is scarce there is imperative need for unusual attention to this important matter. The difficulty of arranging the annual premium installment required by the National Mutual Church Insurance Company of Chicago organized in compliance with the action of the General Conference of 1896, is nothing compared with the difficulty of replacing destroyed or damaged buildings, which would be infinitely greater.

While fire insurance is carried for less than approximately 75 per cent of the value of all buildings and contents, we recommend that you promptly address the president and manager, Henry P. Magill, 1509 Insurance Exchange Building, Chicago, Illinois.—Adv.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

MR. ROOSEVELT. CLOSED HIS RADIO ADDRESS to the American people on the banking situation with these words: "This is your problem no less than it is mine. Together we cannot fail."

It is with this same sort of feeling that I address my friends, the readers of the Advocate, as we enter upon our circulation campaign, March 15-May 15.

Certainly I acknowledge my share of responsibility for the Advocate, and, week by week, with God's help and your confidence, I am trying to discharge that responsibility.

But the New Orleans Christian Advocate is not a private enterprise and it is not operated for personal ends. It is a joint undertaking, conducted in behalf of the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi. It is the responsibility and opportunity of the 200,000 Methodists of these two great states.

For eighty years, through a wide variety of sweeping changes, the Advocate has gone forth with its weekly messages, championing the causes represented by our church, and supporting our pastors in their work. It has faced difficulties and has reflected the hard places through which our people have had to pass. In times like these, than which it has faced none more fraught with destiny, it would prove its worth as in days that are gone.

During the "Save the Advocate" campaign many of our people throughout the territory declared their interest and confidence by the gifts that they made. It was a free-will offering and a vote of confidence. These generous responses, representing a cross-section of our church life, and for which we are deeply grateful, prophesied what our whole church can do when it rallies to one of its valued agencies.

Our Conferences further acknowledged this joint responsibility, by extending the time of the campaign, by continuing their financial support, and by setting this period for the circulation of the Advocate, sealing their interest with a unanimous vote. The delegates to these Conferences surely felt that it should be no serious task to extend the circulation in a membership of 200,000 people.

We, at this office, having been made responsible for the task of preparing and sending out the paper each week have sought to carry out your wishes in the most economical way possible. Never at any time feeling that the responsibility of the Advocate was wholly our own, still we have been greatly cheered by your confidence and cooperation. As we go into the "Keep the Advocate Saved" campaign we feel confident that you will liquidate the pledges of the Conferences.

At this critical turn in affairs we are aware of the importance of our church organ. Some of the old wars have not been finished, one must be refought, and there are a number of new conflicts into which we must move forward. We are not hauling down our banners, we are preparing to attack. Prohibition again has been referred to the people. The church must bear the brunt of the battle. And you know Methodists have never been marked by backwardness or fear in this fight. We take up the gage of battle.

We have moved into a zone of new and bigger battles. Here we shall not turn back. We are called upon to re-examine our religion in terms of the tumultuous

NON-CHRISTIANS REVERE CHRIST

Dr. Robert E. Speer tells of a banquet of the Bar Association at Delhi, India, attended by all the lawyers of that great city. There was not a Christian in the company; all were Hindus.

They had engaged a jester to entertain them and he was doing so by making jokes about the escapades of the traditional gods of the Indian people, at which sallies the lawyers roared with laughter.

Soon the actor made a joke about Jesus Christ, but nobody laughed. At the second such remark, there were murmurs of dissent. Finally, the man ventured a third "wise-crack" involving the name of Jesus, whereupon the diners rose from their seats, seized him by the collar, ushered him to the door, and kicked him down the stairs.

There was not a Christian in the crowd, but the character, personality, and teachings of the Master had created in the hearts of these Hindu lawyers such respect and reverence for Jesus Christ that not one would allow a fool to speak His name irreverently.—The Kingdom Call.

times in which we live. We are called upon to match our faith against foes well entrenched and in high places, foes that have hitherto worn the garb of respectability. Crusaders of a new day we are challenged to measure our Christianity against the problems of industry, politics, race, international affairs and world peace. With a faith and a courage commensurate with these days we must advance.

Through the Advocate we want you to share your experiences and champion the larger causes of our religion. Through it let us help each other to find the better way through our difficult days.

All these things being true we call upon our Bishops, Presiding Elders, Pastors, Missionary Societies, Young People's Divisions, Lay Leaders, and members, during this period, to put the circulation of the Advocate to at least 10,000.

"Together we cannot fail."

DON'T PULL PROSPERITY GREEN would be the advice of this writer who has no laurels to lose in the field of economics as he knows very little about such matters. This, however, should not cause him to hesitate to give his counsel if we would keep with many of our advisors.

You who grew up on the farm, and for which you should have no apologies to make, remember how you had to have those watermelons planted by Good Friday at least. Then there was the struggle with the late frosts. Afterwhile, though, the vines began to reach out. Then a bloom. Be careful now. Don't step on those vines. But a bloom doesn't always mean a watermelon. Some of them are for the busy bees. You know the melon is on there when the bloom comes if it is going to be on at all. In my ignorance of botany I never could see just the use of the bloom with the young melon already on the job ready to grow. But we shall not find fault with Mother Nature. She was in business quite a little while before I came on the scene.

Now, whatever you do, don't "point" at that little melon. If you do he will just shrivel up after a bit, turn black in the face, and fall off. (It will work on cucumbers too) And the wrong kind of a rain, more especially a hail, might also work havoc with those baby melons.

Then after he got under way good, and those stripes began to show up on his sleek green sides, how you watched him as the apple of your eye, even if he was a watermelon. That melon must be ready at least by the Fourth of July. One morning, after the dew was gone, you dared to "thump" him. Look out! Still green. You waited some long days. The Fourth is just about here. Then you did the cruellest thing of all. You laid your open hand upon his striped side, let your weight down upon it. That is the sure test of the ripe melon that is worthy of the name. There was no answering "crunch" from its heart. Just a bruise. "Ah, well," you said. "It must be ripe." And with a doubtful triumph you slipped it from the vine, into the sack, and home. While the children stood around. (Is there any ceremony like it?) The knife slipped through and in a second the two halves fall apart. Disappointment! Not ripe. Just a bit pink. But what a melon it would have been had we just been patient and waited awhile longer.

For four years we have been bogging along in this swamp of "depression." Waiting, waiting. Every year the number who said prosperity was "just around the corner" has grown less and less. Finally the bottom falls through. The banks of 46 states are closed when Mr. Roosevelt

Master, carest thou not that we perish?

Mk. iv, 38

By Rev. W. L. Duren, D.D.

Another day of toil was over, the besieging and beseeching multitudes were sent away and the little boat started for the opposite side of the lake. The sea was placid and calm and no signs of danger were in the sky, and the weary Teacher was soon asleep. But suddenly the peaceful bosom of that little inland lake was swept by a great storm and the boat was ready to sink. The disciples were panic stricken, their strength and courage failed and only one resource was left—Jesus who slept astern. They cry out to him in despair: "Master, carest thou not that we perish?" It was less a word of bitter complaining than a confession of their utter helplessness in the face of supreme peril. Their piteous appeal shows how sensitive is human distress and how responsible the place of spiritual leadership.

That little episode on the bosom of storm-swept Galilee is a blue print of life. The souls of men are helplessly driven before the fury of mighty winds of evil, and hope is gone; but in answer to their bewildered cry, Christ rebukes the wind and a great calm ensues—miniature of the march of the Prince of Peace through a disordered and helpless world. The Master who spoke the words, "Peace, be still," makes every disciple his partner in the task of saving those who are in peril. The followers of Christ can not escape responsibility for the evangelization of the world. For nineteen hundred years, the door of the Church has been haunted by the insistent cry: "Master, carest thou not that we perish?" Only those who know God have the sympathy and the understanding necessary to bring a message to troubled hearts; for men who make piteous appeal long to feel the heart-throb of those who witness to His saving love and power. What shall our partnership with Jesus mean for the world?

MORAL AS WELL AS FINANCIAL CRISIS

A statement to the people of the churches, issued today by Rev. Dr. Albert W. Beaver, President of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, describes the present financial crisis as "a day of judgment upon the unsocial and unchristian standards that have prevailed in our economic life." It emphasizes especially the need for penitence for the "mania of speculation" which has "spread its poison through the body of society." An appeal is made to "all men and women of moral insight" to re-emphasize the fact that "moral integrity and the practices of justice, cooperation and brotherhood are basic conditions of economic health." The churches are urged "to display an unparalleled unity of spirit" and "to meet the present crisis in a mood of faith and freedom from fear." The statement concludes with a call for united prayer and expresses gratitude for the example of President Roosevelt in turning "quietly aside for prayer" before assuming the responsibilities of government.

The full text of Dr. Beaver's statement is as follows:

"To one who pierces beneath the surface of our present difficulties it must be apparent that the ills from which we are suffering are not merely economic but also profoundly moral. In large measure our financial crisis is a day of judgment upon the unsocial and unchristian standards that have prevailed in our economic life. Our first need therefore is for heart-searching and penitence for having followed a way of life that in a moral universe was bound to end in disaster. It is no impersonal calamity over which we could have no control, like hurricane or flood, that has overtaken us, but the aftermath of our own conduct. A mania of speculation—a frantic attempt to get private gain without making corresponding contribution to society—led by those in places of financial power and infecting the rank and file of the people, has spread its poison through the body of society. An insatiable greed for wealth, coupled with a callous indifference to demand of social justice and the needs of the poorer and less privileged classes, has left millions of our people without sufficient means to purchase the overflowing products of our farms and factories. "Where there is no vision," as our President has reminded us in his inaugural address, "the people perish."

"As we set our faces to the task of reconstruction let us not cherish delusive hopes for a return of a condition which was falsely called 'prosperity,' but which was largely a hectic fever of selfishness and gave no due place to spiritual values. While political and economic leaders are solving the technical problems connected with recovery and advance, all men and women of spiritual insight should be re-emphasizing the simple truth that moral integrity and the practice of justice, co-operation and brotherhood are basic conditions of economic health.

"If our first need is for self-examination because of lack of moral vision in the past, our second need is for faith in the possibilities of a better future. Inspired by the high courage of the President of our country, and confronted with a great opportunity for turning a social crisis into a social advance, the people of all our churches, of whatever name or organization, should now rise above any mood of fear, display an unparalleled unity of spirit and rededicate themselves to a wholehearted service of the common good.

"This is pre-eminently a time for united prayer, both privately day by day and corporately in our places of worship on the coming Sunday, that God's will may be discerned and the teaching of Christ followed in all our planning for our economic life. The example of President Roosevelt, who, before assuming the grave responsibilities of Government, turned quietly aside for prayer, and again at the end of his inaugural address invoked the blessing of God upon his efforts, should

HOLD STEADY

By Bishop Paul B. Kern

This temporary flurry in the financial operations of the nation must not dishearten us or confuse our fixed purpose. It is now clear we were providentially led to choose Easter Sunday rather than a suggested earlier date for our great Self-Denial Offering. By that time a new steadiness and confidence will be ready to launch out on this adventure of spiritual discipline. Our Methodist congregations are everywhere loyal. The cause is on their hearts. They intend to save this world-wide task of our Church. Let none of us lose heart or confuse a temporary embarrassment with even the thought of a defeat. We are going to win this battle in the name of Him who trusted and marched on, even when the way was hard and the end uncertain. Our resources are not in banks. They are in God. Keep praying, keep sharing every day, keep trusting: "Have faith in God." The victory is near, and it is His will that we achieve it.

(Bishop Dobbs, authorizes us to announce that the day for the Kingdom Extension Self-Denial Offering in Louisiana, which had been set for March 12, has been postponed until Sunday March 26.—Editor.)

be an inspiration to us all. This sincere recognition of the need for Divine guidance and strength, expressed simply and unaffectedly, has persuasively illustrated the spirit which should characterize the life of the entire nation."—Federal Council.

STATES' RIGHTS

Dr. George B. Winton, Dean of the School of Religion of Vanderbilt University, says concerning this matter of repeal:

"The provision in our Federal Constitution for the amendment of that instrument recognizes the dual nature of our government. No amendment can have effect until it is approved by both the States and the Federal Congress.

"It is of the essence of all such legal requirements that the action of each party shall be voluntary and free. In particular there should be freedom from any interference, direct or indirect, by the other party.

"Congress has just adopted and laid before the States of our Union the twenty-first amendment to the Constitution. I have read the resolution of enactment, and followed, though not closely, the discussion which preceded its adoption. That discussion and the terms of the resolution clearly prove that the Congress does not intend to leave the States free to act or to refrain from action. It assumes to dictate to them the manner of their action, namely, not by legislatures as heretofore, but by conventions. Now, as a supporter of the Democratic party, which, I trust, has not wholly departed from its States' rights principles, I wish to observe:

"1. In this part of the resolution Congress clearly acted beyond its province—ultra vires. It is for each State to determine how it shall pass upon the proposed amendment.

"2. Since this provision is integral to the act of Congress, that whole action may be vitiated in case some State decides to disregard this demand and operate, as heretofore, through its legislature.

"3. No provision for the election of Conventions of the type here implied now exists. For Congress to make such provision, as is proposed in a bill already introduced in the House of Representatives, would be a further act of interference with the liberty of the States, in violation of the obvious legal principle to which I have above referred."—Nashville Advocate.

NAPOLEON BACK FROM ELBA

Dear Friends of Prohibition:

Attention, DRYS! Remember the date. On Tuesday, March 28, at 10 a.m., in the city of Alexandria, a very important State-wide meeting will be held by believers in national prohibition. Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs is calling the meeting and is inviting all friends of the cause of all denominations or of no denomination. As the temporary chairman of the Allied Forces for Prohibition for the State of Louisiana, I wish to second the call to that meeting most earnestly. Every community in the State ought to be well represented. From the deliberations at Alexandria there should result organizations for State, congressional districts, parishes, cities and villages. It is high time for us to present a united and aggressive front against the strong and persistent wet attacks, or we shall lose all that has been gained in the heroic struggle of a hundred years. We need to build the dikes high against the wet deluge.

Thirteen years ago we thought we had banished John Barleycorn for good and all, but, like Napoleon, he has escaped from Elba and is again at the head of his faithful army of brewers and wet politicians. Let's give him his Waterloo this time. At a critical moment in the battle just mentioned, Wellington, the Iron Duke, shouted to his troops: "Boys, can you think of giving way? Hold out here to the last man. Remember Old England."

Yours for a dry country,

WILLIAM G. PHELPS.

OLDEST WHITWORTH GRADUATE DIES

By Rev. J. H. Morrow

Somewhere in Tensas Parish, La., in the home of Nathaniel and Rachel Johnson Guice, on June 23, 1843, there was born to this rugged pioneer father and mother a beautiful baby girl, with brown eyes and raven tresses; to whom the proud parents gave the name of Debora Louisa in holy baptism. Soon after the birth of this daughter the family moved to Jefferson County, Miss., where they resided until Debora Louisa grew to young womanhood.

When the time arrived for the selection of an institution of higher learning for their daughter, Whitworth College, Brookhaven, which was then opening for the first time, was chosen as the proper school. In 1861 she graduated with honor and received her diploma with the first class that went out from the college, before her death the only surviving member of this class. The high ideals and Christian culture that were engendered by this Christian institution of learning was ever a blessing not only to herself and family, but also to every life that came in contact with her gentle, Christlike character. To the end of her last hour, the refining Christian influence of her Alma Mater shone from her life like an aureole.

"You may break, you may shatter,

The vase if you will;

But the scent of the roses

Will cling to it still."

Aunt Lou, as she was affectionately known to her friends, was thrice married; having been married shortly after her graduation to M. W. F. Higdon, of Franklin County, where she made her home practically the rest of her life. After the death of Mr. Higdon, which occurred in 1877, she remained a widow until 1891, when she was married to Mr. M. M. Currie. Again her life was saddened by the death of this second husband just one year after their marriage. Four years later she again married, and was married this time to Mr. E. J. Guice. Again fate decreed that her life was to be one of loneliness. After three years of happiness, Mr. Guice passed away. To these marriages no children were given to be a comfort in old age. Her parents having already preceded Mr. Guice, she was left alone with the exception of a few distant relatives and a large circle of friends, who always delighted to welcome her. Their homes she could always claim as her very own.

At the time of her death she was making her home with Mrs. Monroe Whittington and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Kirby, who loved her as though she were their mother. No loving son could have been more to her than Tom Kirby.

Sister Guice was a lifelong member of the Methodist Church. To this communion she gave unstintingly of her time, her talent and means. One of her last acts was to remember her pastor in a material way, and send a substantial check to our Children's Home in Jackson.

She was ever the friend of preachers, doing all she could to make their work a pleasure. This writer will ever cherish her memory for the many acts of kindness and words of encouragement, and inspiration he received from this beautiful life as a young pastor on his first work.

Sunday evening, Dec. 11, 1932, at the ripe age of 80 years, surrounded by loving friends she passed through the portals of the father's house.

After the funeral services, which were conducted from the Gloster Methodist Church by Dr. G. F. Winfield, President of Whitworth College, and Rev. J. H. Morrow, her body was carried by sorrowing friends to the Mount Carmel Cemetery, in Franklin County, and laid beside that of her mother and father, there to await the Resurrection Morn.

As it was said of David, so it could have been said of her, that after serving her generation by the will of God, she fell to sleep and was laid unto her fathers.

THE VALUE OF THE CHURCH PAPER

The Federal Council of Churches deplores the fact that, despite the high character of most of our church papers, the local church and the Christian home make but meager use of them.

We have failed to emphasize sufficiently the necessity for religious reading in the homes of our people. The great mass of our people are getting their views of life and the supreme problems of our time, not from the church press, but from secular journals, scenarios and commercialized radio broadcasts. The loss in subscriptions has brought some of our most honored journals into financial distress and has greatly restricted their influence for good in the churches.

It is the conviction of the Federal Council that in the years which lie ahead the greatest possible emphasis should be placed on developing an intelligent and informed church membership, sufficiently interested in religion to read the publications of the Church as a means of learning what the churches are doing and ought to do, and of securing a Christian point of view on all questions seriously affecting human life.

We recommend that our constituent bodies be urged to use the most effective means possible to promote in the congregations the ideal of "a church paper in every Christian home," and also to inspire the faithful reading of the same.—Federal Council of Churches.

JOHN TILLERY LEWIS—AN APPRECIATION

By Rev. E. S. Lewis.

The subject of this brief sketch has finished his ministry and gone to his reward. His activity is over but the influence of his life lives on. He had a great host of friends and they mourn with a sincere sorrow at his untimely going. He was only 58 years of age, too early to break down as we think, but disease consults not with age nor condition.

Brother Lewis joined the North Mississippi Conference in 1899 just after he was graduated from Millsaps College. Since that time he has given himself without stint to the work of the Christian ministry. He loved to preach and loved to sing. His religion was of the radiant sort, the kind that loves and sings and works and triumphs. Many souls were won to the Kingdom through his ministry and there will be many in that day no doubt who will rise up and call him blessed.

The summer after his graduation he came into my charge in east Mississippi and helped me in some revival work and spent some time in our home. From that day to this we have been fast friends, though not related by blood. His people and my people came from Wales to this country before the war of the revolution but our kinship was too remote to be traced. That did not prevent the closest friendship. He had large capacity for making friends wherever he went. These are one's richest possession.

Brother Lewis left one daughter and two sons, one a young preacher. This preacher boy is with his mother near Hazlehurst where they now make their home.

The funeral service was held in the Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, conducted by Dr. John R. Countiss, Dean of Grenada College. He was assisted by Revs. W. O. Sadler, Jas. H. Felts, J. L. Decell, and E. S. Lewis. A large number of friends and relatives were present to offer their sympathy and testify to their appreciation of the departed minister. May God bless those who are left behind.

NOTICE TO PREACHERS OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

In response to an urgent appeal as indicated in Report No. 2 of the Board of Missions, North Mississippi Conference, 77 preachers, whose names appear below, have offered their services for one revival meeting, promising to send the offering made during this meeting to Rev. Melville Johnson, Treasurer, which amount shall be used for the promotion of our Conference missionary work. If you will continue to co-operate with us in this work, write one of these brethren and arrange for a meeting. They will gladly go to any charge in our Conference. The Board has borrowed and paid to our mission pastors $1,000 and unless conditions improve, it is probable that this amount will be all we shall be able to appropriate to our mission charges until the meeting of the Annual Conference. Other names will be published as pledge cards are received. With the offerings we receive from these meetings, the Board plans to help our mission pastors through the lean summer months. If you have not already pledged your support to this plan, will you not join us in this important work by mailing your card to me immediately?

A. R. BEASLEY, Secretary,
Conf. Board of Missions.

MILITARY TRAINING AT MILLSAPS COLLEGE

By Rev. R. R. Branton

During the past football season, the writer had the pleasure of returning to the campus of Millsaps College to witness one of those exciting events in which the Majors were victorious. The setting of the field was such, however, that we were left wondering whether we had been invited to see a football game, or to witness a demonstration of military tactics—military uniforms, military formations, military officers, military guns and swords, despite the fact that there were no dangerous enemies in sight. The only thing that reminded us of the former Millsaps was the purple and white flag that meekly took its place beside the Stars and Stripes. An old grad sitting next to us remarked: "We have a band now," but the remark left us wondering "at what price?"

In this time of financial stress, we are anxious to take advantage of any legitimate means of bolstering depleted treasuries. It seems a fine thing to be able to put the financial burden of our college band on the shoulders of the military authorities. We are also sure that the boys have no objection to being paid for their drills, and to having trips given them without cost to themselves. But again we ask, "at what price?"

If the college band is fully affiliated with the National Guard (as it is our understanding that it is), the boys are subject to call for military duty at any time, or under any circumstances. This, however, isn't the darkest side of the picture. The presence of military training, although in this mild form, means that Millsaps College has become a center of military influence. It also proves to what extent military authorities will go in order that they may inject this deadly virus into the veins of all phases of Christian society. So far as preparation for modern warfare is concerned, this type of military training isn't worth anything, and no one knows this better than do our military leaders. But for keeping alive military influence, there is no better agency than the Christian college, and how well do the military authorities know that!

We are sure that there isn't a friend of Millsaps College who is not tremendously interested in her welfare. In a very special way, this is true of President Key and the Board of Trustees, who carry the burdens of administration and supervision. In this connection we should like to ask a few questions. Is it the mission of Millsaps College to teach militarism? Is the present gain worth the possible result? Are Christianity and militarism compatible? Has not the church too long marched "with the cross in one hand and a dripping sword in the other?"

The president and trustees of Millsaps College have certainly in the past shown their interest in the moral welfare of the institution. They have banned many practices that seemed to be detrimental. The writer has always been in agreement with the authorities relative to dancing and card-playing, but we are wondering if the forbidding of such things as dancing and card-playing, and allowing the influence of militarism to come in, is not "straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel?"

CHANGING HUMAN NATURE

Some people insist that human nature cannot be changed, but they who so speak only reveal their poor reading of history and stupid understanding of the facts of life. So far from it being a fact that human nature can't be changed, the truth is that change is an inseparable part of human nature. It may be changed, inevitably it is changing; that change may not always be for the better, but we believe that the change for the better is easier and more natural than the change for the worse. And such a conviction rests solidly down upon the fact that God is in it, and that in some very pervasive and wellnigh irresistible way He is working for the change in human nature which means a growing intelligence and a higher ideal and a finer achievement.

But what are we to do when we see so many evidences of revision, and when the progress that we believe in seems to slip and even turn its face the other way? There is only one thing to do—try to believe our doctrine with even greater and calmer assurance. One thing that has kept the world back, and put heavy drags upon the wheels of progress, has been the halting faith and confidence of those who should have been helping it forward. The people who have helped most in making the world better are the people who, even in the ebb and flow of things, never allowed a seeming slow-up or a momentary set-back to break their hearts or kill their hope. When the near-at-hand seemed a bit discouraging they took the longer view and still found good ground for confidence and expectation.

After all, we cannot turn God out of His universe, neither can we legitimately conclude that He is no longer the Lord and Master of the human spirit and seeking ever its strengthening in all that is noblest and best. The worst atheism in the world is the kind that does not believe in the power of good over evil, the power of a loving God to make over the hearts and lives of men more nearly to His liking. And when we say the last word we can say about the inviolability of the human will and stress to the limit the fact that man is the maker of his own destiny, we can never get away from the truth that God is still in His world and that His purposes for man are high and holy past any thought of ours to conceive and that His patience and His skill are past all human thinking. The man who is working for a better world has behind him the unending purpose of a God of infinite love and a grace that cannot for ever fail of its purpose.—Exchange.

lifts his hand and solemnly takes the oath as President of the United States. His inaugural word of courage and confidence, though, turn the trick and a thrill goes throughout the land. "It's all over. Prosperity is here."

No, it is not here yet. Mr. Roosevelt is no Houdini however much we should like him to be. Surely we have learned well the lesson that material prosperity waits upon spiritual rehabilitation. "Let us have confidence," we are exhorted. That is fine. But confidence is built upon trustworthiness. Confidence has been violated in high places. And confidence is something that has to have time to grow.

Our first concern should be, not with material prosperity, but with righteousness. There must be a revival of the spirit of public office as a public trust, and of the sacredness of responsibility in every walk of life.

While we are at the foundation and replacing the mud sills of confidence, let us overlook nothing. Let us learn well the whole lesson. It is no "crip" course, I assure you. There is no "getting by." Messrs. Mitchell, Harriman and some others are finding out. Whatsoever a man soweth he must reap. And, in this case, his neighbors are forced to help in the harvest.

But what I started out to say was, let's not pull prosperity green.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Mrs. J. H. Brown, Jonesboro, La., renews her subscription and sends a most encouraging letter.

Rev. C. Y. Higginbotham, pastor at Walnut Grove, Miss., sends in some renewals. Thank you, Brother Higginbotham.

Millsaps College has just released the list of honor students. There are 63 names, the longest list on record. These students made 90 or above.

Rev. C. M. Morris, Mangham, La., commends the Advocate. From some source we heard that the charge under his care is making good progress.

Rev. R. T. Hollingsworth, pastor at Brooksville, Miss., will hold a revival in his church beginning May 18. Rev. W. R. Lott will preach in the meeting.

Dr. Theodore Copeland, writing from Nashville, Tenn., says that the Nashville office knows we are in New Orleans all right. Well, let us convince them still more. They are watching us.

Dr. W. L. Duren, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, who recently visited Rev. J. E. Cunningham at the Veterans' Hospital, Pineville, La., reports that Brother Cunningham is much improved. We all rejoice.

"Come to our District Conference. There will be dinner on the ground—or somewhere—and a fine time is promised for all." That is how we get warned in for a District Conference by Dr. H. T. Carley, presiding elder, Monroe District.

"Our hearts have been grieved by the loss of one of our beloved Zone Leaders, Mrs. W. E. Stephens, Many, La., who passed to her reward on January 29th. Her zone held a meeting at Many, Feb. 8, at which there was a memorial service for her."

Rev. A. L. Davenport, Tyro, Miss., continues to visit among his people and to pray for them in their homes. He is one of our many faithful pastors who are working under great handicaps from the economic situation of his people. God will reward his faithful servants.

A good letter comes from Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, Louisville, Miss., who has had a temporary lay-off on account of illness. He reports that he is now able to be on both of his feet and to keep off of the toes of others. We congratulate him and wish him happy days ahead.

Rev. C. L. Rogers, pastor of Central Church, Columbus, Miss., is doing a faithful piece of work. His church has been considerably weakened financially, yet the people are loyal and the pastor is giving them his very best of heart and mind. Such loyalty cannot help but succeed.

Rev. W. B. Baker, our pastor at Durant, Miss., continues to lead his people well in all phases of the program of the church. He is a diligent and painstaking pastor. Happy is the church whose leader carries out the full program of the church and can lead in all its work.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

"Together we cannot fail."

The Arcadia, La. church is moving forward under the active leadership of Rev. J. Henry Bowdon. Regular attendance has more than doubled. Prayer meeting attendance has grown from six to eighty-three. Some of you get in there and beat him and his people if you can.

Rev. W. N. Duncan, P. E. of the Greenwood District, is busy going among his pastors and people, encouraging them and trying to lead them to works of sacrifice. Brother Duncan preaches the gospel in its purity. The people over the district hear him gladly and to great profit.

Rev. W. M. Hester, pastor at Longview, Miss., is for the first time appointed to a pastorate out of the bounds of the Aberdeen District. Brother Hester has many friends all over the Aberdeen District territory. He is trying to carry forward every phase of the work in his new charge.

Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, reports a number of very successful Kingdom Extension meetings throughout the district. "Crowds have been large and the spirit of the meetings fine." And he invites the Editor to his District Conference, which convenes at Vivian, April 18.

Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, widow of Rev. J. M. Wyatt, of the North Mississippi Conference, is in the Methodist Hospital of Memphis, Tenn., for treatment. Let our people pray for the recovery of Sister Wyatt. Mrs. Wyatt and her daughter, Mrs. Bankston, are both members of our First Church, Greenwood, Miss.

The revival at Amory, Miss., Evangelist F. M. Neal of Amarillo, Texas, with Mr. Goodpastor as singer, is stirring the entire section for the church. Capacity crowds are hearing the sermons. Brother Neal is one of the most successful General Evangelists of our church. Rev. C. T. Floyd is the pastor.

A few weeks ago a man by the name of William Bowdie died in Lima, Ohio, at the age of 102. He boasted the record of not having missed Sunday school in 96 years. As to what effect this record had upon his longevity we cannot say, but we have some rather definite feelings as to what it meant to his spiritual life.

Listen to this, laymen. "With reference to the 'Save the Advocate' campaign, we are going to have to 'keep on keeping on' until we have accomplished it. I shall render what service I can in this cause." W. D. Hawkins, Missionary Secretary, Mississippi Conference. That makes us a bit more sure of springtime.

Rev. J. J. Garner, pastor at Crawford, Miss., is making a good start in that important charge. Brother Garner always stays four or five years wherever he is appointed, and each year his people appreciate him more. He is an excellent pastor and a preacher who feeds the souls of his people every Sunday by his good sermons.

"I am very much interested in the success of the Advocate, and I hope to keep all the subscribers here in the notion of renewing, and I may be able to find some more new subscriptions." That is Rev. J. B. Burns, Ethel, Miss. When a pastor writes like that we get set to see him come under the wire with a good long list.

Rev. J. H. Stafford, one of our New Orleans local preachers, called at the office the other day for a friendly word, renewed his subscription and left enough in addition to renew for some superannuate preacher. Brother Stafford is doing missionary work in and around New Orleans. The renewal goes to Rev. J. H. Foreman, Pelahatchie, Miss.

Let us warn just as many as can to hear Dr. E. Stanley Jones when he comes to Memphis, March 29. Without assuming material obligation we authorize and urge our North Mississippi Conference people, especially preachers, to take advantage of the opportunity. No missionary of our day deserves more widely and attentively to be heard.

Rev. J. A. McCormack, pastor at Hammond, La., renews the subscription of Mr. D. H. Taylor, saying, "Brother Taylor is a member of the Presbyterian Church, but has been a subscriber to the Advocate for about 50 years. He is one of our most substantial and honorable citizens." Let our Methodist people take a cue from Brother Taylor.

United States Senator Morris Sheppard, of our sister state of Texas, staunch prohibitionist, who recently led the fight in the upper house against the bill calling for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, and the more recent bill legalizing 3.2 per cent beer and wine, is a member of the Southern Methodist Church. "By their works ye shall know them."

The revival at Aberdeen, Miss., with Rev. A. T. McIlwain doing the preaching, was very successful. Although the meeting opened the same day all the banks of the nation closed and there was general unrest, the congregations increased daily until the large auditorium was packed to capacity. People will still hear the gospel when it is faithfully preached.

A series of pre-Easter services are being conducted in the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, New Orleans, where large crowds are hearing Dr. G. A. Klein, General Evangelist of Memphis, Tenn., who is preaching each evening at 7:45. The services started on last Sunday and will continue indefinitely. Dr. Benj. F. Rogers pastors these good people.

Rev. M. E. Scott will do the preaching in a pre-Easter revival in his church at Pontotoc, Miss. This is his first year in that charge. Brother Scott is a good evangelistic preacher. Pontotoc has a fine, new church building, well equipped for modern church work. The Aberdeen District pastors recently met in that church for their quarterly preachers' meeting.

Revs. V. C. Curtis, C. L. Rogers and A. T. McIlwain attended the Missionary Rally held at Birmingham under the leadership of Bishop W. N. Ainsworth. Quite an array of speakers were on the program among whom were: Bishop Arthur Moore, Dr. Chas. Goodell, Mrs. McCoy, Bishop Paul B. Kern and others. We have no more vigorous leader in the Episcopacy than Bishop Ainsworth. He is a great preacher and a painstaking executive.

The Methodist Churches of New Orleans are conducting a union Pre-Easter Revival at the Rayne Memorial Church under the sponsorship of the Wesley Fellowship. Services started on Monday evening and will continue through Friday. Dr. W. L. Duren, presiding elder of the district delivered the opening sermon, and each night thereafter in the following order, pastors of our various churches in the city were announced to preach: Revs. F. L. Wells, D. B. Raulins, B. F. Rogers, and W. W. Holmes.

Rev. W. M. McIntosh, beloved superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference, still preaches the gospel every chance he gets and wherever he preaches the people flock to hear him. He is an illustration of what an open heart and mind can do for a man as the years go by. He has studied and read and kept in touch with the progress of his church. No criticism on his lips for the many faithful people in the modern church. How it delights our hearts to see a man like that.

Rally around, Louisiana Methodists. Dr. Briscoe Carter, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, writes that he recently called on Brother H. B. Thomason, one of our superannuates living at Bayou Chicot. He found Sister Thomason critically ill and Brother Thomason not only in need of our prayers, but of our material help. Now, forget all about your own troubles for awhile and help cure them by sending something either direct to Brother Thomason or to Dr. Carter, who will see that he gets it. Send it today.

Midnight is the name of a post office up there in Mississippi, not far from Silver City, where Rev. L. F. Alford takes care of the Methodist people. He renews the subscription of Miss Virginia James, who lives there. With the Advocate and those good people, we are going to keep the light burning. Somewhere up there is a place called Sunrise. Brother Alford speaks highly of the kindness of his people in a difficult time. He signs off with, "We are expecting to send in some subscriptions. We enjoy the Advocate."

My printer does not punctuate much better than I do. As a matter of fact, he does not seem to realize how much I depend upon him, both for spelling and punctuation. In the little editorial addenda following the article by Rev. R. T. Pickett, "A Sermon Containing a Protest," in which he blasts at the foundations of my philanthropy and knocks off my "crown," the first sentence was intended to be put like this: "I leave the above accusation and statement to my friends and to my enemies (if they are not all dead). Of course, I was referring to enemies, and not to friends."

We are going to have to give Rev. W. D. Milton, our good pastor at Oak Ridge, La., a little curtain lecture. He says that he has not received the Advocate since he landed in Oak Ridge. Now, hasn't he been missing a lot? He must be one of those preachers who did not tell us to change his paper from the old address. If he did and we failed, then we have something worse than a curtain lecture due us. Brother Milton says that they are moving right along, and the move is shortly to take them into a new parsonage which is going up at Oak Ridge. The funds are in and the plans are complete.

Now, before you go, let me invite and urge all of you to take a big part in the Advocate Circulation Campaign, March 15-May 15. The Manager smiles when he talks about rolling the number up to a circulation of 10,000. A big list? Why, just think. There are about 200,000 Methodists in our three Conferences. You remember what Mr. Roosevelt said at the close of his banking talk. I had about decided that he was going to take over all this big trouble himself and solve all of our problems while we went fishing. But at the close of it he said, "This problem is no less yours than it is mine. Together we cannot fail." Spring is coming. It is time to turn the soil and plant this Advocate crop. If all of you will just come right on now, we'll soon get it done. Then you can go fishing.

TURNING THE CORNER

It is amazing how well the work goes forward under prevailing conditions. The brethren are in good spirits, and the people are supporting the church as well as could be expected. They are having a hard time themselves, but they are dividing with the preachers. Methodists are great folk.

We are having a great time up here. All the banks are closed, business suspended, the March wind howling, and the people in a state of panic. Yet we are glad to say the Word of God is not bound.

We are having fine crowds to preach to. Have received nine members since Conference.

After a terrific cyclone had passed through southern Illinois laying everything flat with the ground, a disheartened farmer went out to sit down among the ruins of his barn, sure that he could not start life over. He heard a rustling among the pile of shingles to his left. Finally a rooster, with just a few feathers left, struggled from his prison, bounced upon a block, arched his neck, and crowed. The farmer said an ugly word to him and followed it with this declaration, "If you can do that after what you have passed through, I can start all over again. And I will."

DR. CLEANTH BROOKS SUFFERS STROKE

Dr. Cleanth Brooks, our pastor at Haynesville, La., on Friday, March 17, suffered a paralytic stroke. Latest information is that the doctors have not arrived at a satisfactory statement as to his condition.

Let earnest prayer be made in behalf of Dr. Brooks.

KINGDOM EXTENSION DAY IN LOUISIANA

Bishop Dobbs authorizes the announcement that Sunday, March 26, is the day for the Kingdom Extension Self Denial offering in the Louisiana Conference.

Word from the Nashville office reveals that the General Board is in great need of funds for sustaining our work, and that March has not brought much relief. Let our people respond generously to this appeal.

ATTENTION, PASTORS AND CHURCH SCHOOL WORKERS, MONROE DISTRICT

All pastors and church school workers are invited to attend a District Christian Education Institute, to be held at Rayville, April 13, 10 a.m. This meeting is sponsored by the District Board of Christian Education for the purpose of discussing problems that are common to local churches in carrying on their programs of Christian education. Definite plans for the institute will be mailed to pastors later.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By W. R. Lott, Contributing Editor

The office of a steward is very important. It is so important that the church gives the pastor the right to nominate members of the boards on the charge. He is to nominate persons of solid piety and natural gifts to transact the business of the church. They are supposed to be very much interested in the Methodist Church. After the stewards have been made it is too often revealed that the selections have not helped the man or the church. We must find some way to hold and grip the stewards so that they will become stronger. When a new Congressman or Senator is sent to Washington he must sit in a class under competent teachers so that he will know how to take part in the deliberations intelligently. Just to nominate a business man to the board of stewards because he can run a business is no indication that he knows anything about the workings of the Methodist Church. We must have training periods for our stewards. I see that a book is being prepared for that; but we need not wait on a book or be confined to any one book.

* * *

The little soreness in our hearts from misunderstandings can work havoc with our happiness. Night comes on and the mind begins to turn them over and over; the little nettling things become deeper and deeper. Over a period of years one's heart can become a veritable house of horrors as these things are kept and caressed. The Christian must not let it be so. When he kneels to pray all that bitterness must be laid on the altar. He must open wide his heart to let the winds of love move in and drive out all "things that offend." It is the Christian privilege to go to sleep at night feeling that there is only good will to all mankind and to wish every soul the best gifts of God.

* * *

Sarcasm is a dangerous weapon. It is so sharp; too sharp for the unskilled to use at all. It does not take much intelligence to be sarcastic. The Christian must be very careful with it for it will cut the one who uses it. A sarcastic, cutting remark will at times bring results for good by bringing a person to a realization of the situation, but the people who can use it to advantage are as rare as poets. Deep wounds can be made which are hard to heal. Think several times before you say that, for out there are some minds who will not forget what you say. The Scriptures advise words "seasoned with grace."

JACKSON DISTRICT PREACHERS MEET AT MENDENHALL

After an appropriate devotional led by Rev. H. S. Westbrook, Brother J. A. Smith gave us a masterful address on the worth of our program of Christian Education in our Sunday schools and Colleges. He stated that the college owned and controlled by the church which merely tries to duplicate the work done by the state institutions has no excuse for existence. . . . "We must hold up Christ to our people," he said, "or we will not be able to come out of this present political and financial morass."

Our Presiding Elder, Rev. B. L. Sutherland, then gave an outline of our duty in regard to superannuates and urged that every pastor take an offering during or before May for this most worthy cause.

Rev. J. L. Decell, pastor of Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., told us why we carry an assessment in our Conference budget for Hospitals. He said that we have, in Hattiesburg, the most modern hospital in the state; that we owe $125,000 on same. He then briefly explained what our church was doing with the Golden Cross funds each year.

Rev. S. F. Harkey, speaking on the subject of Missions, brought home his plea for earnest, wholehearted support of our Missionary enterprise with the story of Lizzie Johnson, who, bed-ridden, raised $20,000 for missions with her own hands and was the inspiration making it possible for Bishop Brown, of the Northern Methodist Church, to raise $100,000 more. (It would be well if every pastor would obtain the story of Lizzie Johnson.)

At this time Brother Sutherland delivered a deeply inspirational sermon on the Holy Spirit. The High School children were permitted to come over to the church for this service.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Well, next Sunday is Young People's Day! Throughout Southern Methodism churches will be observing this, our Anniversary Day, in one way or another. From the look of things, a great many churches will observe this year which have never before done so—and this is indeed an encouraging sign. True, the financial crisis through which we (I hope) have passed, will probably have its effect on the offerings. But let us all remember that the offering is by no means the most important part of the observance of Young People's Day. Rather, the important thing is that the Day be observed in every single church in our Conference with a special program, preferably by the young people. If we can make this a record-breaking year in that respect, we won't be worried about the offering's size. No matter how small it is, just send it to Mr. Wallace White, Box 260, Alexandria, La., immediately after your program, so that we will have record of your having observed. Will you do that? Thank you.

Ever-Ready Christian Culture Institute

In spite of handicaps, hindrances of many sorts, the Christian Culture Institute held at Jonesboro March 3, 4 and 5, was eminently successful in its results. Thirty-two credits were given at the close, and splendid resolutions were drawn up to be sent to every church in the district, tying the effects of the institute to the district program.

Those who attended the institute were greatly saddened when, on Tuesday, Mar. 7, Mrs. Sybil Blalock was taken by death, as the result of a second stroke of paralysis, first of which she had as she was teaching the class on Missions and World Friendship on Friday night of the institute. Deepest sympathy is extended to the bereaved members of her family in the loss of this noble Christian character.

Rev. H. B. Hysell completed Mrs. Blalock's course, and Miss Louise Trussel taught the class in Recreation and Personal Development, with Rev. A. W. Townsend teaching the Worship class. We congratulate Miss Grace Jones, District Director, and the members of the Ever-Ready Union for this splendid institute, in the face of unforeseen difficulties.

New Orleans Standard Training School

We had the privilege of attending the first Young People's Standard Training School sponsored by the New Orleans City Young People's Union. Forty-one standard credits were issued at the close Friday night, March 10—twenty in the course "Recreational Leadership," taught by Rev. E. O. Harbin of Nashville, Tenn.; twelve in the course "Worship," taught by Rev. D. B. Raulins; and nine in the course "The World Mission of the Christian Religion," taught by Dr. Frank L. Wells.

Supper was served each night at the church—Rayne Memorial—different churches serving each evening. Friday evening a banquet consisting of turkey and all the fixin's (for 35¢ a plate!) was enjoyed—especially the program which was built around the circus idea, with Mr. Harbin as mind-reader and Rev. J. B. Grambling as his "bally-hoo-er," talks by Sam Stone Holmes and Rev. V. D. Morris, and pep songs led by Nahum Mickal.

The recreational period upstairs following the classes each night was thoroughly enjoyed, under Mr. Harbin's leadership. The devotionals each evening just preceding classes were conducted by Dr. W. W. Holmes, on the theme of choosing the road, and were most inspirational in their directness and challenge. We congratulate the Union on the success of this first undertaking of this particular type.

NURSERY MEETS ITS ASSESSMENT IN SPECIAL CALL

"Thousand Dollar Day" was observed at East End Methodist church, Meridian, with an impressive service.

As in the past, the amount was apportioned to the different Sunday school classes. The nursery, of which Mrs. C. M. Martin is superintendent, was assessed fifty dollars. The department members felt that it was a testing time with them with the banks closed, but they had faith and worked that much harder. When the reports were made, everyone being assembled in the main auditorium to hear the results, the total of the nursery was $66. This was made possible by prayer, members and friends of the little ones.

"Not to sit up and sit, but to git up and git," was the motto of the class.

The bills and checks were given in a jumping rope, and two tiny members walked down the aisle, carrying their love gift from the babies. The significance was: They had to jump to get the money.

TO OUR PASTORS

Our much beloved Bishop Dobbs recently wrote to Rev. John A. May, Monticello, Ala., as follows: "You are always welcome in the Episcopal District, over which I preside."

In reference to putting our revival off on account of local financial conditions, Brother May wrote: "I am not coming to you for the money; God is calling me to go. There is work there that He wants me to do. I have nothing to do with collections. You can pay me in free-will offerings and family produce poundings."

Dr. May is a General Evangelist of our Church, a graduate of Vanderbilt University, has written a number of books, and I believe is a consecrated and deeply spiritual evangelist.

Our revival at Mangham will be held at the high school auditorium, March 21 to April 2, inclusive. If you need Brother May do not allow financial conditions to hinder you in securing his services. Write him, until April 3, Rev. John A. May, Box 116, Mangham, La.

Yours fraternally,
C. M. MORRIS, Pastor.
Mangham, La.

FROM KINGSTON, LAUREL

Dear Advocate: I have been royally received by the people of Kingston, Laurel, charge, and a very interesting and effective campaign begun immediately. Dr. W. M. Sullivan, our efficient presiding elder, was with us Sunday morning, and preached a very excellent sermon from the text found in Genesis 36:27, from the words, "my name is Jacob."

The second quarterly conference was held at 1:45 p. m., and the reports revealed the fact that $1,500 had been expended by the people of this charge within the last sixty days. The parsonage has been thoroughly remodeled at an expense of twelve hundred dollars, and is now beautiful both inside and outside. The church at Antioch has been painted inside and out and the ground leveled and cleared at an expense of approximately two hundred dollars. Reports of the Epworth Leagues, Sunday school, Woman's Missionary Society, Stewardship Committee, Missionary Committee, and that of the general state of the church reveal great advancement along all lines, each having received new members and approximately fifty members are now ready to be received on Easter Sunday, at which time we expect a class of not less than a hundred.

We are now in the midst of the cultural work preparatory for our revival, which begins on April 2 and continues through the 16th, with two services daily. We have four teams at work daily—two from the Epworth League

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

and two from the Woman's Missionary Society. Each team is composed of four persons and visits four homes each day. They announce the revival, solicit co-operation and hold prayer. Each of these teams hold a Cottage Prayer meeting at a stated time during each week. Other teams will be put into the field if needed to thoroughly cultivate the field or ground before the revival begins.

The presiding elder is very complimentary of both the work and plan of the revival and promises to be present as much of the time as possible, and publicly urged the ministers of Laurel and all Christian people to co-operate in this campaign, and we hereby ask all readers of the Advocate, both clerical and lay, to join us in earnest prayer for the revival and that the pastor may be given wisdom, information, consecration and strength to do the work as it would be done.

The Lord's blessings upon the Advocate and its readers.

The following poem was written by
Mrs. Eugene Felder, of Topisaw
Camp Ground, Brookhaven District, and read by her at a zone meeting held at Centenary Church, McComb:
SOCIAL RELATIONS

In looking about for something to say
On the subject assigned to me today,
Material suitable was scarce indeed;
What I found I did not need.

I looked through the "Voices" once and again,
And other material I had on hand;
But nothing there I found would do,
So I stopped and said: "What shall I do?"

I asked our President for some advice.
She said, "I think it would be quite nice
To write a poem about it all To read when Topisaw's name is called."

So, at her suggestion, I made an attempt
To list our duties, from Heaven sent.
Each member a Christian up and about Her Master's business in church and out.

The sick, the distressed, the poverty-stricken;
The homeless, the helpless on beds of affliction;
The widows and orphans that are in our land.
Need our prayers and a helping hand.

These call us to service each day and hour;
To fail to respond is to weaken His power.
The underprivileged and other races
Have in God's Kingdom, certain places.

Our duty is to help them to find
A place to serve, "Shall we be blind
And let the souls wander away
And risk the chance of another day?"

So long as there's ignorance and poverty, too,
There are numerous tasks for us to do.
So long as the laws of God are broken
There's a field for service and words well spoken.

Helpless children are all about;
Tiny things puzzle them and cause them to doubt.
They are eager to learn, and anxious to work.
The place for them to begin is in the church.

Whose duty is it to invite them to come?
Their places can be filled by no other one.
This duty falls on you and me;
If we respond, results you'll see.

But if we each stand idly by,
And only hope and wish and sigh,
Let's ne'er forget, the time will come,
We'll remember these things we should have done.

Opportunities come but once, they say,
So let's be about our duty each day.
It may be only the meager task
Of cheering the ones by whom we pass.

The songs we sing along the way
May lighten the burden and brighten the day.
Words of praise, truthfully spoken,
May cheer some heart which is almost broken.

Whatever our mission in the world today,
God help us to lift our hearts and pray.
"Not our will, Lord, but Thine be done."
With God as Commander the victory is won.

We are delighted to announce that a son was born to Dr. and Mrs. Boone was formerly a professor in Scarritt College and Julia Lake Stevens Bowen was Young People's Secretary, Woman's Work, Board of Missions, our readers will hail this announcement

L. S. Stoner. The president, Mrs. Abe
Nolan, presided over the program on Scarritt College, the feature being a playlet, "Mary Porter, Home From licious sandwiches with hot tea.

MARTHA ANN GOFF was born near Agricola, Miss., in the year 1852.
During 1863, at Salem Camp Ground, she gave her heart and life to her Master, being then sixteen years of age. She became an active member of the Methodist Church, and took pleasure in doing what she could for the Master and His church, being a natural soprano singer. By her beautiful voice many were lead to think on their way. In 1873 she married William Jasper Johnson, and their union was blessed with ten children.

Her life followed the lines of the first chapter of Proverbs, 10th, to 31st, verses inclusive. No better eulogy could be found for her than the lines referred to. She fell asleep peacefully, February 11, 1933, about 4:45 in the morning, at the home of her daughter, Orange Grove, Miss. After services at the home, her body was carried by loving hands to Johnson Cemetery near Wade, Miss., where services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. E. J. Coker, assisted by the writer. Eight children, 33 grandchildren, 22 great grandchildren, four brothers and numerous other relatives survive her. Two grandsons and four great grandsons served as pall bearers. May others follow in the path of the Saviour she trusted as she so willingly did.

REV. E. D. HUTCHISON.

MRS. CHARLOTTE ELIZABETH BLACKWELL, daughter of the late Rev. and Mrs. T. C. Clark of Cato (now Johns), Miss., was born February 6, 1848, and died January 19, 1933. She lived to within eight days of her eighty-fifth year, dying from a stroke of paralysis. She resided with her youngest daughter, Mrs. W. B. Roberts, 1107 Seventeenth avenue, Meridian, Miss. She was buried from the Montrose Methodist Church, where she spent the larger part of her church life, though she was a member of Central Church, Meridian, Dr. L. L. Cowan, her pastor, performing the ceremony, after which she was buried by the side of her husband, who had preceded her across to the other shore, nearly twenty-six years ago.

She was the daughter of a local Methodist preacher, the grand daughter of a Presbyterian minister, who came to the States from England. She is the mother of the pastor of De Soto charge, Mississippi Conference, and grandmother of that pastor's son, who is now finishing his B. D. and M. A. degrees from the S. M. U., at Dallas, Texas. This mother leaves six children to mourn her death, ten grand children, together with other relatives, to follow her to that city eternal whose builder and maker is God. Her home was ever and always the home of her pastor and other preacher friends. Her's was a life of sacrifice and service. She loved God, her church, her neighbors, her home and family. Truly, she came to the end of her earthly pilgrimage, full of faith and good works. God bless her memory.

"Tired!" Oh yes, so tired, dear.
The day has been very long;
But shadowy gloaming draweth near.
'Tis time for the even' song.

I'm ready to go to rest at last;
Ready to say, "Good night!"
The sunset glory darkens fast;
Tomorrow will bring me light.

Sing once again, "Ahide with Me,"
The sweetest evening hymn;
And now "good night." I cannot see.
The light has grown dim.

"Tired!" Oh yes, so tired, dear.
I shall soundly sleep tonight.
With never a dream, and never a fear,
To wake in the morning light.

Her preacher boy,
WALTER.

On Nov. 25, 1932, REV. JAMES HERVIE HOFFPAUL, a true and faithful servant of God and the Church of Jesus Christ for 23 years, reached that day of promotion. God called Brother Hoffpaul to his eternal reward in a manner which was beautiful and glorious. While attending to his duties about his little home and store, to which he had retired because of ill health, his last active work was as pastor of the Arcadia circuit. Brother Hoffpaul was greatly beloved because of his great heart and Christ-like spirit as he ministered to the people of the charges of which he became pastor. Rev. James Hervie Hoffpaul was born at Indian Bayou, March 28, 1871, and was 61 years of age at the time of his death. His early life was spent in the vicinity of his birthplace. Thirty-one years ago he was married to Miss Estella Spell, of Ridge, La. Two children were born to them, Talmadge Hoffpaul and Stanley Hoffpaul, both of Crowley, La., who, with their mother survive him. Rev. Mr. Hoffpaul was ordained a deacon by Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, in the city of Monroe, La., on the twelfth day of December, 1912. He was ordained elder by Bishop Warren A. Candler on the thirteenth day of December, 1914. The city of Crowley and the people of Arcadia Parish lost a fine Christian gentleman in the passing of this great servant of God. We pray the blessings of God upon those who are bereaved in the passing of their husband and father.

C. K. SMITH.

MRS. CELIA A. SHINE

Mrs. Celia A. Shine was born Mar. 14, 1847, and died Jan. 25, 1933. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Castleberry, with whom she made her home, and Mrs. Jones, both of Durant, Miss. Also three grand-children, Celia Castleberry, Edward and Ruth Jones, all of Durant, Miss. She also leaves a host of friends to mourn her loss.

Mrs. Shine joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, early in life and was a consistent member until her death. It was my privilege to be her pastor for more than a year, and during that time I do not remember of but one service that she missed, and that was Easter Sunday, and her home burned on the Saturday night before Easter. She never missed a prayer meeting service, though she was eighty-six years of age. She died suddenly on Wednesday morning, and just before God called her she had spoken of prayer meeting and getting ready to go. She repeated a verse of Scripture each Wednesday night and the verse she had selected for this service which she did not get to attend was, "Depart from evil, and do good, and dwell for evermore." Psalm 37:27. She lived the spirit of that verse.

She lived a life of usefulness. She was like her Master in that she went about doing good. She was one of the first to find out about sick or needy people in the community, and she was always one of the first to the sick room. She seemed to think each day of something she could do for others. She will truly be missed in this community where she lived the most of her life. We miss her in all of our church services. She was an inspiration to her pastor and to the congregation.

May God bless her memory to the comfort and inspiration of the loved ones who are left behind. Truly, a good woman has gone from us. May her mantle fall upon others who have known her. Funeral services were conducted by her pastor in the presence of a host of friends.

Her pastor.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

"BE STRONG! WE ARE NOT HERE TO PLAY, to dream, to drift; we have hard work to do, and loads to lift. Shun not the struggle, face it, 'tis God's gift. Be strong! Say not the days are evil—who's to blame? And fold the hands and acquiesce—O shame! Stand up, speak out, and bravely, in God's name." That is the way Maltie D. Babcock answered the threat of circumstances. What is your reply?

This is a fine time for us to exhibit the best we have and are in the Christian life. It takes occasions and periods like these to discover the validity of our professions of Christian faith. These days are labeling us for public inspection. And if we don't look out the label is going to be quite different from what we fancied; yea, and what we have been saying for some years perhaps. Are we gold, or just brass? Are we solid oak, or just veneer?

Crises do at least two things: They first reveal character, and then they produce character. As you know, crises and emergencies are the things that catch us off guard. There is no time to put on the paint and powder of a deceiving superficial appearance. Emergencies snatch the curtain just when we are really ourselves. And our friends are sometimes shocked. Again they are amazed at the fortitude and steadiness that they did not dream was there.

During the past months numbers of people who have been accustomed to move in high circles, who have had their classes in Sunday school, who have had their places of honor on church boards, who have been prepared to come to the financial relief of the church and not "feel it," have lost their wealth and the income has been cut to the point of distress. Do they still come to church? Are they on time at the class, still leading with enthusiasm? Or have they sulked away? What they really were all the time is showing up now. Are their souls ragged and shoddy? We are finding out. Are their souls tall, steady and sunny? We are finding out.

But crises with all their painful surprises, endured nobly, make moral muscle and sinews for the soul.

Why don't you make a study of the Book of Job now while it is not taking so much of your time to look after your "income." Just forget all about its being in the Bible, and come to it with your mind and heart wide open and ready. Look upon the most gigantic portrait of a man who suffered the loss of wealth, health, family and friends; yea, his philosophy of life and what seemed the approval of God; but whose integrity remained unscarred and untarnished through it all. Read on. See how God does stand by his own.

IS LIFE WORTH LIVING? Maybe not. "100,000 Commit Suicide Yearly," is the heading of a recent newspaper article. That is the toll for the world. "This gruesome revelation," says the report of Dr. Hans Rost, noted German Scientist, indicates that suicide has become a real "mass epidemic."

The chief cause of this wide-scale suicide is given as the economic depression and unemployment. Driven to desperation, people find that life is not worthwhile.

This is an indictment of our whole civilization and the spiritual forces of the world. Jesus said that man shall not live by bread alone. The forces of the world think that he can. The forces of the church have come too nearly preaching that he can get on without any. Say what we may about it, spiritual prosperity and material progress are inseparably tied together. Jesus never tried to ignore the

THE CHURCH PAPER

By Roger Babson

I believe that every Christian home should have a church paper on its library table, not only for its own inspiration but for the influence on the children. We should have our children understand that we are just as much interested in religious news as we are in travel news, fashion news, financial news and various other forms of news in which different magazines specialize.

physical needs of a man in the attempt to teach him about "spiritual things." Certainly he is not to live by bread alone, but he must have some bread. And our civilization has so operated that it would deprive some of bread altogether and give all of it to others.

What makes life worth living? If our preachers follow the example of Jesus today they are not going to shut their eyes to the forces, economical, political and otherwise, that are responsible for the conditions that surround us today. The Christian life cannot be lived in a vacuum. We have preached half a Christ. Certainly he came to save the individual man; but he cannot much longer be saved in a world that greed is turning into a hell for a vast group of our population.

If Isaiah, Jeremiah, Amos and Hosea had ignored the politics and economics of their time, we never would have heard of them at all.

I ATTEND THE INAUGURATION. There is a corner in every normal soul where may be found a shrine to heroes. Openly and unashamed, I confess my devotions at such an altar. Since childhood I have burned incense there.

On the night of the first day of September, 1916, I threw my blanket down on the steps of the lovely stone structure that now encloses the tiny cabin in which Abraham Lincoln was born, and there I slept within three steps of that cabin door. My father followed Forrest and the Stars and Bars, but he told me that Lincoln was a great man. And he did not regard that opinion as treason to the South.

But I had come to this spot for a double purpose. Not only did I wish to see the place where Lincoln was born and let my soul loose in those surroundings awhile. Another great man was to be on that spot the next day at 11 o'clock. I was there the night before in order to be on time for that event. I am not on time if I am not ahead of time.

Long before the hour set that little farm was covered with cars from some twenty-five States of the Union, and in the little hollow between the speakers' stand and the Lincoln Memorial there was a sea of people estimated to be 25,000.

At exactly the right hour a great car moved slowly down among the people as they gave way and hats came off. On it came until not far from where I sat. Then, in a tense moment, Woodrow Wilson rose and lifted his hat. Hats went into the air and yells of applause rang through the little valley. Cold chills chased themselves up my spine, and great lumps rose in my throat, and my eyes swam in tears.

I was up early the morning of March 4. I went first to the great Pennsylvania Railroad station in Washington, and, for some minutes, watched the crowds streaming into Washington. Where did so many people come from? Next, I rushed around to the Mayflower Hotel. There I saw the President-Elect with members of his family and close friends. While there I saw Mr. Roosevelt slip away to church. I then rushed over to the Capitol, taking my place at various points, one after another, in the great building and watching the people go by. Then I joined an aviator over the city and looked down upon that more than one-hundred-thousand people, all anxiously awaiting the announcement of the "New Deal." Then I took a little peep-in on Mr. Hoover as he gave his final touches to things before passing the reins to Mr. Roosevelt. Finally, I joined a group in the automobile just back of the car carrying Messrs. Hoover and Roosevelt. I could look right down upon their backs. I'll tell you those tall silk hats do a lot for a fellow. Most anybody would look like a president with one on.

For the closing of the program and the climax of the inaugural, I took a place where I could see the door from which Mr. Roosevelt was to come. It was quite a

"In the Name of Our God We Will Set Up Our Banner"

---Ps. 20:5

EASTER SELF-DENIAL ENVELOPE

In the Name of our God Methodism has set up its banners across the world. In a dozen nations the banners fly, and the army marching under them has never known defeat—has never until today retreated. For nearly ninety years we followed the standard of the Lord from victory unto victory.

The forward march will go on. Our present difficulties are temporary. Our enforced hesitancy today will prove preliminary to a great advance. Methodism, when it sees and thinks clearly, will never permit a permanent withdrawal of her missionary lines.

"Hold the lines," wrote a presiding elder, "the reserves are coming." It is true. The reserves are on the way in little red, white and blue envelopes. Re-enforcements in big bills and little bills, silver and gold, dollars, dimes, and pennies—all representing the self-denial—real sacrifice—of Christians who will share their daily bread with a missionary in order to keep the banners flying.

That is what the Self-Denial Envelopes mean. They will tell the story. On the response of the Church to the Self-Denial appeal depends the fate of our large missionary program. Can any Methodist fail—or refuse—to share? Can any preacher neglect to co-operate in a plan so simple yet so effective?

The Self-Denial Envelopes have been sent to all co-operating pastors. See that they are placed in the hands of the people. Explain that day by day Christians should deny themselves—give up something that would cost money if indulged in—place daily the amounts thus saved in the envelopes—sign the attached pledge if they can give more—and bring the whole to the altar of the Church on the appointed day.

long wait, but finally the smiling face of the new Chief appeared. That throng of people for a brief moment was silent, then came the burst of applause.

Mr. Roosevelt moved to his place. After some preliminaries, Chief Justice Hughes stepped forward while the three-hundred-year-old Bible was presented, and Mr. Roosevelt laid his hand upon the Thirteenth Chapter of First Corinthians. Mr. Roosevelt, in strong and unflinching tones, repeated the oath after the Chief Justice.

Then there was quiet. A nation listened, and this was the first utterance of the new Chief: "This is a day of national consecration."

I heard him through to the end. It was a brief, clear and pointed address, with each paragraph of which the confidence of the American people increased.

I did not wait for the grand parade. Like Andy Gump, after I heard the address I said, "That is all I want to know." Then I rushed back to my work.

But I think I saw more of the inauguration than any man in Washington, thanks to the marvel and miracle of radio.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

A cheerful word comes from Dr. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Ruston District.

"Things are looking brighter up here since the banks have opened," writes Rev. A. R. Beasley, Minter City, Miss.

"Hope to send other renewals in a short time," writes Mrs. N. E. Cunningham, Vicksburg, Miss., in a letter containing renewal subscriptions.

Rev. S. A. Seegers, pastor at Rayne, La., never fails to keep the Advocate before his people. Some renewals have already come in from him.

Rev. H. C. Norsworthy, local deacon and lay leader of our good Broad Street Church at Hattiesburg, Miss., reports progress at that church.

Are you one of the more than 2,000 subscribers whose subscriptions are in arrears? If so, won't you make a special effort to send in your renewal today? Thank you.

Mrs. H. M. Scott, Hermanville, Miss., now 83 years of age, renews her subscription, saying, "This paper has been in my home ever since the first issue in 1850."

Rev. Walter M. Hester, Longview, Miss., is one of the pastors who has returned his card, assuring us of his hearty co-operation in the "Keep the Advocate Saved" campaign.

The bulletin of First Church, Greenwood, Miss., Rev. E. H. Cunningham, pastor, reflects a healthy and growing condition in the church. "A Great Savior," was the pastor's topic recently.

IMPORTANT---READ

Business throughout the nation was at a standstill during the recent bank holiday proclaimed by President Roosevelt immediately following his inaugural. This could hardly have been otherwise.

Many banks, however, have since re-opened and are conducting a normal business, and each day finds scores of others doing likewise.

Through it all the Advocate has continued its weekly visits to your homes, despite the fact that collections were not forthcoming. To do this means that pay rolls must be met as usual in order to keep the presses going.

More than 2,000 of our friends have allowed their subscriptions to expire, thus cutting our normal receipts better than $3,500. It is to these good friends of the Advocate that we call for immediate co-operation, and urge that each one forward us by return mail the small amount of $1.50 which will renew your church paper for another year. It amounts to less than three cents per week.

This is no time to call a halt. The Church was never more in need of the Religious Press than it is today. No Christian home should be without its Church paper.

Don't put it off any longer. Send in your renewal today. The label on your paper tells the tale. If it reads March, 1933, or any date prior thereto, your subscription has expired and $1.50 should be forwarded to our office to cover a year's renewal. Send money order wherever possible. Thank you.

Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook, Florence, Miss., writes encouragingly of his work. There is increased attendance at prayer-meeting, and good congregations are attending his pulpit ministry.

Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle, retired now and living near Longview, Miss., invites his friends to visit them in his new home on the highway near Longview. Brother Carlisle served the Cedar Bluff charge last year.

Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor First Church, Brookhaven, Miss., has been assisting Rev. L. T. Nelson, our pastor at Tylertown, in a meeting. In his absence his pulpit was filled by Rev. Chas. Assaf and others.

Have you seen the Sunday School Day Program, "The Faith That Shares," prepared by Rev. H. W. Williams, of the Board of Christian Education staff? Better write for a copy as you make your preparations for Sunday School Day.

Dr. J. L. Decell, pastor of Galloway Memorial Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., and former editor of the Advocate, spent a few hours in New Orleans recently in the interest of the Seashore Methodist Assembly. We were sorry we did not get to see him.

It is good to see Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor of Trinity Church, Ruston, La., back in the city. We regret that we were out when he came to the office. Brother Johns dropped in to see his many friends at Carrollton Avenue Church, where he was formerly pastor.

Mrs. C. M. Martin, faithful worker at East End Church, Meridian, Miss., is inquiring about the subscriptions at that church. She wants to keep the club of Advocate readers together for that good church of which Rev. P. M. Caraway is the much appreciated pastor.

The choir space has been enlarged at First Church, Columbus, Miss., to accommodate the large chorus choir of that great church. The nights are given specially to evangelistic services. Beginning the first Sunday, the pastor there, Rev. A. T. Mellwain, will hold a revival.

Rev. B. C. Taylor, pastor of our church at Natchitoches, La., and one of our valued contributing editors, made a call at the office this week, attended Preachers' Meeting, and took a little jaunt over the old city in which he was formerly pastor at Louisiana Avenue.

"A Plea for a Christian Education," is the title of a good paper by Rev. Wm. B. Van Valkenburgh of Galesburg, Kansas, a copy of which has just reached this office. It discusses matters concerning the Negro in the South. Bishop Candler, in a testimonial, speaks of the interest and profit of the paper.

The March 15-May 15 Advocate circulation campaign is now getting under way. Literature has gone out to all our pastors outlining in detail the profit-sharing plan of the Publishing Committee. If any pastor has failed to receive such literature, a line to this effect will be greatly appreciated by us.

On March 16 a little lady by the name of Jean Alice stopped at the parsonage home of Rev. and Mrs. Ira W. Flowers, Belcher, La. She has already captured the limelight and bids fair to make a great run in this home. We heartily congratulate these young parents and Miss Jean Alice. Mrs. Flowers will be remembered by many as Agatha Brewer.

"I am delighted to be back," says Rev. A. A. Simms, who has been away for a year in Clover, S. C. He may have been in "clover," but he still likes the clover of Mississippi. He, with Mrs. Simms, is visiting friends at Pachuta, Miss. Through the Advocate, Brother Simms is waving and saying "Hello" to the brethren of the Mississippi Conference.

Rev. Mathis E. Armstrong, pastor at Burnsville, Miss., is an evangelistic singer, having had several years' experience before he was admitted into the North Mississippi Conference. Ministers who can sing are of added service to their people. In the pioneer days of Methodism the singing of the great hymns of the church was powerful in its effect to spread the gospel.

Rev. B. P. Jacob, Raymondville, Texas, has just passed his seventieth birthday. Many of these years he spent in North Mississippi Conference as pastor and presiding elder. Now he is still teaching and preaching to the people around his home at Raymondville. Thousands of Methodist people recall the work of Brother Jacob during his years of service in his Conference.

Rev. Geo. A. Baker, pastor at Houlika, Miss., is busy at his work. The charge where Brother Baker is serving always comes out in the various phases of activity. He has studied the modern methods of church work, which enables him to not only preach an evangelistic gospel message, but to direct his people in the educational establishment of the forces of his church.

Dr. G. A. Klein, General Evangelist of Memphis, Tenn., has been conducting a two weeks' revival at the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city, of which Dr. Benj. F. Rogers is the pastor. Dr. Klein preached twice daily to attentive listeners, many of whom have re-dedicated their lives to God, pledging themselves to larger service and joining the tithe club organized on last Sunday.

Now it is Whitworth College up in the air. The other day a group of students gave a half-hour's program that reached many of the home-folks and others. The girls recently went up to Wesson and gave a program at the chapel hour to the delight of the student body of the Copiah-Lincoln Junior College. While these teachers and girls are keeping Whitworth on the air, let us keep Whitworth on our hearts.

Rev. J. V. Bennett, pastor at Booneville, Miss., was for a number of years Conference Evangelist. He gives to his people a zealous type of ministry. In all of his work he urges his people to take hold because of the tremendous importance of the task before them. He is district director for the preservation of the prohibition laws of Mississippi. They will have a worthy and zealous champion in him.

Brother Pastor: Have you returned the information card sent you in connection with the March 15-May 15 circulation campaign? If not, kindly do so at once, as it is most important that we forward lists and literature to the party or organization who is to conduct the canvass on your charge. The time set aside for this important work is limited, and the various committees should already be on the job.

Mrs. T. B. Sykes, after more than forty years of active work in the Sunday school at Aberdeen, Miss., has resigned from teaching the Men's Bible Class. She recently celebrated her ninety-second birthday. Prof. Horace Baker, County Superintendent of Education, was elected to teach the Bible Class. The Sunday School recognized her long years of work by gifts and expressions of appreciation at her birthday celebration.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, for many years director of Sunday school work in North Mississippi Conference, is making full proof of his ministry on the Coahoma and Jonestown Charge. Brother Gladney makes a special effort to teach his people to pray. That is a fine type of work. Too many preachers do all the praying for their people, when it would be better if they taught their people the joy and strength of personal prayer.

Rev. Seaman Rhea, pastor at Ruleville, Miss., has a beautiful brick church in which to work, and a loyal congregation to work with him. Ruleville congregation is alive to all that the church demands of them. Through the years training work has been going on there until now they have a splendid group of leaders who work with intelligence. Brother Rhea is a good preacher and pastor. His people say that he can "really preach."

Rev. W. L. Stormont, presiding elder of the Sardis-Grenada District, is leading out in his district to carry forward the educational program of the church. The new legislation makes the presiding elder directly responsible for the work of the Board of Christian Education in his district. If he does not lead, it will not be done. Heretofore there were district secretaries of Christian Education, but they are no more. Brother Stormont is securing the hearty co-operation of his laymen and pastors.

Rev. J. O. Dowdle, pastor at Swiftown, Miss., is one of the promising young men of his Conference. Just before Conference he assisted Rev. B. F. Bullard in a revival at Price Memorial Church at Greenwood, Miss., where he had spent four successful years as pastor during the first years he was in the Conference. He has cultivated the effective gift of reading the Scriptures well. That is rare accomplishment, and one to be very much appreciated. Brother Dowdle is very effective in revival meetings.

A good letter from Rev. Olla Nix, Route 3, Sumrall, Miss., tells of advancement on that charge. Rev. Roy Wolfe has assisted in a very profitable meeting. At one church with a membership of 35 there has been a prayer-meeting attendance of 53. A special meeting for men, making it possible for those whose Sunday clothes are not what they used to be to come to a service without any embarrassment, called a "blue shirt and overall meeting," brought out 65 men hungry for the Gospel. Brother Nix is trying to follow Paul's plan of adapting himself to the needs of all the people.

Rev. H. F. Brooks is in the midst of his fourth year at Starkville, Miss., the seat of the Mississippi State College. He has hundreds of our Methodist boys to minister to during the school session. Double duty is on him, since we do not have a student pastor as in former days. Dr. Brooks is a gifted preacher, and many rejoice in his effective ministry. The church where he serves launched into a much-needed building program during the days of active church building, and they are working under great handicaps because of heavy debts. However, with the situation as it has been, the church has worked and been faithful. We have a great congregation there now of over one thousand members.

The Psalmist said, "If it had not been the Lord who was on our side, then the proud waters had gone over our soul." Seems that the "wet" tide has set our way just now. On an occasion when the battle seemed to be going against the Confederates, Stonewall Jackson stood up and calmly said of the enemy, "We will give them the bayonet." But I was trying to introduce to you Dr. Jos. A. Smith, pastor of Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss. We had a letter from that champion of soberness and steadiness, from which we give you the following paragraph: "I have a red-hot lecture on prohibition which I am willing to deliver in churches and schoolhouses of communities within convenient distance from Jackson. I make no charges for the lecture, but, of course, I would like to have the actual expense of each trip. (In these days of 'repression' I will take sweet potatoes, a shoulder of meat, or any other forage that is available.)" You had better sign Dr. Smith up for a date at your place. We can assure you that what he has to say will be more than worth while.

will culminate at Easter, with an offering that should be in keeping with the spirit of the occasion, and the need of the cause to which it goes. You have very probably received your self-denial envelopes, and are planning to use them to the very best advantage; there are some things that should be kept in mind as we come to the close of the campaign:

1. The offering should be taken in every congregation, and every member of the congregation should be given the privilege of making a contribution, even though it can be only a small one because of conditions, yet every member should have a part.

2. Observe the general agreement which was adopted by the College of Bishops and the General Commission on Benevolences when the cultivation period was extended to Easter, namely, to divide the proceeds of the offering equally between the Kingdom Extension and the General and Conference Benevolences. This applies to cash and pledges, whether the self-denial envelopes or pledge cards are used.

3. That the cash received be immediately divided, and one-half sent to Mr. J. F. Rawls, Treasurer of the Kingdom Extension Fund, Doctors Building, Nashville, Tenn., and the other half to Mr. F. Y. Whitfield, Conference Treasurer, Meridian, Miss. The pledges made should be divided as they are paid in the same way.

Last year there were 50 charges, with 187 churches, that did not make any contribution to the Kingdom Extension. I trust that each pastor will see that each church on his charge makes an offering this year, and that prompt remittance of the funds collected will be made as per agreement.

It is not necessary for me to call attention at this time to the dire need for the funds, by all the participating interests, and that is all of the interests of the Church, for you are familiar with them; but I do urge that you do your very best in this hour of great need, yet great opportunity.

Yours very sincerely,

W. D. HAWKINS, Secty.,

Rev. John A. May, of Montevallo, Alabama, has taken the Stewardship Course by correspondence, and has completed the necessary requirement for Conference approval to conduct stewardship meetings. I wish to commend him to our pastors and churches as an evangelist who has made special preparation for this particular type of work.

PASTOR GIVES WATCH AND CHAIN TO MISSIONS

A noble pastor of the Virginia Conference, who wishes his name withheld, has sent to the Board of Missions at Nashville his gold watch and chain as an offering of self-sacrifice and denial to the missionary cause. The Board of Missions makes public acknowledgment of this brother's generosity and expresses appreciation for the fine Christian spirit he has manifested.

It is this spirit which must save our worldwide missionary work in the present crisis. It is not urged, of course, that everybody give watches, but all true Methodists are implored to adopt this attitude and spirit. If our Church is to continue its proclamation of the Gospel around the world effectively, the people must give, not out of their abundance, but out of their necessity. This consecrated pastor who, having little actual cash, took his timepiece from his pocket at the call of the Church, should be an example to us all.

BOOK REVIEW

COURAGE THAT PROPELS, by G. Ray Jordan, Cokesbury Press, 1933.

This book is obviously a collection of studies used in the course of the author's ministry and is more the voice of the pastor than of the prophet. The title is a name rather than a clue to the material of the book. It is hortatory in style and popular in its appeal; but the author holds well to the theme of each study in his heart-to-heart manner of presentation. One can imagine that the book would be greatly advantaged by a personal acquaintance with the author and his style of speaking. The language throughout is simple and plain, but dignified and chaste withal. The chapter on "A Living God" is well done and is, perhaps, the most impressive and effective study in the list. Occasionally there are very striking bits of interpretation, such as the reservations which men have in proposals for meeting the religious need of the times, page 77; and the interpretation of God as the eternally present and accessible deity, page 135. The illustrative matter is drawn from many sources and is practically always "human interest" in character. In a few instances, one may be inclined to doubt the historical fidelity of an incident, such as the story connected with the writing of George Matheson's hymn, "O Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go," page 167; but the illustrations are always to the point and we believe that the book has a message for our times.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

It was the privilege of the Executive Secretary to teach in the Standard Training School, at Marshall, Mo. the week of March 5. The Missouri Pacific R. R. runs along the Mississippi River and the Missouri River. This made the trip one of beauty.

Rev. J. M. Shockly our host while at Marshall took us to see Fayette and Central College and thence to Columbus and the University of Missouri, and from there we went to Jefferson City and visited the Capitol building and sat in the Senate and House while in session.

The church at Fayette is on the college campus and the sanctuary was built with the idea of worship alone. The educational plant was a wing and on the other side was the Music College. I have never had the pleasure of being in a more worshipful sanctuary. They have an illuminated cross upon which all look during the services. A few of the emblems of the Christian Church are worked in the windows.

The church at the University of Missouri is a much larger building.

DOCTOR'S 3 RULES BIG HELP TO BOWELS

What a joy to have the bowels move like clockwork, every day! It's easy, if you mind these simple rules of a famous old doctor:

1. Drink a big tumblerful of water before breakfast, and several times a day.
2. Get plenty of outdoor exercise without unduly fatiguing yourself.
3. Try for a bowel movement at exactly the same hour every day.

Everyone's bowels need help at times, but the thing to use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You'll get a thorough cleaning-out, and it won't leave your insides weak and watery. This family doctor's prescription is just fresh, laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other helpful ingredients that couldn't hurt a child. But how it wakes up those lazy bowels! How good you feel with your system rid of all that poisonous waste matter.

Clean up that coated tongue, sweeten that bad breath, and get rid of those bilious headaches. A little Syrup Pepsin will soon free the bowels from all that waste matter that makes the whole system sluggish. You'll eat better, sleep better and feel better.

You'll like the way Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin tastes. The way it works will delight you. Big bottles—all drugstores.

Its windows symbolize on one side the Old Testament and on the other, the New Testament. The front window depicted the leaders of Methodism.

The most wonderful thing about this church was the altar. Its decoration was a hand carved picture of the Last Supper Da Vinci, done by Lang. This is one of the most lovely and inspiring pieces of art we have been privileged to see.

The state capital is most beautiful. We were struck with the very definite religious materials used in its decorations. Mottoes with the ethics of Christ were everywhere.

The carvings and other decorations of the building portrayed the West and was emblematic of its struggles and developments.

The towns that we visited were enterprising and there were many good church buildings, most of them well kept.

The Southern Methodist seemed to be the strongest church in this territory.

Our school was very successful and we enjoyed our work with these brethren.

We must keep on keeping on. God is anxious for all of His children to fight evil and make daring venture for Him and His cause. Our children and youth must receive the Christian interpretation on temperance. Our church materials are teeming with articles which will be helpful. Read them and pass them on.

Young People's Day is on us. Observe the Day and give the Young People a chance to render a service to the church. They need this money to carry on their work and the church needs the information and inspiration their program will give them.

Sunday School Day programs have been sent out to the pastors and Sunday school superintendents. Please examine these programs and place them in the hands of the proper persons.

Our Missionary funds are in a sad situation because of the closing of the banks. Do not be discouraged. We must still share what we have. It is not how much but how meaningful do we give. God delights in free giving. He blesses those who have learned to share to the limit. He knows our problems and our struggles, let us not disappoint Him.

Pray for the work and your workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

A recent visit to the Belmont charge where Rev. W. S. Selman is pastor was greatly enjoyed. We visited three churches, Belmont, Golden and Dennis. In the afternoon we held a charge-wide institute in which Rev. W. R. Hammonree assisted. Plans were made to hold a Cokesbury Training Class early in April. Plans were also made to organize the young people at Golden and Dennis. No pastor is on the job more faithfully than is Bro. Selman.

The writer is at Okolona this week teaching a standard training class. The class is largely attended and fine interest is being displayed. The way had been well prepared by the pastor, Rev. T. E. Gregory and by the general superintendent, Dr. J. C. Luper. The work of this church is going forward under their leadership and by the aid of a fine corps of faithful workers.

The bank situation demoralized the missionary offering from the Sunday schools last month. However, many of the schools have sent in the offering as soon as the banks opened. Will you not see that your school does so? So much of our work depends on this offering that the cause will greatly suffer unless our Sunday schools rally to this cause. The faithfulness and loyalty of many schools is to be commended and we are very grateful for this. Many more should fall in line.

All of the pastors and most of the superintendents have received a sample copy of the Sunday School Day program and a sheet of suggestions concerning the observance of the day. We are counting on every school observing this day. If this is done the Sunday school work will go forward in our Conference. It will help the local churches to see the importance of the Sunday school work and will help the Conference Board of Christian Education to do much more effective work. You can secure as many programs as you wish from the Publishing House, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., at 50 cents per dozen, and pay for them as you do your Sunday school literature. If you feel that you cannot pay for the programs they will be furnished you free by writing the Board of Christian Education, Grenada, Miss. Let no school fail to put on the program for the lack of having the programs. The date set is the 5th Sunday in April, or the 30th. If an earlier date suits you better or a later date more suitable you may observe the day then. Pray for us and for the work.

Best Remedy is Made At Home

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

CONFERENCE NEWS

Louisiana

The Fourth Zone, Ruston District of the Methodist W. M. S., held its first quarterly meeting in Quitman. Mrs. Callaway, the zone leader, made a short talk, in which she spoke of the work accomplished by the zone the past year. Mrs. Sybil Blalock, of Quitman, gave the devotional, using as a scripture lesson, Romans 9:22-23 and Jeremiah 18:1-6. In her very efficient manner she spoke of the clay in comparison to the life of man, speaking of the many things that may chance to get into the clay, making it less yielding, and likewise how sin may enter the life of man, marring the vessel.

Mrs. Meredith, of Jonesboro spoke on Christian Education. She told of the first training schools, beginning with Christ with His disciples, John Wesley's school and others, coming down to our modern schools of Christian education. She spoke of the importance of Christian training in the home, the first five years of a child's life being so important in molding character. She closed by saying that the only way to remedy the failure in the homes is to make God the head. The real object of Christian education is that we may fully speak the Word.

Mrs. Hysell, of Hodge gave an article on Christian education among the Negroes and of the Paine Jubilee. Mrs. Walker McDonald, of Jonesboro, talked on the Stewardship of Life.

Rev. Mr. Hysell made a short talk in which he spoke words of praise to the women and their work. Mrs. Kaetzell, of Clay, gave the closing prayer, after which was enjoyed a delightful social hour.

Mississippi

Mrs. G. C. Kendall presided at the March meeting of the Meridian City Mission Board, Meridian District, which was attended by good representation from the local churches. The devotionals were led by the Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, pastor of Fifth Street Church.

During the month of February, 900 contacts were made at Wesley House, $41.50 expended for relief, 265 visits made, 50 meetings held, 4 socials given and other activities were included in the report of Miss Annie Trawick head resident of Wesley House, given at the March meeting of the City Mission Board held at the center Thursday.

Miss Trawick expressed her thanks to the Board which furnishes milk each day to two persons, to the women of the St. Paul's Episcopal Church for a layette, to Mrs. W. E. Hopkins for ice cream served at the Mothers' Club, to circles of Central and Poplar Springs Methodist churches for grocery showers, and to those who provided tablets and pencil to school children and also to other individuals.

A zone meeting of the Brookhaven District, held at Brookhaven recently, was a most interesting occasion. Ten auxiliaries were represented by delegates or visitors.

Mrs. C. E. Mullins of Bude, was the presiding officer, Mrs. G. Y. Field, secretary. Addresses were made by the President, by the District Secretary, Mrs. Butterworth, of McComb; by Mrs. J. L. Carter, of Crystal Springs Superintendent of Study, and by Mrs. H. R. Fairfax, who used Stewardship as her subject.

Mrs. T. H. Perkins and Mrs. F. W. Wright, in costume as Negro laundresses, gave a humorous dialogue regarding Octagon soap coupons, still a very live issue in the organization, since the coupons are saving the day for the Orphans' Home.

Mrs. J. M. Wood gave two beautiful organ numbers.

Luncheon was served in the sub-story, under the direction of Mrs. N. R. Thompson to the guests and a few of the Brookhaven ladies, seventy-four in all.

Members of the Brookhaven auxiliary, Brookhaven District, with a few friends, enjoyed the hospitality of Circles Two and Three in the sub-story of the church, where lovely spring flowers gave beauty and cheer.

Mrs. Boono welcomed the company cordially. A lovely devotional service was led by Mrs. Martin Johnson with a prayer by the pastor, Rev. O. S. Lewis.

Mrs. G. A. Hoffman gave a beautiful talk of the realization of a vision in the Chicago Christian Training School for Women, a tribute to its promoter and founder, Mrs. Lucy Ryder Myers, and her husband, Mr. Myers.

A very effective playlet, "Mary Porter Home from Scarritt" gave an enlightening picture of the school which quite surprised many of the audience.

Scarritt grants A. B. and M. A. degrees, a school of which every Methodist should be proud and should cherish.

A social period followed the program, when dainty refreshments were served.

MRS. LUCY N. CARRUTH KIRKPATRICK

Lucy Nora Carruth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Carruth, was born December 19, 1881. Married to Mr. T. C. Kirkpatrick on August 19, 1906. On the morning of February 7, 1933, her beautiful life came to a close.

She was only sick about one week, and her death was quite a shock to all, for we did not dream of it coming so soon. Thus a loving mother who had walked hand in hand with her husband for almost 27 years, fell asleep.

She joined the Methodist Church in the year of 1909, and was a faithful member until her death. To this union were born one child, a girl. Sister Kirkpatrick was loved and honored by all who knew her, for she possessed those qualities which make up the beauties of Christian womanhood. She was indeed a faithful mother, a graceful Christian and a true friend to all, especially to those in need, and no one within the bounds of our community will be missed as this one.

There are left to mourn her passing, her husband, T. C. Kirkpatrick, one daughter, Mrs. Perl Lohman and two grandchildren, Fredrick, and Mary Francis Lohman; also five brothers and one sister, as follows: C. A., D. C. and Nat Carruth, all of Glenmora; John Carruth, of Melder; Abner Carruth, of Lake Charles, and Mrs. J. D. Stalsby, of Alexandria.

The funeral services were held at Melder Methodist church Wednesday morning, being in charge of the writer, assisted by Rev. W. L. Stagg, pastor of Glenmora Baptist church.

Interment was made in Glenmora cemetery under the direction of John R. Andries, local funeral director.

The pall bearers, all nephews, were Aubrey, Roscoe, Phanor and Fred Carruth, Aubrey Stalsby and Floyd Kirkpatrick.

The people of the Melder church and this community joins the family in extending their prayers and condolence during their sad hour of bereavement.

"So I said to my heart, Be silent;
The mystery of time is here.
Death, a way will be plain when we fathom the main,
And the secret of life be clear."

Resolved by the W. T. Barnes Sunday School Class of Lauderdale Methodist Church;

First, that we recognize the great service rendered the cause of Christ in the faithful service, through long years, of our departed friend and teacher, W. T. Especially do we appreciate the regular attendance and constant service in our Sunday school class as long as health permitted, and we feel that his life was an open book in which we read of the love of Christ.

Second, that we hereby express to his family our sympathy in their hour of sorrow, and assure them that the influence of their departed one lingers with us as a benediction.

Third, that we send a copy of these resolutions for publication to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and that we give a copy to the family of the deceased, and that we have a copy preserved in the records of the W. T. Barnes Sunday School Class.

AT HOME WITH GOD

We are never ready for the passing of our loved ones. Though we harden our hearts against the day of separation, we quietly hope it will never come. We go about life's duties almost forgetful that tomorrow may bring to our circle the liberation of a soul that will leave in its place sadness, gloom, sorrow, loneliness. EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

I BELIEVE IN A FREE PULPIT. That is a part of my creed. Of course it is not wise foolishly to define that freedom. Certainly it is not identical with abuse and tirades that shame both sanctity and sanity. If there is a place in the world where there should be consciously responsible and daring freedom it is where the preacher stands Sunday morning. Here he must take his orders from God and God alone, and here he must be willing to accept the consequences of the exercise of that freedom. He cannot accept, except incidentally, the guidance of his congregation or the dictates of his government. God is first. And the word of the apostle must remain the word of the effective pulpit. "We must obey God rather than man." And "woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel."

Dr. Ernest Freemont Tittle is pastor of the First Methodist Church at Evanston, Illinois. He is responsible for the resolution at the late session of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church on the race question that rocked the country. Apparently he assumed responsibility for it with his eyes open to the possible consequences.

Recently he has been saying some things in his pulpit that have shocked the "super patriots" of his neighborhood. And they have gone out to test the parson's patriotism. Their patriotic and protective title is the "Paul Reveres." (What cussedness can cloak itself in the garb of patriotism.) They circulated a pamphlet bearing certain pointed questions having Dr. Tittle as its chief target. What he had said about the moral condition of the "present order of things" must not go unchallenged.

Let us pause to remark that, regardless of our attitude toward Dr. Tittle, he has rendered a service to us all by his book, "Jesus After Nineteen Centuries," now in its second printing. It should be read by every man who goes into a pulpit with the Gospel of Christ.

Of course, the questionnaire reached Dr. Tittle.

Now shift the spotlight from Dr. Tittle to his laymen and you will be made glad for days to come. With laymen like these the pulpit enjoys unmeasured opportunity, and laymen enter into their rightful heritage.

Shortly after the appearance of the questionnaire the board of stewards met, thirty-seven of them, and issued the following statement over their signatures:

"For some time a campaign of insinuation, misrepresentation, and slander, much of it anonymous, has been directed against our pastor, Dr. Ernest F. Tittle. We believe that we owe it to him and to our church and to this community to assert unmistakably our loyalty to him and our protest against such un-American and un-Christian procedure.

After fourteen years of intimate association with Dr. Tittle as our minister, we would express our absolute confidence in his Christian character and his deep and unselfish devotion to his country, to his church, and to humanity. He is unalterably opposed to the methods of violence advocated by communism, and steadfastly committed to the orderly processes of democratic government.

"We stand for a free pulpit and a free church. We do not expect or desire a minister simply to echo the opinions of the congregation, and we do not assert our individual agreement with all of our minister's utterances. But we vigorously resent the effort of outside organizations to dictate to the church or to prescribe its message.

"We hold it peculiarly important in this day that the church should stand apart from all appeals to passion, prejudice, and partizanship, and that our nation should have in the Christian Church a clear, strong voice rising above all divisions, speaking in the name of God for justice, mutual understanding and good-will."

In that black face paragraph the preacher has all that he can ask, and all that his laymen can give, so far as pulpit freedom is concerned.

HOW WE DO ENJOY BEING FOOLED. Here in New Orleans, where the ends of the earth—some of the ends very earthy—come together, we find much to cause astonishment and other reactions. Have you ever looked through our advertising pages, especially in the Sunday editions of our papers? Have you noticed there the various cults and isms? All of them boldly claiming to be able to solve almost all of life's mysteries for you, they offer, for the price, to find almost anything from a lost pocket-knife to a lost reputation. They will tell you in advance all the major calamities and the breaks of fortune. So the people go down therein and pay the price thereof. They have their palms read and their fortunes told. They seem to have the notion that you can "slip one over" on life and that you can even drive by the laws of the universe and pay no attention to them. The desire is to escape the consequences of conduct, get a short cut to material prosperity and peace of mind.

But that is not the story. For some time I have been watching the ads of one "Prof. Primo." Always accompanying the ad., which carried a number of his major prophecies, was a cut of the great Primo. To give him a more mysterious and far eastern appearance and to conceal all malicious intentions, he wore a tablecloth wound round his head.

Now I have some idea as to the connotations of the word "Professor," and having been more or less exposed to the ancient Roman tongue, I guess somewhat at the meaning of "Primo." Does it not mean, when interpreted, "Professor, I'm IT?" This rather ambitious title concealed quite effectively any other more modest name that his mother might have given him, little dreaming that he was destined to become the great "Professor First," "Master of Destiny," "Unriddler of the Riddles of the Universe."

Very strangely, the other day a lady whom he had "helped" to the extent of some several hundreds of dollars, complained to the officers that the "Professor" was conducting a little confidence game that had just about destroyed all her confidence in his ability to set the universe right for her.

The "studio" of the "Professor" was investigated by officers of the law. "Professor" is now out on a $2500 bond, waiting some further word from the courts. (Nothing of this had been noted in his prophecies.)

Among the paraphernalia of the "Studio" were found a crystal ball, some rose water, some magic powders, blue candles, and other items symbolizing the mysterious powers. Nearby was a neatly kept card index file with the names and addresses of clients, and other files for the spider's web. In front of the "Great Primo's" clock was a card—"Ten minutes, $1."

It was revealed that people came to him mainly about either love or money. Seemed that he was more interested in the latter.

Listen! "This country pays to astrologers, numerologists, clairvoyants, palmists and scothsayers in general, $125,000,000 a year, and $25,000,000 of this comes from New York."

Now I am not sure about stirring soap with a sassafras stick and planting beans when the "moon is right," but I am sure that it does not cost quite so much. And it is all superstition. Neither science nor Christianity can have anything to do with it. Do you think we still need the school-house and the church?

All these benighted souls, though, are trying to get the answer to life's riddle. They cannot find it, but they believe somebody has the magic word. Do we preachers have the word? And are we speaking it?

"CLUTTERITIS" IS A NEW NAME for a rather old and widespread disease attacking human beings on several levels and in various departments of life. Do you have it? Better find out. See a doctor.

Where we saw the word was on the advertising page of a great daily paper. It was there used with reference to the antiques and debris in the way of furniture that we allow to accumulate in our attics and elsewhere, having no-particular value, but just occupying good space, collecting dust, and insisting on going along when-

THE HOUR HAS COME!

"What hour? The hour of crisis," writes Bishop W. N. Ainsworth in the Alabama Christian Advocate. "If America is not in a crisis," he continues, "this nation has never known one in all its history. . . . The crisis that confronts this country is not just a matter of economics. The American crisis is much more moral than economic. . . . America is threatened with moral collapse in high places. The Church of God is the only way out. The soul of the country must be awakened. A new consciousness of God must come upon the people. The principles of Jesus Christ are the only basis for a prosperous and stable society. 'Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock.' 'The statutes of the Lord are right, and in keeping of them there is great reward.' The reward is not reserved for the eternal world; it comes here. The divine order is religion, righteousness, happiness, prosperity. There never was such an hour for the prophet of God. . . . What a responsibility is the preacher's now! He must bring the vision of God or the people will perish. Three things I would urge upon every preacher and all the churches. . . . now. No neglect of any one of them should be allowed in any charge:

"1. THE REVIVAL. Call the official board and all the praying people together in each church to join the pastor in making plans for a revival effort that will confront every community and every man in it with the call of Jesus Christ.

"2. PRESS THE CALL OF THE CHURCH for every member to make some sacrifice for Christ's sake and the Church's sake in the offering on the Lord's altar at Easter (or near thereto). The Church must carry on in all its wide domain. There never was more at stake and real sacrifice everywhere is essential to prevent humiliation and retreat.

"3. THE PAPER. Liquor, sordidness, expediency, dominate nearly all the daily press. There never was an hour in . . . history when the Church's paper was so essential to our whole program. We must get it to the people.

"In all these things it is time for action. As Richard Cecil said to England a hundred years ago, 'The state of the world, and of the Church, is such, and so much depends on action, that everything seems to say loudly to every man. Do something—do it—do it.'"

THE LOUISIANA ALLIANCE

A large and representative group from over Louisiana met at City Hall, Alexandria, in a statewide prohibition rally last Tuesday. Reports indicate a very harmonious, enthusiastic and constructive meeting of the friends of prohibition as represented by the Eighteenth Amendment.

Officers elected were Rev. T. W. Gayer, Pineville, president; Hon. T. W. Holloman, Alexandria, vice-president; Rev. D. B. Raulins, New Orleans, secretary-treasurer.

Given below is the Constitution of the organization that grew out of the meeting.

Article II—Object

The object of the organization shall be to unite in one co-operative body for the preservation of the Eighteenth Amendment and any and all Enforcement Legislation, all organizations, citizens, and forces that will uncompromisingly fight every move of the liquor interests to manufacture, or sell, or deliver to the American people intoxicating liquors, including wines and beer.

Its distinctive objective, so far as organization is concerned, is to establish in Louisiana (and to co-operate in providing similar organizations in all other States in the Union), through local leadership, an active, militant, State-wide organization, with branches in each congressional district in the State.

This organization shall always operate in a co-operative capacity, and shall not endeavor to supplant or interfere with the work in any co-operating body, but, on the contrary, shall endeavor to build up and strengthen these co-operating forces.

Article III—Membership

The membership of this organization shall consist of organizations, individuals, and forces which advocate and practice the principles herein set forth.

Article IV—Organization

AN APPEAL TO THE SWORD

Address to Friends of Prohibition

By Hon. H. H. White

Ladies and Gentlemen:

It is said that the last coherent words of General Beauregard, the "Great Creole," were: "We must mass our forces; we meet the enemy in the morning."

So I say to you, friends of prohibition, we must mass our forces; the decisive battle in this great cause is to be fought in the morning. The forces of the prohibition Samson are scattered, his locks have been shorn, his strength has departed, he hears the mocking cry, "the Philistines be upon thee." Be not, however, dismayed; his forces will be reassembled, his strength will return; he will in his seeming death kill more of the enemy than he slew in the days of his pristine strength.

"Be strong and of a good courage, for unto this people shalt thou divide for an inheritance the land, which I swear unto their fathers to give them."

I say that our forces are scattered, and that our Samson has been shorn of his strength. The militant spirit that carried the Eighteenth Amendment, that gave birth to the Volstead Act, that in Louisiana crowned our success with the Hood Bill, has given place to a spirit of defeatism and discouragement.

We must summon from "the vasty deep" the spirits of Frances Willard, and Wayne B. Wheeler. Let us again chant our ancient song of victory "All around the world, the ribbon white we'll twine." Let public sentiment be aroused by the instrumentalities of the platform, the press, the radio and the pulpit. Let the wail of discouragement be succeeded by the shout of the charge. Let our rallying cry ring like the note of the old Rebel yell, the voice of Stentor and the horn of Roland.

General Foch is quoted as having said at the second battle of the Marne, "My left is defeated, my right is crushed, my center is retreating. I shall advance on all fronts."

We are here today to hold a council of war, to find out where and with what force the attack will be made, to concentrate our forces first to resist the attack, and then to counter-attack with the strength and good courage of those who believe that this fair land should be preserved as an inheritance of sobriety and prosperity to our children.

The immediate attack viewed nationally is for repeal of the 18th Amendment, and of the Volstead Act. The so-called Constitutional beer bill has been already passed and it is not necessary now to cry over spilled beer. The country has been sold for 150,000,000 pieces of silver.

Constitutional Conventions will be called in all the states to pass on the repeal amendment which has been submitted by Congress. I advocate that the Convention in Louisiana be delayed until delegates can be chosen at a general election and that we elect as many delegates of our way of thinking as possible.

As to Congress, we have two representatives who have stood four square in favor of the existing laws, and I hope that in future elections we will elect to Congress men of the firmness and strength of Riley J. Wilson and John N. Sandlin. In Louisiana we have a most excellent prohibition law—the Hood Bill. Unfortunately, it has been repealed.

Our legislatures of the late unlamented extra session seemed to think that the foundation stones of a great state are a beer keg and a wine barrel.

Why do we find it necessary at this time to arm ourselves for the battle which is upon us?

The answer is that prohibition has been, in our opinion, a great success.

The great objections to the liquor traffic are its debauching influence on morals, its economic waste, its corrupting influence in politics, its open defiance of the law. All these evils, accompanied by the degrading influence of the open saloon, will return with redoubled force if the liquor laws are repealed.

The liquor traffic is thoroughly selfish. Its managers are trucebreakers. It will not keep faith. No compromise can be made with it. It must be killed or it will desperately injure us as a nation morally, socially, economically and politically.

My indictment is of the liquor traffic, not of the many good men who, in my opinion, mistakenly desire a repeal or modification of the liquor laws.

These remarks could be amplified until you grow weary, and I have only briefly discussed the merits and demerits of prohibition. On that question our minds are made up.

"No need have we to question now, if we are wrong or right, We know full well our cause is just, in God, the Father's sight."

What practical steps are to be taken here today? My advice in answer to this question, and subject to your good determination, would be:

1. To appoint a strong committee to prepare an address to the public in support of our views.

2. To effect a permanent organization by the election of officers—say a President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer. These officers should be representative and should be able to give time, thought and energy to the prosecution of their duties.

3. Arrangements should be made to properly finance the campaigns which will be necessary to accomplish our purposes. It will be necessary to incur expenses, for correspondence, traveling, publicity by press and radio, and other legitimate purposes.

We will have to work hard and with steadfast purpose. It is not perhaps necessary to lambast very heavily the demon Rum. It will be poor policy if we abuse those who differ from us in their views of principle or policy.

What we must do, is to gain to our side public opinion by every fair means, and thus to gain votes and control the action of our law makers.

I will not further multiply words. Our time is short, and other speakers more eloquent than I are to address you. Let us do the work which the times demand that we should accomplish.

The enemy have appealed to the sword. With the sword of the ballot and of the spirit we will meet them. The God of battles we believe is on our side, and "if God be with us, who can be against us?"

RELATIVITY

By Rev. L. M. Lipscomb

Now, let no one think for a moment that I am going to meddle with the theory of Prof. Einstein. It is too attenuated, philosophic and occult for me, whether it be true or merely his dream; I see no practical use that can be made of it. I have wrestled with it some and believe he's on the track of something real in science, but the 'coon can't be had for dinner. Judge Bell, of Greenville, has intermeddled with Albert quite a bit, as he does with all knowledge, and offered to give me the book to read, but I felt very safe in declining his gracious proffer, as I did not want to cripple my pure mind in putting it to tasks too Herculean for my age and station in life.

I am not so much interested in a mechanistic materialism, determinism as a proposition merely of mental gymnastics, although that is of interest to men of thought and good-will, but the moral significance of this world's architecture, its basic and final "relativity" is of much more interest and practical import to my mind. The final order of things, the ultimate purpose of the world and life, are the things about which all mind, at last, is virtually concerned. How the world and why? How life and why? It's all too fair, strange and glorious to the product of blind, self-determining origin, creating itself, and, as H. G. Wells affirms, "Grinding on to no end, but final smash-up in nothingness."

We are taught that God made it, for "In the beginning was God" and "without God nothing was made that was made." Human reason, as I think of it, can not conceive of a creation without a creator, of law without a law-giver, of a watch or house without a designer, a builder, or a thought without a thinker. The world as it manifests itself is the most stupendous exhibition of mind and thought that humans can possibly conceive. In fact, all the interest of life, time, education, are taken up with trying to find the thought or thoughts imbedded in the nature of things. And when we learn even very imperfectly a few of them, we are considered wise, far-seeing, learned. All of our schools and universities exist for only one thing, so with our homes, the family, etc., that is to find the laws, the meaning, the virtues and moral mandates already written and ineradicably stamped upon every lineament of nature. They are ingrained and cannot be bleached out, ignored or trampled underfoot or repealed by any sort of wrong-thinking or wrong-living.

They carry the judgments of God, the Eternal Thinker and Designer of the universe. The universe is a Thought. It is the thought of the Mighty Thinker. All material things were and are thoughts before they stood out or stand out in material form. St. Paul's, in London, was the thought of Sir Christopher Wren; old Cheops was a thought before 30,000 men worked all those years to make it stand out. Taj Mahal is at once the thought of love, death and immortality.

But to the Great Thinker, philosophy gives the clear answer to science. All the universe is quivering with energy. Matter is indestructible, motion is continuous, and beneath both these fundamental truths lies the fundamental truth that force is persistent. The whole myriad phenomena of God's world are manifestations of a single principle that is both Infinite and Eternal. Man must return to sanity. The world will be compelled to believe in the validity of its highest and noblest possibilities, the only final and redeeming principles of its blasted hopes and sin-cursed ideals.

The visible world is full of mind and thought. Both in its form and arrangement it is crammed with philosophy, science, mathematics, chemistry and logic. The plainest of inferences is that back of it all is intellect and purpose. Its combinations are alive with artistry, replete with accuracy, working in perfect harmony and displaying a supernal sense of beauty. Its sounds are imbedded in laws which, if we understand and apply them, yield the richest music. The Wagners, the Beethovens and Handels, after a lifetime of arduous study, were but sounding a few notes of the vast harmony filling the spaces of the spheres. God loves music, or He would not have tuned it up so highly. The fact that the world's phenomena are reducible to mental expressions shows that all these things lie on a common mental level. The possibility of our arriving at any universal truth supposes a Universal Mind in which that truth inheres.

The real student, the philosopher, the scientist, the mathematician, the artist, the musician measure their fullest attainments by the closest approximation they make to finding the thought imbedded in the various departments of nature's storehouse. So the world is the object of man's thought, the granary of his bread, the garden of his pleasure, the beauty of his thoughts, the crowning glory of his education.

There is no meaning to the term education aside from gathering what thought God has put into His universe. The one who is the greatest mathematician, like Isaac Newton, has become enamored of the power of thinking God's thoughts after Him and piloted that science into the heavens and found there in worlds far removed the same principles at work.

Then what we call learning, education, is simply finding the order, nature and purpose of things as surely indicated by the uses for which they were intended.

This letter is growing too long for an eight-page paper. Here I rest, and will write a second article if you will allow it, and apply my principle of Moral Relativity in the spiritual realm of life.

POETICAL THOUGHTS

By Mrs. George S. Brown

Thus saith the Lord, Behold, I set before you the path of life. Jer. 21:8.
For what is your life? James 4:14.

WHAT IS LIFE?

"Life is a song," so piped the thrush,
Perched on a sweet white blossomed bush.

"'Tis an awakening," said the rose,
Whose blushing petals 'gan to uncloze.

"'Tis pleasure," breathed the butterfly,
Kissing the rose and fluttering by.

"'Tis freedom," shrieked the eagle proud,
Piercing the fleecy summer cloud.

From leafy copse the gentle dove
Cooed softly, murmuring "Life is Love."

"'Tis labor, that and nothing more,"
The wave moaned, breaking on the shore.

"A dream," the mist sighed, "set with fears."
The soft rain wept, "'Tis tears, all tears."
—Fred Lyster.

Could any number of people be lined up and asked to give the definition of Life, there would no doubt be hundreds of answers. It all depends on the viewpoint and what the experiences of each individual have been, for our lives all differ. To some of us it is given to lie down in easy places; to others, to tread on thorny paths.

We do not know why. If left to us we would all choose to soft places; but if it is given to us to walk among the briars we remember that our Saviour had a crown of thorns pressed on His brow. Some of us have luxurious homes, and some have a little back room on a bleak gallery; but the "Son of Man had not where to lay His head."

Some have money and to spare, and some, like Peter, are compelled to say, "Silver and gold I have none." Some are carefree and unencumbered, but some stagger under burdens too great to be borne, only enduring because Christ faints under the load of the cross and so knew what He promised when He said He would bear our burdens. To some life is gay and bright and filled with song and laughter, but some go through life weeping bitter tears. How comforting to know that God will some day "wipe away all tears from our eyes."

Some live a life of ease and luxury, and some make their daily food by the sweat of their brow. Some are free and dominate, while some are as confined as in prison cells. While all of us do not have our lines fall to us in pleasant places, we can make life more beautiful and fill it with meaning by the way in which we accept our lot. It is right for us to try to better our condition, but if we are sick or bereaved or compelled to toil and to bear more than our own share of burdens, murmuring and complaining do not help matters. We must make the best of everything.

Of all the definitions given by flowers, insects, birds and inanimate objects, the dove seems to have found the very best, for Love means more in life than aught else. Love lightens every loss and every labor, and we can be daily thankful for our love for each other, for God's love for us in that He gave us His Son, and for the love of God shed abroad in our hearts which inspires us to help our fellow-man. And now abideth Faith, Hope, Love; but the greatest of these is Love.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By Rev. W. R. Lott, Contributing Editor

A brother preacher said to me, "The ministry is a lonesome life." After he had gone I began to try to think through that statement. Is it true that in the midst of so many people the minister finds himself a lonely person, hungering for close friends? The confession has to be made that in many, many cases it is true in our itinerant system. The Methodist preacher has very little opportunity to hold fast friends among the laymen. About the time he begins to share life with people whom he appreciates the command of his Church takes him to serve others. The ties he makes are slowly but surely broken as the years pass; when he hears of their troubles and heart-aches he longs to fly to their relief, but it is not his privilege. But we Methodist preachers are not alone in that, for it is a part of the price all ministers must pay. There are so many compensations otherwise till none dare complain. The thought came to me that we should cherish with all our hearts the Conference relations as preachers. There should be such a tie among Methodist preachers that the years would hold them closer. This friendship can be cultivated. Pastors should visit each other; have long happy conversation. Their families should visit and learn to appreciate each other. In our brotherhood we have the opportunity to hold life-long friends. A man is an enemy indeed who will sow tares of dissention in the brotherhood. If every Methodist preacher sets himself to help every other one we can have heaven right here on earth.

During the coming months all leaders in the moral field will be called on to declare themselves on the question of the repeal of the 18th Amendment. These intensive fights for moral reforms must be made against the evils that would control society. It is a question whether we will have Christian or pagan society. The issue is clear. Let him who cannot stand take to shelter. The benefits of prohibition are our weapons. Yet we must fight as Christians, not for the sake of strife or vain glory. Our cause is that of the protection of home, children and mothers. The Methodist Church has declared its position; let every loyal son and daughter of the Church stand by the guns.

There is a difference between reading and speaking. A speaker is interpreting impressions from environment, mental furnishings and personal temperament at the time. A reader is interpreting the printed message. This interpretation is done by pronunciation of words, correct enunciation and due regard to pauses. The radio has brought forcibly to all the value of good reading. It has convicted many of us for being careless in our readings before the congregation and in our Sunday schools. The scriptures are very difficult to read. Yet when we hear one read it with understanding we see clearly that it is possible to read so that the reading alone becomes a veritable message of power.

AND STILL ANOTHER INSIGHT ON THE HONOR SYSTEM

By Helen Embry

"It is much easier to live up to a good opinion than to live down a bad one," was recently said by one of Centenary's outstanding faculty members. Each person considering that statement will see its truth . . . then, would it not be better to appeal to the finer side of students attending Centenary College, than to distrust them to the extent of threatening them? The fear of a bad name does not reform a dishonest person.

This is a Christian institution, having as the main purpose the building of character. Adding humiliation to one's fall is not according to high principals and certainly does not tend to build character. If a person desires to cheat he will do so if he has not control over his moral facilities. All that can be done is to appeal to his honor, an integral part of every person, and if the student realizes the value of being strictly honorable and true to himself first and always, he will not give in to temptation without a mighty struggle. If a student feels that his standing among the rest of his classmates will be lowered a great deal by his dishonesty, he, also, will cease to be weak.

The honor system calls for this alliance among students—when one sees another cheating or attempting to cheat, he drums on the desk with his fingers. Others take up the warning signal. The weak one usually ceases any attempt at dishonesty, and is so strengthened. If he persists in cheating, however, it is the duty of the others to report him to the student council, which will quietly send the culprit home, without adding to his hurt.

We are all interdependent, so let us pull together and strive to maintain the high integrity of the Centenary student body.—Centenary Conglomerate.

ever you have to move. You know what it means to have the house "cluttered" up, don't you?

But many of us have the ailment in our minds and hearts. We become attached to old ideas and notions and traditions and ways of doing things, unconsciously feeling that their age gives them value. Our religious experience and our church methods get in our way and make impossible the most effective service, because out of date.

What is to be done about it? Let us conduct a very careful and prayerful investigation of our own lives, experiences, methods, and attitudes. Let us overhaul our pet prejudices that we have been dragging around with us for a generation. (Look out, sermon barrel.) And let us measure them, not by what they have done, but by the great needs and menacing perils of our time. And if they do not measure up, let us take them out and dump them on the rubbish pile and stick a match to them.

The chief trouble with the Pharisees was "clutteritis," religious "clutteritis." They were all tangled up and tied down with traditions that had lost their authority and usefulness. And the disease made it impossible for them rightly to understand, appreciate, and appropriate Jesus Christ.

Down with "clutteritis."

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Dr. A. J. Lamar, for many years connected with our Publishing House, 86 years of age, died March 27.

Dr. A. C. King, valuable steward of the Algiers Church, New Orleans, and district steward, died Saturday morning, April 1.

Be on the lookout for an article on "Relativity" by Brother L. M. Lipscomb. He and Einstein, together, will pull us through it.

Dr. Wm. T. Polk, Centreville, Miss., writes a letter expressing an interest in the work of the Prohibitionists of Louisiana.

We notice that Dr. C. W. Crisler, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, recently appeared on the program of the Lincoln County Teachers' Association.

We see in the Wesleyan Christian Advocate that Dr. Theodore Copeland, general evangelist, recently conducted a series of meetings in Wesley Memorial, Atlanta.

Let us again urge you to refer to the label on page one of your Advocate, and if your subscription has expired, kindly mail us $1.50 to cover your renewal for another year.

The Whitworth College Quartet recently appeared on a special church program at Hazle-hurst, Miss. Dr. G. W. Winfield, Dean of Whitworth, delivered the sermon on the occasion.

We notice in a newspaper quite a fine article on prohibition by Rev. B. F. Jones, of Brookhaven, Miss., a valued superannuate of the Mississippi Conference. We are thinking of copying it for our readers.

Rev. R. G. Lord, Executive Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference Board of Christian Education, is getting out a very fine mimeographed sheet, giving valuable information about his work in the Conference.

An interesting feature in our church life at Greenwood, Miss., recently was the exchange of pulpits of Rev. E. H. Cunningham of First Church and Rev. W. J. Cunningham of Price Memorial Church. This was a swap of father and son.

Donaldsonville, La., is the place where Rev. J. P. Bonnemercere is pastor. A recent letter from him, bringing some renewals, relates items of encouraging interest. He has recently organized a Sunday school, which promises to become a church.

Dr. Lawrence L. Cowen, pastor of the Central Methodist Church, of Meridian, Miss., has been invited to deliver the baccalaureate sermon before the graduating class of the Mississippi State College for Women, at Columbus, Miss., on Sunday, June 4.

North Mississippi Conference Preachers, Listen! Mrs. H. E. Davis, of Sherman, Miss., is available to preachers in North Mississippi as choir leader and evangelistic singer for revival meetings. Mrs. Davis has had training in this line of work.

Our office was made happy this morning by a short visit from Mrs. H. T. Carley and Miss Kling Carley, wife and daughter of Dr. H. T. Carley, presiding elder of the Monroe District, and editor of the Advocate. The editor sorely regrets that he was out.

We are indebted to Dr. J. Q. Schisler, Head of the Department of Local Church on our General Board of Christian Education, for the clipping on "Beer" taken from the "International Journal of Religious Education" appearing in last week's Advocate.

The "Postal Service" of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, Dr. W. W. Holmes, pastor, tells of the good things awaiting the people during the season approaching Easter. Good congregations are hearing Dr. Holmes and numbers are coming into the church.

"The Advocate has been a welcome visitor in my home for more than half a century," writes Rev. J. H. Foreman, a superannuate of Pelahatchie, Miss., in a message of thanks for his renewal through the kindness of Rev. J. H. Stafford, a local preacher of New Orleans.

Rev. R. G. Moore, pastor at Itta Bena, Miss., frequently delights the children of the churches with talks on China. Brother Moore was in the University at Soochow for five years, teaching geology. His Conference has used him as missionary secretary for a number of years.

Dr. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Ruston District, was calling among his friends in New Orleans last week. He was accompanied to the city by Mrs. Doss. Many were made glad by their short stay among people to whom they have greatly endeared themselves. Dr. Doss visited our office.

Have you met Harrison Dale Bailey? He is the young fellow who has taken up residence at the parsonage of Duffs, Miss., where Rev. W. P. Bailey is pastor. He is being brought up a true Methodist, having been born in the Methodist Hospital, Memphis, on March 11. We greet the young man with cheer and congratulate the parents.

Only seventy of the more than 500 self-addressed and stamped information cards have been returned. Look up that card, Brother Pastor, and return it to us filled in, as it is important that we have the information requested so that lists and other literature may be forwarded to those in charge of the March 15-May 15 Advocate Circulation Campaign. Thank you.

Rev. B. F. Bullard, who was superannuated last Conference on account of his health, is living now at West Point, Miss. His health has improved so that he is working every day. He plans to hold some revival meetings in July and August if the brethren will be in need of his services. During the years of his active service he was used a great deal for evangelistic work.

The pastor who can lead his congregation in singing is an asset. North Mississippi Conference has a number of such gifted pastors, among them being M. E. Armstrong, C. W. Avery, J. J. Baird, A. R. Beasley, J. B. Burns, W. J. Cunningham, C. T. Floyd, G. C. Gregory, W. R. Hammon-tree, R. T. Hollingsworth, H. P. Lewis, W. W. Milligan, R. P. Neblett, W. C. Newman, Seamon Rhea, J. W. Robinson, E. M. Sharp, E. R. Smoot, A. M. West.

The 100th Anniversary of the birth of the late Major R. W. Millsaps will be celebrated at the college bearing his name as a part of the Commencement exercises at the close of May. This date will also mark the tenth anniversary of the very able administration of Dr. D. M. Key. Millsaps College has had the following presidents: Bishop W. B. Murrah, Dr. D. C. Hull, Dr. A. F. Watkins and Dr. D. M. Key.

The bulletin of Price Memorial Church, Greenwood, Miss., of which Rev. W. J. Cunningham is pastor, came to us last week. It is a four-page folder carrying the Directory and Calendar. On another sheet appear the programs for the day. A few Sundays ago the preacher's subject was, "What to Do With Your Disappointments." That has a strong hint of a real sermon. Brother Cunningham is one of our young preachers already bidding for a large place in the service of the Kingdom.

Rev. E. C. Driskell, our pastor at Lambert, Miss., was a welcome caller at the office of the Advocate on Thursday of last week. He reports having stopped over night at Jackson, Miss., on his way down, and while there enjoyed a splendid sermon delivered by Rev. Benj. L. Sutherland, presiding elder of that district, who was in the midst of a two weeks' revival at the Capitol Street Methodist Church. Bro. Driskell reported that thirty-odd stewards of the church knelt before the chancel at the close of the sermon and re-dedicated their lives to the service of God. Rev. Jos. A. Smith is the pastor of this great church.

A Note of Thanks. "I wish to thank very warmly those kind friends who wrote me letters and cards and sent flowers to me while I was sick in the hospital. Too many of them to answer personally. I received between 75 and 100 of those sweet messages, and they brought sunshine and cheer to my heart, while outside it was cloudy and damp. It has been so long now that many of these friends may have forgotten writing me, but I surely have not forgotten them and their kindness. If you have ever been in a hospital you know the value of such messengers. I am now as good as new, and hitting the ball every day. Again, I thank you. L. M. Lipscomb, Louisville, Miss."

We rejoice in every co-operative move undertaken by the Jews, Catholics and Protestants. My, we have a lot in common, don't we? My philosophy of that work is this: Begin with anything in which you can work together, and enlarge the circle. I believe we shall find so much fun in it that we shall soon get on the search for other things to do together. In a recent joint meeting of these groups a paper was drawn up, one paragraph of which read thus: "The shaken social order starkly challenges men's souls. None of us can know peace while heart-rending suffering stalks through the land. A burning social conscience cries out for planned national action that shall assure to human flesh and blood elemental subsistence, needs and hope. The social conscience is organized and made articulate through our churches and synagogues. These are not hollow voices proclaiming safe and respectable moral platitudes, but they teach the words of God whose first concern for his people was to bring them out of the house of bondage. They inherit and voice the teachings of the prophets who stirred men's souls to action and called men to higher standards of living by their denunciation of those who turn aside the poor from justice, and by their summons to establish justice, to relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow, and proclaim liberty throughout the land to all the inhabitants thereof. They try to follow the teaching which bids us bear one another's burdens."

CLINE ELECTED PRESIDENT OF CENTENARY COLLEGE

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Centenary College, March 27, Professor Pierce Cline, for thirteen years a member of the faculty, was elected President of the College to succeed Dr. W. Angie Smith, Acting President.

We hope shortly to have a fuller statement.

DR. S. A. STEEL SUFFERS STROKE

You cannot keep a good man down. Some three or four weeks ago the "Sage of the Pelican Pines" suffered a slight stroke of paralysis. He was laid up for awhile, but reports now that he is on wheels and able to be out some. Only very temporarily, we trust. Dr. Steel becomes the "Autocrat of the Rolling Chair." Get out your pencil and send him a line. He likes flowers, too.

We are for you, Dr. Steel.

KINGDOM EXTENSION, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Probably most of our Louisiana churches have already taken their Kingdom Extension offerings on March 26, the date designated. Some however, on account of banking conditions or local situations, have found it necessary to delay their offerings. I am therefore adding this last urgent word of exhortation to plead for a unanimous observance of this vital part of the program of the church.

Last year, there were twenty-five charges out of one hundred and fifty-four in our Conference, that made no report on it. Let us see that this year, even though it may have been necessarily delayed, the offering be taken in every church, and definite opportunity be given to every member to have a part in this glorious effort. God and the Church expect every one of us to do his best.

Another point to be emphasized is that immediate remittance be made of 50 per cent to Mr. J. F. Rawls, Doctors' Building, Nashville, Tenn., and 50 per cent to A. M. Mayo, Conference Treasurer, Lake Charles, La. The imperative importance of prompt remittance is emphasized by a recent communication from Bishop Kern in which it is said: "The Board of Missions can not send out its March drafts to missionaries abroad or mission preachers at home because of lack of funds. We wish that every Methodist knew that there can be no missionary salaries until our Self-Denial Offering comes in." In this critical time "The King's business requires haste."

KINGDOM EXTENSION BOOK

The Lyon, Miss. Methodist Church and Missionary Society wish to express through the Advocate their appreciation of the book, Christ and the Coming Kingdom, edited by Dr. W. F. Quillian and sent out for study by the Southern Methodist Church the first of the year.

We think this the best book of its kind that we have ever studied. It not only meets the present day requirement for information in regard to the work of the Church, but can be kept for reference on any special department of that work.

The first five chapters give in an interesting way the information needed to arouse our people to greater interest in all the activities of the Church, and the sixth chapter furnishes the inspiration for a deeper consecration and devotion to the Lord's work at this crucial hour.

If all the other pastors of the Southern Methodist church studied the book and presented it to their respective congregations in the plain, practical and informal manner, as did our pastor, Brother M. H. McCormack, Jr., we feel sure it will be as good seed sown in good ground that will bring forth an abundant harvest.

MORE PREACHERS AVAILABLE

Since notice in the Advocate, March 23, thirteen more preachers have joined the 77 already announced, offering to hold a meeting in cooperation with the North Mississippi Conference Board of Missions as indicated in Report No. 2. Nash Broyles, Shed Hill Caffey, H. F. Brooks, W. D. Bennett, E. F. Tucker, W. M. Jones, and E. L. Jernigan.

E. STANLEY JONES VISITS MEMPHIS

"Marvelous," "Wonderful," "Inspiring," "Refreshing," "Scintillating," were some of the expressions used in trying to describe the ministry of Dr. E. Stanley Jones during his recent visit to Memphis, where he spoke several hours in the morning to five or six hundred ministers and laymen assembled in the First Baptist Church; to several groups in the First Methodist Church at the noon luncheon hour, and to several thousand assembled in the Auditorium and Sunday school annex of the First Methodist Church at the evening hour.

A very solicitous lady, who sat just behind me, enthusiastically remarked, "I can't see why in the world they haven't elected Dr. Jones Bishop." I feel sure Dr. Jones did not hear this remark, but during his address of the evening he answered the question when he said, "There have been two dreary, unhappy days during my missionary career of twenty-five years, one of which was the day I spent as a Bishop in the Methodist Episcopal Church; joy and peace came after my resignation on the following day." The other, he said, was the fear that he might not be permitted to continue his activities in India, which tury Renaissance, but our reformation is over-due. Intelligence has outgrown goodness. There is a serious loss of confidence, of faith throughout the world. The cure for this distracted mind, the only sound basis for the development of stable, trustworthy character is to bring mankind to Jesus Christ, the Crucified Saviour, and the living One who is making the only real bid for the world today."

Dr. Jones re-enforced the challenge which had already been flung out to Methodism by the leadership of our great church to sacrificially and adequately meet the present crisis in our missionary program by reminding us that this is one of the greatest evangelistic hours of human history. May Easter Sunday, the day set for our Self-Denial Offering, be a real Easter Morn to every pastor and to every congregation in Southern Methodism, because after days of honest study, anxious, agonizing prayer, and the crucifixion of SELF and SUBSTANCE, we shall walk the pathway of joyous, willing, unselfish service with our Risen, Living, Glorified, Ever-present Christ.

fear was allayed by receiving the necessary papers authorizing his return to India.

Dr. Jones was especially helpful to the large group of pastors and laymen of Protestant churches during the morning session when he so wisely and aptly answered the many timely questions related to missionary work and problems of the present day. Listen to some of the pointed paragraphs of this modern apostle of the dynamic gospel of Jesus Christ:

"God does not always heal, but He gives us power to use our infirmities."

"Saints are about equally distributed in all of the churches. God is saving many on account of some, and in spite of others."

"Christianity refuses a syncretism, because it is life and light."

"Ghandi believes that religion is something that you get hold of by self-discipline—an attainment. It is not an attainment, but an obtainment; a bankrupt self laid at the feet of Jesus, cleansed, healed, quickened with power and given back again."

"Communism is a sort of mustard plaster on the back of a capitalistic society. It will make us burn, and make us think. It is running a race in the world with Christianity. The only way for Christianity to beat Communism is to beat it to it, viz. some plan of corporate sharing in the place of the present selfish order of society."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

March 12 to 17 the Standard Training School of the Galloway Memorial Church was held. All the faculty was from Jackson. The esprit of the school and the results were exceedingly gratifying. Fifty per cent more credits than last year. The desire for improving the work was better than ever before. We all enjoyed the work and will be better workers than we have ever been.

March 19 to 24 the Training School at Vicksburg was held. Rev. H. G. Hawkins taught the class in Life of Paul. This was the largest class in the school. Mrs. W. H. Watkins taught course in Adult Administration. Mrs. Watkins contributed her services to the school. Prof. J. P. Rutledge taught the course, Teaching children, and the writer taught course on Evangelism. Personally, I never enjoyed teaching a course better in all my life. There was a wonderful spirit in the school and from the expressions made all were pleased.

I was invited to meet with the North Vicksburg District Young People's Union on the 26th. I enjoyed this meeting so much. Forty-eight young people were at Holly Bluff. The Holly Bluff young people put on the program. It was a most enjoyable one. I was so glad to be with them and enjoy the work with them.

I was with Rev. J. M. Lewis at Louise in the morning services. I have been going to Louise for a long time, but I have never found such a fine glowing spirit as we met this trip. I was delighted both at the attendance on Sunday school and the preaching service. Brother Lewis is having a wonderful year and God is blessing him in his work.

The night I visited the young people at Silver City, 36 were present. We had a discussion service and it was a wonderful service. The young people actually spoke up and expressed themselves.

I preached to an excellent congregation. I discovered that out of an enrollment of 114 in Sunday school that 96 were present and that three classes had a perfect attendance. There is an air of progress and hopefulness here. Brother Alford has received a wonderful reception.

Prof. Mack Moore is principal of the high school. His sainted father, Rev. W. H. Moore, was once my pastor, and I remember the impression he made upon me as a saint. I was glad to renew friendship after so many years.

$250 for missions the past month. About half what it was for this month last year. But what a month! I do not know of anything more encouraging than to get this money in money orders and cash to amount to this. The faithfulness of our churches who do believe in missions in this crisis brings joy to the heart of God.

I am getting the most wonderful reports from our young people's workers. Unions are springing up all over the Conference. Institutes are being held. Pep meetings. All sorts and kinds of work. The faithfulness and sturdiness of the young people in pressing on brings great joy to the entire program. Miss Ann Lewis and her helpers have transformed the Young People's work in the Jackson District.

Please get your Young People's Anniversary collection in to Mr. Harvey T. Newell, Jr., 304 Millsaps Building, as soon as possible. The money is greatly needed.

Pray for your work and workers.
 JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

Sunday School Day Observance Set For April 13.

Last year 190 Sunday schools in our Conference DID NOT observe Sunday School Day.

This reveals the great opportunity and need for a general observance of this DAY for leading our folks into a close-up of the Church school at work and its needs of whole-hearted support by our people in the local church.

In these times, as never before, every spiritual force should be actively at work.

One of the objectives of Sunday School Day is to point out the spiritual forces in the teaching work of the Church and their effectiveness, if made to reach the children, young people and adults of the church, in training and development through Bible Study, resulting in a changed life and consecrated personality.

Some Suggestions

1. The Local Church Board of Christian Education and Workers' Council should make plans early in March.

2. Write to Rev. A. K. McLellan, Box 742, Alexandria, La., and a copy of the program, "The Faith that Shares," will be sent without charge.

3. Make plans to reach entire congregation. The entire congregation should be led to an appreciation of the educational task of the Church.

4. Use posters, church bulletin, personal letters in your publicity.

5. Make clear the purpose of Sunday School Day to everyone.

6. Set a generous goal for the offering to be taken. Classes would be interested to help attain this goal. Send offering promptly to Floyd B. James, Box 742, Alexandria, La.

7. Make the entire undertaking a matter of prayer and a vitally religious service.

"The object of the Christian Church is to lead souls to Christ, build them up in Christ, and send them forth to serve Christ." We pray for a one hundred per cent observance of Sunday School Day in the Louisiana Conference.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

We have a most important announcement to make which should be interesting to everyone. If you are interested in hearing all about the Assemblies, tune in on station WWL at 4:30 p.m., May 6th and May 13th. In addition to Assembly news you will get two very fine musical programs. We will tell you more about it later—but put the dates down on your radio program and don't forget to "tune in."

Here are the plans for the week-end Christian Adventure Institute which is being sponsored by the Elizabeth Langford Union of Baton Rouge District, April 21 and 22, in Hammond. There will be two credit courses offered: "Jesus and His Relations With Other People," to be taught by Rev. D. F. Anders, Zachary, La.; "Alcohol and Ourselves," to be taught by Rev. G. W. Dameron, Jackson, La. Collins Lipscomb will teach a non-credit course on Recreation for those over 15 who wish to attend the Institute. Lydel Sims will act as Dean.

The Young People's Training Conference for the Shreveport City Union will take place April 23-28, at First Methodist Church. Rev. A. K. McLellan will be Educational Director. The faculty will consist of Rev. E. O. Harbin of Nashville, Tenn.; Mrs. R. E. Smith of Shreveport, and Rev. H. L. Johns of Ruston. This is the second training conference to be held in this Union.

We are very anxious to learn how many churches observed Young People's Day. We will report in these columns as reports come in. Thus far, March 30, the following have reported: Hammond, with the play, $10.00 offering; Ponchatoula, play, $5.26; First Church, Baton Rouge; special speaker, $11.25; Keener Memorial, play, $3.62. We know of quite a number of other churches who put on the program, but we have not received their reports as yet. Let us hear from you.

We are glad to welcome another "second generation" Leaguer to the group of young people. The latest newcomer is Miss Jean Alice Flowers, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Ira W. Flowers of Belcher, whose birthday is March 16, 1933. Mrs. Flowers is well known over the state as Miss Agatha Brewer. Heaps of congratulations!

ANNOUNCEMENT

Because of unavoidable circumstances, it is necessary to postpone the Twenty-second Annual Meeting of the Mississippi Conference, which was to be held April 4-7, 1933, at Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, Miss. The hostess church has very graciously allowed the change of dates, so auxiliaries will watch for later notice.

MRS. T. B. COTTRELL, Pres.;
MRS. JOS. A. SMITH, Rec. Sec.

Zone No. 5 of the Ruston District met recently in Athens, Mrs. R. L. Clayton, the new zone leader, presiding. A very interesting program had been arranged, and representatives were present from the Arcadia, Gibsland and Athens auxiliaries.

Fine features of the meeting were the addresses given by Mrs. Allen, for many years president of the First Church, Shreveport, auxiliary, by Mrs. H. B. Wren, District Secretary of the Shreveport District, and by Mrs. Carolyn Dawson, District Secretary of the Ruston District.

A very interesting program under the general theme of "Missions" was carried out, and discussion following the various talks was entered into heartily by those present. A group of young people from Athens, under the direction of Mrs. Clayton, presented

Less Suffering After She Took Cardui

"Periodically I have a dull ache in the lower part of my back," writes Mrs. Ruth Hill, of Charleston, W. Va. "I get real dizzy, my head swims, and I have a weak, 'gone' feeling that keeps me from doing my work well. I have found that taking Cardui prevents this. I have been greatly benefited from its use."

When womanly aches and pains are due to a weak, run-down condition, take CARDUI. It has been used by women for over 50 years. Cardui is a purely vegetable strengthening medicine and it cannot harm you.

a dramatization of the Bible story of Ruth and Naomi.

Mrs. Clayton proved herself to be a very fine presiding officer, and added much to the meeting. At the noon hour a delicious picnic luncheon was served in the Sunday school rooms of the church.

CONFERENCE NEWS

Mississippi

Miss Betty Hughes, a returned missionary from China, was honored at a miscellaneous shower given by the zone composed of the following auxiliaries of the Meridian District: DeKalb, Scooba, Electric Mills, Porterville, and Lauderdale and Electric Mills Epworth League at the church in Daleville, immediately after the regular meeting of the Daleville missionary society, the following out-of-town guests joined the members of the society: Mesdames Beulah Hare and E. Hammack, of Scooba; Rev. and Mrs. Winstead and Mrs. Warren, of DeKalb; Dr. and Mrs. Rolph Hunt; Mesdames T. J. Taylor, Ernest Brown, Scott and Gordon, of Lauderdale; Mesdames A. C. Grantham, Della M. Field, C. M. Fitts, Grady May, A. K. Briggs, Joe West, J. C. Cole and Dick Grantham, of Electric Mills; W. D. Hawkins, of Meridian, Secretary of Missionary Conference of Mississippi, was also present.

Favorite songs of Miss Hughes were sung, after which Rev. Mr. Winstead conducted the devotional.

Miss Betty was given the seat of honor, surrounded by many attractive and interesting looking packages. Mrs. Ernest Brown made a very impressive presentation speech in which she stated these gifts were tokens of love and appreciation of the 45 years of beautiful service rendered by the honoree in China.

Miss Betty, in her usual gracious and unassuming manner, responded, stating that with the evident interest of so many, she has taken a new lease on life and felt that she is going to be well again soon.

When on a furlough home a few years ago, the doctors advised her not to return to China, due to ill health. Since that time she has made her home with a sister, Mrs. Prouty, of Daleville.

Among the packages was a life membership certificate of the Missionary Society of China, presented by Chinese to Miss Hughes, which had been secretly framed by the DeKalb society. Miss Hughes is also a life member of the Missionary Society of America given her by the Meridian district.

Mrs. Grady May and Mrs. Ernest Brown assisted Miss Hughes in opening the packages, and every one present was given the privilege of seeing the many beautiful and useful gifts. Coffee and cake was served by the Daleville society.

Canton, Jackson District, now has a united auxiliary, which was organized in January. Meetings are held the first Monday in each month, with Mrs. Lula Winans directing as president. Their goal for the first quarter is: "The World Outlook in Every Methodist Home."

MRS. ADELAIDE CHANEY TUCKER was born July 14, 1847, near Slaughter, La. Her parents were Jas. J. B. Chaney and Elizabeth Dennis Chaney. Her girlhood was spent in the Olive Branch community, where she married E. F. Tucker after his return from the Civil War, Oct. 14, 1869. She was the mother of five children, one of whom, a son, died early in life. There are left to mourn her passing, her husband, E. F. Tucker, and four daughters—Mrs. T. W. Millican, Deerford, La.; Mrs. W. Y. Millican, Baton Rouge, La.; Mrs. J. H. Millican, Deerford, La., and Mrs. Joe F. Tucker, Zachary, La., a number of grandchildren and great-grandchildren, with other relatives and a host of friends.

Sister Tucker gave her life to Christ, and with her husband joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1871, at Olive Branch, La., during the pastorate of Rev. Newton Young. She remained an active member until the last few months, when her health would not permit. She was in her accustomed place in the church less than two months before her death.

Her home was always open to her pastors and families, or to any one in need. She ran the journey of life in 85 years, 6 months and 23 days. It was a path marked with deeds of kindness and cheer. Flowers, not thorns, sunshine, not shadows, did she scatter everywhere.

Her life was a rare jewel, her spirit as gold refined in fire ready for heaven.

Our loss marks the going of another of the most outstanding characters of this part of the country. She has left us and we are lonely. Still through this gloom there comes a ray of sunshine, for we know she only awaits our coming and watches at the gate.

Her funeral was held in the home, where she lived so long and loved so well, by her pastor and Dr. R. H. Harper, Rev. D. F. Anders, and Rev. Ollie Tucker. She was laid to rest in the Tucker cemetery, Deerford, La., February 8, 1933. She could well say with St. Paul, "The time of my

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT FROM BASTROP, LA.

Our hearts have been saddened, our church has lost a valued member, and our Missionary Circle has been broken, since our Heavenly Father has seen fit in His love and mercy to call up higher one of our most beloved members, Mrs. C. B. Perry.

Therefore, be it resolved; That we of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Church who have been associated with her realize a great loss, for we appreciated her many fine qualities as wife, mother, sister, friend, and as a member of our church who exemplified in her life the high principles of a Christian woman. Hers was a well spent life, filled with good deeds and unselfish devotion to the welfare of others.

Therefore, be it resolved; That we as members of the Methodist Missionary Society express our deepest sympathy to her family and loved ones because of this great sorrow which has come to them.

Lives like hers, so gentle and true.

Die not with the passing of the years,

But leave their impress on our hearts, Stilling our doubts and fears.

Be it further resolved; That a copy of these resolutions be recorded in the minutes of the Missionary Society, a copy sent to the family, one to the Morehouse Enterprise, and one to the Christian Advocate.

MISS BETTIE ROBERTSON

On December 5, 1932, the gentle spirit of Ann Elizabeth Robertson passed to its eternal home. A beautiful life ended but the glow of her Godly life will live on and on in the hearts of those who knew her and loved her. Her spirit is not confined but exulting in the blissful experiences of a great new-found life.

Bettie Robertson was the daughter of the late William Thomas and Lou J. Robertson and was born February 21, 1866. Her entire life was spent in Scott County, in and near Forest, where her winning personality and usefulness endeared her to a host of friends. In early childhood she attended the public schools of the County, and in 1885 she was graduated from Harpersville College, Harpersville, Miss. For several years she taught in the public schools of Scott County.

"Miss Betty," as she was affectionately called, was a friend of young people and any progressive movement for the youth of the town met with her hearty endorsement.

She joined the Methodist Church when a small girl and was ever faithful and true to all of its institutions. The Methodist hymns thrilled her very soul, and very fitting it was to hear, "It is well with my soul," and "Peace, sweet peace," as the last sad rites were said over her silent form.

How dear to her heart was her home! First the home with the sainted mother and father, who left such a rich heritage to their children—beautiful lives well spent; and later in the home with her two brothers, sister-in-law and eight nieces and nephews; she was ever their source of inspiration, courage and lofty ideals. The height of her ambition was that her nieces and nephews should grow into useful men and women. And she gave freely of herself and her means, that they might be prepared to take their places as useful citizens. How sad they are without her, yet how thankful they are that Aunt Bet was spared to bless their lives for so many years.

There are left to mourn her passing, one sister, Mrs. Pattie Montgomery, of Centreville, Miss.; two brothers, W. F. Robertson and R. A. Robertson, of Forest; six nieces and six nephews and two great-nieces and two great-nephews.

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

WINTERS

On the morning of January 8, 1933, the soul of Sister Nannie Carlisle Winters left this old world for that better home just beyond. Sister Winters was born September 20, 1863. She joined the Methodist Church at Liberty Hill, in Attala County, near McCool, Miss., when only a young woman. On January 5, 1882, she was married to Brother J. W. Winters, who remains to mourn her passing and who shall feel so keenly the loss of one that for these many years had been by his side as a faithful companion, to share all the problems that were his. Her life will be missed not only by those of her immediate family but by all who knew her. Through the years she was faithful to her God through the Church which it was always her joy to attend. Sister Winters had been in failing health about two years prior to her death. She was patient during all her suffering and always in surprisingly good spirits as she was visited by those who loved her and were interested in her welfare.

In addition to her beloved husband, Sister Winters is survived by two daughters, namely, Mrs. Thornton Carr, of Tchula, Miss., and Mrs. Minnie Middlebrook, of Kosciusko, Miss.

The body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Liberty Hill, a place that was dear and sacred to her. While her body has moved from our midst and her soul to the eternal world, her life in its memory and influence shall linger in the minds of those who knew her as a means of blessing to them as they follow the path that leads the way that she has gone. Burial services were conducted by Rev. A. M. Mann, of Weir, local preacher, in the absence of her pastor, who was ill at the time. May all who knew her profit by this Godly life, the mortal part of which has ended.

JAS. W. GIBSON.

WHO SAID THERE WAS NO NEED FOR CHRISTIAN SCHOOLS?

This from a student publication of the University of North Carolina of recent issue: "Bertrand Russell's lecture here left a profound impression. . . . His ideas appeared unusually felicitous and acceptable, because they were the ideas that most of us hold, but either cannot or are afraid to express. Some people cannot seem to realize that the days of purity, self-sacrificing ideals and all that bunk are gone forever. Then, too, that phrase 'doubtful pleasures.' There is no such thing as evil or wickedness—merely the standards of the times in which one happens to be living." Red Russia cannot beat that.—Clipped.

WOMEN'S PAINS

EASED QUICKER BY LIQUID MEDICINE

Why prolong your discomfort waiting for solid pain remedies to dissolve in your stomach? When you take Capudine for periodic pain, rheumatic or neuralgic pain, headaches, or aches due to colds, you needn't wait for relief because Capudine is liquid and its ingredients are already dissolved. Your system absorbs them at once. Soothing relief follows immediately.

THERE MAY BE POISON IN YOUR BOWELS!

STEP out tomorrow morning with the fresh buoyancy and briskness that comes from a clean intestinal tract. Syrup Pepsin—a doctor's prescription for the bowels—will help you do this. This compound of fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other pure ingredients will clean you out thoroughly—without griping, sickening or discomfort.

Poisons absorbed into the system from souring waste in the bowels, cause that dull, headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that, gently, harmlessly, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you.

Dr. Caldwell studied bowel troubles for forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commend it to everyone. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative drugstore sell.

A Letter to President Roosevelt

Dear Mr. Roosevelt: Ever since your inaugural address I have been planning to write you. Perhaps you will never know just what a thrill of satisfied expectancy came to most of us throughout the country at your words.

Moreover you would be interested to know something of our peculiar feeling toward you in this section of the South. Why, we are almost as strong for the Democratic party as we are for our religion, some of us much more so, and with some of us they are just about the same thing. For a long time many of us have felt that even a poor Democrat was better than anything else. Of course some of us have never asked just why we think that way, or think that we think that way.

So you didn't lose anything on us by being a Democrat. We feel that you are peculiarly our own. And it gives us people of the South peculiar delight in feeling that you, a great Democrat, are the "man of destiny" for our country. As a matter of fact, by contrast, we can see now that Republicans, in the main, have been pretty much of an inconvenience if not a curse to the country.

But aside from our pet prejudices we can really appreciate a great man. And we assure you that we are backing you strongly.

We did not overlook the rather interesting coincidents that made your inauguration spectacular and unusual. We shall never cease to be grateful that you escaped the assassin's bullet. But that exultation is tempered by the fact that it did reach a rather high mark in taking the life of Mayor Cermak of Chicago, that man, who, regardless of our attitude toward his policies, rose from a very lowly immigrant's position to this high place as chief executive of our country's second largest city.

And we grieved with you at the going of Senator Walsh, that high and daring man whom you had selected for the Attorney-Generalship in your cabinet. Surely it was a great loss.

To add to these things the closing of our country's banks coming as the final jolt in our economic depression, furnished a dramatic climax to a long series of more or less discouraging events leading up to and forming a very cloudy background for your inauguration.

When I saw what a majority our citizens had rolled up for you in your election I was amazed. I trembled for you. It was far more than victory of a party. It was a great nation saying, "Party matters are of secondary importance just now. We are asking you to take hold of the tangled mess in which we have become involved and lead us out." I trembled because I felt something of the impossibilities of such an undertaking, and anticipated the humiliating possibilities that awaited your administration. And I wondered if you could measure up to the situation.

We watched you as you approached your inauguration, and we don't mind calling attention to some things that impressed us most favorably and helped to dissolve some fears that we had entertained.

You did not lose anything on us Methodists by turning aside on your way to the inaugural ceremonies to your church and spending that half hour in prayer and worship. We rate that mighty high. When you did it you walked straight into the

THE EASTER URGE

Now we come to that place in the year when, throughout nature, life sings in glee on every grave. It is the symphony of spring.

"Whether we look, or whether we listen,
We hear life murmur, or see it glisten;
Every clod feels a stir of might,
An instinct within that towers and reaches
And, groping blindly above it for light,
Climbs to a soul in grass and flowers."

Pause for a moment. What if in no egg there were a bird song? What if in no acorn there were an oak? What if in no bulb there were a lily?

Pause no longer. Rejoice! Away with "what ifs." All about us the birds are singing, to right and left oaks are towering, on every hand the lilies are nodding.

Back of the dry and hardened shell of the acorn is the urge of the oak. In the shell of the egg is the song of the lark. In the ugly bulb is the banner of Easter. And death is the calyx of life.

And man—

"Thou wilt not leave us in the dust;
Thou madest man, he knows not why,
He thinks he was not made to die;
And Thou hast made him; Thou art just."

hearts of many of us. We said, "Well, if he is going to look at his responsibility like that, we will just put him on our prayer-list. If he fails, it will not be because we failed to pray for him as he faces his glorious but tragic undertaking."

We were waiting almost breathlessly for your inaugural word. With this whole country, and many outside of it, we leaned forward, hushed to silence, waiting your first word.

Imagine the emotions that surged through us when this statement opened that inaugural word: "This is a day of national consecration." Mr. President, did you mean that? We believe you did. We took it that way. You could not, in these critical circumstances, trifle with us. We considered that statement of a part with your turning aside for prayer and a view of the "burning bush" on the way to your inauguration.

Another thing that attracted our attention and moved us deeply was that old Bible of yours. Some may call it sentimentalism, but we know that it is something far greater than that. We of the "Bible belt" just feel that you can't get far without the Bible and that you can't go far wrong with it. The fact that you have kept that old Bible in the family so long means volumes to us. We would not have you think that we measure up to this appreciation of the Scriptures, but we do want them kept open for us.

Then you went a step further into our hearts when you carefully selected the Thirteenth Chapter of First Corinthians upon which to rest your hand as you took the oath as President. That is one of our favorite chapters. We always want to read it right along by the side of what Saint John said about how much God loved the world. In these two statements John and Paul stand side by side on a very high peak of inspiration and revelation. I just hope you will keep on reading that old Bible.

I was very much amused at the embarrassing little situation that developed at a later hour when you were getting your Cabinet sworn in and no Bible could be found about the White House. Directly an attendant showed up with his and saved the situation. (The Bible will save many an embarrassing situation). Of course I knew how in the moving and getting settled in the White House you had not placed copies of the Bible conveniently for all emergencies.

Now that inaugural address itself swept us a grand climax of confidence. It was brief, clear, simple and pointed. It possessed just about every necessary virtue of a great speech, but none loomed higher than its fitness for the occasion. It seemed to grow out of the circumstances and turn around to command those circumstances.

And there was woven into it all the way through what I would call the spiritual element. Of course you can understand this on my part when you realize that I am a preacher and that I am always on the lookout for that. And yet I would not have you feel that I narrowly define that element. I certainly do not mean a pious cant that finds no heroic and practical connection with the affairs of state. In fact I regard great and honest statesmanship as a spiritual matter. I think of the honest handling of the people's funds and the services rendered them by public servants, you and others, as a spiritual matter.

Your familiarity with the Bible at those points of telling ethical importance inspired me to hope for the new day as well

TOWARD SIMPLER LIVING

By Frank B. McAllister

It is related that some companions of Diogenes, the Cynic, once took him on a tour of the gay bazaars of Athens. Having displayed the riches of the shops, they demanded, "And what does Diogenes think of all this?" Whereat the dweller of the tub replied: "I am reflecting how many things there are in the world a wise man can get along without."

Who of us, in philosophic mood, can pass through a modern department store without some such thought? Here are tons of gewgaws and gadgets that may minister in some degree, to be sure, to man's pleasure, to his love of ease or display—but in most instances hardly at all to any essential need. Certainly three-quarters of the material goods we have accepted as a necessary part of our civilized existence might be sunk in the sea, with no real hurt to human welfare.

A few simple, elemental satisfactions we must have in order to live. Long ago, Emerson named some items of the modest list. "Wealth begins in a tight roof that keeps rain and wind out; in a good pump that yields you plenty of sweet water; in two suits of clothes, so that you may change your dress when you are wet; in dry sticks to burn, in a good double-wick lamp, and three meals." Perhaps an even more persuasive apostle of the simple life (who also unhesitatingly practiced it) was Emerson's fellow-townsmen, that strange genius, Henry D. Thoreau. When one drops a stone on the cairn marking the site of Thoreau's hut at Walden Pond, he honors a prophet who steadfastly refused to be cumbered with the trappings of civilization. We know how gallantly and happily the man lived, notwithstanding, and that about him there was ever a kind of regal independence.

In view of the unprecedented financial dearth of our time, one hears it debated whether or not the so-called "American standard of living" must be lowered. Certain economists seem to think this to be inevitable, while, on the other hand, there is a chorus of horrified protests. Let us here venture to recommend that our standard of living be not lowered at all, but rather lifted far higher. This does not involve, however, more goods for us to try to pay for—richer food, finer houses, faster automobiles, etc. Such things do not necessarily enrich life. As a matter of fact, most of the luxuries, and even many of the so-called comforts of life are not indispensable. They may indeed be positive hindrances to the welfare of mankind.

Centuries ago, Jesus spoke true words to humble dwellers in Galilee, and he speaks them to us, too. When shall we realize the profound truth of the Master's declaration, "A man's life does not consist in the abundance of the things which he possesseth?" Perhaps the very stress of the times will teach us lessons that prosperity could never impart. Millions will learn to value anew those fine simplicities in which life actually does consist—domestic joys, the sights and sounds of nature, good books, loyal friendships, quiet conversation, the glory of faith, and hope, and love. Such great gifts are not dependent on money. But as we seek and gain them we may be surprised to find that they are so many, and so splendidly satisfying.

THE ANTHROPOMORPHIC GOD

By Rev. John D. Ellis

Quotation: "The anthropomorphic God of the Hebrews cannot meet our modern needs."

Such a statement arises from a lack of thought, and knowledge, and is not fair to the real teachings of Jewish Scriptures.

"Anthropos" means "man," and "morphe" means "form":

Anthropomorphic is the representation of Deity under human form, and with human attributes and affections. The Hebrew Scriptures in some places are anthropomorphic, and very wisely so. We can understand the Scriptures when they represent unto us that God speaks, that he has a voice, eye, ear, hand, finger, heart, etc.

Hebrew anthropomorphism also shows God's knowledge of man, and his interest in man.

The Scriptures contain poetical composition, figurative language, metaphors, and analogy which are very useful to the human mind, and of easy comprehension.

To start with, the Jewish Scriptures are not anthropomorphic. "In the beginning God created . . . and the Spirit of God moved upon the waters."

Jesus also taught that "God is a Spirit." Moses endured as seeing him that is invisible. Paul represented him as the "King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God." He is the master mind of the universe, without a body, or a brain like unto human beings.

"The Lord said in his heart, I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake." (Gen. 8:21.)

Heart in Scripture stands for intention, sincerity, etc.

It cannot be said that God has a heart of flesh and blood like unto his creatures, but it is valuable to have him represented with a heart.

"The Lord spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend." (Ex. 33:11.)

The manifestation was in a way that Moses as a human being could understand, and which convinced him the friendship of Deity. Moses, in his song, said: "Jehovah is a man of war."

The achievements of Jehovah were great in delivering the Israelites from bondage, and in overthrowing the Egyptians at the Red Sea: Jehovah, in fighting for his people is a renowned warrior and conqueror, and he is the strength and salvation of his people.

He is "mighty in battle" (Ps. 24:8), and "in righteousness he doth judge, and make war" (Rev. 19:11.)

Solomon said: "Thou spakest with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it with thine hand." (2 Chron. 6:15.)

I THIRST

By Rev. Walter Spence

"I thirst! I thirst!" the Saviour cried
With burning lips before he died;
A cooling draught he asked of those Who mocking looked upon his throes.

Angelic hosts from heaven's height
In sorrow gaze upon the sight;
But yet the sky no water drips
To cool the Saviour's parched lips.

A thousand fountains poured that day,
A river flowed not far away;
But not one cup by friend or foe
Was brought to mitigate his woe.

He suffered thirst on Calvary's hill
That he our thirsty hearts might fill,
To open wide a fount of grace
For all who seek the Father's face.

"O come!" we hear the Spirit call;
The invitation is to all;
"Ho, all ye souls athirst, come ye,
And drink the living water free!"

Mouth stands for promise and wisdom. His hand stands for power and bounty. (Ezra 8:22. Ps. 145:16.)

"If I with the finger of God cast out devils." (Luke 11:20.)

The finger of God is powerful, and authoritative. (Ex. 8:19, Deut. 9:10.)

"The eyes of the Lord run to and fro through the whole earth. (Zech. 4:10.)

The Lord watches, and he is infinitely wise. "His ears are open unto their cry." (Ps. 34:15.)

He hears, and answers the prayers of his people. "He that planted the ear, shall he not hear? He that formed the eye, shall he not see?" (Ps. 94:9.)

God does not lack what he gives to his creatures: He has knowledge and perception.

It is not objectionable for the Scriptures to represent God unto us with human attributes and affections. There are times when such representations are comforting; yet, God is a Spirit, and the Divine essence is invisible to our senses. In his being, he is not flesh and blood.

Here is something, which is very anthropomorphic: "When the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman." "The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us." God walked among men in the person of Jesus Christ.

People who object to the Jewish Scriptures because they are anthropomorphic will probably object to them also because they represent Jehovah in bird form (ormismorphic): "He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust." (Ps. 91:4.)

Metaphoric language, which shows protection under the mercy and power of God.

The anthropomorphic God of the Hebrews is able to meet our modern needs. He is our Tower and Shield, without being in essence like the material in a tower, or shield.

"The Lord rideth upon a swift cloud" (Isa. 19:1), and his "way is in the sea." (Ps. 77:19.)

His "paths drop fatness" (Ps. 65:11.) "Righteousness shall go before him, and shall set us in the way of his steps" (Ps. 85:13.)

The anthropomorphism of Scripture is valuable, and the metaphors are easily understood. In divers manners he spake unto the fathers.

THE SECOND BATTLE OF BULL RUM

By Rev. Waldo W. Moore

The bull has bellowed, pawed the dirt, shaken his head and squared himself for the death grapple.

The first battle was fought many years ago, beginning in a local way; then went to the counties, then to the State, and after thirty-three States had passed dry laws it was decided to ask for an amendment to prohibit the manufacture and sale of alcohol for beverage purposes. The Eighteenth Amendment was the result.

The Eighteenth Amendment shows statesmanship and wisdom both in its wording and intent, and there is no part of the Constitution of the United States more important or elevating to the citizens of our country.

It protects the man who has a weakness for strong drink and forbids his enemies (the brewers and saloon-keepers) from robbing him of his reason and his money. It also permits alcohol for all necessary purposes. Can there be anything more reasonable than this?

The battle has opened—the beer bill has passed—and that means the saloon is already here.

Who is on the side of Bull Rum? What does it mean to return to bull rum and let the beast have the victory? Why have we to fight this second battle, and who is against bull rum?

This is Bullrum: The President and his cabinet; the majority of the United States senators; (I judge by attitude and votes); a majority of the congressmen; the Anti-Prohibition Association, composed of fifty-two millionaires just pawing the dirt to locate breweries and saloons that they may fill their pockets with blood money of the poor men, women and children; then some neighboring nations, want us to return to liquor, that they may debauch our boys and girls.

Another personage whom we do not see but feel his power, and that is the devil. You may be sure the devil is wise and wiley, and sometimes may associate with some respectable looking people, but be assured he will not associate with anyone very long without controlling.

What does it mean to return to bull rum and let the beast have the victory? The other day I saw where a woman was trying to reform the devil. I know that woman is very ignorant of the Bible, because the first woman ever in the world tried to reform the devil, but it was only a short time till Eve had a very disgraceful fall. Eve had more than this woman here in question, but the devil robbed her of her means and her virtue. Look out, woman, lest you fall after the plan of your mother Eve, and get your generation reaping of your evils. To reform Prohibition means bringing back the saloon, playing with the devil on his own ground. He is laughing at the silly women, that they are so easily gulled.

It is the loss of an attainable ideal that would and did inspire the confidence of others in us as a nation. To depart from that ideal lays the suspicion on us that our nation has been bribed to take this step-back from such an ideal, and the nations can never have confidence in our ability to lead.

Why have we to fight this second battle? Because New York empire was not satisfied, although forty-six States voted for the amendment. (Now they tell us if thirteen States vote for retaining the Eighteenth Amendment that we will still have prohibition.) New York almost instantly nullified all prohibition laws on her statute books, to her own shame. Andrew Jackson, on his deathbed, was approached by a minister and asked if there were any confession that he wished to make. He said, "Yes, I am sorry I did not have John C. Calhoun executed because of the nullification act of South Carolina." If Abe Lincoln had been alive when New York nullified the Eighteenth Amendment he would have raised an army like Washington did in the Whiskey Rebellion in Pennsylvania in 1794. The United States should have sent an army into New York and made her stand hitched. The United States made us free our slaves. It should have made New York free her citizens of the slavery of strong drink.

Again another reason we have to fight this second battle of Bull Rum is the unfaithfulness of the United States' leading politicians in congress and elsewhere. There was not a general demand for the repeal. The vote of the 1928 election showed where the people stood. A certain man then shook his money in the face of the "Higherups" and they crouched and bowed down to this Golden Calf. Our politicians have lowered our ideals. The proposed 21st Amendment is too weak and sloppy for a great nation to consider at all.

Again we who believe in temperance have been neglecting our duty to teach the young the danger of alcohol on the human organism. May God help us to give the young and old the teaching of God's Word.

Who is against Bull Rum? All of God's children. Moral and upright people do not want the return of whiskey.

The forward looking man knows that a drunkard cannot stand long and his offspring is a weakling at his birth.

Remember the "Battle of Bull Rum" is on and the enemy has already fired on the friends of Temperance.

THE CHURCH AND WAR

Organized Christianity faces a responsibility in determining the attitude of the great nations to war that churches scarcely realize. If peaceful and judicial methods of settling disputes are to be substituted for force, for the destruction of life and property, churches must lead the way. Diplomacy, treaties, alliances, have all been tried and all have failed. The church is opposed to war but its opposition has not been given sufficient emphasis. Resolutions have been passed but the gospel of peace has not been preached and the teachings of Jesus have not been burned into the consciences of its own members. War is contrary to Christianity and that needs to be said over and over until mankind believes it.

Some of the wars of the past have been religious wars and many of the world's greatest warriors have been religious men. Their personal piety is not questioned nor in fact their religious standards. They were influenced by their times and training. They were the victims of their times and the circumstances of their lives. Wars will certainly continue until adequate agencies for the settlement of international disputes have been established. This will not be done until the mind to peace has been developed. This is one task of the churches. But another step must be taken and this will take courage. The churches must condemn war. Its destructive powers are too great to be endured.—Southwestern Christian Advocate, Texas.

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE LOUISIANA METHODIST ORPHANAGE

The recent session of the Ruston District Conference instructed the undersigned to prepare a statement concerning the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage for publication in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

We desire to call attention to the efficient management of the Orphanage during the long period of his connection with this institution by the Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Superintendent. He has operated this institution without going into debt and has cared for hundreds of children, sending them forth into the world as useful members of society.

At this time there are one hundred and seven girls and seventy-two boys, a total of one hundred and forty-nine children in the Orphanage. They have no other home in the world except the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage. Surely this noble institution must continue to be maintained.

Brother Vaughan finds himself in a most difficult position in seeking to carry on the work of the Orphanage. Numbers of individuals who have been able formerly gladly to contribute large sums of money for carrying on this work are now able to give only small amounts, if anything at all. One large church in the Conference which has been making a contribution at the Christmas season of several thousand dollars gave last Christmas approximately five hundred dollars. By careful management during the prosperous years it was possible to accumulate a reserve fund for emergency. That fund has been exhausted, or soon will be.

The continued operation of the Orphanage free from debt is dependent upon the contributions of our people on Easter Sunday and Harvest Day in the fall of the year. In view of these conditions it was believed by the members of the Ruston District Conference that a statement should be made to the friends of the Orphanage by those who are near to the institution and know of its condition. Let everyone do his utmost in the Easter Offering for the Orphanage. There is one question which must be faced: What is to become of the children in this home if we fail them and the Superintendent?

A CALL TO THE CHURCH

The Woman's Missionary Council, in annual session at Louisville, Ky., March 22-26, has faced prayerfully and fearlessly the present deplorable world situation and its implications and opportunities for the missionary enterprise, and we are convinced:

1. That there was never so great an urgency that the missionary message be proclaimed at home and abroad as that which faces us to-day. Individuals and nations are in desperate need of spiritual help, and they are ready to listen to the claims of Christianity as a solution to their problems.
2. That this need offers an unprecedented op-

FORSAKEN

By Rev. Walter Spence

When the night of death was falling
On the brow of Calvary,
Jesus cried to God in anguish:
"Why hast thou forsaken me?"
In that bitter hour the Saviour
Touched the depth of human woe
So that he might be a brother
To the lowest of the low.

But his God had not forsaken;
He was still beside the Son;
Closer he than John and Mary.
Arms of love about his own.
Grace he gave him to endure it.
Strength to conquer death and hell,
Till he won eternal triumph.
Then went up in heaven to dwell.

God still dwells in clouds and darkness.
Shadows hide from sight his face;
But his love is ever present,
Never failing is his grace;
If we share the Saviour's sorrow,
We shall also share his love;
If we bear his cross of service,
We shall reign with him above.

portunity in the face of which it is a betrayal of a trust to drastically reduce missionary budgets, to recall or detain at home effective and tried missionaries or to close needed institutions.

3. While we are fully aware of the economic situation that makes giving difficult, yet we are convinced that the end of the available financial resources of the Church has not been reached, or that we have yet begun to test the possibilities of sacrificial living and giving. Neither have we availed ourselves of the infinite resources of prayer. We, therefore, pledge ourselves here and now to sacrificial living and giving. We seek to impose upon ourselves the same heroic service as that of our missionaries.

4. We call upon the entire Church to give a new witness to the world of faith in God and His power to work through human lives for the triumphant coming of His Kingdom.

It is planned for the members of the conference to take a trip from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. on the afternoon of Tuesday, May 2, to two places of historic interest: Mr. Johnson's, two miles northwest of Woodville, to visit the grave of Jefferson Davis' mother, and the room he occupied for some days after his release from the prison at Fortress Monroe; and the home, two miles east of Woodville, of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McGehee, Bowling Green, where William McKendree stopped in 1834 during his last visit to Mississippi, as the guest of Edward McGehee. Among the monuments in the Bowling Green Cemetery is one marking the grave of Micajah McGehee, son of Edward McGehee, who was one of the survivors of the Fourth Fremont Expedition to California.

as the "New Deal" which your election promised. I take off my hat to you in those high statements that dared to take the cover from those who, in high places of political and economic responsibility, violated the confidence of the people, and flayed them before our eyes. "Lay on, McDuff." We just hope you will cleanse the temples of our economic and political life. Keep after them till the last man will be ashamed to raise his head among decent people.

Again I agree with you in taking seriously and soberly the present deplorable situation without blinking a single fact. I would join you in knowing the whole truth and remaining unafraid. Let us hold steady right at that point. For as you are always discovering there are many corns stuck out in the path that leads down that way. Congress will not always want to keep in line. When you go to pulling the shirts off of politicians they are going to kick. Be prepared for it.

Your foreign policy appeals to me. "the policy of the good neighbor." That policy has very expansive implications and all of them good. You cannot begin to apply them too soon. I do not blame you for putting first things first, and in trying to set our domestic house in order. It is hard to entertain company with so much rubbish around. But I notice that you feel quite keenly that domestic problems can no longer stand alone. I like your suggestion that we move straight ahead into a more intelligent and defensible position with reference to international affairs. But I notice that some of the boys in Congress, as soon as you mentioned it, began to say that it would never do to go into that yet. Watch those fellows. First thing you know they will be saying something about George Washington, "Monroe Doctrine" and "entangling alliances." But they don't have us all fooled. If Washington and Monroe should come back today and strive as hard with the situation of today as they did then they would have no more use for them than they have for our own prophets today. Some Senators and Congressmen waste so much time building monuments to dead prophets and statesmen that they haven't strength enough intelligently to join constructively with those who would build the greater American of our own day. They lock the wheels of advancement with worn out slogans and destroy dynamic principles with ancient and worthless political platitudes. Keep your eye on them and we fellows back here with the ballots and tax receipts will begin to help you with them.

(To be concluded next week.)

EASTER, ORPHANAGE AND KINGDOM EXTENSION

Easter Day brings the Methodists of Louisiana the opportunity and urgency of the Orphanage at Ruston, where Rev. R. W. Vaughan has steadily held the line against increased responsibilities and decreased financial support. Let our people rally with the largest possible offering.

And to Mississippi Methodists comes the urgent call of Kingdom Extension. Let each one pause a moment this Easter Sunday morning and think of our Church Extension, Christian Education, Hospital and Missionary forces; and then let each, from a grateful heart, make an offering that will assure the continuance of our work in all these fields.

TO-DAY IN PARADISE

By Rev. Walter Spence

"O Jesus, me remember,
The dying robber said,
"When thou in kingly power
Art risen from the dead;
From Sheol's fires redeem me,
Thy blood hath paid the price;
Forgive my sins and take me
With thee to Paradise."

Then spoke the plying Saviour:
"In truth to thee I say,
Thy crime is expiated,
Thy sins are washed away;
Thy bitter tears repentant
Have purged thy soul of vice;
To-day shalt thou be standing
With me in Paradise."

O Jesus, us remember;
We too thy favor crave;
Look thou in mercy on us,
Reach forth our souls to save.
And when our days are ended
And death shall close our eyes,
May we then be transported
With thee to Paradise.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. W. W. Woollard is to have Rev. J. H. Holder to assist in a revival in his church at Ripley, Miss.

A pastor said to the editor the other day, "My boys read your paper, and like it." That is no small compliment.

The Aberdeen District Conference will meet at Houston, Miss., May 2-3. Rev. T. H. Dorsey is the Presiding Elder.

Mrs. Sydney Brister of Summit, Miss., recently passed away and was hurried at Topisaw by her pastor, Rev. C. W. Wesley.

Indications are that the work at Starkville, Miss., is still moving forward under the leadership of Dr. Henry Felgar Brooks.

Mr. L. P. Jumper, Ratliff, Miss., renews the subscription of Dr. W. H. Carothers, aged 94. He has been reading the Advocate for forty years.

The churches of Columbus, Miss., are in the midst of a simultaneous revival. Dr. V. C. Curtis is the Presiding Elder of this active district.

Come on with those subscriptions. Mr. Horace Hinds of Gulfport has already sent in a list. Let us increase the number of lists and lengthen each one.

A lady met me the other day and said, "I am interested in that boat. Where must I send the money if I can get up some?" I said, send it to Rev. S. J. McLean, Morgan City, La.

"Did not receive my paper last week. Received eight members last Sunday." That word is from Rev. D. E. Vickers, Pachuta, Miss. And he gave us a chance to send him that paper that he missed.

From Rev. J. C. Price, St. Francesville, La., comes a list of subscriptions. At the end of the list was the word, "No commission wanted." We do very much appreciate the co-operation of our pastors.

"What the Apostles Meant by the Church," and "What Jesus Thought About the Church," were topics of sermons preached by Rev. Osmond Lewis recently to his good congregation at Brookhaven, Miss.

Misses Amelia Ruxton and Margaret Griffin, members of Whitworth faculty, are given much of the credit for a very successful original musical comedy staged by the sophomores. The title was "Hearts and Tarts."

We are indebted to Rev. R. G. Moore, pastor at Itta Bena, Miss., and Missionary Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, for the report of the E. Stanley Jones meeting in Memphis which appeared in last week's issue.

Some of the boys dust my coat now and then about calling attention to these enterprises that must wait upon the assistance of some outside help. But the people who will help these causes will hardly neglect their own local interests.

Some people are giving attention to the "Keep the Advocate Saved Circulation Campaign." The other day we had an inquiry from Rev. Wm. L. Robinson, our pastor at Lake Cormorant, Miss., which indicated a very thorough and determined interest.

"Dare We be Christians?" and "The Right to Commit Suicide," are the themes of recent messages from the pulpit of Central Church, Meridian, Miss., where Dr. L. L. Cowen pastors the people. Dr. Cowen is moving forward with fine preparation to a great Easter Day.

April 1 was made a big day of merriment at Millsaps College. It is called "M" Day, and is an annual observance. Gycelle Tynes, a student from Gloster, Miss., was chosen king of the ceremonies. A picnic dinner was a feature of the festivities. This is the thirty-ninth.

Let every charge in our three patronizing Conferences stress the importance of the Self Denial Kingdom Extension Offering and see that every member is given an opportunity to share in the extension of God's Kingdom as planned by our beloved Methodism. God is counting on us and we must not fail Him.

A social gathering of the Methodist men of the Aberdeen, Miss. church is planned for an early date in May. The lay-leader of the church will direct the program. Last year several meetings of the men were held for fellowship. This year they will go to a nearby fish pond and grove and enjoy an old fashion fish fry.

Green, green, green. That is the way the "Freshman Issue" of the Whitworth Whistle, official organ of that noble college, looks. But I am for the Freshmen. I always want to go to battle for them. I just reckon I never did get over being a freshman. Still think that he is the colleges' new chance to get something done.

Isn't this a rather unorthodox use of a Presiding Elder? In a paper we picked up a statement like this: "Dr. C. W. Crisler preached at the Pearl River Avenue Church, McComb, Miss., Sunday night, filling the pulpit of Rev. J. W. Leggett, who is away on his honeymoon." Well, it is just another point at which a presiding elder may prove his usefulness.

The West Point, Miss. churches will again observe Good Friday three hour service using the seven sayings as a basis for the twenty-five minute periods of worship and fellowship. This feature has gained in interest each year in that town. All the churches and pastors cooperate to the fullest extent. Rev. T. M. Bradley and Rev. W. C. Galceran, Jr., will take part for the Methodist churches.

In the obituary of Mrs. Charlotte Elizabeth Blackwell, appearing in our March 23, 1933 issue, there appeared some errors which we herewith correct. The birth date is February 26, 1847. And the sentence, "She lived almost eight days to the hour, dying from a stroke of paralysis," should have been used instead of the statement that appeared. We very much regret the occurrence of these errors.

The ladies of South Side, Corinth, Miss., are beautifying the church grounds. Mr. A. K. Weaver, of First Church, Corinth, who has a nursery, has kindly given the ladies some shrubbery and ever-greens which they have set out. One of our ladies said "we will have the prettiest church yard in the whole country." This interesting bit of news comes from Rev. J. F. Mincy who pastors these good people.

District conferences are the order of the day now. The editor is trying to visit as many of these as he can. He received a generous welcome to that of the Alexandria District over which Dr. Briscoe Carter presides. We regret our inability to attend the Ruston District Conference held at Lisbon, Apr. 5 and 6, but the cause of the Advocate was ably presented by Rev. H. L. Johns, of Trinity Church, Ruston.

Our friends can render us great assistance at this time by forwarding their renewals without further delay. There are some two thousand subscribers who have allowed their subscriptions to lapse which has caused a scarcity of ready cash with which to meet our pay rolls and other pressing obligations necessary in order to keep the presses going. Kindly attend to this small, but most important matter at once. Thank you.

A series of sermons will be delivered by Rev. E. P. Craddock, pastor of our church at Arcola, Miss., beginning Monday night, April 10. The following subjects have been announced by Rev. Craddock: Monday night, "The Passover;" Tuesday night, "Jesus in the Garden;" Wednesday night, "Jesus' Trial;" Thursday night, "Jesus' Execution;" Friday night, "Jesus' Burial;" Sunday morning, "Jesus' Resurrection;" Sunday night, "Remember Jesus."

Two district preachers' meetings were held in the North Mississippi Conference during the past week, programs of which reached our office too late to be published in our last number. The Columbus District pastors met at Starkville, Miss., on Tuesday, April 11, and the pastors of the Greenville District met in the Methodist church at Shelby, Miss., April 4. Much interest is displayed in these meetings and we hope to carry a report of the meetings in our next issue.

Special pre-Easter services are being conducted this week at our Trinity Methodist Church, Ruston, La., the pastor, Rev. H. L. Johns, doing the preaching. An attractive folder sent out to the membership of the church announces five morning watch services, two week-night services, and five special children's services in the afternoons. Special emphasis stressing the importance of a liberal contribution on Easter Sunday for the Orphanage at Ruston, we trust, will receive careful and prayerful consideration.

A local preacher passed me the other day on the way to heaven. There is no mistake about it. His report to District Conference was enough to make a lot of us ashamed and the rest of us shout. He told how, because of signing too many notes for his fellowmen and having to make his name good with the payment of the same, he had lost his lovely home. A brother preacher told how he had moved into a very insignificant cottage. There was no bitterness toward God or his fellows. There was a shine on his face and a shout in his soul.

Mrs. M. J. Cooper, devout member of the Methodist Church died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Spell, near New Hebron, Miss. Mrs. Cooper was over eighty years of age, and had been a subscriber and constant reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate throughout her life. Her pastor informs us that the Advocate brought many hours of pleasure as well as spiritual nourishment to her soul, and that it was the last thing she read before going to Heaven. We thank God for the privilege of ministering unto this Christian mother and pray that we may be a means of helping others through the columns of the Advocate.

The Vicksburg Evening Post of April 3, in referring to help rendered by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in improving churches, school houses and other public property in Warren County, Miss., add the following: "One cemetery that is of historic interest not only to the people of this county but to those of the entire South, is the Tobias Gibson Cemetery, which is a short distance south of the Cane Ridge road in the vicinity of the Mercer Hawkins property. This is the resting place of Tobias Gibson, who was a pioneer Methodist preacher in this territory. R. F. C. laborers did improvement work in this cemetery."

Rev. R. G. Lord, Executive Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference Board of Christian Education was elected to that office at the beginning of the financial depression. He has had little opportunity to do the work expected of the Board. His Board has been trying to carry on the whole field of work with less money than was used by the old Sunday school board. Yet, the results obtained have been encouraging indeed. The most encouraging feature of the work is the whole-hearted support the pastors of the Conference are giving him. Under normal conditions with the organizing forces he has at his command the work of the Conference would go far toward the front.

Come over here, some of you. You know about the Veterans' Hospital at Pineville, La. Rev. D. B. Boddie is our capable Chaplain there in addition to the pastoral work of our Pineville church and a few other odd but exacting jobs. He is trying to build a chapel out there near the hospital for the disabled veterans and their families, that they may have church and Sunday school. He has the lot, has the foundation down and some of the material. But conditions have stopped the building program. I heard him say that if he had $300 he could complete the job. Now somebody has that $300, or a part of it. Better send it on now to Rev. D. B. Boddie, Pineville, La., and tell him to go on with the chapel.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

The inside of the church at Anguilla, Miss., called "Fields Memorial" Methodist Church, Rev. H. Mellard, pastor, has recently been repainted. This is a substantial brick building, and with this freshening, which the painter's skill always gives, it is indeed a very pleasing auditorium. At Silver City, Rev. L. F. Alford, pastor, the inside of the church and the outside of the parsonage have been repainted. Also, among other improvements on property in the Vicksburg District that can be mentioned are a new fence at Roxie, Rev. Percy Vaughan, pastor, and concrete steps replacing the old at Liberty Church, Rev. E. A. King, pastor. Substantial improvements upon the inside of the Liberty auditorium are projected.

With this issue of the Advocate one half of the time set aside by the three Conferences served by the Advocate to conduct the annual circulation campaign has passed. Due to the recent banking holiday very little was accomplished during the first several weeks of the campaign. Subscriptions are now beginning to come in, and we urge every pastor to see that the canvass is conducted on his charge without further delay. The religious press is more essential today than ever before, and every member should be given an opportunity to subscribe to his Church paper. The cost is less than three cents a week. The spiritual benefits that can be derived through this medium of Christian literature are inestimable. The campaign closes May 15. Advocate the Advocate.

Rev. and Mrs. Hubert Degosserie, missionaries from Belgian Congo, who are residing at Collins, Miss., while on their furlough, spoke to large congregations at all six churches on the Silver Creek charge. Brother and Sister Degosserie are interesting speakers. Their lives are rich with experiences, and their souls are fired with a passion for the mission work in Africa. Their talks, illustrated with lantern slide pictures of Africa, the conditions, people and work there, together with numerous interesting curios is like a trip to the mission field in the dark continent. Lack of funds has prevented the Board of Missions from returning these servants of God who are anxious to continue their work in Africa. While awaiting orders to return, however, they are not idle, but are speaking at every opportunity in the interest of missions. The churches of the Silver Creek charge gave them $19.25 to help them on their way back to the dark continent. Thus we can readily see how much depends upon our response to the Self Denial Kingdom Extension Offering.

"Who is the champion preacher/gardener in Mississippi and Louisiana?" inquires Rev. W. R. Lott, our pastor at Aberdeen, Miss. It is said by some that we have preachers who can make vegetables grow during these hard times on almost any kind of land. News comes to us that Dr. C. M. Chapman, pastor at Tchula, Miss., not only reads good books and preaches good sermons, but that he can grow a garden at any season of the year, wet or dry. Then, too, we have it from good authority that Rev. S. L. Pope can lick any of our pastors in getting a start and bringing the early vegetables to the table. However, he himself admits that "no orthodox preacher will work a garden during the hot days of July and August when the fish are begging for a worm." Rev. C. T. Floyd, Amory, Miss., digs deep and long, so we're told, to get the sub-soil. A patch of weed or a strip of hard ground is a challenge to him. Now comes the news that Rev. R. G. Moore, our Itta Bena pastor, can make things grow almost by magic. These farmer-preachers all live in North Mississippi, and there are a lot others in that part of the country equally as efficient, but what Brother Lott would like to learn is what preachers in the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences can beat these North Mississippians?

A WORK OF FAITH

I am sure the Advocate readers will be happy to learn of a work of faith that was recently completed and its results. In the latter part of the summer of 1931 one of our members of South Side Church, Corinth, North Mississippi, Mr. W. H. Strickland, was critically ill. While confined in the hospital he said that the Lord told him definitely to build a Sunday school annex to the church, and outlined the plan. He also said that the Lord told him that he and his sons were to do the work and that the people would furnish the material.

Conditions were such that the work did not begin until November, 1932. On a Sunday morning during this month Brother Strickland announced that actual construction would begin the next day, and if only one brick was laid at a time, that brick would be paid for. The work began as announced and was completed the following January. There are three commodious rooms now being used as a result of this work of faith, and when the building was completed there was less than $100 owed for materials, which is being rapidly liquidated.

Not only is Brother Strickland proud of the accomplishment but the whole congregation is grateful to God for his guidance in the matter.

A TRIBUTE TO DR. A. C. KING

Having known Dr. A. C. King for many years, I feel that his attributes as a Christian gentleman and his abilities as a physician and surgeon came directly from the Great Physician whom he served so faithfully and so long.

Four times I personally have been in a position to say from the bottom of my heart, paraphrasing without sacrilege the Psalmist: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy heart and thy hand they comfort me."

Once, as the ether-cone was being applied to my face, I remarked: "It is now up to God and Dr. King." That I am alive today is proof that my trust in both was well-founded.

He has set us an example as a Christian gentleman, citizen and friend that we well may emulate.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

There is great activity among the young people in their work. The Jackson district has shown more life than in a long time. Five Unions have been organized in the district and five divisions have been organized lately. A large attendance was secured for a district institute. This institute put life and power into the work.

The Brookhaven District has arranged for a Christian Culture Institute. Two more unions have been organized and put to work. Several divisions have been chartered. They are working on an attendance to the Assembly. The Brookhaven young people are hard at work on the missionary play for the Assembly.

Seashore District is setting up a Christian Adventure Camp; they are also planning another Christian Culture Institute. This is going to aid in building up the youth of this district in a most worthy way.

The other districts are actively at work, but the word has not reached me as to just what they were doing.

The Training classing at Harrisville was a successful one. I enjoyed being with this group again and working with them. Much improvement has taken place at this church in the last short while. We had six credits and two office credits. The young people are alive here and are making plans that will make over this church when they are carried out.

Pelahatchie has already observed Sunday School Day and sent in an offering of over $11. We surely appreciate this aid at this time. Surely it came in a time of need. It is hoped that other schools can send in an early offering.

Do not forget the Fourth Sunday Missionary Offering.

Pray for the work and the workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Those who heard Dr. Stanley Jones in Memphis last week will never forget the blessing that they received. As we listen to this lover and follower of our Lord we are made to feel that the so-called Christian part of the world is merely playing at being Christian. We feel like crying out with Isaiah, "Lo, I am a man of unclean lips and dwell among a people of unclean lips." No doubt Dr. Jones has felt the power of the purging fire.

The banking situation has cleared up in most communities. To those who send us money, where your bank is not open will you not send us a money order, or if your bank is open under restrictions send us a money order? Our bank will not handle checks on restricted banks. We are very grateful for the fine spirit shown by the churches. Many of them are remitting the offering for two months. In some instances the offering is larger than for several months. If we do much work that has been requested and planned more of our churches must send in the regular fourth Sunday offering.

Have you planned for Sunday School Day? You have received a sample program already. It went out to pastors and superintendents of Sunday schools in the Bulletin last month. You can order as many programs as you need from the Publishing House, at 50 cents per dozen and pay for them as you do your literature, or we will send them to you if you do not feel able to pay for them. We will have an honor roll this year. Every church that sends an offering equal to 10 cents per member of the Sunday school who is on the active roll will be placed on the honor roll. Every circuit that sends an offering of any amount from every church on the circuit will be placed on the circuit honor roll. Any church on a circuit may also be on the honor roll as an individual church. The names of those on the honor roll will be published monthly.

Four institutes in the Sardis-Grenada district have been planned by the presiding elder, Rev. W. L. Stormont. They will be held as follows: Fountain Head, on the Byhalia charge, April 18; Love, on the Coldwater charge, April 19; Davis Chapel, on the Sardis circuit, April 20, and Oakland, April 21. A large attendance is expected of all pastors, superintendents, teachers, workers and church members who are interested in the progress of the church. If you want help and want to help others be sure to attend one of these meetings.

A superintendents conference was held at Fulton, March 23. This meeting was well attended and was a most helpful meeting. This was the second meeting of this kind to be held at this place. About one year ago such a meeting was held there and much good has come from it and we are sure the same will be true of the last meeting.

Miss Tennie Fowlkes, Becker, is the district director of Children's Work; Miss Mamie D. Ledbetter, Crawford, for the Columbus district; Mrs. W. H. Ratliff, for the Greenville district and Miss Sallie Parrell, for the Sardis-Grenada district. Call on these to help you, especially with Daily Vacation Church Schools.

R. G. LORD.

FROM AMORY, MISS.

Dear Brother Raulins: Just a few words about the work at Amory. Every department of the church is well organized and really at work. Our congregations have never been better. The Sunday school attendance runs from 400 to 450. The prayer meeting attendance runs from 100 to 135.

We closed a revival meeting here Sunday April 2, that will mean much to the work of the church. We had Rev. Frank M. Neal, of Amarillo, Tex. to do the preaching, and Rev. Mr. Goodpastor, of Archer City, Tex. to lead the music. These men did a splendid work. During the meeting 240 people were on their knees at the altar. Many of these people were saved, and others were there for re-consecration. Twenty united with the Methodist Church and some went to other churches of the town. We will have more to join later.

Brother Neal is a good preacher. He knows how to hold a meeting. He has the courage of St. Paul. He fights sin, regardless of where he finds it. He is deeply religious and thoroughly consecrated. His sermons on the Person and work of the Holy Spirit, will be a blessing to any congregation. It will take Eternity to tell the results of the meeting.

Yours and His,
C. T. FLOYD.

THE TRUTH ABOUT PROHIBITION

(In view of the persistent stories about the evils of prohibition the following statement by Col. George H. Davis, in charge of the Salvation Army forces in Chicago, will be of interest. It is the word of a man who knows.—Editor, the New Outlook.)

Out of more than a million cases we have dealt with in the last sixteen months, there were only seventy-five bad cases of drink, and of moderate cases, only 500.

From October 11, 1930, to February 3, 1932, we helped 1,102,545 unemployed men. Of this number we found 99.92 per cent drink-free. Having nothing to do, many of these men would have drunk to excess if they could get the liquor.

I did not realize the small percentage of drinking men that pass through our doors until I personally checked it up.

The old-time drunkard, the wets of the country notwithstanding, is gone. Before prohibition the Salvation Army would gather drunks by the truckload and busload from the saloons and park benches. Today one would have to search high and low in every American city to find at one time 100 men and women of the type the Salvation Army used to gather by the thousands under the rule of John Barleycorn.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

A DENATURED GOSPEL

Not long since an esteemed leader in a great church, exasperated over some superfine corrections, suggested for an expression of religious faith, exclaimed in protest: "A denatured gospel!" meaning thereby a gospel deleted of effective power.

Is there such a thing as a denatured gospel in the preaching and practice of today? Has it been toned down, censored, subjected to beautiful paraphrasing and adroit elimination until it has lost its primal power? Does the modern gospel strike the human conscience an awakening blow, or does it soothe to sleep every impulse of penitence and regeneration? Have the preacher, the teacher, and the lay members invested in this type?

Open-mindedness, obedience to every revelation of truth, constant endeavor to find new truth, new applications, new interpretations should characterize every minister. The assurance of Jesus about the coming Comforter was, "He shall guide you into all the truth"—a promise of possible daily and constant discovery. This is a privilege which many preachers seem utterly to fail to accept, perhaps out of an exaggerated devotion to current orthodoxy, or possibly fear of being charged with heresy.

But the one thing which no preacher can afford to lose from his gospel is power. No matter how winsome and beautiful he may make his message, he dare not sap it of power. It must stir, awaken, convict, and persuade to spiritual strength.

A prophet with a denatured gospel on his lips or in his heart is a tragedy himself and a peril to others.—Cincinnati Christian Advocate.

The Centerville auxiliary, Vicksburg District, has recently lost a most valuable member, by the removable to Jackson of Mr. and Mrs. Neyland. Mrs. Neyland (Emma Petty) is the oldest charter member of the auxiliary and has always been a shining light, inspiring the other members to nobler activities. On January 8, her seventy-eight birthday, the auxiliary gave her a surprise party.

The Scooba auxiliary, Meridian District, is beginning the year very actively. They recently entertained in a lovely way in the home of Mrs. J. L. Robinson with a silver tea. The guests registered as they entered and were served punch. A delightful program, with Miss Mary Lou Baxter in charge.

A plate lunch, carrying out the Easter motif, was served by Misses Dee Robison, Katy Ray Madison, Virginia Hare and Mrs. S. A. Shaff. Fifty-five guests enjoyed the occasion and a nice sum was realized.

Mrs. T. H. Wall was hostess to the social and business meeting combined.

The meeting opened with "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," followed by the Lord's prayer.

"The Deaconess," which was the subject of the afternoon, was discussed. A Bible contest occasioned much interest, with Mrs. E. T. Ham-mack and Mrs. J. W. Meacham sharing honors as winners. Ice cream and cake were served by the hostess, after which the society adjourned with the missionary pledge.

MR. WM. BERRY WHATLEY was born near Philadelphia, in Neshoba County, Mississippi, on February 5th, 1862, and died at Walnut Grove, Miss., February 10, 1933.

He was the only son of his father, Mr. Berry Whatley, Sr., who was wounded in the war between the States, and died on May 6, 1863. This untimely bereavement left the young wife and little son, Willie, to endure the hardships of the War and Reconstruction Days.

His mother, Mrs. Temple (Batts) Whatley, was re-married in 1869 to Mr. Jas. Whitmire, and immigrated with him in a "Romantic Covered Wagon" across the country to Panola County, Texas, taking this little son with them. This novel "cross-the-country" trip marked a memorable event in young Whatley's life. He enjoyed sharing this childhood experience with his friends for many years. He remained with his mother in Texas for some years and grew up to young manhood. In 1890 he returned to Mississippi and resided with his grandfather Whatley until his marriage, on February 27, 1897, to Miss Cora Fuston, of Walnut Grove. After his marriage he moved with his bride to Madden, Miss., where they lived one year. In 1898 he returned to Walnut Grove, where he reared his family. In 1918 he moved to Sebastopol, Miss., and remained there a few years, and in 1928 removed to New Walnut Grove, where he resided until his final departure.

Mr. Whatley was a man of unusually stalwart health and strength, and was capable of strenuous and persistent labor until a few months prior to his death. He was industrious and enjoyed his work. He was thrifty and provided well for his family. He regarded his responsibilities seriously and looked after his tasks carefully. While he did not amass a fortune in money or estate, he provided means for each of his nine children to acquire an education and to prepare for a life's vocation. And all this he did without incurring debt to embarrass himself or his family after him. And he left a reputation for genuine "old-fashioned honesty" as a heritage to his children and posterity.

He was a faithful husband and a devoted and painstaking father. He loved his children and was loved by them in return. He was a good citizen, neighbor and friend, and those who knew him esteemed him highly.

Mr. Whatley was converted and united with the M. E. Church, South, in early manhood. He loved his Church and remained faithful to its vows to the end. He manifested in a peculiar manner the spirit and marks of a Christian gentleman. He was faithful, positive, reverent, temperate and steadfast, kindly disposed and brotherly in his attitudes toward all men. Being plain in manner, he was brave and self-possessed, and his fellow-citizens always knew where to find him. He did not complain, even in his illness and suffering. He was appreciative of others and grateful to all those who befriended him, and enjoyed a hearty handshake to the last hours of his life. Notwithstanding his poise and dignity, he was always cheerful and hopeful of the future. He loved and trusted his companions and attendants and inspired others to confide in him.

He was stricken of nephritis a few months previous to his last illness and death, and survived in a remarkable manner too severe acute attacks, and was able to be up several weeks prior to the last. But on January 22 he developed la grippe, which hastened the return of and greatly aggravated his former trouble. He again made a brave fight, under the direction of his faithful physician, Dr. W. D. Franklin, and held out hopefully for almost three weeks. But the end had come, and on the evening of February 10, soon after the sun had gone down behind its western horizon, he was completely overcome of secondary pneumonia, and forced to lay down the armor and succumb to the call which all the "Sons of Men" must one day answer. So without a murmur or a sigh of complaint the spirit of W. B. Whatley went away to be with his Savior and Lord.

Besides his bereaved wife and nine surviving children—three boys and six girls—he leaves three half-brothers and a host of relatives and friends to mourn his departure.

Funeral services were conducted from the Methodist church at Walnut Grove by his pastor, Rev. C. Y. Hingingbotham, assisted by Rev. I. H. Sells, of Carthage, Miss. And the mortal remains were laid to rest in the Fuston cemetery nearby.

The Death Angel entered her Kentucky home on February 22 and bore away the sweet, gentle spirit of my dear friend, MRS. FANNIE FARLEY OSBORN. Our loss is Heaven's gain. She was a devoted member of the M. E. Church, South. Her life was one of service to her Master.

She came to Mississippi about twenty years ago, the happy bride of Mr. John S. Osborn. Her stay here as queen of his home was so happy until her companion was called home, then she returned to her native state. After her graduation from college she taught in the mountains of Kentucky, and did all kinds of home mission

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

THE MINISTRY OF HEALING has been very tardy in coming into its own among Protestant Christians. Just now are our own Methodist people beginning to develop a commendable attitude toward the matter. We have been so wrapped up in what we were pleased to term the "spiritual interests" of men that we have failed to recognize the fragmentariness of our program. Just recently have we begun to see that our ministry must be not only to all men, but to all of man.

Our failure at this point has been due to a short-sighted conception of the Gospel of Jesus. When we re-examine the writings of Four Gospels we are amazed to find how very much of the time and energy of Jesus was consumed in his ministry to the bodies of men, women and children; and especially to those who were unable to help themselves. Is it any wonder that he came to be called the "Great Physician?"

"The healing of the seamless dress

Is by our beds of pain;

We touch him in life's throng and press,
And we are whole again."

Our recent findings in the field of psychology are foreshadowed in the ministry and teachings of Jesus. At no time does he attempt to give one spiritual instruction before healing attention to a sick or suffering body. And nowhere does he exhort the patient to be resigned to disease and physical handicap. His ministry to the body was not a secondary feature of his work, but an essential part of his complete ministry to the whole of man. The greatest spiritual experience is personal wholeness. The healing ministry of Jesus needs, for awhile, to be lifted out of the category of the miraculous and seen as the promise and prophecy of the complete conquest of disease of all kinds. As is still true, the Master found bodily healing one of the sure ways to the soul of man.

Just now our church is making rapid strides in the field of healing. This, too, is the command of Jesus. It is now following its heroic program of church and school building with its system of hospitals and clinics. How fortunate are the cities of St. Louis, Mo.; Durham, N. C.; Lexington, Ky.; Memphis, Tenn.; Houston, Texas; Dallas, Texas; Fort Worth, Texas; Savannah and Atlanta, Ga.; Tucson, Ariz.; Elkin, N. C., and Hattiesburg, Miss. In these places our General Hospital Board, under the leadership of Dr. Chas. C. Jarrell, with his co-workers, is making commendable headway. Already a long line of satisfied and happy patrons are going forth to speak the high praises of this Kingdom work.

The Annual Golden Cross roll call gives opportunity for thousands of our people to take stock in this enterprise, and to attach themselves effectively to a strong wing of our church.

DEAR MR. ROOSEVELT: This is just a kind of long postscript to my former letter. My strategy in this is, first, to let you know how much you have commended yourself to us, and then to drop a few hints about a matter or two.

I am sorry that I cannot make my whole letter one of commendation.

I appreciate the very difficult position that you occupy.

Balancing the financial budget is just one of your problems, and it is not the biggest as I see it. There is a great big moral budget that must be much in your hands. You cannot pass it up. Statesmanship, as you well observe, has moved into the zone of the ethical, and there is no escape. You have thrown out the broad lines, and have shown a spirit that promises so much, that many of us will be urgent about this balance.

Just a word about balancing that financial budget. I approve your action with reference to the Soldiers' Bonus. But don't overlook the fact that those soldiers, many of them, feel that while several others are making a "raid" on the treasury, it is an open season for raiding.

Without your request, I am going to give you a valuable suggestion about balancing that budget. Swing that matter of War Debts and Disarmament around into line while you are working at the budget. Now don't misunderstand me. I am not suggesting that you deal with our neighbor nations with a Shylock's hand. There may be something bigger than a dollar-for-dollar settlement. We've got to use something besides a dollar standard, even in dealing with dollars. And I am not hinting that you send all of the police home. But to save my soul, I cannot see the wisdom of continuing to pile up armaments, pouring billions of our taxes into this hole. It is not consistent and it is no longer defensible in the light of recent developments and commitments. We are going to have to get out of that bayonet diplomacy.

Of course, we Southern Methodists felt greatly complimented that you placed two of our members, Messrs. Roper and Swanson, on your Cabinet. But you are going to have to watch Swanson. First thing you know, with a lot of those Naval die-hards, he will be howling for an "adequate navy," and he will have some big things in mind. We private citizens are beginning to see the folly of putting eighty-five or ninety cents out of each dollar of federal tax on paying for wars, past and future. Tell Swanson that it is the business of each cabinet post to seek out the best possible way of getting on with the other nations of the world. He may get the notion that his only chance for a place in the "Hall of Fame" will be a great navy. You know he is wrong if he looks at it that way. The greatest monument he could leave behind him would be a rotting navy rendered necessary in a world of widened and deepened friendly relations.

I cannot overlook the liquor question. You said in your address, "This is pre-eminently the time to speak the truth, the whole truth, frankly and boldly." Frankly, to me, in the wide and admirable range of great qualities in you, the shortest thing to be said for you is this matter of your attitude on the liquor question. Of course, I would not be fanatical about the matter, even though I do not object to being so regarded. It is true that you are trying to carry out your campaign promises. But a bad promise carried out acquires nothing of virtue. I am aware of the fact that it is a part of your emergency legislation. You may have something in mind that I do not yet see. You may give us a great turn yet in the matter. Shall we look for it?

But I just cannot understand your attitude in the matter. I cannot account for your viewpoint. Surely you are perfectly familiar with the history of the effort to sober this country. Certainly you do not wish to wring a few shekels of revenue from the hands of many people who can least afford it, giving them beer for bread and wine for a place to work. We are ready for anything that will improve conditions. We do not preach the perfection of the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment. But you have offered us no alternative except the saloon, regardless of the name. It looks as if you feel that it is difficult to carry on for enforcement, so we'll just turn back and wallow in the mire. You do not seem disposed this way with reference to anything else. Seems to me you will alienate some of the greatest people of our country. And they are the people who will most intelligently and loyally support you in the higher features of your program.

So let me assure you that in our patriotic loyalty to the country I shall continually and persistently fight this evil. Until something better is offered, I cannot do otherwise.

MINISTERS URGED TO SAFEGUARD MARRIAGE

Ministers are urged to take their responsibility for the success of marriage more seriously in a "statement and appeal" issued recently by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. The statement emphasizes the need of educational preparation of young people for marriage, and the value of personal counseling by the minister. It protests against any commercialization of marriage and appeals for dignity and reverence in the marriage ceremony.

The statement was drafted by the Committee on Marriage and the Home, of which Professor Howard Chandler Robbins is Chairman, and Rev. L. Foster Wood, Secretary, and has been officially approved by the Federal Council's Executive Committee.

The statement, entitled "Safeguarding Marriages," is as follows:

"Most couples are married by clergymen. This is true even of many who approach marriage without definite Christian convictions, and is explained by the fact that for centuries marriage has been a concern of religion. Doubtless also these people go to the minister because they feel that marriage is a relationship of the most sacred character. The part which the minister plays in the event brings him into an influential and responsible relationship with the new family. Therefore the Committee on Marriage and the Home offers the following recommendations to ministers on the safeguarding of their marriages:

I. Educational Preparation for Marriage

"Educational preparation for marriage should be given a place in accordance with its great importance. In this education the home, the school, the church and other character-building agencies, and the young people themselves should participate. The instruction given should deal with the principles of happy and successful marriage such as ideals for the home, wise choice of partners, the wide range of marital adjustments, home management, children and their nurture, and especially with the place of religion in individual and family life.

"Pastors have a long continued opportunity to assist their own people in their preparation for marriage. This assistance can be given by promoting education for homemaking as an important part of religious education in the home and the church, also by sermons and lectures, by the use of appropriate literature, by instruction to groups of engaged young couples, and by directing them to further sources of information. To aid in this the pastor may secure material from the proper board of his communion, or from this Committee.

II. Pre-Marital Interviews

"As part of this preparation for marriage, the Committee believes that pastors have an opportunity to give great help through pre-marital interviews. Many ministers have done this regularly for years with the most gratifying results. Some hold conferences with the two together, and others separately. These interviews while frank should be considerate, and should be guided by circumstances and by the needs of the young persons as they come out in the interview. Through them the minister may assure himself that the marriage is in accordance with the laws of his state and of his church, and that the young people understand the seriousness of the step which they are taking.

"Studies in unhappy marriages and the experience of family consultation institutes, reveal that ignorance and maladjustment of the sex relationship appear in most cases. The pastor cannot be certain that those who come to him for marriage understand these vital relationships which God himself has ordained and sanctified. If there is inadequate understanding the pastor may render to the new family a service of the greatest importance through the instruction which he gives them. Literature that will help the young couple in the new adjustments of marriage should be at hand."

"Especially will the minister take occasion in these interviews to bring out the religious backgrounds, points of view, associations and interests of those about to be married, and he will aim to bring the utmost help and inspiration of Christian faith into the life of the new family, knowing that no marriage can rise to the level God intends it to reach except by the assistance of his grace.

III. The Marriage Ceremony

"Marriages should not be hastily planned nor solemnized by strangers if this can be avoided. Young people should be married by their own pastor, if possible, or by a clergyman in their community. When they are married by a stranger in a strange place the occasion is robbed of some of the social and spiritual values that ought to be present, and the new home is deprived of the permanent value of the counsel and fellowship of the minister who has married them.

"While weddings may be frequent in the work of a minister, to the young people themselves their own wedding is an event of a lifetime. Therefore, the minister should make it impressive, dignified, and beautiful. He should also encourage simplicity. Above all, he should do all in his power to give it religious significance.

IV. Commercializing Marriage

"Commercialization of weddings, whether by ministers or civil officials, and degradation of marriage by stunt weddings, by advertising for them, or by using them for advertising purposes, is shocking and anti-social. All of these practices mean that weddings are conducted without sufficient regard for the sacredness of the ceremony, of the spiritual welfare of the persons involved, and they make improbable either the pre-marital instruction or the later pastoral service which the minister ought to give.

V. Later Pastoral Service

"Every marriage opens a door of opportunity to the minister. He has the confidence of the young people, and they feel that he has had a vital part in the founding of their home. This gives him a favorable opportunity to be a spiritual counselor and guide, and to help them in case difficulties should arise between them. Since ministers have to deal with the personal problems of their people they need to engage in the study of methods of personal and family adjustment. Such study will enable them to raise the level of the marital success of the men and women whom they marry and of the homes of their congregations. When newly married people move to another community the officiating minister is under obligation to help them make satisfactory contacts with some church in the community to which they go.

"The Committee recommends the organization of classes or clubs for young married people in the churches. In these classes, through friendly association, discussion, reading or lectures, homes may be brought to a higher religious level and help will come in parent-child relationships, marital adjustments, emotional difficulties, and personality problems.

"Both in the personal ministry of the clergyman and in the program of the church, a more definite and intelligent ministry of religion to home life needs emphasis. Above all, in dealing with these delicate and vitally important matters, the minister must work reverently, himself keeping near to God, and securing the best training within his reach."

IS SANCTIFICATION A NEW DOCTRINE?

By W. Y. Millican, M. D.

The uninformed frequently urge as an objection to the doctrine of entire sanctification that this teaching is something new in the church, unknown until recent times. It is incumbent, therefore, upon every intelligent holiness man and woman to be as thoroughly versed in the history of the doctrine as it is to be instructed concerning its theological significance.

While allowances must always be made for differences in terminology, those who possess the blessing can not fail to recognize the testimonies to full salvation found among true Christians in all ages of the Church's history.

In this article we give a few brief testimonies from the earlier church fathers.

Ignatius was a disciple of the apostle John and for forty years was the faithful pastor of the church in Antioch. His Epistle to the Ephesians was written about 70 A. D., from which the following is taken: "Nothing is better than peace, whereby all war is destroyed, both of things in heaven and things on earth. Nothing of this is hid from you if ye have perfect faith in Jesus Christ, and love, which are the beginning and end of life; Faith is the beginning, love is the end; and both being joined in one are of God. All things pertaining to perfect holiness follow. For no man that hath faith sinneth; and none that hath love hateth any man." Ignatius suffered martyrdom at Rome by being thrown to wild beasts, during the third persecution of the Christians. Polycarp was likewise a disciple of the apostles, and, according to tradition, a companion of the apostle John. He is said to have conversed with many who had seen the Lord. Speaking of faith, hope and love, he says, "For if any one be inwardly possessed of these graces, he hath fulfilled the command of righteousness, since he that hath love is free from all sin." Polycarp was bishop of Smyrna, and it was to him, doubtless, that John addressed his letter to the "angel of the church in Smyrna." Polycarp was martyred at Smyrna, about 155 A. D., but before his death he witnessed this noble confession: "Eighty and six years I have served my Lord Christ, and He has done me no wrong. How can I blaspheme my King who saved me?"

Gregory, bishop of Neo-Caesarea, flourished about 250 A. D., and is one of the witnesses to this truth during the third century. In his confession of faith he speaks of the Holy Ghost as "the supplier of sanctification," and states, "that man belies the fountain of sanctification, the Holy Ghost, who denudes Him of the power of sanctifying." Chrysostom, who lived and preached at Constantinople during the latter part of the fourth century, is commonly known as the "golden-mouthed" orator. He says, "For not only was pardon of sins given to us, but righteousness also and sanctification and son-ship, and the gift of the spirit for more glorious and more abundant."

Cyril, archbishop of Jerusalem, who died about 386 A. D., gives clear witness to this belief in the sin-destroying effect of the baptism with the Holy Spirit. In speaking of Pentecost, he says, "But Peter who had the Holy Ghost, and who knew what he possessed, says, 'Men of Israel, ye who preach Joel, but know not the things that are written, these men are not drunken, as ye suppose.' Drunken they are, not, however, as ye suppose, but according to that which is written: They shall be drunken with the fatness of thy house; and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasure." They are drunken, yet sober; their drunkenness is a death to sin, and a quickening of the heart. As far back as the second century, there were the beginnings of error and excess in Montanism, which later was to obscure so largely the glorious truth. With the rise of asceticism and mysticism, there were longings after truth, but few and faint testimonies to a deliverance from sin. Later mysticism purified itself from many of the pagan elements, and the germinal principle of holiness is found in the writings of Fenelon, Madam Guyon, Thomas A. Kempis, and others of the later mystics; but it comes to even clearer expressions in the Lutheran Reformation, for Luther himself was a mystic and commended the theology of mysticism.

So it is very evident that sanctification as a definite work wrought in the human heart by the Holy Ghost is not a new theory. It was taught by Christ when He was upon earth and by His apostles and many who followed. It was lost when churches failed to measure up to God's requirements. His churches are without spot or wrinkle or any such thing.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION INSTITUTE, MONROE DISTRICT

The Monroe District Christian Education Institute met in Rayville, La., April 13, at 10 a. m., Dr. H. T. Carley, presiding.

A unison worship service was directed by Rev. R. R. Branton, of Newellton. The worship was conducted in a very impressive manner. Rev. J. T. Harris and Rev. W. H. Giles gave inspiring talks on "Personal Experiences in Facing Challenges."

The objective of the meeting was to study the problems confronting the Board of Christian Education in the local church.

Thirteen pastors from the District were present. Rev. A. K. McLellan, from Alexandria, was present.

Dr. Carley asked each pastor to make a statement on what had been done on his charge toward the cause of Christian Education according to the new plan. This led to the discussions. Dr. Carley then asked Brother Branton to have charge of the open discussion. These discussions revealed a number of problems. A list of questions was passed out for our consideration. Among these we found, "Has a thorough study been made by all parties concerned of the available literature concerning this matter?" "Is the matter being faced in an antagonistic way, or in a sympathetic way?" "We have not taken the first step in the organization of the Board; what shall we do?" "What provision is made for evening meetings of the young people under the new plan?"

Out of the above questions, and several others not named, there grew quite a discussion. The main question was, "How can the Board function in a small one-room church?" Several related their experiences in the small church. Dr. Carley suggested that where the proper leadership and following could not be found, for the local board to be composed of the pastor, superintendent and president of the missionary society; and through this board the main organization would eventually be perfected. Brother Grambling spoke concerning the indifference toward the new plan in the small church. The above idea of a minimum board might be the means of teaching away this indifference.

Another problem was that of the young people being unwilling to continue meeting as usual in their evening service. Rev. W. C. Scott spoke concerning the apparent failures in the young people's work since the introduction of the new division. Brother Scott said his young people would not respond under the new work as well as they did under the old Epworth League plan. Rev. Henry Rickey also spoke on this situation, stating that many of the larger churches were unable to carry on their young people's work as formerly. Brother McLellan then spoke of the Unified Plan and pointed out that it has made provision for all this, and that the plan enlarges the possibilities of the church.

Lunch was served by the ladies of Rayville.

PLANS FOR THE SUMMER

By Rev. J. Fisher Simpson

The Leadership Schools at Lake Junaluska and Mount Sequoyah were established to offer opportunities for conference, district and local church workers to become acquainted with each other, to play together, to share in rich worship experiences, to study their mutual problems, and to plan together for the ongoing of the Kingdom. Untold values have come from these schools as they have fulfilled these purposes.

During July and August these schools will be in session again. Provisions are being made for all groups of workers in courses that will have special attractions. In addition plans are being made for conference hours when those who have problems to discuss may have the help of General Board and Conference staff workers.

In each school there will be a course on the District Program of Christian Education, in which presiding elders and other district staff members will share in the study of their tasks. This should be one of the high points of the summer programs. Every Conference should be represented in these classes.

The members of the Conference board staff will also face their own problems as they work together in a seminar.

Speakers who have already accepted invitations are: Bishops Mouzon and Kern, Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe, Dr. Elbert Russell, Dr. H. Sheiton Smith, and Dr. Harvie Branscomb.

Full announcements about speakers, courses and other features will be released at an early date. In the meantime make note of these dates and begin to "talk up a crowd" from your church. Mount Sequoyah (Fayetteville, Ark.)—Young People's Leadership Conference, July 13-25.

Leadership School, July 27-August 10. (The Board of Missions will co-operate in this term, providing courses of special interest to workers in the Woman's Missionary Societies).

Lake Junaluska (N. C.)—Young People's Leadership Conference (at Educational Building), August 3-15.

Leadership School, August 3-15 (Board of Missions will co-operate, with classes to be held at the Mission Building).

Leadership School, August 16-30.

DEAN SMITH SAYS—

Hear ye! hear ye! They are bootlegging oil now! Too bad. The oil men are asking help of the Federal government to put down illicit dealing in oil. Gangster methods too are cited by the oil people as ruining this business. Prohibition has not caused that nor do we hear any clamor for repeal of existing laws against such oil irregularities.

Also, Mr. Holmes, president of the Texas Co., wires to President Roosevelt, protesting and saying that the false publicity and misinformation given out by a large part of the public press have about ruined the oil industry.

Bro. Holmes, that is what the false propaganda of the metropolitan press has done to prohibition. Mr. Holmes tries to show the President that the facts about oil are just the reverse of the printed stuff the people have to read. So with the liquor situation.

Comes also our own state claiming that the smuggling of tobacco—cigarettes—from other states is robbing us of revenue. Yeah? Why don't you prevent wet tobacco states from shipping in to dry ones? Miss Grossjean prints an ad in our papers warning users of cigarettes that they also are equally liable to prosecution if they smoke cigarettes that are bootlegged in and do not have our state stamp on them. How about personal liberty there? And prohibition is not connected with this state matter at all, eh?

Yes, Melissie dear, there is bootlegging in oil, bootlegging in tobacco, bootlegging in most everything that is taxed—but only poor old prohibition gets the cold steel!

Reason: Millions of dollars poured out to deluge America with false statements—for 10 years. Shreveport, La.

AN AWAKENING CONSCIENCE

By Rev. Henry A. Rickey

I want to heartily second the motion made by Rev. R. R. Branton that our Church Colleges abolish Military Training. The prophetic voice has not been stilled. The prophetic mind has always been actively interested in moral perspective, in pointing out the major sins of the age, paying little attention to things that matter less.

There are those of us who believe that war is a sin and that it is out of date. It violates the essential teachings of Jesus and the supreme value of personality. Government can find other means of settling arguments than war, if the citizens demand that it do so.

Military training conducted by the War Department in schools and colleges tends to militarize the minds of our youth. Having renounced war, the nation should now seriously undertake to renounce the implements and ideals of war.

A Church College should pioneer in moral progress, not tag along behind a belated echo of others. Any Church College that still maintains a military department is lagging behind the higher moral idealism of the day. I would be among the first to respond with congratulations should I hear that Millsaps College had abandoned military training.

THE EASTER OFFERING NOT ALL

By Rev. D. T. Ridgeway, Jr.

The Easter offering for our Benevolent and Kingdom Extension funds will no doubt be disappointing. I believe every pastor has worked to the best of his ability for this offering. I hope no pastor will quit after the Easter offering is taken, but will continue his best efforts during the rest of the year to secure pledges and collections for this cause. No matter how thorough the every member canvass, some will be missed, or absent Easter, and not send their envelopes, or may have their funds tied up in banks that have not reopened, and will give more later as conditions improve.

The tragedy of our shortcoming with our Benevolent and Kingdom Extension funds has been pastors taking an offering after observing the cultivation period and then quitting for the remainder of the year. This cause is the life blood of our church, the whole program of the church is dependent upon it, as well as the missionaries in the foreign fields and the spread of the Kingdom of God. It is by far our most important offering and should have the attention and best efforts of every pastor during the whole year.

Silver Creek, Mississippi.

THROUGH DEEP WATERS

My Dear Brother Editor: Just a word from the Webb and Sumner charge. We are in the heart of the flood. Webb is situated in a basin, surrounded by levees.

The Cassidy Bayou and the Tallahatchie river have been on a rampage for three months, and over one hundred thousand acres of land are inundated; and near Webb there are seven hundred families overflowed or isolated, and many of these are white people, and some are members of our church.

Since the levees have been dynamited, Tippecanoe and Phillipp are overflowed, and so far the church work at all four points on this charge has moved along very well. Sumner church has paid one-half of the year's salary. Webb is not doing so well, yet Webb church is making good. Tippecanoe usually does very well during the summer. Phillipp continues to attend church, and they are taking care of the pastor.

All in all, people are going to church (many going in boats), and the general spirit is good. Some are downcast. Others are doing a heroic work, under the circumstances. The street in front of our home is four feet under water. We attended church here Sunday, traveling in a boat. Our congregation last night here was the largest it has been during this Conference year. We are for you in your effort to carry on.

When the water subsides we will remember you with renewals and possibly new subscribers.

Yours for carrying on,

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Mr. J. E. Johnson, Shiloh Charge, Miss., sends renewals. Thank you, Brother Johnson.

Dr. Frank L. Wells, pastor of First Church, New Orleans, is the Commencement preacher for Tulane University.

"The Lord of Life" was the Easter Cantata offered at our First Church, Crowley, La., where Rev. C. K. Smith is pastor.

We all join in sympathy with Rev. C. A. Parks, our pastor at Indianola, Miss., who has recently sustained the loss of his dear mother.

Mrs. W. W. Lantrip, mother of Rev. W. M. Lantrip, pastor of our church at Avondale, Birmingham, Ala., recently passed away at her home in Columbia, La.

"Brookhaven, Miss. Please send the Advocate—" And there was a list of names and a check. Can you make out the name? O yes, that is R. T. Hollingsworth. Thank you, Friend.

From the way the bulletin of Central Church, Meridian, Miss., looks, the young people are enjoying a good large place in the life of the congregation. Dr. L. L. Cowen is pastor.

Mrs. R. S. Ricketts, Jackson, Miss., commends an article on the Negro, which appeared recently in our columns from the pen of Dr. V. C. Curtis, presiding elder of the Columbus District.

"One new Missionary Society organized this year, a Young People's Division, and a very fine prayer meeting with attendance ranging from 35 to 50," is the report of Rev. C. B. Powell, Melder, La.

Have you read Representative John E. Rankin's remarks on "The Beer Bill?" It is worth your while. Mr. Rankin is a congressman from Mississippi. He does not seem to be for scare or sale.

Once more we urge our readers to refer to the address label on the Advocate and note the expiration date. If your subscription has expired, kindly forward us $1.50 to cover your renewal for another year.

Numbers are either writing or dropping in to say that they so much regret the going of Dr. A. C. King, for many years a member and steward of the Algiers Church. And words of sympathy for Mrs. King abound.

We have an invitation from Dr. E. Nash Broyles, presiding elder of the Greenville District, to attend his district conference. Sorry we cannot be there, but we hope that Dr. Broyles will tell the fellows about the Advocate.

Not slowing down or ready to take the count. Mrs. D. S. Purvine, Okmulgee, Okla., just turning into her eighty-seventh birthday, renews for the Advocate, closing with these words: "I hope I shall not miss a number." Happy birthday, Sister Purvine.

Rev. E. S. Lewis, pastor at Winona, has had quite a number to join the church since Conference. He goes among his people touching lives here and there for the Master. It is not unusual for him to receive members for a number of Sundays in succession.

With the topic, "Taking Stock of the First Year as an Editor," Dr. W. P. King, editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, appears on the program of the annual meeting of the Editorial Council of Religious Press, meeting in Washington D. C., April 19.

"The Tragedy of Lynching" is the title of a book containing the report of the Southern Commission on the Study of Lynching. This book is the outgrowth of two years of painstaking study

WE SAY "AMEN" TO THIS PRAYER

With apologies to the North Carolina Christian Advocate, we reprint the following, carried in a recent number of that paper, and to which we add another hearty "Amen."

"Bishop Sam R. Hay tells of a Negro preacher near Houston who prayed thus: 'O Lord, we need grace and we need knowledge; but we shore do want money.' That is exactly our prayer right now. The Lord will supply us grace, and there are a thousand folks who are willing to give us knowledge—but what we would rather have from our earthly friends just now is money. We need money right now in order that we might keep this paper square with the world. Please look at your label. If you cannot send the full amount, send all you can. Please let us hear from you."

of that great problem. We hope to furnish our readers with a review of the book.

From Mr. Claude J. Bonnacarrere, son of our good pastor at Donaldsonville, La., we have received an announcement of the graduating exercises of the high school at that place. Mr. Bonnacarre enjoys a place on the roll of graduates. Congratulations and a great road ahead.

Dr. Sidney J. Peters, member of the Virginia Conference, aged sixty-five, died March 20. Dr. Peters was for many years a prominent figure in Virginia Methodism. He is the father of Dr. John Brandon Peters, who went from the pastorate of First Church, New Orleans, to Druid Hills, Atlanta.

Rev. J. L. Smith pastor of Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg, Miss., with Mrs. Smith, was called to Oma Miss., by the death, on April 4, of Mrs. T. N. Smith, mother of Brother Smith. The interment was at Bahala Chapel, in Lawrence County. She is survived by five sons and five daughters.

The church grieves over the untimely death of Dr. Carl C. Gregory, pastor at Macon, Ga. Dr. Gregory was one of the promising ministers of Southern Methodism. The many people who visited Dallas during the General Conference remember he was the genial pastor-host of our great First Church in that city.

Rev. W. W. Jones, our pastor at Merigold, is reported to have one of the best selected libraries of any pastor in the church. It means a great deal for a man to live with the master minds through books. Ministers and all professional men should be alive to currents of thought which have swept through the ages.

We are indebted to Dr. D. L. Watson, New Orleans, for a timely pamphlet on "Prohibition, a Health Issue." It is good to have something like this when folks all about you are singing, "Happy Days are Here Again," just because beer has come back. Well, it doesn't take much to make some people happy, we have been told.

"I am looking after the Advocate's interests about here." That is Rev. Wm. Schuhle, Plaquemine, La. And there were material evidences supporting the statement. Let all the pastors of Louisiana and Mississippi follow the example of Brother Schuhle, and this editor will stop his teasing. March 15-May 15. You know what that means.

The simultaneous revival in Columbus, Miss., during the two weeks before Easter stirred the entire city. Our two churches there under the leadership of Rev. C. L. Rogers and Rev. A. T. McIlwain took an outstanding part in that revival. More people attended church during the revival than had been seen in the churches in many years.

During the enforced bank closings at Tupelo, Miss. the work goes right on, according to Dr. W. P. Buhrman, pastor. For a while there was unrest but the people soon settled down to facts and began to work out their problems. It is heartening how the people rise to emergencies. Tupelo was host to the late session of the North Mississippi Conference.

Rev. R. A. Cross, pastor at Walker, La., and author of the booklet, "The History of Methodism in New Orleans," is recognized for an announcement: "I will sell the book for 25 cents. Any pastor or church organization wishing to undertake the sale of the book may do so on a 50 per cent commission basis." If interested, write Rev. R. A. Cross, Walker, La.

A good man may get down, but he is never out. Dr. W. Angie Smith, pastor of First Church, Shreveport, recently went to Austin, Texas, for a sermon at the State University. Before time for the sermon he was stricken with ptomaine poisoning. Mrs. Smith rushed to his bedside in the Seton Infirmary. A late report says that Dr. Smith is back at his work.

Rev. "Mister" W. S. Shipman, the nestor of the North Mississippi Conference, still enjoys life even after his retirement last year. His cheerful disposition over a long life of unceasing labor for the Master has been an encouragement to so many men. His brethren will go out of their way just to sit awhile with him, and to have him in their homes is a real joy.

"Colonel" W. E. Thomas. Well, that is what we saw "in the paper." "Gov. Ruby Laffoon, of Kentucky, has made Rev. W. E. Thomas an aide-camp on his staff." Too late to do anything but congratulate Brother Thomas, who, with Mr. F. E. Kirk of New Albany, Ind., as singer, recently conducted a meeting with Rev. J. A. Knight, pastor at Eunice, La.

The Louisiana Conference Woman's Missionary Society has just closed its twenty-third annual session. The 1934 meeting is to be in the city of New Orleans. Mrs. R. S. Crichtow was elected to the superintendency of Children's Work, and Mrs. R. W. Irvine to the superintendency of the department of Christian Social Relations. Both these ladies are of New Orleans.

Dr. Joseph A. Smith, pastor of Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss., was the guest preacher, April 13, 14, at Delta State Teachers' College. Dr. Smith delivered three messages under the auspices of the Methodist Students' Union. His general theme was "A Creed for College Men." The three subjects were, "I Believe in Man," "I Believe in Christ," "I Believe in the Cross."

Hear that music? Listen! Seventy-five voices made up the choir at First Church, Lake Charles, La., on March 26. The great choir was a feature of the Easter services. On Good Friday morning, 7 o'clock, there was union communion service at this great church in which five churches participated. Rev. Elmer C. Gunn is the pastor. He shares his time with the Moss Bluff congregation near the city.

Brother pastor, have you made your plans to present the cause of the Advocate during the March 15-May 15 Advocate Circulation Campaign? We will gladly furnish you with lists of present subscribers and their expiration dates as well as sample copies. The Advocate needs your help and the Church needs the assistance the Advocate renders in the advancement of God's Kingdom. "Together we cannot fail."

Wedding bells. Miss Ruth Chalmers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. O. Chalmers, and sister of the manager of the Advocate, was married on Tuesday, April 18, to Mr. Fredric J. Wysor, of Tampa, Florida, the ceremony taking place at the home of the bride, Rev. Benj. F. Rogers officiating. The happy couple left immediately following the ceremony for Tampa, Fla., where they will make their home at 505 Magnolia Avenue. Congratulations and best wishes.

Rev. L. P. Wasson continues to preach to large congregations in the city of Clarksdale, Miss. Brother Wasson is quite a gifted evangelistic pastor. His people hear him gladly, and all the organizations of the church respond to his zealous leadership. He has had successful pastorates at Tunica, West Point, Water Valley, and other points in North Mississippi Conference. His work as presiding elder on the Aberdeen and Greenwood Districts develops steadily.

In one of our good county papers of Mississippi, The Grenada Sentinel, I found a column headed, "Our Colored Folks." And in that column were some very interesting and timely things about homemaking, higher educational methods, and a higher type of church activities. We heartily commend this attitude of our contemporary. The destiny of the white and colored in the South is bound together. With the Christian spirit and co-operative effort all problems can be worked out.

Rev. W. L. Pearson, pastor at Artesia, is busy trying to carry forward the work in his charge. He tries to work the plans of the church as far as he can in every church. Before entering the ministry he was a well-known athlete over the Southern territory, being a star left-handed pitcher for "Ole Miss." He puts the same zeal in his work for the church as he did when in those hard-fought games on the diamond. In addition to his work on his charge, he frequently teaches courses in the Young People's Assembly in his Conference.

"How sweet on a clear Sabbath morning to list to the clear-ringing," says the song, "The Church in the Wildwood." Port Barre, La., church is to have the bell ringing shortly. Miss Ora Hooper, rural church worker, wrote us to inquire about a bell. We did. Mrs. Lowdermilk, Route 1, Shreveport, wrote saying, "Here is the bell. Tell me how to ship it." And we are all happy. Miss Hooper writes that there were 58 present for Sunday school the other Sunday. Easter Sunday was celebrated with a pageant, an Easter-egg hunt, and "dinner on the ground."

This year the pastors who are serving in the rural territory are seeing tough times financially. Some report that they are not receiving more than $15 or $20 per month during the first six months of the year. That should not be. The laborer is worthy of his hire. In this day of high demands of the pastor and his family, it is nothing short of persecution to receive his services and not pay him enough to feed his family, let alone carry any other items for protection. Why can't all of our loyal stewards go out and collect something for their pastor? Our people are not all that poverty-stricken yet.

Preachers' children. They are all the time coming up and many of them are up and coming. This time it is Willeroy Wells, son of Dr. Frank L. Wells, pastor of First Church, New Orleans. This young man graduates from Tulane University in June. Because of his high average of scholarship he has been accepted as a member of the Phi Beta Kappa scholarship fraternity. This is an achievement worthy of large consideration. Young Mr. Wells is a candidate for the ministry. In September he enters Union Seminary, New York, for his special training for that work. Congratulations to parents and son.

Some people want to put "skids" under their pastor at times, but there is a better way of doing things. That is what the good people of the Lisbon Charge up here in the Ruston District crew, and I like to ride with sober passengers. Maybe that 3.2 per cent stuff is intoxicating, after all.

Echoes from West Africa. The other day a bulletin bearing a peculiar stamp and postmark tumbled out of the editor's mail. In the upper left corner of the envelope were these words: "From one editor to another." I made haste to the insides. "The Drum Call" was the title at the masthead. Down below were the words, "Elat, Cameroun, West Africa." Then a card fell out. On the front was this: "Mrs. Gaylo Carothers Beanland, Yaounde, Cameroun, West Africa, and (over)". On the other side was this: "This editor's father is Rev. W. M. Williams of Magee, Miss. And she enjoys every issue of your Christian Advocate. Hope you will enjoy this 'Drum Call' as much." So we just stepped out on a high point of the ether mountain ranges and waved our hat, saying, "Mrs. Beanland, we hear your 'Drum Call' and something down inside answers."

✓ REV. J. S. RUTLEDGE PASSES

Rev. J. S. Rutledge, a superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, in which he served for thirty years, died at his home in Walker, La., Tuesday afternoon April 11.

Brother Rutledge was seventy years of age. He is survived by his widow and three children.

Funeral services were held the following Wednesday afternoon at the Walker Methodist church, with interment at the Denham Springs cemetery. Rev. K. W. Dodson, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, assisted by Rev. A. D. George, pastor at Keener Memorial, Baton Rouge and his pastor, Rev. Robt. A. Cross, conducted the last rites.

✓ REV. W. A. HAYS DROWNED

Rev. W. A. Hays, pastor of our Jefferson Street church, Natchez, Miss., was drowned on Thursday evening, April 13, when the car he was driving plunged into the torrent of Middle Fork Creek about one mile west of Meadville. The catastrophe was not known until late the following day, when the upturned car was discovered by Sheriff Crecinck, and his body found at the wheel. Heavy rains on Wednesday had caused the creek to rise and wash away a portion of the embankment approach to the bridge.

It is believed that Brother Hays was en route to visit Mrs. Hays who, because of ill health, had not as yet moved to Natchez, and was living with their daughter, Mrs. C. A. Massey, in Pachuta, Miss.

Brother Hays was serving his first year as pastor of the Jefferson Street church, to which he was appointed at the late session of the Mississippi Annual Conference, having completed a quadrennium as presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District.

The funeral was held on Easter Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Waynesboro, Miss., where he had served a pastorate of five years, conducted by Rev. J. L. Decell, pastor of the Galloway Memorial Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., assisted by several of his associates in the Mississippi Conference.

Brother Hays is survived by his widow, a daughter, Mrs. C. A. Massey, Pachuta, Miss., and a son, Ralph, business manager of the Teachers' College, Hattiesburg, Miss. To these loved ones, the Advocate joins his many friends in expressing deep sorrow in the loss we have all sustained.

did. His old car was slated for superannation and was about ready to be turned out to grass. Brother Roberts had had his shoes half-shod and had unbuttoned his collar, ready to become a Gospel peddler of the dusty road. Hello! What is that? Shine your shoes, Brother Roberts, and put on your best tie. His people had driven another car up in front of his gate and put new wheels under their preacher. Now, they say, Brother Roberts is hoping that Annual Conference wont meet any more for about fifteen years.

Do you ride on the Illinois Central Railroad? According to a report before us, that road has taken a very commendable stand with reference to beer. An order dated March 29 at Memphis, Tenn., addressed to "All Passenger Conductors, All Agents," reads as follows: "We will not sell 3.2 per cent beer on our dining cars or in our company operated restaurants. Further, we will not permit the sale of 3.2 per cent beer by news agents on our trains in or adjacent to our restaurants, lunch counters, fountains and news stands in or adjacent to our passenger stations. MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

The response from Young People's Day observance has been most gratifying indeed. The activity of the District secretaries has been the cause of this, and their work is greatly appreciated. Nothing will put life and interest into local young peoples' organizations like aiding in the ongoing of the Conference program.

Plans are about matured for the Conference Assembly, June 5 to 9, Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss. Registration fee, $1. This is collected from every one. Meals and room, $5. Every church should have at least one person at the Assembly. All chipping in, this is entirely possible.

Our plans for the Pastors' School are maturing very satisfactorily. The Seashore Methodist Assembly Grounds, Biloxi, Miss., June 19 to 30, is the date. Classes begin Tuesday morning, June 20th at 7.

The courses for undergraduates will be the same as last year. In the graduate courses we will have the following teachers: Dr. J. W. Perry, Nashville, Tenn., Home Secretary, General Board of Missions; Rev. A. W. Martin, Board of Christian Education, Nashville, Tenn.; Dr. W. L. Smith, Professor of Christian Education, Birmingham Southern, Birmingham, Ala.; Prof. P. J. Rutledge, of Tatam, Department of Religious Education, Millsaps College—a most worthy and worthwhile faculty.

THIS WOMAN LOST 35 LBS. OF FAT

Miss M. Katner of Brooklyn, N. Y. writes: "Have used Kruschen for the past 4 months and have not only lost 35 pounds but feel so much better in every way. Even for people who don't care to reduce, Kruschen is wonderful to keep the system healthy. I being a nurse should know for I've tried so many things but only Kruschen answered all purposes." (May 12, 1932).

To lose fat SAFELY and HARMLESSLY, take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—don't miss a morning—a bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle—but don't take chances—be sure it's Kruschen—your health comes first—get it at any drugstore in America. If not joyfully satisfied after the first bottle—money back.

Are You Nervous?

Women and Girls do not Need to Suffer So

MRS. H. C. Reese of Salus, Ark., says: "I feel twice as strong since I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It has relieved my pain, quieted my nerves, and has given me a better appetite.

Before I took the 'Prescription' I was rundown and nervous, at times I would have to lie down. I had no appetite and could not sleep well. Now I am a different woman. My children are happy to see how well I look."

Write Dr. Pierce's Clinic, Buffalo, N. Y.

Prices for board the same as it was last year—$13.75, four in a room, and $16.50, two in a room.

We are trusting each local church to see to it that Missionary Day is observed each fourth Sunday. God bless the person and the individual that puts self last and others first. This is an opportunity for all to share with others throughout the entire world.

We trust there will be a worthy and worthwhile program that will be both informing and inspiring.

Pray for the work and the workers.

MANGHAM, LA., REVIVAL

Dear Editor: In the co-operative revival at the school auditorium, Mangham, La., Rev. John A. May, Montevallo, Ala., preached each evening to congregations estimated at 500 to 900. The meeting was held from March 21 to April 2. There were more than one hundred professed conversions. Thirty-four applied for membership in the churches, and from 400 to 600 by standing, declared they had received much good from the revival.

The large attendance and deep interest shown at the services was a complete surprise to a good many of our people. They did not realize that our spiritual depression was much more serious than our financial depression. Now it is generally admitted that this old-time revival was the most important thing for just "such a time as this."

At a small expense school busses were used in bringing our rural people to the revival. There was a fine spirit of co-operation among the members of the various churches represented. Dr. May preached a virile, Biblical revival gospel that dealt with life, death and eternity. His messages were so forceful, clear and inspirational that they gripped the attention of his audiences from the first to the last of the services.

Here are a number of thoughts that, on reflection, this revival brings to my mind.

1. The greater the financial depression, the greater the opportunity for a revival.
2. Church members with materialistic thoughts do not desire or ask for a revival.
3. If the Holy Spirit prompts us to hold a revival, He will see us through.
4. A revival for the masses, as an emergency measure, is more important than economic legislation and conferences of nations.
5. If we would save our nation from spiritual declension and final spiritual death, like President Roosevelt in behalf of government, we must do something and do it at once.
6. If any of our evangelists have the qualifications for a present-day revival, General Evangelist John A. May is equal to any of them. His interpretation, of the being and office work of the Triune God in creation, redemption and the salvation of man is the message for the hour.

7. Dr. May will not allow the question of "How much pay?" have anything to do with his holding revivals for our pastors. Pastor nor people are made to feel a financial burden for the meeting. In the home, Brother May is kind, prayerful, social and agreeable. The children love and respect him. His gospel is suited to large churches, or community-wide revivals. For the larger interest of a much needed revival throughout our nation, write for the services of this general evangelist. His address is, Rev. John A. May, Box 185, Montevallo, Ala.

The first worship period was led by Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, followed by the administration of the Lord's Supper by Rev. J. E. Stevens. The early morning retreats conducted by Mrs. R. P. Neblett were spiritual and uplifting, as were the noonday worship periods led by Mrs. J. W. Perry. A beautiful memorial service was conducted by Mrs. C. V. Maxwell, of Pickens. An interesting pageant was given by the Louisville young people on "The Status of Women," and delightful music was rendered by the Louisville choir.

Mrs. W. W. Wilburn's financial report for the past year showed that $23,770 was expended for connectional work, $11,727 for local work, and $1,932 for supplies, totaling $37,429. The North Mississippi Conference paid $9 per cent of its pledge last year. Since its organization in 1881, $595,701 has been sent to Council Treasurer. The Conference supports the rural workers, and at this meeting presented them certificates of life membership in recognition of their splendid service. The Conference also pays $450 toward the support of Miss Mary Ellen Moore, M. S. C. W. student secretary.

A telegram was sent to Governor Connor commending his stand for the dry cause, and urging him to continue to support the dries.

The invitation extended by Okalona to meet there next March was accepted. Too much cannot be said of the hospitality of the local people of Louisville. Mrs. T. J. Lee is president of the hostess society.

SHINING FOR JESUS

By Mrs. E. W. Sorey

We are pilgrims, groping along life's way, stumbling, looking, and longing for the rays of light which our Heavenly Father has commanded His children to shed across their path.

Jesus said, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

The above precept fell from the lips of our precious Saviour as He sat on the mountain with His disciples.

The command to let our light shine was for all His followers. The passage also tells us that we are to let our light shine by doing good works.

We may question ourselves: Where can I go, and what can I do for Him? His Word says: "In all thy ways acknowledge Him and He will direct thy paths."

Our path may seem very rugged and steep, and few there may be who are willing to tread that way. But if we glorify God we must press forward.

Our path may lead to the widow's home, who struggles so hard for the necessities of her little ones. Our Father's blessings will fall upon us while we administer to their wants.

Perhaps our beacon may be to the prisoner's dark cell, to carry the bread of life and point him to the Crucified One. Or to those who are tossing upon the beds of affliction. We may bathe the fevered brow and watch through the weary hours of the night, for His sake.

LUZIANNE GUARANTEE—If after using the entire contents of a can of Luzianne (according to directions) you are not satisfied in ever respect, your grocer will refund the money you paid for it.

He says: "In as much as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Oh, the myriads of tasks awaiting His children, if we will only press forward to the mark of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. "That our path may be as a shining light that shineth more and more until the perfect day."

"Brightly beams our Father's mercy,
From His light-house, evermore.
But to us He gives the keeping
Of the lights along the shore.

"Dark the night of sin has settled,
Loud the angry billows roar;
Eager eyes are watching, longing,
For the lights along the shore.

"Trim your feeble lamps, my brethren.
Some poor sailor, tempest-torn,
Trying now to make the harbor,
In the darkness may be lost."

FRANK LAMKIN WIER

The subject of this memorial was born in Enterprise, Clark County, Mississippi, December 26, 1860. He departed this life in Starkville, Miss.,

January 10, 1933. He was of Christian parentage, his father, Dr. T. C. Wier, being for many years a member of the North Mississippi Conference. His education was acquired at the local private schools and at the University of Mississippi. July 2, 1901, he was married to Miss Margaret Cay, from which union two daughters survive, Mildred and Louise.

Brother Wier was an outstanding citizen in all the relations of life, and no appraisal of him would be just that omitted him as parent, as citizen, or as a Christian gentleman.

As citizen, mayor, and public-spirited advocate of helpful measures, he was outstanding. As a Christian, he served as member, steward, teacher, and leader of his church. He bore his part heroically, suffering as he did physically and in mind. No one ever heard him complain of his lot.

On the morning of his going, he had eaten breakfast in the usual way, and while making preparations to go to his usual daily duties, the final summons came, calling him to those higher duties for which his life of service and devotion had so fittingly prepared him.

It would be a happy event to us all if we could hope to lie down as peacefully as did Brother Wier and pass on to our eternal reward with equal assurance of "enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

Says CARDUI Seemed To Stop Cramping

"Several years ago, when I was younger, I was advised to take Cardui for cramping and irregular trouble," writes Mrs. Esther L. Dodson, of Lowry City, Mo. "It helped me and stopped the cramping. Before the birth of my baby, I felt I needed a tonic to give me strength and appetite. Knowing that Cardui was a good tonic, I decided to take it again. I took it for nine months. I feel that my good health is due to Cardui."

Take Cardui to build up against the nagging symptoms of ordinary womanly ailments. It has been in use for over 50 years. So many women praise CARDUI, it must be good to have the widespread use that it has today. Sold at drug stores.

HYUNGSKI J. LEW SUCCEEDS J. O. KIM AS EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

A letter from Dr. John Q. Schisler, Secretary Department Local Church General Board Christian Education, gives this information:

"Perhaps you have heard of the resignation of Rev. J. O. Kim, General Secretary of Christian Education, Korea, to accept the principalship of the Songdo Higher Common School. I know that Louisiana has been especially interested in Brother Kim these years, and it occurred to me that he had written you. In any event, I want to share with you a letter which he wrote me on January 24, 1933:

"This is to say that I have accepted the principalship of the Songdo Higher Common School, to take up the new work at the end of March after Annual Conference. Until then I shall continue as heretofore with this department. Please understand that only considerations of the most urgent nature have compelled me to make this decision. It is no easy thing to sever connections with this work for which I specially prepared and in which I have put my heart and given the last nine years of my life; but the need of the school was too great, and there seemed no one else who would step into the situation; and so I gave up personal desires and accepted the invitation of the Songdo Board of Control. And even though I go to Songdo it will be almost the same kind of work, and whether directly or indirectly I will be helping this department and keeping up my interest. It is my thought to stay in Songdo only until someone better can be found. The work here will be left in good hands, as Mr. Lew will act as secretary until the General Conference in 1934."

"In addition, I should like to hand you, enclosed, a copy of statement concerning the fitness of Brother Lew to carry on until next General Conference. I am sure the friends of Brother Kim will not withdraw their interest from him or Korea, or from the work of Christian education in that country, but will support Brother

Business throughout the nation was at a standstill during the recent bank holiday proclaimed by President Roosevelt immediately following his inaugural. This could hardly have been otherwise.

Many banks, however, have since re-opened and are conducting a normal business, and each day finds scores of others doing likewise.

Through it all the Advocate has continued its weekly visits to your homes, despite the fact that collections were not forthcoming. To do this means that pay rolls must be met as usual in order to keep the presses going.

More than 2,000 of our friends have allowed their subscriptions to expire, thus cutting our normal receipts better than $3,500. It is to these good friends of the Advocate that we call for immediate co-operation, and urge that each one forward us by return mail the small amount of $1.50 which will renew your church paper for another year. It amounts to less than three cents per week.

This is no time to call a halt. The Church was never more in need of the Religious Press than it is today. No Christian home should be without its Church paper.

Don't put it off any longer. Send in your renewal today. The label on your paper tells the tale. If it reads March, 1933, or any date prior thereto, your subscription has expired and $1.50 should be forwarded to our office to cover a year's renewal. Send money order wherever possible. Thank you.

er Lew just as generously as they did Brother Kim.

"Mr. Hyungski J. Lew is a man in whom we have the utmost confidence. In the first place, we know from firsthand information from his sponsors during his boyhood and early youth his record and personal character during those early years. He is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University, where he made a remarkable record as a brilliant student. Professor Rollin H. Walker has stated to me that he considers Lew to have the brightest mind of any man from the Orient ever enrolled in Ohio Wesleyan. He is a graduate also of Boston University School of Theology (S. T. B. and S. T. M.) and of Harvard (M. A.) Throughout his career he has shown independence and initiative. We are confident he will make a real contribution both to the general program of the Korean Church and to the distinctive work of religious education." —Extract from letter from Dr. Wade Crawford Barclay, Secretary of the Joint Committee on Religious Education in Foreign Fields, Chicago—Christian Advocate.

I AM THE FARMER

I am the Provider for all mankind. Upon me every human being constantly depends.

A world itself is built upon my toil, my products, my honesty.

Because of my industry, America, my country, leads the world. Her prosperity is maintained by me; her great Commerce is the work of my good hands; the "balance of trade" springs from the furrows of my farm.

My reaper brings food for today; my plows hold promise for tomorrow.

In War I am absolute; in Peace, I am indispensable—my country's surest defense and constant reliance.

I am the very soul of America, the hope of a race, the balance wheel of Civilization.

When I prosper, men are happy; when I fail, all the world suffers.

I live with Nature, walk in the green fields under the golden sunlight, out of the great Alone where brain and brawn and toil supply mankind's primary need. And I try to do my humble part to carry out the great plan of God.

Even the birds are my companions; they greet me with a symphony at the new day's dawn and chum with me till the evening prayer is said.

If it were not for me the treasures of the earth would remain securely locked; the granaries would be useless frames; man himself would be doomed speedily to extinction or decay.

Through me is produced the energy that maintains the spark of life.

I rise with the early dawn and retire when the "chores" of the world are done.

I am your true Friend. I am the Farmer.—Wright County Journal-Press, Buffalo, Minn.

O Lord, I thank Thee for the love
That makes my life so bright,

For this I praise Thee Sabbath morn,
But not on Sunday night.

I'm glad to hear our choir chant
My pure and deep delight;
On Sunday morn I hear them sing,
But not on Sunday night.

I love to hear our pastor speak;
His views are sound and right;
They feed my soul on Sabbath morn,
But not on Sunday night.

At 10 a. m. I stroll to church
In Sunday garb bedight,
But, Lord, I crave my easy chair

Lord, bless our church, and help to arm

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

"I MUST HAVE MY TRADE JOURNAL," said Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, Presiding Elder of the Shreveport District, in a most pointed presentation of the Advocate and its claims at his District Conference, recently held at Vivian, La.

Dr. Sexton set forth the necessity of the professional and trade journal in modern life and its universal use. If you will listen a minute you can hear him saying, "The doctor has his medical journal, the lawyer his law journal, the business man his journal, the dairyman his paper, the farmer his paper, the chicken grower his paper. These papers are regarded as a necessity, and no man in anyone of these and a hundred other professions and business enterprises thinks of getting on without his trade journal. It is taken as a matter of course. A fellow, pretending to be anything at all in his line of work, would be ashamed to be caught without his paper."

Following this the speaker showed how, if we are to be regular church people and mean business by what we are trying to do, the Advocate is a necessity and must have just as large a place in the Methodist's home as the medical journal in the doctor's office.

Knowing this the reader is prepared to hear that almost every pastor of that district, in his report, told of his plans for the circulation of the Advocate.

Our Kingdom Extension Day and our Orphanage Day have come and gone. The Advocate promoted and urged the insistent and important claims of these interests. We appreciate the fact that pastors and people have been compelled to give much time and thought to these. Hence we have not tried to occupy too much space with our own claims for the Advocate, notwithstanding the fact that this is the period dedicated by our three Conferences to that purpose. But with these over we feel now that we must have your big pull during the remaining period allotted to the circulation campaign. Let Elders, Pastors, Missionary Societies, Young People's Divisions and all members pull for the Advocate.

DR. HENRY VAN DYKE is gone. Don't you miss him? I do. No, I never did see him. He didn't know that I was in the world at all. But I felt him. Real greatness is too big for the eyes. It must be felt. Real greatness is not a matter of earthly measurements. It is of the soul. Phillips Brooks said of Lincoln, "In him was vindicated the goodness of real greatness and the greatness of real goodness." Van Dyke just about fits into that frame, doesn't he? Greatness is quality, not quantity.

The first time I felt Henry Van Dyke was the time I met him at Christmas with his little book, "The Other Wise Man." In fact I did not know about that other wise man till he told me. Yes, we fussed at him a bit about having that character tell a "fib." But didn't he say that he was not trying to draw a picture of a saint but just telling what a fellow does in a tight place sometimes? He was not defending or recommending falsehood. You know old Peter told a big one that morning in the twilight when he said he didn't know anything about Jesus. A presiding elder said the other day, "I'd rather have a mule that gets his foot over the trace occasionally, but pulls when he gets to the hill, than one that stands politely in the traces but never tightens them when the load is heavy."

Then I felt Dr. Van Dyke again when he came by wearing the "Blue Flower" in his buttonhole, and stopped to tell me about "The Lost Word." As he came back he told me about "Companionable Books." I'll just have to let you in on some of the things he said to me about these books. "Many books are dry and dusty, there is no juice in them; and many are soon exhausted, you would no more go back to them than to a squeezed orange, but some have in them an unfailing sap, both from the tree of knowledge and from the tree of life.

"By companionable books I mean those that are worth taking with you on a journey, where the weight of luggage counts, or keeping beside your bed, near the night-lamp; books that will bear reading often, and the more slowly you read them the better you enjoy them; books that not only tell you how things look and how people behave, but also interpret nature and life to you, in language of beauty and power touched with the personality of the author, so that they have a real voice audible to your spirit in the silence."

What were some of those books? Well, the Bible, Dickens, Wordsworth, Browning, Emerson, Stevenson, et al.

He swept me with his picture of Grand Canyon. And one time he introduced his friend Tennyson to me. Van Dyke was one of my boyhood heroes.

Farewell, Dr. Van Dyke. Hope to see you in the Morning.

AND ABOUT THAT BIBLE. Did you ever stop to think that we don't use a great deal of the Bible? And that we are inclined to adapt it to our lives rather than our lives to it? While we have not officially adopted an American Bible, in our thinking we have set up some reservations so that we read it with American eyes. In our conduct we follow a kind of American-ized edition of the Bible. When it comes to matters of war, race, politics, industry, etc., a great many of us Christians follow this American edition. Shall we abolish the Bible or seriously undertake to follow its instructions?

Hadn't we better look into this?

MADE HE A WOMAN, is the statement from that charming author who wrote the Book of Genesis. So far as I am concerned that announcement should be placed right alongside that heralding the making of the world. For what would that world have been without woman? "Oh, I know about that 'snake and apple' business, and I heard the garden gate close.

But this is not an exegesis. I wanted to remind you that President Roosevelt not only placed a woman on his Cabinet, but now he sends Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of the "Great Commoner," to Denmark as our American minister. Do not worry. This is no attempt to honor William Jennings Bryan. Mrs. Owen is well able to look after our affairs in Denmark. She is a brilliant and capable woman, and did not make a bad Congresswoman. Isn't she the one, who, when defeated, offered to resign in order that her successor might take his seat at once?

They tell me that the Danes have a very high regard for the ability and capacity of women in both public and private affairs. And it is my guess that they will not want Mrs. Owen to come home when her time is up over there.

NOW WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO ABOUT HITLER? You have noticed in your papers that he has been standing right up on the front page for some time. In fact he just about crowded Mussolini out for a few days.

I confess that I do not like the way things seem to be turning in Germany. And it appears that a few others of my contemporaries like France and England are more or less on the uneasy seat also. Hitler seemed to reason, "If Il Duce can put on his black shirt, line up his 'fascists,' crack his heels together, and talk sassy to the Pope; why I can put on my brown shirt, stick my swastika pin into my necktie, call my 'nazis' together and tell a few Germans, maybe Hindenburg, what they must do."

Hitler made cold chills creep up my spine when he suggested that the country abolish the Old Testament, along with the Jews, and substitute for it German mythology. That was just getting a little too strong for me. I grabbed for my Bible.

WE HAVE LEADERS

By William T. Ellis

Many men have lain awake at night, pondering the problem of religious leadership in this perplexing period. Not a few are praying fervently for the appearance of a new Luther, a Wesley, a Knox, a Whitefield, a Finney or a Moody. His advent, they believe, will bring in the great awakening which should follow the present crisis, as it has followed other crises in the past.

Into my own mind the past year's quiet thinking has put a large doubt as to the correctness of this theory. I have ceased to look for the coming of some super-evangelist.

Instead, the conviction has clarified that the Divinely-appointed leaders whom the church needs are already with us—the pastors of individual flocks.

All that the times require, religiously, can be accomplished by the ministers now in service, if they can but get a fresh conception of their mission, and rid themselves of the prevalent idea of dependence upon somebody else—some great evangelist or reformer, some denominational or interchurch leader, some popular figure who will take the world by storm.

The world is not going to be stormed into religiousness; but it may be shepherded there.

Once let individual pastors become dominated by the conviction that they are the Church's real leaders—endowed with the Spirit; ordained by the Church and commissioned by Scripture—and they will slough off the "inferiority complex" which makes them so docile and deferential toward professional "leaders;" who are leading nowhere.

It may sound drastic, and it certainly is not meant unkindly; but one definite remedy for the present inertia in Christian activity would be to declare a moratorium for a few years upon professional "leadership."

Suppose every church and clergyman should decide to ignore the very existence of all the super-salaried secretaries and causes and organizations and "movements"—outside of the normal on-going of denominational life—and devote themselves wholly to aggressive activity in their own local fields.

Would not the result be a new sense of dignity and responsibility and power for every pastor; who would then know that whatever leadership in religion comes to his community is wholly dependent upon him and his fellow ministers, as led by the Spirit of God?

In a word, the Church already has the leaders she needs; except wherein the shepherds have become sheep. Once let them resume the pastoral staff and the Church will soon be able to exult. In the words of Deborah's Song:

"For that the leaders took the lead in Israel,
For that the people offered themselves willingly, Bless ye Jehovah."

THE WAY OF LIFE

By a Layman

Faith

At Easter, people everywhere in the Christian lands are thinking of the foundation of their faith.

It is not unusual to hear of those who take the position that they refuse to accept anything that they do not understand. As a matter of fact nobody takes this position in reality. Some may think they do, but they do not. All of us must walk by faith if we walk at all. Who understands the process of the distribution of food in the human body when it passes into the stomach, how each part of the body is supplied with the particular kind of nourishment that it needs from the food that is taken in in utter ignorance of the elements it contains, as well as ignorance of the relation of these elements to the upbuilding of the various parts of the body? We eat by faith, and no one stops eating because he doesn't understand the process.

We really know very little in this world, and we can learn but little from processes of reasoning. Two intelligent lawyers may look at the same facts, and one concludes that they establish guilt, and the other is positive that they establish innocence. Two intelligent good men read the simple teachings of Jesus; one concludes that they establish a certain course of conduct, and the other concludes that they establish a course of conduct that is entirely different.

If the radio had been discovered and used by the Egyptians and the process had been lost, as their wonderful system of embalming was lost, and it had been recorded in the Old Testament that Moses sat on the mountain by a campfire one night and "listened in" to music and conversation in the king's palace two hundred miles away, it would have been declared impossible by every rationalist. He would have demonstrated its impossibility by a logical process of reasoning.

Reasoning is one way of obtaining truth. But the greatest truths affecting human life are not reached by any process of reasoning. They are not contrary to reason. They are above reason.

To the man who has eyes to see the unseen is more real than the seen.—Southern Agriculturist.

MY FRIEND—DR. ALFRED C. KING

His associate at the Algiers Clinic, New Orleans, Dr. F. S. Brock, called me at midnight saying, "I believe the Doctor is going. Perhaps you would like to come down."

In a few minutes I was there to take up the silent watch with the family and a few near friends. The hours slipped by as his life ebbed away, its waves gradually receding from the shores of time. Then, at 6:15 in the morning, that hour when night let's go and the day takes up nature's story, when birds greet dawn with their merry chorus; from that room in his lovely home, just completed, like his life, on one side windows opening toward the woods, nature, and the God of nature, on the other side opening toward his neighbors and his fellowman, the noble spirit of our good physician, Dr. Alfred C. King, slipped out and up to be with God.

For thirty-eight years he had been a practicing physician in Algiers. Through epidemics of yellow fever and influenza he had stood by his people, and at many a bedside at other times his presence and kindness had been as much relief as the medicine he administered with such skill and care.

Dr. King was a member of the Medical Faculty of Tulane University and had honored posts on the staffs of some of the city's great hospitals. His speciality was surgery, a field in which there is ample testimony of his high excellence and liberal contributions. But his speciality was sustained by a broad knowledge of medicine, to which he gave continued and careful study.

His church had a large place in the thought of Dr. King. His place on Sunday morning, notwithstanding his pressing and exacting practice, was quite regularly filled. His pastor enjoyed his confidence and comradeship. Among his last efforts for the church was the final settlement of the debt on the pastor's home.

At his funeral all faiths combined to pay their tribute of appreciation. White and colored, professional men and the common people, students and day laborers, mingled their tears at his tomb.

In some quiet talks with his pastor during the days shortly before his going Dr. King climbed steadily toward complete trust in God, leaving this final word to his friends: "You may tell my friends, that I have had four profound talks with my pastor. And the way ahead is clear."

It was contrary to his wish that his death be preceded by years of retirement. This he dreaded. He, with declining physical strength, had kept up his practice, exposure during a call to a patient causing his last illness. Still studying, still working, he spent his days.

Dr. King spent himself and his means freely for others. No one knows the extent of his beneficence. But of this we never heard him speak.

As we now look back upon the short years it was our privilege to know him, it seems that some unfinished verses found in the pocket of Dr. S. Hall Young, a pioneer Presbyterian missionary, who had spent fifty years at hard work in Alaska, lay at his post, quite fittingly describe him:

"Let me die working,
Still tackling plans unfinished, tasks undone.
Clean to its end, swift may my race be run,
No lagging steps, no faltering, no shirking;
Let me die thinking.

Let me die thinking.
Let me fare forth still with an open mind,
Fresh secrets to unfold, new truths to find,
My soul undimmed, alert, no question blinking,
Let me die thinking.

Let me die giving.
The substance of life for life's enriching,
Time, things and self to heaven converging,
No selfish thought—loving, redeeming, living,
Let me die giving.

KILLING HOPE!

By Rev. J. H. Moore,
Chaplain Mississippi State Penitentiary

A woman was brought before the Judge who said to her, "There is no use of punishing you, because you can never be reformed. The law will not permit me to give you what you deserve. My advice is for you to go at once and drown yourself in the lake, and then all your kind would do well to follow your example."

The woman in tears, said to the jailor, "I think the Judge is right, and I am going to follow his advice as soon as I am free." But the jailor did not agree with the Judge. He got her sentence suspended, took her to his house, explained the matter to his wife, and they got her work. The last known of the woman she was making good.

What shall we say of the Judge who gave her advice and insult? His advice had better been kept for himself. He is a political accident, an intruder upon humanity, and God hasten the day when such officials will return to the scum from which they came. To insult the fallen is the blackest sin, to strike the man bound and spit upon the helpless is the foulest pollution! Only a loveless and dead soul could use the language this Judge used to a fallen soul. It is the language of a sanctimonious bigot, and the brood is not all dead. If a man is true to his own experience, he will be slow to condemn! We fight on forever and fall, we fall to rise and stumble on with tired feet toward our ideal! If the fallen are to get back to safety, strong and friendly hands must reach out for them. IT IS ONLY THE LOVE THAT LIVES IN HUMAN HEARTS THAT MAKES LIFE TOLERABLE! When man is repudiated by his kind and fellowship is dead, he then turns to the waters of the lake for rest. The jailor had the spirit of Christ. The judge was worse than the woman. He sinned in his strength and in the light. She stumbled in the dark and in her weakness. The light in her soul had burned low, and if it had not been for the jailor, the judge would have put it out forever. It is not any man's business to blot out hope! But let us say, "Not till the sun abandons you, will I abandon you!" "Let no man trust in his own perfection unless he be wiser than Solomon, Holier than David, and stronger than Samson."

"A young man in stripes said to me the other day, 'When I returned home from the Penitentiary, after I was pardoned of my first offense, I found brothers, sisters and mother's hearts closed to me.' What was left for the young man but to come back to Parchman if he found loved ones hearts closed to him? Why should the 'fallen' care, if no one cares for them? If I am not mistaken, the judge's spirit outside the penitentiary is just as bad as anything in the penitentiary. I plead for the boys up here! When the boy comes home let us hold the lamp of hope high. Have there not been times when we faced the gloom, and heaven was draped in black, till we saw love in some heart? If these boys are to see the Light when they come home, they must see it in some loving heart!

DEAN SMITH SAYS—

When the wets first fostered the State Convention Plan rather than the legislatures they pretended to want the will of the people. "Legislators," they said, "are elected on other issues. We want delegates elected on the wet and dry issue alone." Sounded good.

So they inveigled both political parties into calling for "true representative conventions" in each state.

In vain the dries pointed out the tricky, untried, expensive and highly hazardous nature of conventions. They were overridder and this new and never before tried method is our only recourse urged now, behold the crafty schemes by the wets in their efforts to control these conventions. No longer do they ever pretend to be fair. Do they want the voice of the people? Are the conversions to be "true representative"? No—a thousand times, No! As Pat says, "Justice is what I don't want!" So the elections must be manipulated, gerrymandered and the dries are not to be allowed even a sporting chance. Here are some of the plans:

In New York the original plan, drawn by wet Senator Dunningham, called for a State Convention composed of 1530 delegates, so maneuvered that the dries could not possibly have over 300. Later it was modified (on account of expense) to 612 delegates, so arranged that the dries could not have more than 100. Once more it was cut down to 93 delegates—representing the wet cities and the state at large. It is doubtful whether the dries can elect a dozen—or any. Do they want a fair election there?

In Colorado their plan was to call a state convention to meet in 10 days at the state capitol. There were to be 34 delegates elected by the Legislature at once. The plan failed, but you see the purpose. Where did the people have a right to register their vote on the wet and dry issue only?

In Illinois it was proposed that the legislature (wet) declare itself a convention and proceed to repeal. Several other states had more absurdly unfair methods.

All emphasize haste—don't let the dries have time to organize. Don't let prosperity return under prohibition. Don't give the people time to get their second wind! Repeal now while everything is in confusion and minds are befogged. Don't give time for beer to disgust the nation! "On to the conventions, elected by our boards!" cry the wets.

AND THIS IS BEER

WHEREAS, results from the first twenty-four hours' sale of "Real Legal Beer" have convinced us that it possesses all the intoxicating effects of pre-prohibition days, and, therefore, is 90% in violation of the 18th Amendment, inasmuch as beer caused 90% of the drunkenness prior to prohibition; and by the same token constituted 90% of the liquor traffic put out of business by the 18th Amendment; and,

WHEREAS, the old-time saloon has come back with all those features which made it such a curse formerly, despite the pious promises of press and politician that it should never return, the only difference being that it is now called luncheonette, beer-garden, restaurant, parlor, sandwich shoppe, drug store, grocery store, filling station, etc., and,

WHEREAS, we saw hundreds of young men and women stand up to the bars of these saloons, put their feet on the rails, and "blow off the foam" on Holy Thursday, April 13th, and many of whom were thoroughly drunk by seven o'clock that night; and,

WHEREAS, the liquor forces, representing all that is politically corrupt and wholly un-American in our nation, are rapidly gaining control of municipal and Federal government, with the intention of again forcing their surrender to the liquor heads; therefore

BE IT RESOLVED: that we, the Headquarters Committee of the Anti-Saloon League of Louisiana, will use every social, moral, political and economic weapon at our command to fight this race destroyer, and those who, for greed alone and without thought of the welfare of their fellow-man, are promoting beer consumption. Our slogan shall be, "No surrender, no compromise, and no retreat!"

WOMEN CALLED TO THE COLORS

By Mrs. Henry W. Peabody

The action of the United States Senate, which voted by a great majority to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, with no provision against the return of the saloon, is the greatest blow our government has met. At the instigation of the underworld, the old liquor traffic leaders, and a small group of capitalists, the Eighteenth Amendment is to be thrown out of the Constitution, where it was placed by forty-six out of forty-eight states. Dries who compromised in the campaign have been the worst opponents.

Certain groups state: "The Church must not deal with politics." Then the Church had better stop praying, "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." Genuine prayer means genuine effort.

The women of the nation, who must protect the children when men fail, will stand. They assembled in a convention in Washington, Apr. 12-14. Much depends upon this convention. The new administration will probably be in action. Plans for defeating the ratification of this repeal will be presented. It is possible to do it, even though everything seems against us. We can win overwhelmingly if the women will stand together when the question comes to the people of the states. The men in Congress will reap what they sow, but unfortunately, the women and children will also reap, and for the sake of the children no normal woman will refuse to enter into this contest.

The wets show the hypocrisy of their statement, "Never the saloon." They never fought it. They have moved every evil power to bring it back and are prepared to restore old evils at the earliest possible moment. They now assume all responsibility for whatever happens. Will you leave it with them? Then you are responsible.—Christian Advocate.

WHY THE RELIGIOUS WEEKLIES?

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman says: "They exist to serve the spiritual needs of the churches, the nation, and the world. In their columns paramount questions are intelligently discussed. As a rule political partisanship is banned, moral issues are emphasized, and mankind's religious condition illuminated. Nearly all of them have a comprehensive outlook. They acquaint us with the progress of essential reforms, encourage social workers and expose the machinations of selfish and evil-minded groups and their organizations. The substance of half a dozen sermons can as often as not be found on their editorial pages or in their contributed articles. Aged pastors, as well as those in active service, eagerly absorb their contents, and shut-ins of every creed look forward to these heralds of hope and faith. They circulate in familiar and unfamiliar places. The home, the sanctuary, even the prison, enjoy the privileges they confer. The printed word of these messengers of the Lord has manifold entrance which the pulpit cannot command. . . . I conclude by urging every thoughtful citizen, whether a member of the church or not, to subscribe to at least one religious weekly."

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By Rev. W. R. Lott, Contributing Editor

In the army of the nation every man counts ONE. There are no vacant places. The officers expect all to be there and to be ready for the task. How different it is in the church! We work to receive members into the church, and when we look for them they are nowhere to be found. We have lost them. The heavy load falls upon the few who are faithful, and the church grinds on its silt way. What a difference it would make if every member counted ONE! In some church a man and wife count ONE. In others a man, his wife and his children count ONE. In some of our churches it takes ten people to count ONE. So many of our people just do not count at all. Some day the undertaker calls the pastor and says a family wants him to hold a funeral service. The pastor goes. At the quarterly meeting he reports that So and So has died during the quarter. The church does not miss them, for they never made their lives count for even one.

How does the church get its great leaders? In some cases strong men forge ahead by the very force of their personality. They overcome the prejudice which is almost certainly directed to them by beating down opposition and calling people to follow them in a given course. Others, seeing the success of the man, fall into his ways and proclaim him their leader. In other cases wise, mature men see the elements of great leadership in a young man who is humble and unselfish and does not like to brush aside his older friends and helpers. Then it is that these older men take the task in hand, and, by direction and designation to position, place the great brain and heart in place of prominence, where his life and light will count for the church. In the lives of practically all great men of state, of literature, of art and religion there have been mature companions who saw their great value of gifts and life. Seeing these potentialities, they set forth to bring them out for the world. Samuel and David; Elijah and Elisha; Barnabas and Paul; Andrew and Simon Peter are scriptural illustrations. Great leaders have to be given freedom to develop an opportunity to express their gifts. Men of vision and capacity to express what they see are extraordinary personalities. The routine of development does not apply to them. God gives them wings. They should lead because of what the Creator has given to them. It is very encouraging to know that in each generation God endows men and women with gifts for leadership.

It is far easier to do the work than to train some one else to become capable of doing it. In the church we too often fall into that error of the path of least resistance. So many of our churches are poor in leadership and will continue so until we decide to undertake the task of training some leaders. People do not know how to do the work of the church until they are taught. They are more willing than many think, but they would be doubly so if the spark of real ambition is fired in them for worth while tasks. I heard Dr. Gooddell say that he had always been able to secure willing men and women to assist in any project he undertook for the Kingdom. He had the art of securing co-operation. The facts are that we multiply ourselves indefinitely when we train some person to work. There are many people who will compliment the zeal you display; but to receive a lasting reward in their heart you must make them a part of the task. The unused material in our church just at our hand is a challenge which will not be denied. People are sensible in that they will not stay around a place just to see their shadow or see some one else perform. They want to have personal interest in it, and the only way they can secure it is to give of themselves.

FROM ONE OF THE LEAST OF THESE

"I love the Lord because He hath heard my voice and my supplications."

Several months ago I began praying that God would, in some way, make it possible for me to give more to the Kingdom Extension offering, than circumstances indicated I could give. I covenanted with Him to give to that cause any money that He would make it possible for me to earn—by serving or in any other way that He might open up to me (one who is a "Mary" at heart, but a "Martha" by occupation). Soon failing health shattered all hopes of giving in this way. Then I planned to practice every possible self denial (I shall be able to make a small gift in this way.) But the addition of adult members to our family seemed to make any cut in expenses impossible. I am glad that Jesus told us that nothing is impossible with God, for that thought encouraged me to continue to pray.

Imagine my joy when I received a twenty dollar bill awhile back. It wasn't just a twenty dollar bill to me; it was answered prayer. I found joy, too, in the proof of what I believed to be true: that God's arm is not shortened nor His power limited by the depression. For this gift for missions started on its way to me when every bank was closed and the depression was at its worst.

When I received that money the needs of our family had been pressing upon my attention—needs that I couldn't crowd into our salary, even with "advance figuring." Of course, God would not have us ignore nor side step the material needs of our loved ones. But I am glad that Jesus opened the way right straight through them in this statement: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you."

Present my personal needs and the cause of the Kingdom and I can give with utter abandon. Present the needs of my loved ones and the cause of the Kingdom and I can give with the same love (I believe it is an intensified love for God that gives in the face of the needs of loved ones). But it is therein that I rejoice that I can claim that promise in their behalf. For Jesus whispers in my heart, "Everything will be all right. I really meant it when I said, 'Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you.' I offer it as your opportunity to give in spite of all hindrances. Hasn't your own experience always proved it true?"

And my heart echoes back, "ALWAYS!"

A MEDITATION

By Rev. J. M. Alford

Alone I wandered 'mong the live-oak trees;
I heard sweet voices of nature's song birds,
I felt charms of ocean's bracing breeze, too wonderful to be expressed in words.
And meditating on His plan sublime
I wondered how man by sin degraded
Could ever in his image shine!
'Twas in this state of deep meditation
I came to admire His wondrous beauty;
The enraptured thought of his creation
Inspired within me a sense of duty,
To walk the path the saints have trod
And learn to think the thoughts of God.

including the Old Testament; for I don't see how I can spare it and several of my Jewish friends like Abraham, Isaiah, Ezekiel, Amos and that man who wrote the Book of Job. Do not know why he decided to keep the New Testament. It was written by Jews, too, wasn't it? Just one writer who was not a Jew, and he wasn't a German. And Jesus' mother was a lovely little Jewish woman named Mary. If he is going to adopt a new Bible why not substitute Nietzsche for the New Testament? Then it will be all German.

But before I get too far with this I suspect I had better advise that while Mussolini and Hitler are wearing their black and brown shirts we had better not tear off our own "hickory stripes" too soon. Didn't I tell you some time ago that in the Versailles Treaty the other "powers" promised Germany that they would disarm along as they had required of her? Well, they haven't done it. And take my word or not, that treaty is at the bottom of a lot of the trouble in Germany right now.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. W. W. Perry, pastor at Cotton Valley, La., in a good letter sends some renewals.

Rev. W. R. Hammontree, Amory, Miss., is attending the Vanderbilt School of Religion during April.

Rev. M. M. Black, our pastor at Woodville, Miss., sends a list of renewals for which we give thanks.

The bulletin of our church at Webb, Miss., where Rev. W. T. Phillips is pastor, indicates a going concern.

Dr. P. J. Rutledge, Millsaps College, taught a Standard Class in Worship at Aberdeen, Miss., April 23 to 28.

Dr. Geo. F. Welfeld, President of Whitworth College, recently filled the pulpit of our church at Lake Providence, La.

Rev. T. H. Dorsey is very much in demand for Commencement sermons. He recently preached for the schools at Tremont and Eupora, Miss.

Rev. W. C. Galceran, Jr., is assisting his father, Rev. W. C. Galceran, in revivals at Duncan and Alligator Churches beginning April 23rd.

Norman Bradley and John Kimball, of Jackson, Miss., were re-elected Editor and Business manager respectively of the "Purple and White," Millsaps College student publication.

"Victory of the Soul Over Death" was the subject of Rev. E. H. Cunningham's Easter sermon at our First Church, Greenwood, Miss. The evening hour was given over to an Easter cantata.

The new church at Merigold, Miss., was dedicated on April 23rd, Rev. W. W. Jones, pastor. This is one of the attractive, modern church buildings in that territory of the delta. Rev. W. R. Lott preached the sermon.

Mrs. Geo. W. Huff, widow of one of our late superannuates, living at Bogalusa, La., sends a good contribution, accompanied by prayers, to the Advocate. We are deeply grateful for this generous support and confidence.

The Holmes County Junior College Glee Club furnished the Easter Music at the evening Easter service at Lexington, Miss. The pastor, Rev. J. E. Stephens, preached a sermon that night on the subject: "Why I believe in Men."

"I enjoy reading the Advocate and I think you are giving us, in spite of its condensed form, one of the best papers of its history. I am always with you for a better Advocate and a wider circulation." Rev. S. M. Butts, Abbeville, Miss.

Mr. D. J. Crichtett, Powers & Crichtett Lumber Co., Standard, La., feels that our letter to Mr. Roosevelt commends the President a bit too strongly. He had not read the "postscript" when he wrote. We appreciate very much these letters from our readers.

"I have been a subscriber of the Advocate for about 50 years, and I could not get along without it. May it continue to prosper." Do you recognize that voice? It is Hon. D. W. Heidelberg, Shuhuta, Miss. Brother Heidelberg always has his shoulder to the Advocate wheel.

Ex-Governor Pat M. Neff of Texas, now president of Baylor University, is scheduled to deliver the Commencement Address at Whitworth College, May 23. Governor Neff enjoys wide renown, having become during the World War, a national figure in education and industry.

Rev. Percy Vaughn, our good pastor up here at Roxie, Miss., has renewed his subscription and sent good words to the Advocate. We have learned that Brother Vaughn is working off some of his surplus springtime energy by erecting some fences about his place. We enter him as the champion fence builder.

Rev. and Mrs. B. L. Sutherland received a gracious welcome at Brookhaven recently as they mingled among old friends. Brother Sutherland was in the city for a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Whitworth College. He is now presiding elder of the Jackson District, formerly having served the Brookhaven District.

Mr. J. C. H. McKinney, Ruston, La., thinks that President Roosevelt might be benefited by reading the recent editorial letter in the Advocate addressed to him. He, however, withholds complete endorsement of Mr. Roosevelt until he sufficiently proves himself, keeping in mind some former steps of the President that he feels that he cannot endorse.

Rev. and Mrs. S. N. Young, Foxworth, Miss., announce the marriage of their daughter Lois to Mr. Leo Johnson of Philadelphia, Miss. The ceremony took place at the Foxworth Methodist Church at noon, Saturday, April 8, the father of the bride officiating. Mr. Johnson is a young business man of Philadelphia, Miss., where they will make their home.

The Aberdeen District Parsonage has been made one of the most attractive homes in Aberdeen. It has a new asbestos shingle roof, the outside and inside have been painted and the rooms papered. Rev. and Mrs. T. H. Dorsey have taken personal interest in making the parsonage attractive. It is located in a very desirable residence section of the town.

"Adoption of a four point system of grading in reports to students and parents in place of the percentage basis to put emphasis on mastery of subject matter instead of grades was approved at the regular meeting of the Millsaps College faculty this week, following a report on the improvement of instruction headed by Prof. Frank C. Jenkins of the Department of Education.

Keep your eyes open for short and pointed articles on Prohibition from the pen of Dr. R. E. Smith, Dean Emeritus, Centenary College, Shreveport, La. They will probably appear under the title, "Dean Smith Says." Dr. Smith is one of our Contributing Editors. What he has to say about the Bible, Prohibition, and several other items, is a word of authority. Do not miss him.

Rev. W. F. Henderson, Sr., a noble superannuate living at Cedar Grove, La., the other day slipped a warm hand into that of the editor and left a Dollar Bill saying, "Renew my subscription." In a piece of fatherly counsel, always appreciated by this editor, he said, "Do not be worried if your readers disagree with you. It is enough for you to know that they are reading your paper."

Attention Pastors! We are counting on you to see that each of your members is given an opportunity to subscribe to his Church paper. The religious press is an important agency in the Advancement of God's Kingdom. March 15-May 15 is the period set aside by the patronizing Conferences of the Advocate for this purpose. May we depend upon you to look after our interests in your community? Thank you.

Our church at Belzoni, Miss., Rev. S. L. Pope, pastor, had a great Holy Week service and Easter program. Good Friday was marked by "The Three Hour Service" in which a number participated, following the "Seven Words from the Cross" as the basis for the program. An interesting and commendable feature of the occasion is the fact that the business houses of the town closed for the Good Friday service.

We have just learned that Rev. H. M. Ellis, pastor at Eutaw, Ala., recently passed away. Brother Ellis was a Mississippi boy, son of the late Rev. G. R. Ellis of that Conference. Dr. Slaughter, presiding elder of the Selma District; and Dr. Marshall, presiding elder of the Greensboro District; assisted by Rev. J. V. Bennett, our pastor at Booneville, Miss., and a boyhood friend of Brother Ellis, conducted the funeral.

Rev. W. H. Lewis, Moss Point, Miss., rises to report that the work moves forward at his place. In a little personal word he invites the editor to visit him saying, "I will show you one of the prettiest churches and parsonages, and give you the opportunity to preach to one of the most attentive and appreciative congregations in the Mississippi Conference." Now that is hard to resist. We congratulate this preacher and his noble people.

I told you some time ago about the prominence the time-honored hen is to have in the World's Fair at Chicago. Old "Bossy" is going to come in for her share too. They are to play her praises with the Clavilux. Do you know what a "Clavilux" is? Now aren't you behind? Well, I don't know either. They say it is a kind of melodeon that plays with colors instead of tones. As I am no musician I'll have to ask you to turn to the article in this number, "The Clavilux and the Cow." You have heard of Gandhi and the Goat.

The March 15-May 15 "Keep the Advocate Saved" circulation campaign is fast drawing to a close. There is only two more weeks left in which to complete the task. Every Methodist should be given an opportunity to subscribe to his Conference organ. The Church needs the Advocate in its efforts to combat the many evils that secure first page prominence in the secular press. No Christian home should be without its Church paper. Every pastor and reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate is urged to assist us in increasing the number of readers to the official organ of our three great Conferences. Advocate the Advocate.

Recently we had a letter from Rev. J. W. Faulk, our pastor at Abbeville, La., telling of the going home of his father. Down to his departure for the better world his faith remained steady and strong. Shortly following his own death his Brother Ben, to whom he had been so closely bound in the bundle of life, passed on to join him in the happy land. There was a difference of only two and a half years in their ages. The two brothers married sisters within two months of the same date and settled in less than one-half mile of each other where they reared their families. Then within sixty hours each departed for the better world.

Dr. J. Lloyd Decell, pastor of Galloway Memorial, Jackson, Miss., while in New Orleans on business, called at the Advocate office, accompanied by Rev. M. K. Miller, pastor of Grace church, Jackson. We deeply regret being out at the time.

There were some slight errors in our report of the funeral service of Rev. W. A. Hays. We learn that the following is a more correct statement. Rev. H. G. Hawkins, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, was in charge; Rev. W. T. Griffin and Rev. J. B. Cain read the scripture lessons, Rev. W. J. Ferguson led the prayer, Dr. J. Lloyd Decell delivered the funeral address, and Revs. D. E. Vickers and C. C. Clark assisted in the committal service.

Mrs. Janie Drake Cooper, for twenty years connected with Whitworth College as dean and as wife of Dr. I. W. Cooper, is writing a pageant portraying the history of the education of women in Mississippi. The pageant will be staged by students of Whitworth and M. S. C. W. at the 1933 session of the Mississippi Conference which will be held at Brookhaven in November. Special fitness attaches to this undertaking of Mrs. Cooper not only because of her long and happy connection with Whitworth College, the oldest woman's college in the state; but because she is the granddaughter of Dr. B. M. Drake, who was one of the first presidents of Elizabeth Academy, chartered by the Mississippi legislature in 1818, and reputed to be the first institution ever chartered for the higher education of women. In the pageant Elizabeth Academy, Whitworth College and M. S. C. W. will be linked together. Whitworth is the successor of Elizabeth Academy, and Ann Peytor Coleman, a graduate of Whitworth, founded M. S. C. W., the first tax supported college for women.

CONCERNING THE DEATH OF REV. W. A. HAYS

My Dear Dr. Raulins: As the only son of the late Rev. W. A. Hays, pastor of the Jefferson Street Methodist church, Natchez, Miss., who met his death tragically in a road washout near Meadville, Miss., on the night of April 13, I desire to write the Advocate and ask you to express the family's appreciation for the many kindnesses extended to us in our bereavement.

A people could not have been more thoughtful and considerate than those of my father's congregation and the citizens of Natchez. Everything possible was done by them to help us bear our sorrow, and we are deeply affected by their actions. He was most happy in his last work and his people were in love with him.

To the people of Waynesboro, where he spent five delightful years, and where his body rests, we desire to express our thanks. It was their request that he be buried there, where within a radius of 75 miles he spent all but four months of his ministry.

The large congregations which attended his funeral service in Natchez, and the one in Waynesboro, attested the high esteem in which he was held. In spite of the fact that his burial took place on Easter Sunday and many ministers could not attend, there were 35 of his associates present. Every charge he served was represented.

Having been reared in a Methodist parsonage with a Christian father and a saintly mother, I desire to state that the Methodist itinerancy offers children the best of home training.

To our family, the Methodist ministers of the Mississippi Conference are one great brotherhood, to which we can go for solace and comfort in our loss.

Before coming to a close of this letter we, also, desire to express our appreciation for the many kindnesses extended to us by Rev. J. O. Ware and the citizens of Meadville, where my father lost his life.

Our hearts are indeed grateful to Rev. H. G. Hawkins, his presiding elder; Dr. J. L. Decell, his life-long friend, and all ministers who took part in the funeral services at Natchez and Waynesboro.

We ask for the prayers of his brethren, that God's sustaining grace may be with his widow, daughter and son, and use our lives in the service we think the Rev. W. A. Hays so well represented.

In closing, I desire to pass on my father's life philosophy, with the hope that it be of great value to some reader:

"Put first things first."

Most sincerely,

RALPH HAYS.

REV. A. L. McQUEEN PASSES

Just as we were about to close our forms and go to press with this number of the Advocate we learned, through Rev. R. T. Pickett, of the death of Rev. A. L. McQueen, a local elder of the Louisiana Conference and former pastor of our church at Springfield, on Sunday, April 23.

PREACHERS' MEETING, SARDIS-GRENADE DISTRICT, APRIL 11, 1933

The group assembled at Davis Chapel Church, Sardis Charge, at 10 a.m. Devotional services were fittingly conducted by the Pastor-host, Rev. R. A. Grisham. The roll was called with each minister answering by naming a book which he had read since the last meeting. Eighteen answered to the roll call. A period of thirty minutes was given to an open discussion of, "Books That Have Helped Me, and How." A very helpful discussion was entered into by Revs. J. H. Felts, W. L. Stormont, F. H. McGee and others. The sermon at the eleven o'clock hour was delivered by Rev. W. L. Robinson. It was a message which made us search our hearts and led us to a greater desire to render more effective and sacrificial service in the Kingdom. It was a timely message.

The people of Davis Chapel served a bountiful and delicious meal to the enjoyment and appreciation of the group.

The afternoon session was opened by Rev. W. S. ("Mister") Shipman leading the devotional. First topic, "Is There Still a Need for Dogma-

A WORD OF APPRECIATION

Dear Editor: Please give me space in the Advocate to express the appreciation of the Board of Missions, North Mississippi Conference, for the splendid support that the preachers have given us in the promotion of our Conference missionary work. One hundred and three preachers have offered their services for revivals, promising to give the offering made during one meeting to the Board of Missions. We have plenty of preachers available for meetings, but pastors must invite these brethren. May I suggest that we (pastors) use those who have offered their services to the Board in our meetings if possible? As you arrange a meeting place, time and preacher, notify me, that I may keep a record of this meeting. The following is a list of those who have returned their cards since the last list was published:

B. F. Hammond, T. L. Oakes, R. P. Neblet, T. B. Thrower, W. M. Langley, W. W. Hartsfield, H. E. Carter, F. H. McGee, C. A. Parks, Melville Johnson, W. F. Rogers, C. L. Rogers, N. L. Threet.

DR. TRUETT ON PROHIBITION

Appearing before a committee of the Texas Legislature which had under consideration a bill to repeal the prohibition law, Dr. Geo. W. Truett of Dallas said in part:

"License of the liquor traffic, in any form, is fundamentally wrong. A true prophet of God can not be silent when the moral and immoral forces meet on the great field of battle. This is a great moral question, one that goes to the very foundation of the social order. Moral forces can not sit down and see a license, high or low, in the liquor laws."

Referring to the saloon of former days, Dr. Truett said:

"I have seen its wreckage and have been in the midst of its heartbreaks in Dallas. The subtle word is being passed around that there is more drinking now than in the days of the saloon. I have seen more drunken men in Dallas on one Saturday than on all the days since the Eighteenth Amendment was written into the Constitution."

"The cry that the prohibition laws can not be enforced is the cry of the red-shirted anarchist. I don't believe men's bodies should be sold to run the government; I do not believe that women's bodies should be sold in houses of prostitution to support our schools. You build a town with blood money when you build it on immorality."

"When the American people shall be heard from, it is my conviction they will say: 'Let the Eighteenth Amendment stay where we put it.' These are days that demand unselfish patriots to lift our country out of the murky bewilderment into which it has been plunged. Soberness and the highest happiness of all our people are things worth dying for."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

We have just finished holding, this week, a series of educational institutes in the Sardis-Grenada District. The meetings were arranged and called by the presiding elder, Rev. W. L. Stormont. In the four zone meetings 35 local churches were represented by over 225 workers. The entire day was given to a discussion of the question, "Why Christian Education in the Local Church?" One of the chief features of the program was the splendid address of the presiding elder at the close of the morning program. Plans were made to follow up these meetings. It is felt that these gatherings are of great value in carrying out the work of the church.

The splendid way in which the Fourth Sunday Missionary Offering is coming in is most heartening. Some churches are delinquent for the last two months, but most every one has remitted the offering. Some new churches have joined the ranks. Many others should do so. If we carry out the plans of our Board in this Conference, and if we meet the demands that are being made upon us this year, more of our churches must join in this worthy cause. This is the law and plan of the Church instigated by the General Conference. Every church should find a way to participate in this worthy cause. If you are not making your church missionary today you will not have a church tomorrow. Only missionary churches are living churches.

We have recently held a nice standard class at Durant. It was well attended and a most interesting class. We have had the leadership of the church school in this class and it will help the local church. Rev. W. B. Baker and his loyal workers are doing fine work at Durant.

Have You Done These?

Have you ordered Sunday School Day programs and made your plans to observe this day, April 30, or some other suitable day?

Have you planned to have a daily vacation church school during this vacation in your local church or community?

Have you planned to have a Cokesbury Training Class, or Standard Training Class or school, or made any provision for training the leaders of your local church?

Are you having regular meetings of your Local Church Board of Christian Education to plan and administer the program of Christian education in your local church?

If you need help in any of these things, write to me.

Pray for us and the work.

R. G. LORD.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

The Missionary offerings for the month of March were better than February. They are still way behind last year, for which we are regretful; but the improvement is appreciated by all concerned. It looks now that our missionary offerings from the Conference will be about one-third off from last year. This is to be regretted, but should not interfere with our doing all we can for this cause. All of our work is in a plight. Help is needed on every hand. We are pressed every way we turn. Without God all is hopeless. With God we will succeed, not as we had planned, but as He has planned. Let us go forward with God.

Easter Sunday we journeyed to Pascagoula, to be with Rev. and Mrs. G. P. McKeown for a few days. Our journey was most pleasant. We had a good class in the Educational Work of the Small Church. We enjoyed this very much. We appreciated the opportunity of resting some and being away from the stress and strain of things.

We were so happy to find Brother McKeown so widely loved and highly appreciated. His ministry here at Pascagoula has been a fruitful one and his people appreciate his work. I was told by the official family that all congregations were improving and that Easter saw the largest congregation that they had ever seen in the building.

Monday we were visitors in the parsonage home at Vancleve. Brother and Mrs. McKeown and Brother Porter were also present. We surely did enjoy this visit. Mrs. Simpson makes every one feel at home and always serves such a delightful meal.

Brother Simpson is leading in one of the finest pieces of work ever undertaken in this territory. He is planning to have a Young People's Camp and a Christian Adventure Camp. He will use the Campgrounds for this effort. Certainly this will lead the way in a venture that should be most helpful to circuits, and even cities where camps are close by. I am thrilled with the prospects. When this is over I am asking him to write up all the steps so that others may have some guidance as to the way to proceed.

I do not believe I have ever seen more beautiful roses than are open now. The world is certainly a beautiful world, and with just a little help from man, how sweet and pleasant to live among beautiful roses, with their sweet faces and fragrance.

Thursday we journeyed to Quitman, where the Meridian District Conference was in session; 93 attended the district conference, besides local visitors. Resolutions commending Brother O'Neil were adopted. The Christian Education program made a good impression. The Whitworth girls are to be commended for their gracious program.

Dr. Cowen carried me to Jackson in time for me to catch the train and get home Friday night. The entertainment of the conference was most happy. Most of us felt that we would like to linger awhile. I heard most complimentary reports of the preaching by Rev. C. C. Clark and Rev. W. C. M. Baggett.

The early reports from Sunday School Day cheered our hearts. More money has been received at this time than last year. We did not expect this.

We are exceedingly anxious that we hear from every church at this point. We are trusting that the program he given and that the people get its message. We go forward when we understand and know about the work.

Mr. D. B. Jones reports that his Sunday school, Pearl Chapel, has increased in enrollment 35, and that the attendance has moved up to 90 per cent. I call this progress indeed. I only hope that a vast host of other schools can go and do likewise. What a wonderful thing this would be indeed and in truth.

Some way we must reach the unreached.

Many plans have been tried. It takes hard work, much prayer and lots of faith. May all of us be so endowed until we will reach all needy persons.

Pray for the work and the workers.
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

It has come to our attention most forcibly of late that there is tremendous authority, power and responsibility vested in the Local Church Board of Christian Education, and we are wondering if it would not be well to remind the church again and again of this fact.

Does your church have a local Board of Christian Education? If not, why not? If so, does this board function as it should? Do the members of this Board realize that it is one of the major boards of the church, of importance equal to that of the board of stewards, or the board of trustees? If you will study the 13th chapter of the 1930 Discipline, you will begin to realize how great the task of the Local Church Board of Christian Education.

In the April Church School Magazine, page 203, there is a very concise and helpful article outlining the duties of the local board of Christian Education—also suggestions for the April meeting. By the way, how often does your board meet—once a year?

In relation to the work of the young people, we plead that local boards get busy and really supervise the program of Christian Education in their respective churches. The whole "new plan" (which is now almost old!) is a failure if this board does not function properly. This does not mean, of course, that the young people's division's officers have less responsibility than formerly, but merely that they should receive adult co-operation, and that their program is a vitally important part of the whole. The president of the Young People's Division is an ex-officio member of the Board, and hence is the link between it and the young people. The Young People's Division president reports quarterly to this board, on the same blank used to report to the District Director of Young People's Work and to the quarterly conference.

Again, we may plead that the local Board of Christian Education not use its authority until it is striving, at least, to meet its responsibility. The Board can be a great power for helping young people to see the bigness of the program of Christian Education if its members will be understanding and helpful, and will study their job.

We had hoped to have reports from every district this quarter, but to date—April 20—we have received six. We hope to have received the other two by the time you read this. We acknowledged the report of Carl Lueg last week. The others are: Mildred Townsend, for Alexandria District; Collins Lipscomb, for Baton Rouge District; Katherine Horton, for Minden District; Marjorie Haggart, for Lake Charles District, and Grace Jones for Ruston District. This is the best record thus far made this year.

Mrs. Katherine Horton reports a very fine meeting of the J. O. Y. Union of Minden District, held at Cotton Valley, April 16, with 126 present from Benton, Pleasant Valley, Cotton Valley, Heflin (newly organized, with 18 present), Bethel, and Sibley. Eleven churches reported having observed Young People's Day, with a total of $19.61. The program was furnished by the Beginners' and Primary Departments of Cotton Valley. The May meeting will be an all-day Assembly rally at Pleasant Valley.

We have been favored with a copy of "The Pilot," official organ of the Louisville Conference Young People's organization, through Miss Marlanna Lawlor, its editor and business manager. It is a printed publication, and contains much of interest.

Can you realize that Assemblies are less than two months away? We hope you are saving your pennies and nickels against that day, and are planning to be there with flying colors. Don't forget the dates—June 13-19, the Christian Adventure Assembly; June 20-26, the Young People's Assembly.

How is your poster-making contest coming? Have you held your local contest? And your Union contest? We would like so much to hear how it is coming. We have heard of several splendid posters, and want to hear of others.

Have you thought of some special training for your intermediates? Why not include a Christian Adventure Course for them in your Daily Vacation Bible School this summer? With the school situation as it is, the children and young people are going to have a long vacation ahead of them, in which there will be ample time for things of this sort to use profitably. Also, why not an institute for your young people?

CONFERENCE NEWS

Louisiana

"WHODATHUNKIT"

There was once a new town mapped out and before it was named, a rich old miser was asked for a contribution. So far in excess was his generous gift of what the inhabitants imagined, one old man in surprise said, "Who'd a thunk it," and the town was ever after called "Whodathunkit."

This seems to us a most appropriate name for our twenty-third annual session of the Woman's Missionary Society of Louisiana, for first of all it had to be postponed for two weeks and coming just previous to Easter which is a busy time with all the churches. Then there came the Bank Moratorium which affected personal and Missionary finances and there was a general "tale of woe" and the members did not feel in the proper frame of mind to hold a Conference. Another reason was that it became necessary to crowd into two short days all of the business of the year, the plans, promotions, and the spiritual uplift. Pessimism reigned supreme and everywhere one heard "there won't be fifty delegates." However, it was decided to go on with the Conference and the Monroe people cordially threw open their doors and made ready. Much to our surprise there were 167 delegates registered and every officer and District Secretary, 22 in number, a larger delegation than we have had in years. Moreover, there was a larger number of visitors. In fact, the Monroe church was crowded at every service and the evening session had to be held in a large School Auditorium where there was not an empty seat, for the beautiful pageant Tuesday evening.

Was it worthwhile? Ask those who attended. Thanks to fine executives like Mrs. Sexton and Mrs. Ledbetter, while every moment was filled from 8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m., so well was the work planned and timed, everything went on like clockwork, and there seemed no rush and excitement. As for the inspiration, it was all in a nut shell, but oh how wonderful it was. To hear what the Districts have accomplished in spite of hard times, through their secretaries, to listen to Miss Hooper, one of her co-workers, (who, by the way, is one of our own Louisiana girls), and to the little girl who has a scholarship at McDonnell Wesley House; to laugh and cry with Miss Stroup over a sample of one of her busy days at St. Mark's; to have Dr. Scott, pastor of the Monroe church, to tell us in his eloquent way what it means to be a burning and a shining light, and to have our own sunny, happy Julia Reid with us to tell of her work in Cuba, and to know, through Miss Mary Freeman, the work of Jubilee Inn were enough to make us glad to have been there. When we say that "the half has never been told" for ours was the great privilege to have that wonderful woman, Mary Culler White, speak to us several times, and that was worth the entire Conference. So rich with experience, having spent 32 years in China, so full of enthusiasm, so humorous, so gracious, so friendly, so bright, so filled with the Holy Spirit—there is only one Mary Culler White, and we had her and every soul who attended the Conference is singing peons of joy. In the store house of our Memory, this Conference will ever stand out as the transfiguration must have stood out to Peter, James, and John, and we say with them, "Master it was good to be there."

Mrs. George S. Brown,
State Recording Secretary.

The meeting of Zone No. 3 of the Monroe District, was held at Winnboro, at the church. The auditorium was prettily decorated for the occasion.

Mrs. Prickett, zone leader, presided. The meeting was opened with a hymn, "Lead On, O King Eternal," and followed with prayer by Rev. H. W. Rickey. Mrs. Prickett chose "Missions" as the topic of the program. Rev. White, of Wisner, gave the devotional, Acts 11th chapter, as scripture, and made a most enlightening comment; then Mrs. Jack Givens and Florence Diamond rendered beautifully a vocal duet. The leader conducted a quiz on Missionaries and Deaconesses. The secretary read a most interesting letter from one of our missionaries in China.

Mrs. Metcalf, in her talk, urged societies to bring up Standard of Excellence. At this time, the Young Woman's Society presented a splendid playlet entitled "The Land of Mission Study." Mrs. Hatch showed very interesting exhibits from Africa. The reports of each society were made and the program was closed with the benediction by Rev. Mr. Cain, after which the guests were invited to the lower floor for a delightful social hour. The tea table was a picture of loveliness as the guests were served the delectable plate luncheon featuring the yellow and green color theme.

During this hour two vocal selections were beautifully rendered, a trio, "The End of a Perfect Day," by Misses Taliaferro and Harrison, was dedicated to Mrs. H. W. Rickey, and a solo, "Down by the Old Mill Stream," by Mrs. Jack Givens, was dedicated to Mrs. W. M. Gulre.

There was a splendid attendance and Gilbert W. M. S. extended the invitation for the next meeting.

Zone No. 5, New Orleans District, held its regular quarterly meeting at Franklin, with fifty members and ten visitors present.

The meeting opened with a hymn. The devotional was led by Mrs. Nuttall, of Bayou Blue.

Miss Hooper was then led on to tell what was done with the Week of Prayer money. This is being used for repairs on the school and building of needed rooms at MacDonell.

Mrs. Helius Martin, of Houma, who has charge of thirteen small children in Hope Cottage, gave a talk. She told of the work being done among the Indians.

Mrs. Brumby, of Franklin, rendered a lovely organ solo.

Mrs. Harper, of Minden, gave a short talk on the work there.

Mrs. Seldel, of Baldwin, spoke on the World Outlook—what it meant to her and why it's name was changed.

Mrs. Pharr read a poem by Lucy Wright Meyer, entitled "The Mother." Mrs. Brumby gave another organ solo.

Each officer was called upon to tell the duties of their office, which was responded to very nicely.

Another hymn was sung and Brother Wier dismissed, after which all proceeded to the home of Mrs. Jim Peterman and participated in a very delicious lunch.

THE CLAVILUX AND THE COW

The Clavilux, or Color Organ, an innovation of sensational importance in the show world, will provide one of the striking features of the exhibit of the dairy industry at Chicago's 1933 World's Fair—A Century of Progress Exposition.

This unique instrument, which plays on color as a musical organ plays on tones, will be installed in a cyclorama amphitheatre in the Dairy Building by Thomas Wilfrid, its inventor, who will personally direct its operation.

In the cyclorama amphitheatre, which is the central feature of the Dairy Building, spectators will face a screen ninety feet long and forty feet high. From projectors above, streams of color flow over the screen in masses, shades, blendings, sudden oppositions of different colors, now in pastel tones, then in clashes of startling contrast.

The Clavilux, in combination with music, pictures and voice, will be used in a pageant drama, "The Foster Mother of Man," the story of man's dependence on his cow. The music will be that of one of the greatest symphony orchestras in America. The Color Organ effects will be synchronized to play over the pictorial effects of a series of episodes.

Five episodes will be dramatized. The first will depict primitive man and the worship of the cow. The second will be the coming of the cow to the Plymouth colony of the Pilgrims. The story continues with trail makers crossing the great plains, with faithful milk cows following the covered wagons. America today will be the fourth episode, with the scene showing how the beneficent products of the dairy are distributed by modern facilities, science sanitation and refrigeration in their variety of products essential to the vitality and strength of the race.

The final episode will be "The Perfect Family," illustrating the value of dairy products and a climax with colorful effects built up by the Clavilux. The pageant-drama will require seven to eight minutes to present.

A FLOWER TO THE LIVING

On Sunday morning, April 9, during the closing exercises of our Sunday school, an elderly man walked into the auditorium, and I thought I knew him, having remembered seeing him one time before. I was not mistaken. He was the oldest living member of the North Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. J. Brooks.

He was in Jackson for a meeting of a fraternal order and to hear Dr. H. C. Morrison, who at the time was engaged in a revival at Galloway Memorial Church. "Much water" (rain) kept him from Galloway Memorial this Sunday morning service, so he was asked by the pastor to speak to the people, and "did he speak!" What a voice! How he moved the people to tears! Three men had just testified to have been converted since Conference, and how these men drank in his words, with others, both young and old. He spoke of quitting, as his time was up, but he was asked to continue, and continue he did; and the people assembled at the "youngest and growingest" church in Jackson (Glerdale) Sunday morning, April 9, 1933, will long remember this venerable patriarch and proclaimer of good news.

As a pastor and brother, I wanted to lay this trophy at the feet of this older brother of mine, for his services cannot be evaluated in earthly terms. One man at the altar the next service, who has recently been converted, praying for his brother-man to be converted, was heard to say in his prayer: "Lord, keep me through life that I may be able to have the experience in old age as the man who spoke to us this morning."

God bless you, Brother Brooks, and preserve your spirit, soul, and body blameless unto the coming of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. "Faithful is He that calleth you, who also will do it."

Happier than ever.

IMPORTANT---READ

Business throughout the nation was at a standstill during the recent bank holiday proclaimed by President Roosevelt immediately following his inaugural. This could hardly have been otherwise.

Many banks, however, have since re-opened and are conducting a normal business, and each day finds scores of others doing likewise.

Through it all the Advocate has continued its weekly visits to your homes, despite the fact that collections were not forthcoming. To do this means that pay rolls must be met as usual in order to keep the presses going.

More than 2,000 of our friends have allowed their subscriptions to expire, thus cutting our normal receipts better than $3,500. It is to these good friends of the Advocate that we call for immediate co-operation, and urge that each one forward us by return mail the small amount of $1.50 which will renew your church paper for another year. It amounts to less than three cents per week.

This is no time to call a halt. The Church was never more in need of the Religious Press than it is today. No Christian home should be without its Church paper.

Don't put it off any longer. Send in your renewal today. The label on your paper tells the tale. If it reads April, 1933, or any date prior thereto, your subscription has expired and $1.50 should be forwarded to our office to cover a year's renewal. Send money order wherever possible. Thank you.

SMOKING ON TRAINS

It is gratifying to learn that a poll of fifty thousand passengers on a certain Eastern railroad showed that seventy-six per cent favored the present system used in practically all trains of having non-smoking as well as smoking cars. Only eight per cent favored smoking in all cars. The non-smoking travelers of today frequently have to endure vicarious smoking on both trains and busses. But the fact remains that however "free" the offenders may feel when they smoke in a non-smoking car, they cannot escape the censure which is given to those who deliberately put their own pleasure above the comfort of their neighbors. Such lack of consideration used to be a sign of ill breeding. Perhaps it still is.—Nashville Advocate.

THE WORLD NEEDS A NEW START

By Dr. L. B. Weigle

The world needs a new start. If men had begun back in the days of Moses to throw money into the sea at the rate of one dollar in each second, sixty dollars a minute, and that process of waste had been kept up continuously for twenty-four hours a day for three hundred and sixty-five days in each year up to the present moment, there would have been thrown away less than one-half of the direct cost of the World War of 1914-1918. We could go on throwing away money at that rate for 3,500 years longer before the total waste would equal that cost. Beneath all issues concerning capitalistic institutions, technological unemployment and the equating of production and distribution there abides as the primary reason for the world's desperate plight the colossal waste of its resources in the World War. It is an open question whether mankind can endure; it seems certain that it cannot survive another such catastrophe.

Yet everywhere the nations are persisting the old diplomacy of retaliation—eye for eye, tooth for tooth, pound for pound, dollar for dollar. Everywhere new tariff barriers are rising which prevent the interchange of goods and threaten the peace of the world. Everywhere rulers and legislative assemblies loudly proclaim their devotion to peace, yet are preparing for war on a scale greater than ever before contemplated. The representatives of the nations meet for conference on the reduction of armaments in a spirit of mutual suspicion, propose minor adjustments with a great show of concession, and part with nothing accomplished.

We shall never get a new start until one of the great nations has courage enough, intelligence enough, and good will enough to break the vicious circle of distrust, rivalry, fear, and mounting armaments in which the peoples of the world are now caught. Many of us have hoped that that nation might be America. Can we not, strong as we are in resources and in position, fair-minded and generous as we wish to be, cease basing our relations with other nations upon the principle of retaliation? Can we not deal with other peoples as we would have them deal with us? If mankind is to escape the ruin that threatens it, the diplomacy of today and tomorrow must take more seriously the principles of the Sermon on the Mount.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

WELL, THEY'VE DONE IT. "The Houston expedition today flew over Mount Everest, the highest mountain in the world."

There the old mountain, about six miles high, has been standing for all these centuries. Party after party has been organized and fitted out for the climb, but they have all been turned back, and Everest has kept her secret. Even aeroplanes, thus far, had not scaled her peak. Almost every other impossible thing, South Pole, North Pole, across the Atlantic by air, around the world by air, radio, and so forth, had been done.

When those seeking her heights at great peril to themselves have been asked why they wished to climb Everest they have mumbled something about discoveries that might be valuable. But nobody took any too seriously these explanations. The real answer was, "Everest has not been scaled, and she just stands there daring us to do it. We must call her hand. We won't be bluffed." It was something that had not been done.

What are we to do now with Mount Everest conquered? To what can the adventurer turn his genius and attention? Life will shortly become dull. Geographically and horizontally, we seem to have reached the limit.

I propose a few Mount Everests in the perpendicular and spiritual realm. These will require just a bit more of genius, sacrifice and daring. It will require social and moral engineering. One of these peaks is International Relations. It still hides its head among the clouds of prejudice and ill-will and hate. But those marked by these ailments are at once disqualified for the climb. And there is the peak of Race Prejudice. Have you seen it? Doesn't it tower? And there is the old peak of friendly and co-operative relations in Industry. Pretty steep all of them. But they challenge as did Mount Everest.

Let us organize some parties and set out. What if we don't get to the top? We can open a path part of the way, so that those coming can find the way a little more readily.

With my eyes I followed the path of One whose feet were turned toward these heights. On the way was a Cross. He would not turn back. With Him as guide none of these shall be too great for us.

MR. ROOSEVELT SEEMS to be keeping "open house" for European premiers. Papers said he received Mr. MacDonald on the "front porch" and bade him a friendly farewell from the same place. Now this front porch hospitality is a great thing. It is genuinely American. You don't have to put on short breeches and a wig to come in and see our President. Seems these boys don't even have to wait in line very long. Just hitch your horse at the gate, come right in, sit down and make yourself at home. I'll be out in a minute and we'll talk things over. Glad to see you, neighbor MacDonald, John Bull. Heh, Daughter, he brought his little girl with him. Come out and meet her. You two can play together while her dad and I talk over things.

Next comes Herriot from France. Right on the same front porch he'll be received, war debts or no war debts. What are war debts between friends? And there will be a great line of them coming over. For we are beginning to take intelligently and happily this job of turning our little world into a friendly community.

This is the way Mr. Roosevelt inaugurates his "good neighbor foreign policy." Can you beat it?

Vice President Marshall issued the sage council that "What America needs is a good five-cent cigar." Well, I am issuing the suggestion that what about all the nations need now is to look into the mirror, take a big laugh, sit down on the "front porch" and talk things over. Our soberness is too serious, or vice versa. This poker face business is not good for us even as nations. Let us extend the front porch policy and the front porch. It might work in industry and a few other things. Folks that sit on the front porch and talk together will not be trying to scratch out each other's eyes. And we just can't afford to tear up our clothes anyway. It's not sensible nor funny.

Mr. Roosevelt, tell all those fellows to come on over. Let's have a game on the old sand lot.

STEADY, MY PRESBYTERIAN BRETHREN. None of us quite knows what to do with heretics. They used to burn them. They make good lights, many of them. We have continued to follow their trails. But putting up with them now is much more difficult than building monuments to them later.

I notice that you are having some difficulty in keeping your great missionary, Pearl S. Buck, author of "Good Earth," classified.

Just what is the value of creeds? How did it happen that we got one big enough to house our Lord forever? And how we ever become big enough fully to comprehend so great an one as the Christ? Is there no more truth to break forth from his face? Is Gamaliel's counsel out of date?

According to reports there is little doubt that Mrs. Buck fails to phrase her faith as some of her fellow-Presbyterians do. It is a problem of being able to deal with her case by a "Christian method." Certainly no other method should be attempted, and Mrs. Buck should be entirely satisfied with that method.

Maybe Mrs. Buck believes as much as the rest of us, maybe some more than some of us. Shall we require that she express it just as we do?

Let us try to find the "Christian method" of dealing with our heretics. We owe them a very great deal. Jesus did not fit into the scheme of the Jewish Church. The Council at Jerusalem had sore trouble in finding the "Christian method" of dealing with Paul. He was hard to classify. Martin Luther would not "stay put." We speak kindly of him now. John Wesley was not cut to pattern. He was too low and too high for the Church of England. But some of them are now found writing books about him in which they say many great things for him. And some of them, behind their hands, whisper that he "died a member of the Church of England."

We would not mention the last three as being in a class with Jesus. He just made their class possible, it seems.

Let us learn the Christian method of dealing with our heretics. We may need them.

"I'M GONA TELL ROOSEVELT ON YOU," is what the Young Men's Business Club is saying to some women down here in New Orleans. The other day these women got up a big party about disarmament and peace. They are getting up a lot of names on a petition to present to the President in keeping with our pledged word that we will no longer resort to war as international policy. The party was a big success. People are still talking about it, including the Young Men's Business Club.

When the Club got together it had to "take cognizance" of that peace party. (It must have been a success. If not, why notice it?)

But in a time and in a country where the President appoints a woman to his Cabinet and sends another off to represent us in Denmark, we men are going to have to take some new soundings. We didn't use to be afraid of women. Well, our language was not so strong "when mother was around." That was different.

The young business man at his club meeting rose to the occasion and met the issue by solemnly saying that, by virtue of the authority vested in him, it was "his opinion" that much of this propaganda upon which these women were feeding was the bane of foreign powers who have

THE RENAISSANCE OF ASIA

By Dr. E. Stanley Jones

(We are indebted to Mrs. R. H. Wynn for typewritten copies of the addresses of Dr. E. Stanley Jones. Having heard them she wished to share them with her friends who are readers of the Advocate. Editor.)

Dr. Truett, the presiding officer, has just said that this is one of the most important moments of human history. There is an undertone, a something about to happen. Some of us hope it is going to be a great spiritual awakening throughout the world. There is an upsurging, an uprising of spirit, an expectancy, a feeling that we cannot go on as we have been going.

I know that every age considers itself an age of transition. Some one has said that as Adam and Eve left the Garden of Eden, he remarked to his companion, "This is an age of transition." The oldest bit of writing in the world is in a museum in Constantinople and it declares, "Alas! times are not what they used to be; the children no longer obey their parents and every one wants to write a book." So each age concentrates upon itself, but we feel today that there is some difference here. We hope and pray that life will never settle back again to the old molds. Changes are taking place in the West and at a more rapid pace in the East. One is almost terrified as he sees the rapidity with which tremendous changes are going on in India and China.

It is interesting to see the parallels between what took place in Europe and what is taking place now in Asia. Europe was for a number of years under the sway of influences that were unprogressive, static, but at the close of that period came the movement of the new birth of the mind, the Renaissance, the turning of the mind from tradition toward the facts of life, an entirely new birth. As man turned toward the facts, this new intellectual liberty produced revolution, precipitated it in every single department of life, and the end is not yet! We are still under the tremendous hurst of freedom that has come with that change of mind. With it, the scientific age was born and with the scientific age came the age of power that today is beginning to terrify us and we wonder whether we own the thing or it has us. But there is tremendous power that has been put in our hands. Out of this tremendous hurst of power, another movement was formed.

Man began to feel that he must have something deeper than this tremendous power, he must have inner character; so they turned back to the resources of religion. They went to the pages of the New Testament to rediscover the personality of Christ and as they stood face to face with Him, a new movement was born, the Reformation. It was deeper than the intellectual reformation, this turning of the West back to the pages of the New Testament. There was a fresh regeneration, a great impulse that went through the heart of Western civilization that made for stability of character, its cleansing and renewal. What has happened in the West practically all rests on these two great movements. The tragedy in the West is that the Renaissance has outrun the Reformation. We have more knowledge than we have character to handle that knowledge and so today, the task of the West is simple but profound; it is to bring up this inner reformation of spirit and let it parallel this renaissance of the mind and so men are turning back today in thought, terrified, as it were, at what is happening in this machine age asking the question, "Has religion sufficient resources for a time like this, so that we can be renewed in character and have enough stability of spirit to hold up this tremendous structure we built up in the age of the freedom of the mind?" If that can happen, we feel this civilization may be saved. We looked over the brink of the abyss during the last war and today we feel if we ever get back to it again, we may topple over and with it our whole civilization.

When we turn to the East we find parallel movements taking place. The East for a thousand years has been under the sway of very ancient civilizations. When your fathers and mine were wandering over Europe semi-savages, the people of China were living in luxury and enlightenment. The slaves from Britain in the marketplace of Rome were styled the stupidest and ugliest of them all. The Britons were said to be eaters of human flesh by preference. In the fourth century, the Indians and Chinese were a cultured, philosophical, civilized people. H. G. Wells says that in the sixth century, China extended from Persia and the Caspian Sea clear to the Pacific Ocean and she was the best and most enlightened and the happiest nation on earth. When the first envoys of the West went to China from Portugal, they were kept three days and taught etiquette before they could be taken into the presence of the Emperor, for China looked on them as barbarians. When King George III. sent an envoy to China, the Emperor of China sent back this word: "I can't quite understand why you want to begin relations with us for we have no necessity for any such relations, as we have everything within our own civilization. You must be very lonely in your little island so far away from civilization. The only hope for your country is to come under the sovereignty of China." You are in no position to deal with China unless this statement no longer sounds absurd. We are dealing with a very ancient culture and it should cleanse us from all complexities and patronage.

Along about the sixteenth century the West began to trade with China and China and the East began to drop back. Her civilizations have been clamped and caught. The Renaissance is in full swing across Asia in every single department of life. They are having five revolutions at one time. There is an intellectual turning from traditionalism toward the facts of life, an economic turning from the tool system to modern industrial competition, a social turning from family to State. Governments might come and go but China's was founded on the family and went on forever. Her life has a persistence far deeper than any other civilization perhaps, but she is shifting it now from the family and life is gathered around the unit of the State.

Life in India has been founded on the caste and in the process of shifting it has gone from the caste to the State. I was in Benares and I saw a new temple, a new object of worship, a great relief map of India made of Italian marble, costing 100,000 rupees. The object of worship was just the motherland. The rise of Nationalism is the driving thing that is determining the future. In China the temples are largely deserted, but there is a new verve. I climbed up long steps at the place of worship of Sun Yat Sen, the George Washington of China. Immediately a soldier is at my side, saying, "Don't lean against that; it is disrespectful." I could not lean against even a parapet in the presence of this new thing called Nationalism.

There is a revolution where they are shifting the center of authority from the person of the Emperor to the will of the people. They have a story that the Emperor stood under the canopy of Heaven and once a year gave account of his ruling to Heaven, but was accountable only to Heaven and not to man. That has been swept away and China begins to found her life upon the consent of four hundred and fifty millions of people, obviously a difficult transition. It has seemed to bring chaos, but remember that we ourselves in the evolution of our Nation, were a long time achieving unity; the Thirteen Colonies were suspicious of one another and there came a moment when it seemed our Nation was going to split in twain and become a permanently divided people. If we came through this struggle with a smaller unit, will not China which is larger, with a vast population, many of them still illiterate, do the same? If China does not achieve unity in twenty-one years, let us not be impatient. The fact that they have held together so long is proof to my mind that they will achieve unity.

The most serious revolution is the moral and spiritual one. Under the acids of this new thinking the old civilizations are being dissolved and China is facing today tremendous kaleidoscopic changes without the inner certainty and the stability that comes through vital religion. There is the tragedy. The old things have lost their grip and power and the whole thing rests back on that subtle thing called character, life, civilization, an imponderable thing. I was in one place in Asia where two great cities were close to each other without a road between them. The road was necessary and the people demanded that they have it. The Government taxed the people to get the road and the money was put in the hands of an engineer, but the road was never built; he put the money in his pocket. He had the intelligence, the money, the command of the people and the Government, every thing except one—character, and without character the road could not be built. Can you build a nation without character? Neither in the East nor in the West. In China the Yellow River is diked. The dikes were weak. The Government put money in the hands of an engineer to dike the river. Instead of putting it into the dike, he put the greater part of it into his own pocket. The floods arose, the dikes broke and a million people perished because of the dishonesty of this man. Did the dike break or his character? The one thing that stood between them and ruin was character. The Chinese as business people have been very honest; their codes of morality have kept them honest. I was talking to an Indian merchant who said: "when I go to the Chinese and ask them to make something beautiful even though it may not last or be very serviceable, he will say, 'it is against our code of morality; I can't do that.' I go to a Japanese and ask the same thing and he says, 'yes, certainly.'" As business men the Japanese are not so honest but as officials they are. The Chinese as business men are honest, but as officers, not. The system in Manchuria is to give positions without salary and they are supposed to get enough out of the position to pay them. The man in power does not know how long he is going to be in power and the consequence is he lays up as much as he can possibly get in as short a time as possible. In one province the taxes had been collected six years in advance. I repeated this statement before a great Chinese audience and one man said "did you say six years? In our province they are collected thirty-five years in advance. The people are bringing in their deeds and saying 'take the deeds.' We cannot keep the land under such as this."

I do not say this in a spirit of criticism, for I remember I have lived in a land where the government of Chicago has existed and I doubt if I go farther South, whether I shall find ideal conditions there. The simple difficulty in China now is that, due to dishonesty of officials in the Government, confidence has been broken and the life of the people is paralyzed. One Governor of a province said to a friend of mine, "for the re-making of my province I need two things, money and men who will honestly spend that money. I can get the first but I cannot get the second," and turning to my friend who is a missionary, "can you produce them? If you can produce them, we can re-make the province."

That was the simple truth. In one province there was tremendous advance. I said "what is the secret of the progress here, with 12,000 miles of telephone lines through the country in two years, $10,000,000 for flood prevention and relief and hundreds of miles of good roads. There is real progress here." The answer was, "Don't you understand that at the head of the construction is a man of character, a simple Christian man, and every dollar that goes through his hands is expended for the thing for which it was given. His character is holding up the situation." I don't, for a moment, like to say these things but I remarked to my Chinese friends in China, my colleagues, "Do I dare say these things?" They answered, "If you don't say them, you are no friend of China. We are in a desperate situation; we can no longer discuss things politely; we have to go to the center."

HUMANITY'S HEROIC HOPE

There remains a great expectation of eternal life, the ancient, high, heroic faith of humanity. Today it is not simply a wistful yearning, but an eager, insistent longing for reunion with those torn from us. And not with them only, but with all those who left us in the long ago, taking our hearts with them when they went away. Is faith a dream? Nay, but the lack of it is the dream, and failing it all the lore of life is but a tale told by an idiot. Aspiration is not mocked; God is not the God of the dead, but of those who are alive forevermore. He is as young as the dawn, and as hopeful, and as ready for new adventure. He who filled our hearts with the hauntings of and eternal tomorrow will not leave us in the dust. He is Life; He is Love, He is Joy, and His immortality is stamped, as His signature, upon all that He has made. In Him we live here and hereafter, and because He lives we shall live also, deathless as our Father is deathless:—

"Lord, where Thou art our happy dead must be;
Unpierced as yet the Sacramental Mist,
But we are nearest them when nearest Thee
In solemn Eucharist.

"Lord, we crave for those gone home to Thee,
For those who made our earthly homes so fair;
How little may we know, how little see,
Only that Thou art there.

"Dear hands, unclasped from ours, are clasping Thine,
Thou holdest us forever in Thy heart;
So close the one Communion—are we
In every truth apart?

"Lord, where Thou art our blessed dead must be,
And if with Thee, what then their boundless bliss!

Till Faith is sight, and Hope reality,
Love's anchorage is this!"

FROM THE PELICAN PINES

By Dr. S. A. Steel

If I live till July, I will have been a Methodist preacher 67 years. During that long time I have been preaching patience under affliction; but let me tell you, it is one thing to preach and another thing to practice what you preach. I have had my full share of trials in this life, but I think the greatest trial I have had to bear is the affliction I am suffering now, that of inaction, just to lie still. I have lived a very active life; and to have all the wheels suddenly stop is a trial hard to bear. But all at once my whole body seemed to go to sleep. The doctor put me in bed, stuck a needle in my arms and legs and body to see if I was alive, I suppose, said I must "stay put," and that's that. I am better, and slowly improving. I can write on my typewriter with difficulty, and so far have managed to send my weekly article, entitled "Creole Gumbo," to the Sunday Memphis Commercial Appeal. I'll keep making that literary soup for my readers as long as I can. The number tomorrow will be 350, so you see I have been making that soup a good while. One thing that cheers this indolent period is the numerous kind letters I receive from readers of my Creole Gumbo. So far I discover nothing the matter with my brain; but in that opinion, some of my readers might not agree. Raulins, did you know that the bushes are full of cranks? Some send me to perdition because I won't hate the Catholics, as if a man as old as I am could afford to hate anybody. Some think I am an apostate because I don't believe the "prophecy" of the pyramids, and expect Jesus to come in the clouds in 1936. Some think I either never was converted, or have fallen from grace, because I do not believe in the literal inspiration of the Bible. "But wisdom is justified of her children." I enjoy the Advocate and don't see how any true Methodist can get along without it.

WILL IT WORK?

Is it possible to have a constructive, district-wide program of Christian Education? Can the presiding elder put on a worthwhile program of Christian Education in his district? Well, there is one elder who is making a splendid start in this direction. He is none other than Walter L. Stormont of the Sardis-Grenada District of the North Mississippi Conference.

This elder is using the wise policy which has been used so long by the Woman's Missionary Society; the policy of taking your message out there to the people. This district was divided into four zones and a meeting place was selected which would be near the center of the zone. Then in co-operation with Rev. R. G. Lord, Rev. J. E. Stephens and Rev. Roy Grisham, Brother Stormont planned a program for these meetings. These other brethren are charged with the responsibility of promoting Christian Education in the Conference and in this District. So there was team-work to begin with. The purpose of this program was to give information and inspiration. These brethren went on the assumption that the average church member knows very little about the program of Christian Education and they were right in this assumption.

Will the folks attend these meetings and are they interested? You should have been there if you have been a doubting Thomas. They were there from Dan to Beersheba. This is a busy time of the year for farmers and one of these zones does not cover a very large territory. But at two of these meetings, one in each zone, we had about 175 people present. And were they interested? They sat there and listened to those fellows talk all day at each meeting. The only fellow who went to sleep was Frank McGee and he is a preacher. Of course he was not there to learn, he already knows it. I have never seen keener interest manifested in a church program than was shown in these meetings.

There is to be a follow-up meeting in each zone some time in September. It is the purpose of the presiding elder to find out whether or not the folks got the information and the inspiration. He is going to test the value of this program by its fruits. At the fall meeting we will discuss the results of our training schools and our revival meetings. This is the program of our church and our presiding elder proposes to give it a chance and see if it will work.

There were a great many encouraging features in this program. In the first place there was not a discouraging note sounded. All were optimistic. Another thing was the fine spirit of co-operation.

There was every evidence of harmonious team-work. Then we discovered that it is possible for an elder to carry more than one sermon around with him. This elder preached a different sermon each day and they got better all the time. It was good to be in these meetings. All of us thanked God and took courage.

The two zone meetings which I am writing about were held at Fountainhead church on the Byhalia Charge and Love on the Coldwater Charge. Words fail me when I try to express the hospitality which we received at each of these places.

Chairman Zones 1 and 2.

SAFETY SIGNALS

By Rev. S. J. Davies

Dr. R. E. Smith, dean emeritus of Centenary College, author, preacher, teacher, gave the congregation of our First Methodist Church an interesting and instructive sermon on Palm Sunday. The gist of his discourse was the spirit of our Lord as His sympathetic heart in prophetic vision, saw the doom of Jerusalem. For he wept while the crowd shouted hosannas and sang alleluias. Then I thought of the lesson the world has taken so long to learn, the lesson of victory through sacrifice. "Weeping may endure for the night, but joy cometh with the morning." The glory of life lies not in its climaxes, but rather in lowly field of sacrificial service. And is not this the via crucis, the way of the cross, the real road to victory, for out of seeming defeat the blessed Christ trod this weary way and entered into His glory. Palms and hosannahs in our poor human life oftentimes are followed by Gethsemanes and tears. It is so ordained, and, as a great American said, in dying, "It is God's way and best." Martyrs for righteousness, from Stephen to McKinley, are not only immortal witnesses of truth, but teach us lessons that lift humanity to loftier heights and inspire the race to nobler deeds, than the poor routine of life merely for its living. Then, after all, praise is sweeter and bears a deeper meaning when, like that of the Blessed One, it is bedewed with tears.

* * *

What strange spirit has taken hold upon much of our modern preaching? Many, for they are not a few, refer to Jesus, the Son of God, as the Galilean peasant, the carpenter of Nazareth, and fail to speak of His deity, His Lordship, and the supreme majesty, unique spiritual power and effulgent glory of the Christ. Nowhere in the New Testament, so far as I know, and I have studied this book through the years, are the terms Galilean and carpenter applied to Him except by way of derision or in attempts to lower or make common His divine power and ministry. Now, I know the artful trade of carpenter. My father was a carpenter before he ever entered the ministry, and I have no false prejudice against that large body of toilers known as peasants. But it takes something more than a carpenter or a peasant to save men from sin and transform their lives. A divine Christ is the world's need today as it ever was and will be. The message of salvation comes from the Son of God, the true Messiah, and He left forever His workshop in Nazareth when He went on His glad mission of saving a world. And now unto Him be honor and glory and majesty and power now and forever. Amen.

POETICAL THOUGHTS

By Mrs. George S. Brown

A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance.
Proverbs 15:13.

"GOOD MORNING, Brother Sunshine, Good Morning Sister Song;
I beg your humble pardon
If you've waited very long.
I thought I heard you rapping.
To shut you out were sin;
My heart is standing open.
Wont you walk right in?"

Good Morning, Brother Gladness;
Good Morn'ng, Sister Smile;
They told me you were coming,
So I waited on awhile.
I'm lonesome here without you,
A weary while it's been;
My heart is standing open,
Won't you walk right in?"

If anybody has the "grumps" today, I am thinking just the reading of those cherry little rhymes will chase away the blues and bring Brother Sunshine and Sister Song right into their hearts. We all have our ups and downs and life can not run along in pleasant places all the time but the real test of our character is in forcing the smile to our lips and looking pleasant in spite of pain or sorrow. If we count our blessings we will all see that the sun shines far more often than the clouds appear. Let's drive away old Brother Gloom and Sister Blues for they never help us or any one else. If we let them into our hearts we get no comfort in our sorrow and surely we give none to others for we can not give of what we have not. If the smiles wont come because the heartache is so heavy, look at those who are happy and soon you will be smiling with them. That is what we want to do—forget ourselves. If we could all only do that! If that conspicuous person could be forced into oblivion, then we would see so much about and around us that before we knew it the joy would be with us to stay. We would greet Brother Gladness and Sister Song, then obey the Scriptural injunction, "Rejoice with those who rejoice."

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Meridian District Conference of the Mississippi Annual Conference, M. E. Church, South, was called to order in the Methodist church at Quitman, Miss., at nine o'clock a. m. April 22, 1933. Rev. T. J. O'Neil, presiding elder called the Conference to order, conducted the devotional service, after which the roll was called and Rev. W. J. Dawson was elected secretary and Rev. O. H. Scott assistant secretary.

Matters of connectional interest were reported on as follows: W. D. Hawkins made the report of the District Trustees; also, represented the Memorial Mercy Home in New Orleans, Paine College, and Lay Activities in the District.

Rev. H. E. Raley represented the Hospital Board with reference to the Golden Cross enrollment. Mrs. H. M. Ivy represented the Woman's Missionary Society. Rev. J. C. Chambers Executive Secretary of the Conference Board of Christian Education represented the work of the Board.

Dr. G. F. Winfield with members of his Faculty and student body put on an interesting program in connection with the observance of the diamond anniversary of the founding of Whitworth, which is to be observed this year.

W. D. Hawkins was elected District Lay Leader and C. A. Massey and T. H. Taylor were re-elected associate Lay Leaders.

Mrs. W. J. Dawson was elected District Director of the Golden Cross.

L. L. Cowen, A. M. Broadfoot, P. M. Caraway, F. B. Ormond, W. H. Lane and W. J. Dawson were elected the ad-interim committee.

W. H. McRaney was recommended for admission on trial into the Conference. Frederic Samuel Flurry was granted license to preach.

The following were elected lay delegates to the next Annual Conference: T. L. Bailey, T. H. Naylor, B. B. Davis, D. W. Heidelberg, H. M. Ivy, S. J. Creekmore, C. A. Massey, W. D. Hawkins, Miss Lilybec Phillips, Mrs. D. L. St. John, C. G. Stokes, J. H. Miner and C. F. Partin. Alternate delegates were elected as follows: Mrs. R. O. Dobson, C. L. Daniels, C. H. Thomas, and H. A. Gower.

The following resolution commendatory of the presiding elder, Rev. T. J. O'Neil was unanimously passed: "Inasmuch as Rev. T. J. O'Neil is completing his fourth year as presiding elder of this, the Meridian District, and inasmuch as the law of the Church denies the privileges of his service in that office for another year; Therefore be it resolved: First, that Brother O'Neil's character and administration has been an inspiration to us and that we shall cherish the memory of his arduous labors and brotherly consideration; Second, that we commend him most heartily to those who have responsibility for his future assignment and also to those to whom he may be sent; Third, that a copy of these resolutions be furnished Brother O'Neil, one to Bishop Denny, one to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and one to the Meridian Star." Signed: A. M. Broadfoot, P. M. Caraway, J. H. Miner, S. M. Graham and Rolfe Hunt.

Resolutions appreciative of the hospitality and of the many courtesies of Rev. W. H. Saunders, the Conference Hosts, and the Community at large were adopted by standing vote.

Pachuta was selected as the place for holding of the 1934 session of the District Conference.

W. J. DAWSON, Secretary.

dent of the Junior Department. This is the Sunday School of which Mr. E. W. Burton was superintendent for more than forty years. He passed away last November, but his labors abide. One of his grandchildren was a member of the class received.

Rev. Jas. H. Felts is assisting Rev. S. A. Brown in a revival meeting at Sardis, Miss. They are having fine crowds and there are signs of genuine interest.

Twenty-five have been received into our church at Winona, Miss., Rev. E. S. Lewis, pastor, since the beginning of this Conference year. A number of others are to be received at an early date.

"The Bulletin," official Christian Education paper for the North Mississippi Conference, Rev. R. G. Lord, Executive Secretary, comes loaded with a valuable lot of material for his Conference territory.

Rev. E. S. Lewis, of Winona, Miss., preached the commencement sermon at North Carrollton last Sunday morning, and delivered the address at the close of school at Vaiden, Miss., on Friday night, April 28.

Despite the depression that is so widespread, there are many signs of growing interest in matters religious. Larger attendance, both at Sunday school and at the preaching services, is reported from many quarters. There are many reasons for thanksgiving and praise.

All things considered, the New Orleans District is making fair and commendable progress in caring for the preachers. About ten thousand dollars has been paid on the salary account, and the most of the churches have part in the good showing made. Three or four of the charges are practically paid up to date.—New Orleans District Review.

Rev. W. J. Cunningham will assist Rev. E. S. Lewis in a meeting at Winona, Miss., the middle of June. Nearly 100 preachers of the North Mississippi Conference have pledged themselves to hold revival meetings and contribute whatever compensation they may receive to the Board of Missions, that they may be able to carry on the work outlined for the mission charges.

The outlook for Grenada College is brighter than it has been for some years. The goal set for next session is "A hundred new girls for Grenada College." It is sincerely hoped that this number can be secured. The college has been entertaining high school graduates over the weekend for some time, having about thirty at a time. It promises large results.

The Advocate has just received a complimentary copy of the King James Version of the Bible from the American Bible Society. This Bible is very reasonably priced and a most convenient volume. If you are interested in purchasing a Bible you would do well to consider this one produced with a special type of print.

The North Mississippi Conference Standard Training School will be held at Grenada College June 5th through 10th. The expense is only one dollar per day for room and board. There is no better place for a Christian worker to go than to this attractive college campus to work and rest. Mothers of little children can learn of the nature of children and how to train them for Christian service in a school like this.

Mrs. J. B. Shearer, wife of our pastor at Clinton, La., recently very narrowly escaped death when the car in which she and a neighbor were driving was struck by a train. She escaped with some severe cuts and bruises from which she will be confined to her bed for some weeks. We rejoice that a real tragedy was averted. And we join friends in prayer for Mrs. Shearer's rapid recovery.

Listen! East End Church, Meridian, is striking an average of 146 at prayer meeting. This is in capitals, "If you know what that means"; TWENTY OF THE TWENTY-SEVEN STEWARDS ARE REGULAR ATTENDANTS. Twenty-two were received into this good church on Easter Sunday, bringing the total received since Conference up to thirty-three. The cash Self-Denial Offering at Easter was $150. Rev. P. M. Caraway is the pastor of this people.

On Easter Sunday a class of thirty-six new members were received into the Central Church, Meridian, Miss., of which Dr. Lawrence L. Cowen is the pastor. This makes a total of seventy-four members received during the two preceding weeks. Of those received on Palm Sunday and Easter, fifty-three were by baptism or profession of faith. This makes a grand total since Conference of one hundred and fifteen. Twelve infants were baptized and $500 on the Self-Denial appeal was raised. In spite of damp disagreeable weather a great congregation attended the "Sunrise Prayer Service."

The close of the special Advocate circulation campaign is near at hand. Reports from pastors and those appointed to look after the interests of the Conference organ, are slow coming in. Let every pastor in our three great Conferences see to it that the claims of the Advocate are properly presented between now any May 15 when the canvass is scheduled to come to a close. In almost every instance where a personal canvass has been made, the results have been most gratifying. The religious press is a necessity in the advancement of God's Kingdom. Let us not neglect this important agency of the Church. "Together we cannot fail."

"We are moving along here at Hawkins Memorial, Meridian, fairly well. We have had 39 additions to the church this year. Organized one Epworth League. Have three Sunday schools. We had the misfortune to lose our church at Sageville by fire a few weeks ago. It was one of the oldest churches in the county. We hope to rebuild. Our Easter Self-Denial offering has reached approximately $100. In many cases this means a real sacrifice. If it were not for unemployment situation among our people we would be able to make a full financial showing at the end of the year." That was Rev. W. J. Dawson, pastor Hawkins Memorial, Meridian, at the mike.

The wives of the New Orleans Methodist ministers have organized themselves into a club called "The Parsonettes." The club has adopted the unique and original motto: "If the parson won't, we will." The preachers are curious to know whether this slogan is addressed to the pulpit, or whether it is meant to be a word of reassurance to the pew. If it is an address to the pulpit, then there seems to be a prospect for a decided pickup in the tempo of affairs at the Methodist parsonage. If, on the other hand, the members of the club mean that they are going to underwrite the deficiencies of their clerical husbands, we stand aghast at their optimism, but we look for either a move-up or a move-on along the whole line.—New Orleans District Review.

May we have your attention for just a moment? Turn to page 1 of this number of the Advocate and refer to the address label thereon. If your expiration date reads May, 1933 or any date prior thereto, sit right down and forward us $1.50 to cover your renewal. This done, and we will not bother you for another twelve months, and the manager will be better able to meet pay roll and other obligations necessary to keep the presses

TO THE PASTORS AND LAYMEN OF THE HATTIESBURG DISTRICT

In the re-adjustment of district lines, made necessary by the absorption of the Newton district, some complications have arisen, necessitating a change in the date of the Hattiesburg District Conference. The conference will convene at Eucutta, Miss., May 24, at 9:30 a.m., instead of May 9. The pastors of the district are requested to send the names of their delegates to me at an early date.

RUSTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Devotional services for the conference were conducted by R. L. Clayton, W. F. Roberts, S. S. Holladay, Jr., R. V. Fulton and the two preaching services on Faith, Love, Obedience and Service were conducted by H. L. Johns and A. C. Lawton all being preachers of the Ruston District. The conference from beginning to end was an inspiration to both lay and clerical members.

The reports of both preachers traveling and local showed a loyalty and sacrifice on every Methodist's part in the district that deserves comment.

Conference was called to special prayer for Rev. Cleaneth Brooks and the Haynesville Church that he serves. This prayer was led by W. C. Childress and W. F. Roberts.

Special emphasis was laid during the conference on being Methodist, such as kneeling for prayer, using our order of worship, observing all special days, etc.

J. B. Nelson, E. L. Walker, T. W. Camp, T. L. James, G. T. Dawson, W. J. Hammons, C. A. Barnette, E. W. Gill, and Mrs. Lucile Garrett were elected Lay Delegates to Annual Conference. C. E. Tooke, Mrs. C. Dawson, and Mrs. R. L. Clayton were made alternates.

Judge E. L. Walker was elected district lay leader, while W. T. Whiteman and C. A. Barnett were elected associate leaders.

Our visiting brethren were Revs. A. K. McLellan, R. M. Brown, Briscoe Carter, and P. M. McCullen.

The licenses of J. E. Deloney, J. E. Naper, John Rhinehart, L. M. Napper, H. M. Henley and George Bolton were renewed, and characters passed. Other Local preachers of orders whose characters were passed were Jerry Fordham, W. E. Fordham, M. W. Moncrief, L. Douglas and W. H. Young. The name of D. C. Bennett was removed from our roll of local preachers.

A. A. Collins was recommended to Annual Conference for Admission on Trial.

All items of business were carefully attended to. Committee reports were adopted, Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, Memorial Home, Golden Cross, Chaplaincy of Charity Hospital at New Orleans, Advocate, S. M. U. Scholarship, District Parsonage, Benevolences, and Kingdom Extension were represented and needs made known.

The wonderful people of Lisbon royally cared for the needs of the members to the Conference. Haynesville was selected as the place for the next district conference.

MRS. LELA GRAHAM PRESLEY was born June 11, 1867, and departed this life March 1, 1933. The following is a tribute paid her by Mrs. C. L. Graham, Salt Lake City, Utah:

Death is a ruthless visitor, and his call is inevitable, even though we do not always understand the circumstances nor the necessity of his coming. He enters alike the home of the rich and the poor, the high and the low, asking and answering no questions—hence we are powerless in his hands.

In this recent removal from our midst of Mrs. Lela Presley, as a church and a community, we have sustained an irreparable loss, but "Lela," as she was affectionately called, has left behind her the fragrance of an incomparably beautiful life. In her church she was an efficient and faithful co-worker; to the community at large, a wise counsellor and a loving friend. Her life was one of willing sacrifice and remitting service. Hundreds of the friends and acquaintances may readily recall the deeds of kindness that were but a part of her busy life. She was loved by everyone. Her presence was a benediction of the highest order. The memory of her beautiful, consistent life will continue to sanctify the edifice that was, through the years, her house of worship.

A worker in the Sunday school for many years, she was enabled to teach both by precept and example. She also showed remarkable ability in leading the young, in particular, to a higher and better mode of living. Many of the stars in her crown will represent those whose feet she helped to establish upon the heavenly road.

In the community life she confined not her favors to class and clan, but to all alike were her hands extended in loving ministrations. With generosity unbounded, with sympathy constant and genuine, it was her delight to share with others. Seldom did anyone enter her home without receiving some little token of her esteem and affection. Sometimes it was some article of food, prepared in an especially attractive way. Most often it was a gift of fragrant blossoms from a garden tended by her own loving hand, for she was a great lover of flowers, and to her they were always a representation of "God's most beautiful thoughts." Her thoughts were constantly of others. Even during the last distressing illness, she tried to communicate to those about her some much desired wish for her many friends and loved ones. Extraordinary cheerfulness and patience was manifested even in her extreme helplessness, and in each was demonstrated the power of a truly consecrated life. Devoid of all fanaticism, her Christian life was one of love and of service for the Master.

Her belief in the efficacy of prayer was constant, her faith unwavering, and Heaven a reality.

How we shall miss her! It will be difficult to fill the vacancy left by her departure. But in the face of this most disconcerting thought, we remember and our faith carries us beyond the things of time. We seem to catch a glimpse of the higher life and sense the possibilities of her activities in another realm. "In my Father's house are many mansions. If it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you."

So we smile through our tears, for tomorrow must give place to hope, and mourning to rejoicing.

"We shall meet beyond the river,
Where the surges cease to roll;
Where, in all the bright forever,
Sorrow never shall touch the soul."

May we not catch an inspiration from the beautiful life of our departed sister and friend? An inspiration not only to admire, but acquire the higher things of life. To be kind and just, faithful and loyal to the best that is in us, choosing always that "Better part, that shall not be taken away." So may our lives exhale, as did hers, the fragrance of qualities altogether superior and lovely.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, the Methodist church and Missionary Society of Coldwater, Miss., have sustained a sad loss in the death of MRS. W. H. EASON, who has been taken away from her loved ones to dwell forever in her Heavenly home; therefore, be it resolved,

First, That we of the Missionary Society of the Methodist church, who have been associated with her, realize a great loss, for we appreciated her many fine qualities of mother, grandmother, and friend. Hers was a well spent life, filled with good deeds and unselfish devotion to the welfare of others.

Second, That we as members of the Missionary Society, express our deepest sympathy to her family and loved ones because of this great sorrow which has come to them.

Third, That we earnestly pray that her children and grandchildren may be comforted by the assurance that when the call came she was prepared to go, for she had no fear of death.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and to the family of the deceased.

MRS. J. D. TURLEY,
MRS. F. F. VEAZEY.

On the morning of February 28, 1933, the gentle spirit of MARY JANE SMITH COOPER left this old world for that eternal home just beyond. She was born October 13, 1849, at Ansonville, North Carolina. She moved with her father to Holmes County, Miss., in 1866. Here she met and married John Calhoun Cooper, who preceded her to the grave. To this happy union were born eight children, one of whom, a daughter, is still living. She joined the Methodist Church when a small girl and was ever true to her church. Her Bible was her daily companion. The coming each Thursday of the New Orleans Christian Advocate meant much to her.

A beautiful life is ended, but the glow of her godly life will live on in the hearts of those who knew and loved her.

The body was carried from her daughter's home in Newhebron, Miss., to Lexington, Miss., and laid to rest in the Odd Fellows Cemetery, by the side of her husband. The Rev. Mr. Stephen and Rev. Mr. Fryser conducted the funeral services.

Those who are left to mourn her passing are one daughter, Mrs. I. E. Spell, Newhebron, Miss., five grandchildren, and a sister and several nieces.

One who loved her,
HER GRANDDAUGHTER.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, MISS AMANDA CARTER was a beloved and efficient member of the Indianola Methodist Missionary Society, being devoted to her church and to the cause of Christ, being ever with us, heart and hand, in every effort to promote the best interests of the church, and punctual in attendance upon the meetings of the Society; and

Whereas, now that her spirit has been borne away from earth to heaven and with sad hearts we erase the beloved name from the roll call of our Society, transferring it to our memories to remain, we thank God for the evidence that her name is written in the "Lamb's Book of Life," and that our loss is her eternal gain.

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy and prayers to the lone and grief-stricken brother, and to the bereaved nieces and nephews.

Resolved, further, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Society, and that a copy be sent to the family, to the local papers, and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Sluggish Feeling Gone And Pains Relieved After Use of Cardui

"A few years ago, my health wasn't good, and I suffered from cramping," writes Mrs. Herbert W. Hunt, of Hallsville, Texas. "My pain would nauseate me, I would just drag around, so sluggish and 'do-less.' My mother decided to give me Cardui. I began to mend. That tired, sluggish feeling was gone and the pains disappeared. I can't praise Cardui too highly because I know it helped me."

CARDUI is safe and wholesome for women of all ages. Try it!

WOMAN LOST 20 POUNDS IN 4 WEEKS

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 28 yrs. old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and further more I've never had a hungry moment."

Fat folks should take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—it's the SAFE, harmless way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know.

For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at any drug store—the cost for a bottle that lasts 4 weeks is but a trifle and if after the first bottle you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back.

That for the adult programs for 1934, the foreign topic shall be Brazil and the home topic on rural life.

For children, studies in European children, citizenship and Korea.

That special literature be prepared for program material in new auxiliaries.

A CALL TO THE CHURCH

The Woman's Missionary Council, in annual session at Louisville, Ky., March 22-26, has faced prayerfully and fearlessly the present deplorable world situation and its implications and opportunities for the missionary enterprise and we are convinced:

1. That there was never so great an emergency that the missionary message be proclaimed at home and abroad as that which faces us today. Individuals and nations are in desperate need of spiritual help and they are ready to listen to the claims of Christianity as a solution to their problems.

2. That this need offers an unprecedented opportunity in the face of which it is a betrayal of a trust to drastically reduce missionary budgets, to recall or detain at home effective and tried missionaries or to close needed institutions.

3. While we are fully aware of the economic situation that makes giving difficult, yet we are convinced that the end of the available financial resources of the Church has not been reached or that we have yet begun to test the possibilities of sacrificial living and giving. Neither have we availed ourselves of the infinite resources of prayer. We, therefore, pledge ourselves here and now to sacrificial living and giving. We seek to impose upon ourselves the same heroic service as that of our missionaries.

4. We call upon the entire Church to give a new witness to the world of faith in God and His power to work through human lives for the triumphant coming of His Kingdom.

MRS. J. W. PERRY, Pres.,
MRS. F. S. PARKER, Sec.

ARE YOU A SUBSCRIBER?

Concerning The World Outlook, Miss Estelle Haskin says:

"The number of subscribers on January 1st or the past three years is as follows: January 1, 1931, 6,798; January 1, 1932, 44,231; January 1, 1933, 36,597. January 1st, of course, the low ebb of the subscription list, but shows clearly the rate of falling off. It is also an indication of the general financial decline. Never was there seemingly such general and enthusiastic approval of the magazine, so the cause of the decrease in subscriptions we believe is the scarcity of money. The committee has taken measures to meet the situation by reducing costs of subscription price to new subscribers. Some have felt that the special price to new subscribers was a discrimination against those who have supported the magazine. Our answer is that this is a custom of many magazines and is done to increase circulation. A real decrease in price would probably mean a permanent decrease and the production of a much cheaper magazine which will not make its appeal.

If The World Outlook is to continue to serve our missionary and Christian Social Relations program by keeping before our readers up-to-date and vital material presented in an attractive manner, the subscription list must be retrieved. This task depends largely upon our women.

SAM ASHMORE, CHAMPION HORTICULTURIST

Dear Dr. Raulins: As we read the list of "preacher vegetable growers," as listed by Brother Lott in "Our Weekly Party," we expected to see the name of Sam E. Ashmore, of Luka.

If the writer of the notes is throwing out a challenge, we accept it, and can offer proof that the pastor of the Luka Methodist church is not only one of the finest horticulturists, but one of the finest floraculturists and landscape gardeners to be found in two states. His vegetable garden is far advanced for this latitude, and his terracing and foundation planting is beautiful and artistic. This is the work of his own hands, not neglecting any phase of the great program of the Church. He and Mrs. Ashmore and Mabel Ann are a blessing to the town.

Sincerely,
MRS. W. A. HODGES.

UNIFORM DRY PIN

The national temperance organizations have adopted a uniform pin for all friends of the Eighteenth Amendment to wear and display in the present temperance emergency. This is an attractive pin, with a gold alloy rim, carrying the slogan, "Retain 18th Amendment."

The pin has been designed and produced by the new National Prohibition Emergency Committee, which was brought into being at the dry temperance conference held in Washington, March 7 and 8, to make plans for the fight to retain the Amendment. The National W. C. T. U., the Anti-Saloon League, and the other 34 national temperance organizations are co-operating in the functioning of this united committee. Col. John E. Edgerton, former president of the National Association of Manufacturers, is the temporary chairman of the Committee and the Committee headquarters are at Washington.

The uniform pin is intended to accomplish two things—display the strength of the dry forces by identifying millions of dry sympathizers and benefit the finances of the dry organizations. The pin will be sold to individuals for 25 cents each and the profits will go into the treasury of the various dry organizations. Quantities can be obtained from the offices of any of the national dry organizations, or from the National Prohibition Emergency Committee, 642 Investment Bldg., Washington, D. C.

NO LAW, NO VIOLATOR!

"Papa, what is a prohibitionist?"
"A person who tries to make people drink more whiskey."
"How do prohibitionists make men drink more whiskey?"

"By passing a senseless law against making and selling intoxicating drinks."

"How does this law lead men to drink?"

"Because they will not obey it, my son."

"Is it good to drink intoxicating drinks, papa?"

"No, my son. I hope you will never drink them."

"What do men make them for?"

"Well, chiefly for drinking."

"If it is bad to drink them, is it right to make them?"

"My son, you do not understand these things."

"No, I do not. But would not good people obey the law?"

"Oh, yes; but there are many bad people."

"Do bad people obey the law?"

"Well, no; I'm afraid not willingly."

"Is there a law against stealing?"

"Certainly, my son."

"Does it make men steal?"

"My son, I think it is time for you to go to bed."—Kansas Methodist.

Many a man has to look hard at a nickel these days. It used to be a nickel, now it's a quarter. It is healthful discipline and we need it, but there is no use to overdo the thing. IMPORTANT---READ

Business throughout the nation was at a standstill during the recent bank holiday proclaimed by President Roosevelt immediately following his inaugural. This could hardly have been otherwise.

Many banks, however, have since re-opened and are conducting a normal business, and each day finds scores of others doing likewise.

Through it all the Advocate has continued its weekly visits to your homes, despite the fact that collections were not forthcoming. To do this means that pay rolls must be met as usual in order to keep the presses going.

More than 2,000 of our friends have allowed their subscriptions to expire, thus cutting our normal receipts better than $3,500. It is to these good friends of the Advocate that we call for immediate co-operation, and urge that each one forward us by return mail the small amount of $1.50 which will renew your church paper for another year. It amounts to less than three cents per week.

This is no time to call a halt. The Church was never more in need of the Religious Press than it is today. No Christian home should be without its Church paper.

Don't put it off any longer. Send in your renewal today. The label on your paper tells the tale. If it reads April, 1933, or any date prior thereto, your subscription has expired and $1.50 should be forwarded to our office to cover a year's renewal. Send money order wherever possible. Thank you.

in the Kentucky village, a story vouched for by a prominent Bishop, who lost his pocketbook. The finder advertised it and the owner called for it. "Yes, that's my pocketbook," he said. He turned his back and examined the pocketbook and found its contents intact. "When did you find it?" he asked. The finder said, "Wednesday." "And this is Saturday," said the owner. And after a pause, "Don't you think you ought to pay me some interest for the three days you have had it?"

Just before the World War, at which time the world went on its protracted financial spree, the resultant headache from which it is just beginning to ease a little, thanks be, there was considerable agitation for our country to coin a half cent. I wondered why unless it was to make it possible for some people to give something to the church. Like the Irishman said when they asked him why farthings were coined in England, "To enable Scotchmen to give something to charitable objects."

Apropos of this, the following was told three times in the same week at my Rotary Club. The last time, it brought the biggest laugh of all, not at the joke, but at the speaker, because he did not know that it had decorated another speech a few minutes before he came in. A Scotchman kept holding on to his overcoat pocket. "Why?" said his friend. "I am afraid I will break these teeth," showing them. "Why do you carry your teeth in your pocket?" "They are not my teeth. They are my wife's teeth." "Well, well, why do you carry your wife's teeth?" "I caught her eating between meals, and took them away from her."

This column also advises present-day economists against the psychology of the two stingiest men in Virginia, who in a hot summer like the present decided to take a plunge and each extravagantly bought a palm leaf fan for five cents.

Toward the close of the season they met. Shylock said, "I don't understand it. We bought these fans at the same time. I have taken good care of mine but it is worn out, while yours is as good as ever." "I know how it is," said Silas Marner, "I see. I've been noticing you. When you get warm you work your fan, this way. Now, I don't do that. That wears a fan out. When I get warm, I hold my fan still edgewise in front of my face and shake my head."

Let's economize, but don't let's be hogs about it.

NEW ORLEANS

Vol. 80--No. 19. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South Whole No. 4076.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, MAY 11, 1933.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

IN THE COURSE of my duties as editor I find it necessary on rare occasions to take to task some of my fellow editors. It is a privilege that one must exercise with charity, after examining the structure of his own house. If it be glass he had better move out of it, I suspect.

This question of Christian unity and unification wont stay in the pigeonhole. Last week the editor of the Baptist Message, official organ of Louisiana Baptists, after criticizing an article in the current number of the Federal Council Bulletin which discusses "debts" or "trespasses" as the proper word to use in the Lord's Prayer, comes to the conclusion that we should follow the exact words as given in the Scripture. And, as the contention in the article had been that we adopt the word "trespasses" for the sake of union among Christians, he feels that there is little chance for unity except as we come to the Baptist position.

Now may we ask of this editor which of these versions of the Lord's prayer we should use, Matthew's or Luke's? Luke says, "Forgive us our sins; for we also forgive everyone that is indebted to us."

And the interpretation given to this prayer carries this word as to this particular petition, "For if ye forgive men their trespasses."

Just what is the value of this hair-splitting over "words" to little or no profit? Why this slavish attempt to follow the exact verbiage of the King James Version of our Bible? Clearly this editor is proposing something difficult indeed if we are to follow the exact words. One place it is "debts," in another it is "sins," and Jesus, in his interpretation, says "trespasses." "The letter killeth," may we quote? But "The spirit maketh alive."

And whatever our contention as to the meaning of the Scriptures, does not my Baptist brother know that when he insists upon the Word that he is insisting upon his interpretation of it?

"Baptists deplore the divisions among the people that name the name of Christ as much as anybody else, and they welcome the day when all denominations will come together as one people in Christ, 'To know no one save Christ and His Word.'" Well, are not several denominations ready for this?

Upon this basis the editor proposes unity! Apparently, though, he is fully persuaded that the Baptists are the custodians of this creed. What are we going to do about those other denominations who feel the same about their viewpoints?

I SUPPOSE I SHOULD have passed up this question altogether had not another one of my contemporaries come along with about the same bag of tricks. And even now I'd rather fish than to write this editorial, because of the fact that, while I highly esteem my editor friends, I feel that nothing much is gained by their statement of the issue. We might fish together and be much closer together than the discussion will bring us, and the time might be more profitably spent. But as I cannot go fishing I am substituting this.

The editor of the Gospel Advocate of the same week, official organ, I presume, of that group of Christians, or Disciples, who eschew the musical instrument in their worship (and it is amazing what wonderful music they can make without any sort of melodeon at all), comes along with a fling at an announcement in the Federal Council Bulletin with reference to the reunion of Methodists in Great Britain. While it marks as progress the fact English Methodists, a few years ago, were five bodies, later three, and now one; this good editor sprinkles pepper in our ice-cream by saying, "And this is still one more than there was in all the world in the days of the New Testament. The Bulletin thinks that it would be a happy development if the different bodies of Methodists in the United States could unite in one body, and the different Baptist bodies unite in one body, and the different Presbyterians unite in one, and so on. That would be right nice, I take it; but I can think of a happier development than that, and it is almost as likely. Suppose everybody just take a New Testament and decide to just be a Christian without being a Methodist or a Presbyterian or a Baptist, and so on. Then we will all be just 'one body in Christ, and severally members one of another,' like Christians were in New Testament times. Instead of doing away with some division, why not just do the job up right and do away with all of it? Jesus prayed for unity, didn't he? He did not pray for denominational federation. Jesus prayed for one thing, and the Federal Council Bulletin is working for something else. The Gospel Advocate will stay with Jesus."

I am glad somebody is going to stay with Jesus, but I am afraid the group is going to be so small that Jesus will be going as he did before. He'll be hobnobbing with the publicans and sinners, the Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists, and others, who do not "stay with Jesus."

One thing I don't like about the editor's proposition is that it will be too monotonous. I think too much of the Presbyterians, Baptists, and the Christians who "stay with Jesus." How can I get on without them?

I am for unity. And I am ready to begin it anywhere we can do a noble or friendly thing with someone else. As a starter I am suggesting that these two editors join me sometime on a fishing trip. Dr. Steel's "barbecue plan" for world peace will probably work in this matter of unification.

ISN'T HE ASKING TOO MUCH? Dr. Worth M. Tippy of New York, Executive Secretary of the Commission on the Church and Social Service of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ, spoke to the pastors of the Protestant Ministerial Union of New Orleans last Monday morning.

In a very intimate address the speaker brought before these ministers the urgency of the needs represented in so many of the phases of our community life today, setting forth the necessity of a prophetic and daring leadership on the part of our pastors.

Closing his address Dr. Tippy urged that pastors make a careful and thorough study of conditions today, seeking the place that should be occupied by the church. He urged not only that the preachers study and think, but he insisted that the Protestant preachers should get together. He hinted that there was little opportunity to develop any powerful influence that would be recognized by social and civic forces working as separate units.

But I insist that this is a large order. Think and unite. Both of these will require brain sweat and soul fatigue. It is probable that thoroughgoing study and thought will be followed by united action.

Certainly this is no time to allow sectarian cleavages to make it impossible for us to deliver united blows for the Kingdom.

Think and get together. Let's try it.

CHRIST AND BOX CARS. Doesn't sound right, does it? Seems that it would be more fitting to say, "Christ and Galilee."

But we shouldn't be so particular about how things sound.

Somebody rose the other day to say that our times are in great need of religious ingenuity. He was suggesting that we should develop some spiritual resourcefulness, a kind of Christian technique in keeping with this changed situation in which we now live. Guess he must have been feeling that "time makes ancient good uncouth." And I suppose that must have been what Paul was talking about when he said, "I have become all things to all men." There is religious resourcefulness for you. He always seemed to measure his method

By Dr. E. Stanley Jones

(We are indebted to Mrs. R. H. Wynn for typewritten copies of the addresses of Dr. E. Stanley Jones. Having heard them she wished to share them with her friends who are readers of the Advocate.—Editor.)

Part II

There are five great enemies, ignorance, poverty, disease, lack of unity and dishonesty in officials. I said to them "If you could get the last two done away with, could you solve the first three?" They said, "Really, our difficulty is the last two, or shall we say, the last one?"

China has been called on to deal with five revolutions at one time in one generation. A Chinese patriot was talking to Ramsey MacDonald, who said, "Why do you have them all at once? Why did you not take one at a time?" He replied, "Mr. MacDonald, which one?" The chaos which ensues is enough to tear any one to pieces, when this disturbed condition exists, but there is an outer unity, so that it does not fly to pieces while we are going through with it. One cannot stand and look at the situation and not come to the conclusion that a stabilizing force is holding them together as they pass through these days of travail. The nations have looked on with greedy eyes to see what they could get and to their shame, they have forced upon a weakened China, loot after loot.

The last great tragedy is that of Manchuria. The whole world problem is melting into one. The Renaissance is here; you cannot turn back these days. We are in the midst of forces which we cannot control and which carry us on further. There is the necessity for the inner reformation of the soul, the new birth of the spirit, to bring up this inner life and make it parallel the outer life, to make for stability to meet this terrifying freedom that is coming to man. Unless this can take place, it will be freedom only to destroy themselves. Where can we turn for this power?

In Ceylon when they got self-government and the ballot-box was used for the first time, they saw a woman go into the voting booth and after she had dropped her ballot into the box she stood with folded hands saying her prayers to the ballot box. There was a time when we did worship at the ballot box and we thought every thing would be all right. We know now that every thing depends on the kind of spirit that is brought to the ballot box. You can vote all kinds of iniquities and wrongs. It is not the ballot box but the character that is brought to that ballot box that determines what kind of results will follow.

In China they used to cut off the heads of 35,000 people, each with a single blow. Some one asked them, "You don't do that any more, do you?" "Oh, no; now we are republic; we hang them, same as you. With the coming of the republic we changed from cutting off heads to hanging and all problems were solved." We thought education might do it and made it widespread. In England some one said in 1840 "If we could get compulsory and universal education by the end of the century, all our social, economic and religious problems would be solved. He had a pathetic faith in education. Were the problems all solved? We know they are desperately acute everywhere throughout the world. Dare I say it? From our universities and schools may come merely educated rascals who will steal in terms of the people's millions? Education does not go deep enough down into the motives to change men; only religion can do that.

Then the deeper question comes, which religion? If these religions of the East have power to regenerate men, I should say, Regenerate them. I say to them, "I have no desire to force upon you, my friends, any other if yours will do the same thing," but when I look about me to see whether the old faiths can regenerate these lands, I am forced to the conclusion that I do not think they can. I went to the sacred Tai-Shan mountain of China. Were the priests there for some great vision they might behold? No, they were gambling, ever smoking opium. There is a vast, terrifying moral vacuum in China today that is possessing her soul. The old religions are being swept out, and, on the whole, nothing new is being put in its place. Five years ago they swept out all the missionaries. It looked as though the tears and prayers and sacrifices had come to naught while force and might reigned supreme. Five years later, all these missionaries are back and in a relationship of greater power and confidence. It did the Christian movement good to go through this period of religious testing. It is far stronger than ten years ago. There is a sense of having stood the worst and now they have the faith that enables them to face the future unafraid. I was in one city where the Communist Army was stationed and they decided they would take a girls' school and make it their headquarters. The teacher, a slip of a girl, and her pupils, decided they were not going out. They kept possession of three or four rooms where they were crowded together, and the soldiers took possession of the rest of the building. The soldiers said to them, "By to-morrow by such and such a time, you must get out." But the next day the girls said, "Look, we have washed our hair; how can we get out? The soldiers repeated their demand and the next day the girls said, "Look at our clothes; we have just washed them and we cannot go out." It went on for three solid months. The Chinese have a wonderful power of sitting and so has India. (If you don't pay your debts in India, a man will sit at your door step until you do.) These girls went on this way for three months and said "If you

MOTHER

As is the mother, so is her daughter.
—Ezekiel xvi, 44.

By Dr. W. L. Duren

The prophet uses this saying in a figurative sense; and it is the fundamental idea which underlies all agitations concerning eugenics and social environment; but it is also a source of fruitful suggestion for Mother's Day. No one should insist upon this saying as an ironclad rule of family life; but the very use of the proverb indicates an acknowledgment of the moral and social potency of the mother in shaping the future of her children. There is no glamour of a Mother's Day parade in these words. The plain assumption is that she is the organizer of family life and the agent of its moral control—the vestal autocrat who fixes the moral and social direction of the race. It would be neither fair nor seemly to turn these words into an accusation, but mothers should not forget that the position which places them upon a pedestal in the world's affection involves also a very sacred and even awful responsibility. Confectioners, flower shops, book stalls and telegraph companies have seized upon the tenderest emotion of the human heart and have made of it a commercial asset. It is as beautiful as it is gracious to send some token of love to quicken the pulse and brighten the face of that dear old mother, but that token should be as original as love itself. And it certainly should not offer to the mothers of the future the hopes of unearned affection and praise. The golden link of maternal responsibility is necessary alike to the maintenance of the exalted position indicated by the beautiful reminders of this day, and to the promotion of the moral, social and spiritual integrity of the race. The heroism and self-sacrifice of mother's priceless service in the humble precincts of home is the magic center about which our affections revolve. "As is the mother, so is the daughter." As long as we keep the home fires burning the frontiers are safe. But, alas, alas, when the supreme credential of our living shall cease to be the "unfeigned faith" which "dwelt" in our mothers!

put us out we will stand at the gate and weep." What could you do with a crowd of weeping girls? The soldiers said, "We will get out," and the girls are still in possession. When you talk to young people of that sort, you talk to young people who have moral fibre. The center of the whole thing is the youth of China, in the brain of young China. It is bad enough to study your lessons ordinarily, but if you have to think in terms of a chaotic country, torn hither and thither, no wonder the youth of China is the most chaotic. I have spoken to them from Mukden to Canton. Great groups came. I expected they would break up my meeting. I steeled myself against it. I was expecting any thing to happen, to be hooted down, to be driven out but instead of that, clear from Mukden to Canton, I spoke in these great cities to those great crowds and in no one single instance did they break up my meetings, heckle the speaker or stampede the crowds. They sat with breathless interest listening to a discussion of one question, "Can Christ save China?" and they knew what the alternatives were today, that two great forces are pleading for the soul of China; Communism and Christianity are knocking at the door of China. The question is which one will gain control. I think the next ten years will determine it. The vast vacuum of Asia is drawing all sorts of powers to the center and the issue will be settled in the next ten years. I asked a missionary whether he thought Communism would spread. He had been captured by them and held several weeks. "Yes, I think it will, because they are teaching, indoctrinating the people in Communism and before they let us loose, they gave us a regular course in Communism, put us through a very thorough course and then said, "You can go." When a soldier is captured he can become a member or if he does not want to, they turn him loose with three dollars and Communist literature. They are teaching, teaching. A general with whom I had an interview, told me his plans for putting it down. I asked, "Do you think you can put it down by force?" He said "Not unless we do something for the peasant, we can never put it down by force."

I said yesterday to the ministers that I thought Communism would be a mustard plaster on the back of society. Most of us never think until we feel the pain. We are beginning to think in terms of social reconstruction that would save our civilization from vast multitudes walking the streets hungry and other multitudes revelling in wealth. The class war of Communism, its atheism and compulsions, is no foundation on which to build a human brotherhood. The one thing on which they can rebuild is the Gospel of Jesus Christ. I don't say that as mere propaganda, but as a deep conviction. I told the ministers that I have been listening to Round-Table Conferences for twelve years where we say, "What does religion mean to you? Share with us what it means." So we go around the table and everybody lays on the table what religion means or does not mean to him. Skeptics, agnostics come. We say, "If that is a better way than the way of Jesus, we have got to find it out." I have been sitting listening for twelve years to what the finest men, religious and irreligious, have said, and one conclusion has forced itself upon my mind, that after the non-Christian religions have spoken from their best—not their worst—only One will meet the need.

Some people have complained that I do not speak of the darker phases of these civilizations over the seas. I do not think it would be fair to do it. Some charge the missionaries with telling these startling things to get money. I do not blame the people of the East for revolting against this; I should feel the same were I in their place. I shield everything if you approach it in the spirit of carping criticism or to get money. Surely, there is enough to break your heart. One can never look with indifference on a world like this; every expensive meal that I eat sticks in my throat because I know if the meal costs a dollar, it would feed a man for a whole month and perhaps his family with him and there I have gobbled it all down at one sitting. I know you have been hard hit and I have no desire to wound you but after I have seen the poverty of the East I wonder if any one of us in America knows what poverty really means.

WILLIAM ALLEN HAYS

By Rev. J. L. Decell, D.D.

On October 4, 1875 there was born to A. L. Hays and his wife, Eleanor Lucas Hays, their fifth child, a son, whom they named William Allen. When he was three years of age his parents moved from the place of his birth near Raleigh, Smith County, Mississippi to Wesson, which was then a thriving manufacturing center. For twenty-six years their son was to live at Wesson where he attended school, united with the church at the age of 11 years, became employed in the Mississippi Mills, married and answered the call to preach.

At Adams Campground in 1903, Dr. B. F. Jones, presiding elder, Brother Hays was licensed to preach. In December, 1903, he was admitted on trial into the Mississippi Conference at its ninety-sixth session which was held in Central Church, Meridian, over which Bishop Joseph S. Key presided. At Gloster in 1905 he was admitted into full connection and ordained to the order of Deacons by Bishop Charles B. Galloway; and, at Yazoo City on December 13, 1908 he was ordained to the order of Elder by Bishop H. C. Morrison. His itinerancy began with his pastorate at Seventh Avenue, Meridian and closed with Jefferson Street, Natchez.

His appointments were as follows: Seventh Avenue, Meridian 1904; Matherville, 1905-1907; Leakesville, 1908-1909; Bay Springs, 1910-1913; Decatur and Union, 1914-1917; Newton, 1918-1919; Popular Springs, Meridian, 1920-1923; Waynesboro, 1924-1928; Hattiesburg District, 1929-1932; Natchez, 1933. All of his ministry, except the four months he served in Natchez, was spent in central and eastern Mississippi. He served 21 years on five charges; nine years in Wayne County. He moved comparatively few times in the 29 years of his ministry and never left a charge that the people would not have gladly kept him longer as their pastor.

On December 20, 1824 William Allen Hays and Cora Campbell were united in marriage and to this happy union there were born three children: Harry Allen, who died when two years old; Mrs. Clara Hays Massey, wife of Professor C. A. Massey, Pachuta, Mississippi; and Ralph Hays, secretary to the president of State Teachers College, Hattiesburg, Mississippi. Clara and Ralph, with their mother survive. During the nearly thirty years of his ministry his devoted wife was his helper in every good word and work so long as her physical strength permitted; and his son and daughter never hindered him but loyally supported him and the Church.

The writer knew Will Hays when he was superintendent of the Sunday school at North Wesson and through all of his ministry as circuit preacher, station pastor, and presiding elder. He was a strong gospel preacher of poetic soul and evangelistic persuasion, faithful pastor and helpful presiding elder. As a member of the General Conference, Annual Conference Boards and Committees he was loyal to the Church and conscientious in his service. He "Hazarded his life for the name of the Lord Jesus Christ." From a serious illness he battled again to victory, in sorrow and anxiety because of the sickness of his wife he was heroic and gave himself unreservedly to the task to which he had been called by his Lord.

It would seem that his death was untimely. Amid the useful years of service he met death in the night of April 14, 1933 when his automobile plunged into a flooded stream near Meadville where the road-bed had been unknowingly washed away by the raging waters. The body was recovered and carried to Natchez where, on Saturday morning in Jefferson Street Church in the presence of sorrowful members and friends, his presiding elder Rev. Henry G. Hawkins and local pastors of other denominations, paid appropriate tribute to a worthy pastor of one of Methodism's historic churches.

The final rites were held at Waynesboro, for five years the place of his happy and fruitful pastorate. It was on Easter Sunday afternoon, April 16, 1933, in the beautiful church building he led in remodelling that the last service was held. The church was inadequate to seat the hundreds who had come to pay respect to the departed man of God. Representatives from every charge he ever served and thirty-five of his brother preachers were among those present. Rev. H. G. Hawkins was assisted in the services by W. J. Ferguson, J. B. Cain, W. T. Griffin, R. H. Clegg, C. C. Clark, D. E. Vickers, his conference class-mate and J. L. Decell.

Pure in purpose, courageous in consecration, and loyal in life, William Allen Hays, like Learner Blackman and Richmond Nolly, failed to survive flood-waters that stood between him and duty, but his soul triumphantly crossed the river of death into the City of God and his body will lie in the quiet cemetery at Waynesboro around which will come and go those who hold his memory in affectionate regard and children will grow old with respect and love for the pastor who neglected not the little ones of the fold.

His life will challenge us to our best, while his death will admonish us "to watch and pray for we know not the hour."

HOSPITAL WORKERS GUESTS OF BARNES HOSPITAL

By Miss Sadie Morrison, Treasurer General Hospital Board

The General Hospital Board and the Hospital Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held their regular joint sessions at the Hotel Kings-Way, St. Louis, Mo., April 19-20. The General Hospital Board, as usual, met first and received the report of the General Secretary, Dr. Chas. C. Jarrell, and a report from each of the hospitals belonging to our Church.

The General Board came to the end of the fiscal year with all bills paid and $4,052.87 cash in excess of all liabilities. Dr. Jarrell reported that the expenses for the year had fallen below the budget authorized by the Executive Committee. The salary of the General Secretary had been reduced twice and the Board instructed the Executive Committee to make no further reduction unless it became absolutely necessary. The promotion expenses (of the Golden Cross Enrollment) had been cut to the quick and had fallen a little below $4,000.

Appreciative resolutions were passed about the retiring Treasurer and Associate Secretary, Mr. Fred T. Barnett, and the Board decided to leave the entire executive burden on the General Secretary.

Miss Sadie Morrison, Office Secretary, was made Treasurer in addition to her other duties. This reduces the normal personnel of the General Hospital Board to two persons.

Rev. A. C. Miller, D.D., LL.D., attended the Hospital Association from the Little Rock Conference, and speaks of the sessions of the Association in the following cordial words:

"The editor had the delightful privilege of attending the annual meeting of the Hospital Association of our Church at St. Louis, Mo., last week. Under the direction of Dr. C. C. Jarrell, the very fine efficient Executive Secretary of our General Hospital Board, an unusually interesting program had been prepared and executed. The attendance was a little less than usual, on account of the depression, but the addresses were uniformly instructive and suggestive to one, like the editor, who is not thoroughly conversant with hospital affairs. Bishop W. A. Candler, President of the Board, was able to be present and to preside at one of the sessions and to interpolate humorous and sage remarks. There was opportunity to visit the great Barnes Hospital and to enjoy a banquet at the Hotel Kingsway. Dr. C. W. Webdell, the President, who is chaplain of Barnes Hospital, presided and at all the sessions assisted. Dr. J. H. Groseclose, Superintendent of Dallas Methodist Hospital, was elected president for the coming year. We could wish that all our preachers and many laymen could hear such addresses and papers as were delivered on the occasion. They would become convinced of the value of the church hospital and be more ready to support these Christlike institutions."

GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Merigold congregation with their beautiful church well equipped for a District Conference session, and which was dedicated the Sunday following the District Conference the 20th and 21st of April, and the respective committees of the church on entertainment and serving, made it impossible for one to go away without feeling somehow that the good people with their pastor, Rev. W. W. Jones had done a little more than we would ordinarily expect. For nothing was left undone for our comfort and happiness with them.

The ladies of the church led by the President of the Women's Missionary Society, Mrs. B. P. Brooks, in a beautifully arranged dining room at the rear of the main auditorium, decorated with beautiful china and silver, and lilies and so richly laden with so many good eats, made one feel that not only could Merigold Methodists cook well, but with care make you enjoy it all and save the occasion for a happy one indeed.

The attendance upon the District Conference was real good. Of course some were expecting Bishop Denny to be with us and preside as was announced, but he was providentially hindered and could not be present, but, while we would have enjoyed the Bishop, with Dr. E. Nash Broyles as our efficient Presiding Elder, his wise counsel and leadership, many years experience as an executive, and his pre-arranged program with which he always goes into his work, we were able to move rapidly, yet not too hurriedly, and smoothly through the regular proceedings of the District Conference. And too, with the hearty co-operation of all the preachers and delegates, the session was indeed a very pleasant one.

The preaching for the occasion was of a high order and we were lifted in our spirits by the messages of the Revs. S. H. Caffey, Tunica; J. W. Robertson, Duhlin; and E. B. Sharp, Lula, Miss.

The delegates elected to the Annual Conference, were: J. H. Johnson, Clarksdale, Mrs. Ed. Rainer, Merigold; Mrs. W. C. Galceran, Jr., Duncan; Mrs. C. A. Parks, Indianola; E. A. Tanner, Indianola; S. V. Wall, Cleveland; J. H. Sherard, Sherard; and R. E. Davis, Cleveland.

The District Lay Leaders are S. V. Wall and his associate leaders R. L. Jordan, Glenn Allen, and Gerald Fitzgerald, Clarksdale.

The Golden Cross Director, Mr. J. H. Sherard. The District Conference on invitation goes to Shelby, Miss., next year.

PROHIBITION FORCES ORGANIZED

By Rev. L. D. Posey
Pastor Baptist Church, Jena, La.

Sunday morning, March 26, Dr. A. W. Turner, of Shreveport, spoke in the Jena Baptist Church to a large congregation composed of members and friends of all the churches in town, on the question of prohibition as we now have it, (or do not have it), in this state and our nation. In the afternoon of the same day, at his suggestion, and under his direction, an organization was formed, and which is known as, "The Allied Forces for Prohibition in LaSalle Parish." Since that time, a constitution, by-laws, aim and purpose of the organization have been perfected and adopted, so that we have an organization fully equipped for business.

On Sunday afternoon, April 23, Dr. Cottingham of Pineville, addressed a large congregation in the Baptist church here on the question of prohibition. His speech was in connection with a program rendered in part by high school students from Jena and Trout-Goodpine high schools, where prohibition organizations have already been formed among the high school students.

This organization is not to supplant any present organization in the state, but to support all kindred organizations, and unite them in one solid drive to retain Louisiana in the dry column, and prevent the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

This organization in Jena, is two days older than the one set up in Alexandria, March 28, but this one was organized with that one in view, and its purpose is to work under that one where necessary. The truth is, every evangelical church in the state should immediately set up an organization such as we have, to unite the forces of righteousness against the liquor business. The fight is on, and the sooner every pastor, with all his force, enters the fray, the better for the cause of righteousness.

by the need, and the method had to step down and out if it did not reach the need. And he caught that from Jesus. Some of the disciples became greatly disturbed because they found a neighbor casting out devils in the name of Christ, but He did not follow them in their way. So they served notice that he should close his shop and quit. Jesus rebuked them and hinted that he was much more interested in getting devils on the run than he was about the method used.

Mrs. R. E. Smith of Shreveport has charge of the Young People's division of the First Methodist Church. The group outgrew the quarters of the church building and the Jewish neighbors up the street opened their lovely building to them.

But that isn't the story. Mrs. Smith has a way of getting out among the unemployed and discouraged, and of putting her hand upon heads of undernourished children, and taking little babies of those barren homes in her arms, and of taking things to those people. I was watching, one day, when she came down the street. The baby smiles that greeted her were far more beautiful than wild verbenas blooming along the railroad track. And those old tears just wouldn't stay back from my eyes.

This lady became bothered about these unemployed. Some of them could not remain much longer in the little houses on the back street. Rent must be paid there, too. Her mind was accelerated by her heart. She saw some box cars waiting idly down there on the tracks in the yards. Seemed that they would hardly go out on the silver rails any more. They looked so forlorn. So she called the railroad superintendent and asked if she might have some of them. The answer was a good firm muscular "Yes."

A few days later three of those box cars were lifted from their trucks and started across the city. Now they are on blocks and are taking the shape of homes for three unemployed families. A good man furnished some land and the city had the ground broken for gardens. Mrs. Smith's division of young people will furnish and beautify one of them, other organizations the other two. There will be no rent to pay, but there will be a chance to make a garden and raise some chickens and a big crop of self respect and hope for a better day.

Passing by that little box car colony you will be able to see the fathers and mothers and the little children—and one who is invisible like the One who stayed all night with Daniel in the lion's den and with the Hebrew children in the fiery furnace.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. W. B. Baker, Durant, Miss., favors us with some renewals. Thanks.

Mrs. T. W. Beville, Bernice, La., a niece of the late Rev. J. D. Harper, writes a letter commending the Advocate.

A community revival, under the leadership of evangelists Allen and Hollingsworth, was held at Tallulah, La., April 24-30.

The Anti-Saloon League of America is observing its Fortieth Anniversary during the week of May 21-27.

First Church, LaGrange, Ga., recently was the place of a union meeting conducted by Dr. Theo. Copeland. The meeting was highly successful.

Miss Nannie B. Aiken, Conway, Ark., renews her subscription, speaking most generously of the Advocate.

Rev. L. P. Wasson conducted a revival meeting in his church at Clarksdale, Miss., the week following Easter.

Revs. J. W. Robertson, S. H. Caffey and E. B. Sharp preached the sermons at the Greenville District Conference at Merigold, Miss., April 20th and 21st.

Rev. W. O. Hunt, our pastor at Shannor, Miss., is confined to his bed under the care of physicians. We hope that a few weeks rest will find this splendid young minister up and well again.

Rev. J. R. Murff shows his interest in the Advocate by a list of renewals and a contribution to the paper in the shape of money. Thank you, Brother Murff.

Dr. W. P. Buhrman delivered two fine addresses at the Aberdeen District Conference on "The Place of Christian Literature" and "Keeping the Financial Appeal Before Our People."

Rev. A. T. McIlwain temperance leader for Lowndes County, Miss., has secured through Dr. V. C. Curtis a bulletin full of information for distribution over that county and adjoining counties.

Rev. P. M. Caraway, pastor East End Church, Meridian, Miss., recently spoke before the Kiwanis Club of his city, using as his subject, "Kiwanis Indestructible."

The National Prohibition Emergency Committee, coming out of the great Washington meeting, is getting under way. It has opened headquarters in the Investment Building, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Albert S. Lutz, Jr., son of Dr. A. S. Lutz, pastor of our church at Minden, La., is listed among the graduating seniors of the Minden High School. Congratulations and good wishes.

Mrs. Winsor Howard Cushing of New York City, known to her Crowley friends as Hazel Dare Wilder, recently sang a solo at First Church, Crowley, La.

Mrs. H. C. Richardson, wife of Senator H. C. Richardson, Franklinton, La., passed away Friday, April 7. Among our preachers participating in the funeral service were Rev. C. E. McLean, her pastor, and Revs. C. C. Miller and F. N. Sweeney.

Revs. A. L. Brewster, J. D. Wroten and M. E. Scott were the preachers who delivered sermons at the Aberdeen District Conference. Over two hundred attended that Conference at Houston, Miss., May 2nd and 3rd.

Rev. J. D. Wroten, has engaged Dr. W. Angle Smith, pastor of First Church, Shreveport, La., to preach daily during the Annual Conference of North Mississippi to be held at Water Valley, Miss., this fall.

The Easter Cantata used by our Church at Crowley, Rev. C. K. Smith, pastor, was "The Lord of Life." Another feature of Passion Week was a sunrise prayer meeting at 6 o'clock Good Friday morning.

Mr. W. M. Hunt and his wife, for forty years readers of the Advocate (West Monroe, La.) renew their subscription notwithstanding the fact that Brother Hunt has suffered a 50% reduction in salary.

A new type of work is being developed under the Board of Christian Education where large groups of workers gather for one day and discuss the problems of their particular churches. There is a fine field for this type of institute.

We regret to know that Mrs. J. M. Bradley, wife of Rev. J. M. Bradley, presiding elder of the Corinth District, has been ill for some time. We know that their many friends will continue to pray for her complete recovery.

Rev. Hardy Neal, one of our general evangelists, has an open date May 14-28. Anyone desiring his services, with or without singer, will find him at 242 18th Ave., South, St. Petersburg, Fla.

A copy of the Easter Number of "Fellowship," the organ of the Wesley Fellowship of New Orleans, came to our desk. It is a mimeographed bulletin carrying information about this excellent work of the young adults.

Rev. A. A. McKnight, pastor at Angie, La., reports a Charge Rally Day for Sunday, April 30. Dr. C. C. Miller and Rev. C. E. McLean did the preaching. The editor regretted that he could not respond to the invitation extended by Bro. McKnight.

Can you use him? Rev. Floyd O'dom, a ministerial student of Millsaps College, receiving his degree this commencement, wishes to get to work as soon as possible. He offers his services to any preacher who may desire him, and in any capacity in which he can be of use. Write him at Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss.

About 2 a.m. Monday, May 1, the town of Gloster was visited by a hail storm that lasted for twenty minutes. The parsonage garden of Rev. J. H. Morrow, in which were Irish potatoes, corn, cabbage, tomatoes, beans and other vegetables in an advanced stage of growth was devastated. Although the pounding of the hail on the roof sounded like artillery, being metal, it stood the bombardment.

The Sunday School at Kingston, Miss., on the Washington Charge, Rev. F. J. Jones, pastor, has been largely attended recently, almost filling the auditorium of that church, which last year celebrated the seventy-fifth year of its use. But the congregation there is one of the oldest in the Southwest. Lorenzo Dow gave his watch for buying the lot on which the First Methodist church of the community was built, succeeded in later years by the present structure.

Wedding bells. Mr. Russell Kearney and Miss Henrietta Humphries, Greenwood, Miss., were recently united in marriage at First Church, Greenwood, with the pastor, Rev. E. H. Cunningham, officiating. Mr. Kearney is engaged in farming in the delta. The bride is a member of one of the old families of the city. After a wedding trip to Jackson, Miss., and New Orleans they returned to Greenwood where they will make their home.

The congregation of the Natchez Mission, Natchez, Miss., greatly appreciate the donation to them recently of a new communion service set by the Seashore Camp Ground Sunday School. This congregation has recently outgrown the house they have formerly occupied, and are planning to move into a more commodious and more accessible building offered them on Cemetery Street, Natchez. Rev. F. J. Jones is pastor; the Mission is part of the Washington Charge.

Rev. G. C. Gregory, pastor at Verona, Miss., relates a vivid story of the narrow escape he had when his car plunged off a bridge into twenty-five feet of rushing water recently. He doubtless owes his life to his cool judgment and his ability to handle himself in deep water. Being a man of great physical strength he was able to push through the strong current and get to the top of the water. He was under the water in the car for a considerable time before he could squeeze out of the window. Very few people come out of such a tight situation alive.

At Mt. Vernon on the Gloster charge, Rev. J. H. Morrow, pastor, on April 30th, a great Laymen's Rally was held. Quarterly Conference was held at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, preceded by addresses morning and afternoon by Hon. R. E. Bennett of Meadville, Judge Foreman, of Jackson, Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, Conference Lay Leader, and Rev. H. G. Hawkins, Presiding Elder of the Vicksburg District. Dinner was served on the large tables that stand on the grounds. It is a thickly populated community, and near the church is the Homochitto School.

Rev. L. A. McKeown, one of the honored members of the North Mississippi Conference, has been living at Merigold, Miss., since his recent superannuation. Mrs. W. B. Parks deeded to Bro. and Sister McKeown a neatly furnished residence to be theirs as long as they live. There they live among friends. At the dedication service of the new church at Merigold on April 23, the pastor, Rev. W. W. Jones, on behalf of the church presented to Bro. McKeown, who, in 1920, began the erection of the present building, an enlarged picture of the laying of the corner stone in 1920, which shows him with a brick in his hand and with the trowel ready to lay the first stone. The officials of the church had him to present the building for dedication. Rev. W. R. Goudelock took part in the service of dedication as he was the pastor under whose leadership the building was brought to completion sufficient to allow it to be used for worship.

HEAR BISHOP DARLINGTON

On Mother's Day, May 14, Bishop U. V. W. Darlington begins a meeting at Epworth Church, Memphis, Tennessee.

Rev. Robt. A. Clark, an ex-Mississippian, is the pastor of this rapidly growing Memphis church. The membership is now 1,000, 233 having been added during the seventeen months' pastorate of Rev. R. A. Clark.

Dr. Clark extends an invitation to Advocate readers for Bishop Darlington's meeting, especially to the preachers and people of the North Mississippi Conference, many of whom are close enough to attend some of these services.

—Renew Your Advocate To-day— MEMORIAL MERCY HOME

The following resolutions with reference to our Memorial Mercy Home, New Orleans, were adopted at the late sessions of our three Conferences: Mississippi—"That the month of May be set aside for special offering to be taken in all our churches for the Home."

North Mississippi—"That we designate Mother's Day as the most suitable time for taking a special offering for the support of the Home; and where this is impracticable, that the offering be taken any time during the month of May."

FOUR SCORE YEARS OF SERVICE

The New Orleans Christian Advocate is one of the oldest religious newspapers in the South. It is now in its eightieth year of service to the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi. Throughout all its history it has never been face-to-face with a struggle for existence as it is today. Even in the early days of Methodism in this section, to say nothing of the days immediately following the war between the States, the yellow fever epidemic, and the more recent world conflict, it has maintained a paid-up circulation of more than seven thousand. Today, unless our many readers who have allowed their subscriptions to expire forward us their renewals before the end of our present campaign, we will have the smallest subscription list in the history of our Conference organ at a time the Advocate is most needed in the advancement of God's Kingdom. May we appeal to our friends to look after this important matter now? It costs you less than three cents a week. Is not the Advocate worth far more than this to you and the great Church we all love so much? We are counting on you.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Vicksburg District Conference of the Mississippi Annual Conference of the M. E. Church, South, convened in the Methodist church at Woodville, Miss., at 9 a.m., May 2, 1933.

Rev. H. G. Hawkins called the conference to order and conducted the devotional service, after which the roll was called, and J. H. Grice was elected secretary and Vardaman Owen assistant secretary. S. W. Sharbrough was re-elected District Lay Leader, and H. H. Crisler and Vardaman Owen assistants.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: J. P. Bennett, Robert Lewis, J. G. Anders, S. W. Sharbrough, R. T. Liddell, H. H. Crisler, H. A. Ford, Robt. Selby, Mrs. W. T. Revs. J. L. Sells, J. L. Smith, J. F. Campbell, and J. H. Grice were elected the ad-interim committee.

In the afternoon of the first day the conference visited some historic places near Woodville. This tour was planned by Brother H. G. Hawkins and directed by Brother Robt. Lewis, editor of the Woodville Republican, and took us to the stately old home and the grave of the mother of Jefferson Davis, and to Bowling Green, where is the old home of Judge Edward McGehee, and the interesting cemetery in which are the graves of Edward McGehee and his son, Micajah McGehee, who was one of the twenty-two survivors of the 4th Fremont Expedition to California in 1848.

A standing vote was given in expression of courtesies and hospitality.

"A GREAT WOMAN"

By Rev. W. C. Newman

Every once in a while something happens to make me exceedingly proud of being a Methodist, of belonging to that great body of saints that have gone on before and bequeathed to us so rich an heritage.

Until March 1st, 1933, there lived in this town a lady whose devotion to the Methodist Church had extended through more than three score and ten years. She did not remember a time when her family did not receive the New Orleans Christian Advocate. She learned to read in its pages, and one of her last desires was to renew her subscription, the price of which I am enclosing in this letter at the request of her daughter.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

Mrs. Louise Corkern Eudy was born in St. Helena Parish, La., the daughter of Stephen R. Corkern, for many years superintendent of a Methodist Sunday school. Such honorable names as that of Barney Pipkin, a pioneer Methodist preacher were household words in that time. When her sister married another Methodist preacher and came back to Mississippi with him, Louise Corkern came to visit her and remained to marry another Methodist Steward, Nelson Carroll Eudy, who served his church until the last day of his life.

They kept a list of the Methodist preachers who have been entertained in their home, and when I read the list I thanked God for such homes where Methodist preachers have received not only the comforts of this world but grace and inspiration through the prayers and faithfulness of such as these.

She and her husband began life together in a log house in what was then little more than a clearing in the wilderness. She saw the beginning of this town, which was named for her sister. She knew the tragedies of three wars. She witnessed the shifting fortunes of many people for many years. But through it all her faith never wavered, and her loyalty to God and her Church never varied.

It was wonderful to see her endure the suffering and death of a daughter of God. Those of us who were near at the last were enriched by her faith and cheerfulness. The last things she read was the Advocate; Dr. Steel's Creole Gumbo, and the History of Mississippi Methodism.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The district conferences have been well attended. The reports from the various committees have been good. The resolutions concerning prohibition have been strong and vigorous. The spirits of the brethren have been delightful. The reports on Christian education have been helpful and more complimentary than they should be, but greatly appreciated just the same. The kindness of the presiding elders and the pastor-hosts has cheered us on our way.

There is a note of sturdy faith that is challenging to greater undertakings in the name of the Lord. The prophets were always hopeful in depressions and pessimistic in flush times.

Our mission funds for this month have picked up some. Not much, but this indicates the faith and love and loyalty to Jesus Christ that makes our hearts glow with hope. As our people give to Missions indicates their abiding interest in the entire cause and plan of Christ. Thanks should be offered to the abiding faith of our loyal people.

Below is the list of money received from Sunday School Day offerings. Those with a star () are on the Honor Roll, which means 10c for each active member in the Sunday school: Pelahatchie, $11.83; Shubuta, $13.10*; Osyka, $1; New Augusta, $2.78; Beumont, $2.22; Logtown, $1.50; Gloster, $6.50*; Raleigh, $2.15; Hiwanee, 65c; Mt. Carmel, $3.05*; Ridgeland, $4.50; Grace, $2.78; Brandon, $8.37*; Meadville, $3.20; Homewood, $2.75; Raymond, $3.71; Big Rock, $1.12; Chumkey, $1.04; Forest, $5.37; Walnut Grove, $1.15; Woodville, $5.50; Moss Point, $8.64; Centenary (McComb), $15.70; East End, Meridian, $35; Lauderdale, $4.52; Central, Meridian, $75*; Millsaps Memorial, $3.06; Mellen, 33c; Philadelphia, $5.73.

The Board of Christian Education appreciates this fine response in its time of need, and we surely do thank each one for their efforts. If any mistakes are made about the Honor Roll let us know and we will gladly correct them

There is an increase in Sunday school attendance reported all over the Conference. This is cheering and cheerful news. Money is not pouring in, but most of the schools are getting enough money to make the school function and share with other causes.

If you wish a Cokesbury School, please let me know and I will do all I can to get you a teacher without cost, except travel and entertainment while the teacher is with you.

Pray for the work and the workers.
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Important Meetings

District institutes have been planned for five of the districts, as follows:

Greenville District, at Shelby, May 16.

Greenwood District, at Greenwood, May 17.

Aberdeen District, East Side, at Wren School, May 18.

Aberdeen District, West Side, at Calhoun City, May 19.

Columbus District, at South Union Campground, May 20.

These will be all-day gatherings, beginning at 9:30. We will have as our visitors and helpers in all of the meetings Rev. M. L. Rippey, Director of Adult Work of the General Board, and Miss Barnett Spratt, of the Children's Division of the General Board. These people will be able to render very valuable service to our Conference. Every pastor, superintendent, officer, teacher, and all other people who are members of the Church and interested in its progress are expected to attend these meetings. Especially do we want representatives of all adult Bible classes to be present for the federation meeting in the afternoon, when Dr. Rippey will have charge. In the afternoon Miss Spratt will meet with all workers with children and will give special help to those interested in vacation schools. These meetings should be largely attended.

Our Conference Standard Training School

Plans are complete for the holding of the Fourteenth Conference Standard Training School for church workers at Grenada College, June 5-10. The following courses will be offered:

Training Primaries in Worship, Mrs. C. W. Kent, instructor.

Training Juniors in Worship, Prof. P. J. Rutledge, instructor.

Teaching Adolescents, Miss Frances McLester, instructor.

The Administration of the Adult Division, Rev. C. A. Parks, instructor.

Leadership of Mission Study Groups, Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, instructor.

Evangelism, Dr. O. E. Goddard, instructor.

You will notice that these are the very best instructors that may be found in our Church. Mrs. Lipscomb will lead the group of workers from the missionary societies and others who are interested in missionary training. We have no greater character and more effective teacher in our Church. Dr. Goddard needs no word of presentation to any informed Methodist. He will teach the course in Evangelism and will occupy the platform at the evening hour. We will have a treat in the presence and work of Dr. Goddard.

Every church should send one or more workers to this school. Several churches are already planning to send representatives. The board will be only $5 for the week. It will be a small item for most any Sunday school or church to send at least one representative. Many individuals will come. Those who have attended these schools in the past know what they mean in fellowship and information. If you are interested write me for further information.

Sunday School Day

The offering for Sunday School Day is coming in right along. Be sure and state whether the offering is enough to amount to 10 cents per active member of the Sunday school, for this puts your Sunday school on the Honor Roll. Send your offering to the Board of Christian Education, Grenada, Miss.

Pray for our work and our workers.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

The second Young People's Training Conference of the Shreveport City Union, April 23-28, was quite successful, in spite of a number of conflicting events. The average attendance was about fifty, and thirty-six credits were issued at the close. Miss Anna Pharr Turner was the Educational Director, with Mr. Merlin McKinnon Chairman of the Board of Managers.

The Union is very grateful to the three instructors for their services. They were: Mrs. R. E. Smith, of Shreveport, who taught "Worship in the Young People's Division;" Rev. H. L. Johns, of Ruston, teaching "Building the Program for Seniors and Young People;" and Rev. E. O. Harbin of Nashville, teaching "Recreational Leadership."

Rev. J. B. Grambling visited the conference one evening and assisted in chorus singing. The Conference Director attended the entire conference. Rev. A. K. McLellan was present for the opening sessions.

Union Happenings

Miss Sue Bill Sherwin reports a good meeting of the High Road Union of Shreveport District, held at Mansfield, April 2. Devotional was led by Mrs. Guy M. Hicks, with the story of Mary and Martha after Christ's death until His resurrection, presented by Misses Leo and Earle Cowley. Special music consisted of a chorus by the Mansfield young people. Rev. Van Carter was a welcome guest. Grand Cane young people were represented again, after an absence of several months. The May meeting will be held at Logansport.

Rev. Carl Lueg reports that the Service Union of Monroe District met at Collinston April 20, with over one hundred present, and quite a large number of visitors. No business was conducted, the meeting being of a devotional nature, using the Easter theme. The holy communion was observed as a part of the service.

Assembly

Only a little over a month remains before the opening of the Christian Adventure Assembly, the first of the summer assemblies. You are remembering the dates—June 13-19, for the above, and June 20-26 for the Young People's Assembly. Churches should be getting ready to send at least one delegate to each assembly.

We realize how financially handicapped most of our churches are just at this time, but the need is greater than ever before to take advantage of this opportunity for Christian education for our young people. The church—Christian people everywhere—must work harder than ever to reach and to hold young people through these trying times.

Furthermore, the Assemblies furnish your young people opportunities for a fine vacation, with clean, happy, directed fun, fellowship with other young people, and other desirable vacation features, in a definitely Christian environment. Teachers, chaplains, officers, speakers, are all leaders who love young people, and who have their best interests at heart. The Assembly programs are built on the most up-to-date educational standards.

We hope to see your young people at Mansfield this summer in the finest and best of Assemblies.

MARY SEARLES,
Conf. Director Y. P. Work.

SALEM BIBLE SCHOOL

By Rev. J. Noel Hinson, P. C.

A very interesting and successful "Daily Vacation Bible School" was held at Salem church (Salem and Friendship charge, Aberdeen District) the week of April 24-29. The forty-nine children who were enrolled brought their lunches and spent the day at church.

The instructors were all of home talent. The following is the names of those who made the school possible and the group with whom they worked: Miss Faye Gray, Beginner-Primary Department; Miss Maudie Messer, Junior Department; Miss Lylas Raby, Intermediate-Senior Department, and Miss Movour Ruth Gafford, organist and instructor in mission stories.

The school was closed by presenting to the church and public the Sunday School Day program, "The Faith That Shares."

During the same week a Cokesbury Class, "Life of Christ," was conducted at night for the adults and young people. Five credits were issued.

Try the Doctor's prescription called Cystex (pronounced Siss-tex). Formula in every package. Starts work in 15 minutes. Soothes and tones raw, irritated tissues. FALSE TEETH

Can Not Embarrass

Most wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their teeth dropped or slipped at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH on your plates. Makes false teeth stay in place and feel comfortable. Sweetens breath. Get FASTEETH at any good drug store.

MAKES WOMEN LOSE FAT

Miss Rea M. Haines of Dayton, Ohio, writes:

"I weighed 180 so started to take Kruschen. I never was so surprised as when I weighed myself the first week—I lost 7 pounds. I just bought my 3rd jar and am down to 145—am still taking them and never felt better in my life." (June 17, 1932).

To take off fat—take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—one bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a few cents—get it at any druggist in America. If this first bottle fails to convince you this is the SAFE and harmless way to lose fat—your money gladly returned.

But be sure and get Kruschen Salts—imitations are numerous and you must safeguard your health.

For Disorders Due To CONSTIPATION

"I have used Black-Draught for a number of years and I find that it is about the best medicine I can take for headache, biliousness, a tight feeling and for gas and spitting up of my food," writes Mr. Bert Smith, of Carthage, Mo. "Taken in broken doses, Black-Draught will relieve this. It will also help (as a laxative) a cold and hoarseness. When I feel 'all down and out,' I take Black-

CONFERENCE NEWS

Mississippi

The Lizzie Johnson Zone of the late Newton District held the second quarter's meeting at Lake, Mrs. T. F. Graham, zone leader, in charge. A good attendance registered in spite of the downpour of rain. The Montrose auxiliary, led by Mrs. J. W. Abney, conducted the morning program. The devotional, by Rev. G. H. Jones, consisted of scripture reading from Psalms 51 and John 15, with appropriate and timely remarks on evangelism. "Equipment, the Christian Needs for Soul Winning," Mrs. J. N. Gam-mage; Vocal solo, Mrs. Irene Barnett; "Women of the Missionary Society, Light Bearers," Mrs. L. D. McLaurin. The climax of the morning session was a consecration service, in which all present engaged, kneeling at the altar while an earnest prayer was invoked by Rev. W. M. Sullivan, then presiding elder.

Group meetings for the different auxiliary officers were held in the Sunday school rooms and during the interval an inspiring message was given by Rev. Mr. Sullivan, in which he stressed the need of coming back to God in this day. He said if the right kind of a spirit of evangelism is manifested, that God will come to our rescue. He also stated that the decline in missions is largely due to the decline in spirituality of the ministry and the pew, in that we are trying to run the machinery without the power. The need of all church workers and teachers is to know God, whose power is not lacking.

A splendid article on the meaning of evangelism was given by Mrs. Cooley, of Rose Hill, after which a recess was taken and a bountiful lunch was served by the ladies of Lake.

Opening song, afternoon—"Lord, Speak to me;" prayer by Rev. T. C. Moody. The World Outlook was presented by Mrs. H. McMullen, Conference Superintendent of Publicity. A playlet, "The Reference Book," was given, in which the various features of the Outlook were presented in an interesting and instructive manner. Solo, "I Am Satisfied With Jesus," Mrs. Porter.

Representatives were present from Newton, Rose Hill, Montrose, Garlandville, and Lake, including the pastors, Revs. C. M. Crossley, G. H. Jones, T. C. Moody, H. J. Moore and W. M. Sullivan, presiding elder. Newton won the banner for best attendance. Several items, including the Octagon soap campaign and membership requirements, were discussed. Closing prayer was offered by Rev. G. H. Jones. On invitation, the next meeting will be held at Garlandville in July.

The home of Mrs. L. S. Stoner was the scene of a lovely bridal shower, given in honor of Miss Melba Harbin, under the direction of the auxiliary of Holly Bluff, Vicksburg District. The home was beautifully decorated with mock orange blossoms, lilies and palms. The guests were welcomed by Mrs. Stoner and the officers of the Missionary society. After a delicious salad course was enjoyed, a small bell announced the entrance of little Miss Rosemary Stoner, who carried a wand in one hand, and, bowing to all of the guests, presented a scroll to Mrs. Abe Nolan, the president, who read the following: "We, the Woman's Missionary Society of the town of Holly Bluff, District of Vicksburg, Conference of Mississippi, being of a sound and joyful mind, make this will and testament:

"First. To Miss Melba Harbin, our loyal and faithful co-member, gratitude for all she has been to us in the past, love and good wishes in the vast undertaking in the future.

"Second. We bequeath to her a continued interest and lively activity in the auxiliary of Yazoo City, or wherever she may dwell, so long as she may live.

"Third. We hereby nominate James W. Griffin, a most fortunate young man, executor of this will, and request that he shall be responsible not only for her lasting joy and happiness, but for pleasant memories of the Holly Bluff friends."

This instrument signed and read aloud in the presence of us, and many other well-wishers, upon the occasion of a bridal shower in the home of Mrs. L. S. Stoner, upon the seventeenth day of April, nineteen hundred and thirty-three, hereby ratifies and confirms every expression of friendliness and good wishes.

Signed:

MRS. ABE NOLAN, Pres.;
MRS. W. O'BRYAN, Sec.;
MRS. W. T. HEGMAN, Inscriber.

Almost immediately the fairy maiden returned, holding an oriental parasol in one hand, drawing a beautiful white wagon with the other, laden with gifts that were presented to Miss Harbin.

North Mississippi

The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Sardis-Grenada District convened at Sardis, April 25, with Mrs. Roy Grisham presiding and a large and enthusiastic audience present.

The session opened with a sermon by Rev. J. H. Feits, of Grenada, and the Council message was presented by the Conference Secretary, Mrs. R. P. Neblett, of Pickens.

LUZIANNE GUARANTEE—If after using the entire contents of a can of Luzianne (according to directions) you are not satisfied in every respect, your grocer will refund the money you paid for it.

Mr. McDonald, of the Orphanage at Jackson, gave a splendid address, in which he voiced the appreciation of the assistance in helping to secure the $18,000 through the Octagon coupons. Mr. Brown, of Sardis, spoke in behalf of the financial condition of our Methodist Hospital at Memphis, and urged co-operation.

An interesting feature of the program was the two playlets, one given by the young ladies of Sardis, on "The Status of Women," and the other by the Senatobia auxiliary, stressing the value and importance of every home taking "The World Outlook."

A solo by Mrs. Fred Klyce, with Mrs. John Askew at the organ, added much to the enjoyment of the occasion.

A bountiful plate lunch was served in the church at noon by the ladies of Sardis.

The consecration service, by Mrs. Neblett, assisted by Mrs. Askew at the organ, and the voice of Mrs. Klyce was so very impressive that all realized "a mountain top" experience, and that it was a privilege to be present.

Marks auxiliary extended the invitation for the next meeting, which was accepted. The meeting closed with Rev. Mr. Bennett, of Crenshaw, pronouncing the benediction.

MRS. HENRY S. FOOTE, whose maiden name was Alice Alexander Hiveley, was born December 20, 1866, and passed to her eternal reward on March 30, 1933. She was a daughter of Peter C. and Mrs. Margaret Columbia Hiveley, who resided for a time in Drew County, Arkansas. After the death of the father, the family, which included nine children, moved to Copiah County, Miss., near Betbesda church, where the subject of this memoir grew to womanhood. On March 27, 1904, she was united in marriage to Henry S. Foote, of Cayuga, Hinds County, Miss., with whom she lived happily to the day of her death. She was converted in early girlhood and united with the Methodist Church and ever remained one of its most loyal and useful members. She was a devoted wife, a kind neighbor, an active member of the Woman's Missionary Society and a veritable good samaritan to the poor and the distressed. Rich in faith and good works, and bountiful in life, she will be sadly missed in the church and community where she lived for many years. Besides her sorrowing husband, only one sister, Mrs. G. T. Colvin, of Douglas, Arizona, survives to mourn her passing. She has "fallen on sleep," but some glad day we shall meet her again in the home above.

MRS. IDA JANE ANDING, wife of Rev. W. E. Anding, died at her home near Pleasant Hill, La., April 15, 1933, after many months of suffering from high blood pressure. The subject of this sketch was born in the state of Mississippi on October 22, 1890, later moved to the state of Louisiana, where she met her husband. They were married February 10, 1907. To this union were born ten children, of whom eight still live—seven sons and one daughter. Being the wife of a minister, she took great delight in helping make it possible for him to carry the gospel to the lost. She was converted at the age of 19, in Shelby County, Texas, at Strongs Chapel Methodist church, and joined the Methodist Church. She was self-sacrificing and unassuming, sweet-spirited, ever kind and patient, ready to sympathize with those who were in distress or need.

As a wife, she was always loyal and true, willing to share her part of her hardships of life, a loving companion. As a mother, kind and tender, ever setting a good example before her children, trying to make the most of life and make her home happy. She has gone to heaven to rest from her labors. In her last hour she said, "I am ready to go." In her affliction she was patient, never complaining, only saying, "I won't have to be sick always." Weep not as those who have no hope. Cheer up, dear ones. Husband be faithful to the end. Children, live that good life mother would have you to live, and meet her again where there will be no more pain, sickness, or death, but eternal happiness and peace. She was buried in the Spring Ridge cemetery, near Pleasant Hill, La. Rev. H. T. Isgett and Dr. J. R. Rushing conducted the funeral.

IN MEMORIAM

IN MEMORY OF REV. J. E. CUNNINGHAM

A noble, princely man has gone
To join that happy band
Of friends and loved ones gone before,
To dwell in the Glory Land.

Sweet spirited and lovable,
He made true friends everywhere.
Children and young people loved him,
And he was glad their joys to share.

His was a good and useful life,
To God's service fully given.
So he has won a starry crown
And a peaceful rest in heaven.

We will miss his genial smile,
And the clasp of his friendly hand.
But some sweet day we will meet him,
In that fair and happy land.

Where pain and sorrow never come,
And God's own face is the light.
The sunshine of the Saviour's smile
Drives away the gloom of night.

MRS. LEE LIPSCOMB.

Louisville, Miss.

MAURICE M. MILLER was born in Marshal County, Miss., in 1852. In early life he was converted to Christ and united with the Methodist Church at Harris Chapel, in which church he was an active and useful member until his death, December 29, 1932. For more than thirty years Brother Miller was on the board of stewards, and when the necessity arose for a new and more adequate church building he took the lead, financially and otherwise, and saw the new church completed.

Brother Miller was married to Miss Sarah McCauley in 1891. To this union were born five children. From the birth of their first child, Brother Miller began to make plans for their education. This noble ideal was also achieved in the graduation of all of them from our church schools and post-graduate work for special careers.

Brother Miller served eight years on the County Board of Supervisors, where his noble work in the County's interest was always handled as diligently as if it had been his own.

In the passing of this great and good man, his family lost a kind and loving father and companion, his church its best friend, his County a useful citizen. Brother Miller was conscious up to the last moment, and fell peacefully and calmly asleep in the arms of Jesus, rejoicing in the wise choice of his teens and with a happy reflection of a life well spent in the service of his Lord.

RESOLUTIONS

For that "City not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens," to a place "prepared" for her, the sweet spirit of MRS. J. C. CLARK took its flight on the 16th of April, 1933.

The Methodist Church has suffered a heavy loss, for Sadie Clark was a Christian endowed with many talents, each one of which was dedicated to the work of the Master. She was a veritable reservoir of power, mental and spiritual, but with that so seldom found humility of heart, she expressed herself in simple sincerity, lavishing honors on others, esteeming their talents greater than her own and inspiring all to higher and nobler efforts in His name.

Therefore, he it resolved, That the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist Church, Greenwood, Miss., where she so faithfully served for a time, accord her the greatest eulogy by asking God for a double portion of her spirit.

That we extend to the family bereaved our understanding sympathy; That a copy of these resolutions be published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and a copy be spread in the minutes of our society.

MISS ELLA BEW,

MRS. THOS. M. GIVENS,

Whereas, by her interest and untiring efforts in all church work she endeared herself to the people of the community, and

Whereas, her passing has left an emptiness that cannot be filled, we do hereby take this means of offering a tribute to her memory.

Therefore, he it resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be placed in the minutes of the church and copies be sent to the members of the family and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

REVIVAL AT TALLULAH, LA.

By Rev. Harry S. Allen

Sunday, April 30, we concluded a community revival at Tallulah, La., participated in by the Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian pastors and their people. The first two weeks of the meeting, which started May 7, the services were hindered by the extremely rainy weather. The attendance and interest constantly increased in spite of the inclement weather conditions; at times the seating capacity of the large tent being taxed to take care of those present.

Rev. W. H. Giles, pastor of the Methodist church, is serving here as pastor for the fourth year. He is loved by not only the membership of his church, but the entire city holds him in the highest esteem, and his influence is parish-wide. Here is one man who is not only a scholarly preacher but a wonderful pastor as well.

As a result of the co-operative revival services, Brother Giles said nearly a hundred and fifty members would be added to the churches of Tallulah.

Advocate Campaign Results

With but a few days remaining until the close of the March 15-May 15 Advocate Circulation Campaign, the response thus far has been most disappointing. Let every pastor give serious attention to this most important matter before the campaign closes so that the Conference organ which is now in its eightieth year of service to the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi may continue to champion the cause of righteousness in these two states.

We thank the following friends who have sent in two or more subscriptions since the campaign started on March 15, and trust that we may add a long list of others in our next issue. The following list includes both new and renewal subscriptions received through Monday, May 8.

Remember, the Church was never more in need of the religious press than it is today, and the Advocate was never more dependent upon the wholehearted cooperation of our pastors and laymen for its existence than is the case now. Shall we allow this important agency of the Church close its doors for lack of support? God forbid!

The greatest good, however, will result in the toning up of the spiritual life of those already church members.

Mr. Kermit Hollingsworth, of White-wright, Texas, led a choir of a hundred voices in what many said was the best music ever heard in a series of revival services in Tallulah. Many people were of the opinion a real revival was impossible in Delta cities. Such has proven not to be the case. God will bless with a soul-saving revival anywhere conditions are complied with as God requires.

This world is recognized to be in a state of industrial, political and religious chaos; we are setting on a volcano that may start its eruption at any time. We are fast approaching the condition described in 2nd Timothy 3, 1-5. Please read this.

But notwithstanding this, there is a light ahead, and this light is found in the Book of books, the Bible.

But "except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish." This will apply to nations as well as individuals.

Repentance towards God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ is the only remedy, the only way out of the dark.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

IDON'T FEEL RIGHT ABOUT IT. Mrs. Pearl S. Buck is no longer a Presbyterian missionary. Wish it could have been arranged somehow. I didn't want to see her go. Wish we could keep it from being reported in Gath. Don't let the daughters of the Philistines get hold of it.

Mrs. Buck grew up in the Presbyterian Church, and on one of her great mission fields, China. The Board decided that she was not orthodox in her religious thinking and in the statement of her faith. We have heard no complaint about her life and the effectiveness of her ministry among the people whom she loves in such high and self forgetful fashion.

In talking quite frankly about the missionary enterprise in China Mrs. Buck said, "I think there are two major handicaps from which foreign missions suffer. First and foremost, there is the money handicap." She followed this with words of sympathy for the hard pressed mission board that finds itself compelled to give so much attention to this phase of the matter.

"We are not only money-minded, but convert-minded," she went on to say. "We have felt, for too long, that the best return we could give to those who support our missions was in terms of a numerical increase." She spoke words of sympathy regarding this handicap also.

Mrs. Buck explained how young China seemed eager to know and accept the Christ, but could not very well understand about the different denominations and the necessity of becoming a member of one of them.

"I should say that Christianity is one of many influences, stronger than some, weaker than others, that are moulding the life of the new China. It is certainly by no means the strongest. Materialism, nationalism, communism—all these, in my opinion, are more directly affecting the thoughts of the young leadership of China than Christianity. In some particulars, even, Christianity is losing ground—losing it because we, who represent it, are busied with so many secondary matters that the primary concerns are neglected."

Under date line of May 3 from New York comes the statement that Pearl S. Buck's resignation has been accepted by the Presbyterian Board of Missions. She goes back to China, but no longer as a Presbyterian missionary. Has Mrs. Buck taken the right course? Is the problem any nearer to a solution?

Of the authorities involved Dr. Machen was decidedly against the employment of Mrs. Buck because of her views regarding some matters; Dr. McAfee seemed to think that nothing would come of it; Dr. Speer did not want to become involved in a controversy. Has the "Christian method" of dealing with the matter been followed?

Mrs. Buck is quoted as saying, "Am I still a Presbyterian? Surely. Oh well, I don't think that's very important. I don't go in for creeds and that sort of thing so very much. I'm just a Christian."

"Just a Christian." Can anyone be more than that? Is that bigger than Presbyterianism, Methodism, Baptism? Is it smaller?

Well, when I think of conditions in China and other mission fields, and when I think of the noble work of the churches and the difficulties they face, I am bothered about the Buck case.

WE'RE AT WAR. That being the case we should be more careful in the exercise of our usual civil liberties.

No, there is no booming of cannon, no hasty mobilization of soldiers. We do not see the daily casualty lists. The present war is lacking in those more dramatic and spectacular features. If we had some effective substitute for those it might be better for us, for we are still more disposed to act unselfishly and unitedly and heroically when some bloody bludgeon is held over us, and when bands are playing as we go forth to battle. The present conflict is bereft of these things.

Nevertheless we are just as surely in the midst of a most serious struggle. We, through our congress, have invested President Roosevelt with special powers because of the emergencies that are upon us. Congress and the people seem almost eager to transfer these difficult responsibilities to the President's shoulders. Unfortunately we are now disposed to hold him entirely responsible for the whole outcome. That is hardly a fair attitude to assume. We are still citizens of the country and are honor bound to "stand by" during the crisis.

This being the case let us be conservative with our criticism of the administration. Let us not make impossible or abortive the task we have assigned our chief. The final successful turn of affairs, regardless of the war-time authority conferred upon the President, is still very much a matter of the attitude and action of the citizenship.

Let us be reminded that a crisis so great and a set of conditions so complicated cannot be adjusted in a short while. Furthermore there will be places, where, for a time, conditions will seem worse, no doubt.

But let us be sober and steady, and, as far as possible, support the President. Where we cannot do so by act and word, let us do so by silence, unless we are sure that we have a more satisfactory solution that is likely quickly to secure the support of the country.

This is no exhortation to a blind and beggarly quiescence. We must face all the facts fairly. This is no time for a vacation from a careful study of conditions. Now is the time for us so thoroughly to acquaint ourselves with the facts and factors of government as to prepare ourselves for more intelligent action in the future.

In a time of military conflict the normal functions of a democracy are suspended. This itself is a condemnation of the war system. And what is true of a military conflict is proving equally true of a great economic depression. Such a situation also argues convincingly the defects of our economic system which have intervened to paralyze the normal functions of our country.

We are not ready for a dictatorship. From the standpoints of heredity, history and experience, we are a free people. But unless we more carefully learn self-government and exercise its responsibilities more intelligently we automatically become the material of a dictatorship and prove ourselves, because of our greed and unselfishness, disqualified for democratic government.

But during these days of crisis and transition, let us be steady. Let us realize that conditions are not normal, and that reckless rocking of the boat just now may prove quite disastrous, opening the flood-gates to more desperate conditions.

LET US ORGANIZE a Bank of Goodwill. We never become aware of our thumbs until we have cracked them with a hammer, it seems. Then they occupy entirely too much place, time and thought. So with our banks at this time. Who ever imagined that banks all over the country could stir up such a fuss?

But that is not the point of this editorial unless it be the point of departure.

We are faced by a whole platoon of big issues and problems today, as we are being notified by every voice that speaks. And it is true. Every morning when you wake up, there they are. We have been made "jumpy" by the situation. And when people are "jumpy" they are in no condition to meet sanely the difficulties involved. If they do anything they are just as likely to do the wrong thing as the right.

What I am trying to get at is that all this turmoil of our time is, at its roots, moral and spiritual. Here is where the church and the preachers need to get to work. Friction points have been multiplied, and, by rather frequent knocks, have become sensitive. Our situation today is not primarily material but spiritual. And

By Dr. E. Stanley Jones

(We are indebted to Mrs. R. H. Wynn for typewritten copies of the addresses of Dr. E. Stanley Jones. Having heard them she wished to share them with her friends who are readers of the Advocate.—Editor.)

Part III

I am prepared to say I see no way out of the world's misery except the way the Christ would take. That is not the statement of a dogmatist, but of the real experience of one who has looked into the situation. The footprints are the footprints of the Son of God. If Jesus cannot save the world, I do not think it can be saved. If we cannot do it by the Spirit of Christ, then I am frank to say I think the world is done for.

Will the Gospel of Christ live in a change of climate? It was never so vital. This amazing Figure who has asked a question of each generation, has only clarified matters and is holding His own. Pressing His redemptive touch upon the whole heart of the East, wherever man opens to Him, there is redemption and hope and regeneration and cleansing and a power that goes down and remakes men. The situation in India is indifference; the old faiths are still there. Gandhi has risen to power. Embodying Nationalism, his power rests on three facts. He is not merely a man but the meeting place of three movements, asceticism, a movement for Christianity and a movement for service. India has always believed in a man who can renounce and sit quietly for an ideal and Gandhi seems to be of that spirit which is always beating within the spirit of India. The old ascetic, however, did not serve; his renunciation was to serve himself but not others. The new ideal is the ideal of service, an ascetic who serves. The center of the great, throbbing Nationalistic movement, Gandhi is the meeting place of three streams of influence, the greatest living man. What has happened from his rise? Among the outstanding things is the gaining of their national ends. India has decided to rebuke force and substitute suffering; a nation, in the attainment of its national ends, has repudiated war. It creates an atmosphere in which the Christian Gospel can be more easily understood. You can step up from that statement straight to the Cross and the Cross becomes intelligible in the light of this saving of the life of India. We never have had such a demand for the Gospel as today. There has been one force guiding the development. Back in the shades has stood this Person, Christ. At first His name was poison to India. I remember when Dr. John R. Mott spoke in our college at Allahabad for a whole week to our students. In the last five minutes, after having spoken four or five nights, he dared bring in the name of Christ and that moment, the meeting broke up in confusion. Not long since I was there and they said to me, "You are here this week, one solid week, with one message and only one, Christ, and the great crowds have gathered and they know their national future depends on the attitude which their youth are going to take."

Call the roll of every single reform and every one is going straight toward that Person, the Christ. All the change is in the direction of the Christian spirit, for back of it is the pressure of this Christ. The head of a Hindu College said to the chairman of my meeting, "There was a time when the name of Christ was poison to us for it was equal to Western domination, but the thing is changed now. We have passed through four great stages. When the first messenger of the Cross presented himself at our doors, he was in company with a traitor. We liked his appearance but we did not like his company. Again he came with a soldier and a statesman. Again he knocked and again we looked out and said 'we are afraid of you,' and again we closed the door. A short time later he came, this time as a dispenser of bounties to the outcast, giving help and uplift. We liked him better but we were not quite sure what this meant; we feared it had the same meaning and closed the door, but now Jesus comes again, dissociated and standing in His own right, making His appeal directly to our hearts."

He comes again as you hear him tonight and stands and asks, "Will you let me in?" We say, "Lord Christ, come in."

I believe that the conquest of the mind of India by the principles and Spirit of Christ is the greatest phenomenon I know of. While India cannot afford to take anything from America, she can take Christ because she can dissociate Him from the Western domination. We hope that the time will come and we believe we are on the threshold at the present time, when the Christian Church will not stand for a symbol of white domination but for the symbol of a world brotherhood where every nation will find its place in the fatherhood of God. When things loosen as they are doing now and they can come into the church without being an outcast from their homes, we shall have a great movement among the upper classes. We are having it among the lower classes. We have had twelve thousand souls a month for ten years in spite of the upset and confusion of that land, but the greatest conquest cannot be seen in the statistical tables but in that saturation, possession, of the educated portion of the race by the Spirit of Jesus Christ. I should rather be living in the next twenty five years than any period of history. These are formative years and the final battle is going to be between Communism and Christianity.

What shall we do? Shall we say we have no part in it, that this is not our affair? We can't say that, for if Jesus Christ means anything to us, He has to mean everything. A Hindu chairman said to me, "If what the speaker said is not true, it does not matter, but if it is true, then nothing else matters." Lord Morley said, "If I believed Jesus Christ died for me, I should think of and write nothing else." Some of us do believe Jesus Christ died for us and that simple faith has redeemed us and no wonder we can think of and speak of and write of nothing else but this one great issue of one man who died to save a race. We feel He ought to come into His inheritance. I sat with one of the leading men in China, a sociologist of thoughtful and beautiful spirit, who said, "I have come to the conclusion that the fundamental tendencies of the universe are in Jesus Christ. As a sociologist he looked at the structure of mankind and the relationships and said, 'I do not believe the world will hold together except as Jesus holds it with these fundamental tendencies of the universe. If this Gospel is true, it is tremendously and gloriously true. To whom else can we go? I don't see.'"

O Majestic Christ, Thy touch is upon our spirits; we cannot get away from it nor do we want to get away, for this bondage has brought us freedom and what we have, we would share with every man everywhere."

The father of the Renaissance in China said to a group of Christians, that he was an agnostic ten years ago, as hard as steel, that no indentation could be made on him at all, but urged the Christians not to tone down their religion, because "perhaps it is to you we must go for the solution of the future. Unless you make good men, we do not believe that civilization can go on. We are profoundly realistic and believe greatly in Western machinery and science, but you cannot make a golden age out of leaden instincts, a new age out of gold. There has got to come something into the heart that will make men new and I do not see that there is anybody who can do it but Jesus Christ and His Gospel." He said again, to a group of missionaries, "I don't believe what you believe, but if I believe half of what you say you believe, I would be ten times as earnest as you are."

One passion! Deeply appreciative of the interest shown in me, I must say that unless this interest is transferred from me to the cause I represent, all of this stinks in my nostrils. I am not interested in people being interested in me but in nations being reborn and remade after the fashion of Jesus Christ and in Heaven's name, forget Stanley Jones and remember this cause which is before the heart of the world! Christ stands asking us what we will do about it. We, on the field, have not been sure what you are going to do about it. We have not asked for much money for we know we cannot save men with money; it has to be done with burning hearts. Said one, "If I could bring to bear the love of my country against the Statue of Liberty, I could break it in pieces, but we have been so uncertain about whether you really wanted us to continue or not that you have paralyzed our hands as we extended them to the East to help it." Are you going to stand by us in these great movements until Jesus Christ shall come and be King of all the earth? That is the answer we want to hear out of the soul of Christianity and if it comes, we shall go back to our places singing, because this task is your and ours.

What is the response of the educated classes in China? I went to the city of Canton which is the home of radicalism. The Christians were very bold, God bless them! They decided no one could get into the meeting unless he came to the Y. M. C. A., gave name and address, rather a strange thing for a Chinese to sign the register for an evangelistic meeting. I should have thought that process would have eliminated everybody, but 3500 signed the card. They told me I had to have two sessions in the afternoon and two at night. "Wait a minute," I said; "I give three hours every day to training people to take care of these, seven hours a day in all. I have been speaking four hours every day since August and this is December." At the closing meeting I asked for those who would like to make a surrender and give themselves to Christ to sign a card. I begged them to understand what it would mean and I called their attention to the persecutions which had taken place and which they knew about and yet, with all that, 1000 young people, business men and officials, signed. "Yes, we want to become Christians," I said I want to speak to-morrow night to those who have signed these cards, and to no one else. The whole thousand was back again the next night. At a Round Table Conference in Nanking a man said, "I am not a Christian but if Christianity can do anything, now is the opportunity, and if it can do it, we have decided to follow." Asia is in a moment of great hesitation; she has not decided. It is for the Christian world to throw every ounce of spiritual strength, every beat of sympathetic Christian love which they can reach down in their hearts and take out to help that nation and guide them to the feet of Christ and if they do believe, they will be one of the greatest Christian nations on God's earth.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS

By Rev. John W. Ramsey

The Associated Press recently sent out the following news item: "Flying eggs and oranges and firing of blank cartridges marked an indignation demonstration of Simpson College students against a rule forbidding college dances. A. V. Proudfoot, president of the college board of trustees, was the target of eggs and oranges as he finished a chapel talk, declaring, 'It is better to close the doors of this institution than to have the rules violated.'" He referred to two dances in which the students of the college, a Methodist institution, had participated. Such hoodlums should be arrested and put in jail. Church institutions of learning should have the building of Christian character as their chief aim, and every student who engages in dancing in violation of college rules should be expelled. Furthermore, every college calling itself a church college which allows its students to dance should be made to close its doors or write itself off the list of church colleges.

American scientists gave a farewell dinner to Prof. Einstein previous to his departure for Europe. One of the speakers on that occasion was Prof. Shapely, of Harvard, who, speaking of the surmises of science, said: "We can see the mortality of practically all current theories, both of microcosmos and macrocosmos. There is overproduction of hypotheses; they crowd and cancel one another." Now, that is precisely what I have said more than once in these "Pointed Paragraphs," only I did not use Prof. Shapely's big words. I have said time and again that the scientific theories of today will be thrown into the scientific junk heap of tomorrow; yet scientists want the world to swallow their theories without question, and accept them as established facts. Science has made too many blunders and has been compelled, by the increasing light of advancing knowledge, to correct herself too often for me to accept every word that falls from her lips, simply because it is science that speaks. I refuse, therefore, to accept the dicta of science till they are sufficiently established by convincing evidence.

The Alabama Educational Association at its annual convention adopted a resolution urging the legislature to speedily pass the beer bill. There is a reason. Alabama schools are without funds. The beer bill provides that the revenue from the sale of beer shall go to the support of schools. Our country must be in a bad way when educators are willing to swap morals for money.

Realizing that an open fight against Fundamentalism was hurtful to its cause, Modernism retired from the battlefield of controversy; but it is continually cropping out here and there in church literature. In the April number of our Church School Magazine, Edwin Lewies, in his comment on the Sunday school lesson for April 9, says: "There has been a tendency in the past to express Christianity predominantly in terms of belief. The tendency today is to express Christianity predominantly in life." Then he indicates his endorsement of the latter tendency when he adds: "The second tendency accords with Jesus' own teaching." This is only another effort to minimize creed by placing it in direct opposition to life; whereas, the truth is, there is no conflict whatever between belief or creed and life. Mr. Lewis admits: "What we choose, eventually makes us what we are." Why, then, cannot he, and others like him, see that we eventually become what we believe—that life is the product of the creed? I recommend to him the reading of Bishop Candler's book, "The Christ and the Creed." I would especially recommend the reading of this book by our young preachers that they may fortify themselves against the subtle teachings of Modernists who place undue emphasis upon life in opposition to belief. Let all Methodists remember that life is the product of the creed. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

In a recent issue of the Christian Advocate, Dr. B. F. Jones, of Brookhaven issued a challenge to the Methodist, Baptist, Episcopal, Presbyterian, and Roman Catholic churches to the effect that if the members of these churches would cease buying and drinking bootleg booze, it would solve the liquor problem in Mississippi. That is a terrific arraignment of the membership of the churches. I am of the opinion, however, that the terms of his challenge are too broad. He might have safely narrowed the challenge down to the membership of the Methodist and Baptist churches, because I believe that the membership of these two denominations hold in their hands the balance of power in this state, and if they would stand together on any moral issue they could get and hold what they want. This is true not only of the state as a whole but of any town, city or community. For instance, at present there is a fight on in the city of Meridian with reference to Sunday baseball. The Methodists and Baptists of that city, if they would unite on the question, could easily put a stop to it. "United we stand, divided we fall," is as true today as it ever was. If the sale of liquor in any form returns to Mississippi, I believe the Methodist and Baptist people of the state will be responsible for it. Let us therefore heed the injunction of the apostle: "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage."

The sad feature of the whole business is, Methodists and Baptists of Mississippi will not stand "hitched" on the most vital moral issues. To have to say it is deplorable, nevertheless all the preachers know it whether they say so or not. Many of them are now licking their lips in anticipation of the return of beer, and some of them are already slopping over into Louisiana and the islands of the Mississippi river to satisfy their thirst. Next Sunday some of this same crowd will be at church sitting up in the "amen corner." What we need is to open the back door of the church and let this crowd walk out. Then the church would stand for something and regain her lost power with men and God.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S ASSEMBLY

To the Young People of the Louisiana Conference:

Greetings!

I am sure that you are anxious to hear something about the Nineteen Thirty-Three assembly. I will not be able to tell you all that I have on my heart to tell you, but I will tell you enough to make you begin saving your pennies now in order that you may be present.

We have secured a splendid faculty this year. One of the best in the history of the assembly. Dr. Frank L. Wells, pastor of our First Church in New Orleans, will give the platform messages for us. Mrs. R. E. Smith will teach a course on Personality Development; Rev. D. B. Raulins will teach the course on "The Teachings of Jesus;" Rev. Henry A. Rickey will teach the course on "The Christian Use of Leisure Time;" Revs. J. B. Graubling and Carl Lueg will have charge of the recreational features of the Assembly. Some of the other teachers and courses are as follows: Rev. J. J. Rasmussen, "What Do We Mean by Missions?"; Rev. G. W. Pomeroy, "Music in Worship;" Rev. Ira W. Flowers, "Alcohol and Ourselves;" Mrs. Guy W. Nesom, "Using Church Dramatics;" "Missions and World Friendship;" Rev. G. W. Dameron, Rev. Virgil D. Morris, "Leadership Training." There will be others of like ability to teach other courses.

Bishop Dobbs has agreed to be at the assembly if nothing of extreme importance prevents. The presiding elders of the Conference have also been invited and a great part of them will be there. The preachers of the Louisiana Conference are invited to be the guests of the assembly on Wednesday, June 21st. We want the young people to urge their pastors to come and see what we do at Mansfield.

The business manager is doing everything possible to make your stay in Mansfield both pleasant and comfortable. We have confidence enough in Elizabeth to believe that she can do it. The cost of the assembly has been cut materially.

The economic conditions of the country will get better before the assemblies begin. But do not wait. Begin now to raise money and make preparations for the assembly. We are hoping that our attendance will be larger than formerly and the only way to make that possible is for every young people's organization to start at once to saving money for the purpose of helping delegates to attend.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Greenville District Conference convened in the beautiful Methodist Church at Merigold, April 20-21. It had been announced that Bishop Denny would be present to preside, but in his absence our efficient elder, Dr. E. Nash Broyles, conducted the proceedings.

Our host, Rev. W. W. Jones, and his people had made full and complete preparation for the conference, and made every one feel glad to be there. Homes were provided for those staying over the night, and a bountiful lunch was provided each day at the church for all attendants and visitors. Walter Jones has his own way of entertaining. No one else could do it just like he does. You will have to see him in action to fully appreciate him. He should be sent to a place big enough to entertain an Annual Conference, and then have him and his people entertain the Conference.

Dr. Broyles had every detail of conference business listed and arranged for. Not a thing was overlooked. One young man, Albert Brown, of Hollandale, was granted license to preach the gospel, and the licenses of other local preachers were renewed and their characters passed.

A check-up of the charges showed a fine spirit of optimism and that the spirit of revival is abroad in the district. With the exception of two or three charges, the returns from the Kingdom Extension offering were disappointing. Very little had been done to increase the circulation of the Advocate up to the time of meeting. The new charges in the district, Indianola, Dublin and Mattson, were well represented by their pastors and lay delegation, and the Indianola delegation was honored by having two of them elected as delegates to the Annual Conference. Further honors were bestowed on Indianola representatives by the election of Rev. C. A. Parks as secretary.

Delegates elected to Annual Conference are: S. V. Wall, Cleveland; J. H. Johnson, Clarksdale; E. A. Tamm, Indianola; Mrs. W. C. Galsoran, Duncan; Mrs. Ed. Rayner, Merigold; Mrs. C. A. Parks, Indianola; J. H. Sherard, Sherard, and R. E. Davis, Cleveland. Alternates chosen are: Mrs. H. L. Tolbert, Mrs. H. P. Lewis, A. Wells, Jr., and Mrs. H. W. Williams.

Our next district conference goes to Clarksdale.

it must be met with spiritual attitudes and methods of action. There must be spiritual vision and spiritual resources with which to come at these problems. Race relations, industrial relations, international relations, etc., are matters that cannot be handled by the clumsy and un-Christian ways of the world.

That is what I mean, then, by the Bank of Goodwill. We must have dependable and limitless spiritual resources. Take this matter of war debts, China and Japan, Hitler, and so on. Unless we establish a zone of good will and friendliness about the whole discussion we are destined to have ruptures that will involve us in something far more than embarrassment and humiliation.

Now, as I see it, it is the business of Christian people to build and maintain the Bank of Goodwill and make it a going concern. We want it to be both National and International. In settling our own difficulties at home we must check upon it, and in dealing with our neighbor nations its doors must be open to us. At present too much of the assets of this bank are "frozen." Let's get it going at 100%.

THEY ARE DOING IT; LET'S SHOW 'EM. Two other members of the Advocate family, The Southwestern Advocate, Conference organ of Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico Conferences; and the North Carolina Advocate, organ for the North Carolina Conferences, have been conducting a subscription campaign.

The Southwestern set as its goal 25,000 paid up subscriptions. Latest reports show that they lack only a few hundred of the mark. In the May 4 issue they report 1,063 subscriptions from a group of only twelve churches in Texas. This is almost five times the number received to date from all three of our Conferences.

The North Carolina Advocate reports a total of 113 NEW subscriptions from but one presiding elder's district.

What the Methodists of these sections are doing for their papers we feel that the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi can do for theirs. They say they have the "depression" and bank failures in the states represented by these papers; but they just won't quit. Will we?

Elders, pastors, members, let's show 'em.

DENNY AND DOBBS BACK ON THEIR POSTS

Bishop Denny was returned to his district, which includes the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences; and Bishop Dobbs was returned to his district, which is made up of the Arkansas and Louisiana Conferences.

Bishop Denny will retire after this year's Annual Conference, as he will have reached the age limit by the time of the meeting of the General Conference of 1934.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Turn to last page for Advocate campaign returns.

Miss Otilie Swan is taking care of the Advocate campaign at Moss Point, Miss.

Rev. J. H. Miller, Philadelphia, Miss., sends a list of six subscriptions with a promise of more to follow.

Mrs. T. R. Holt, Leakesville, Miss., responds with four additional subscriptions for the Advocate.

During the four and one-half years as pastor at Eupora, Miss., a pastorate including large territory, Rev. W. C. Newman has conducted two hundred and thirty-five funerals.

Rev. B. H. Williams, our pastor at Petal, Miss., was in a car accident on the afternoon of May 9. Though he suffered cuts and body bruises, it is hoped that none of them will prove serious.

Mrs. E. G. Sewell, a "shut-in" of Burkic, La., renews her subscription, saying, "We've always had the Advocate in our home. I do not see how we could well get on without it."

DATE OF ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN EXTENDED

Because a number of our faithful pastors have, on account of bank closings, found it difficult to conduct their subscription campaign within the time set, upon advice of some members of the Publishing Committee the campaign is being extended to June 1.

A number of interests have crowded our church calendars so that a number have experienced difficulty at this point. Only just now have the lists of subscriptions really begun to come in. The Manager reports that our mail for the past week has been quite gratifying.

It is hoped that all our pastors, with their committees, will bestir themselves for the largest possible list of subscriptions.

EDITOR.

The Crowley Rotary Club recently met for its regular Tuesday session in the basement of our church. Rev. C. K. Smith, an active Rotarian, is pastor of the church.

We had a good letter from Rev. T. W. Lewis, pastor of First Church, Jackson, Tenn., and an ex-Mississippian. Look on another page for the letter.

If notice of your subscription lists does not appear in this column look for them in the place set aside specially for these reports. We are very grateful to all those participating in the "Keep the Advocate Saved" campaign.

Mr. W. L. Hays, New Orleans, a cousin of Rev. W. A. Hays, who recently drowned when his car went over a washout on a swollen stream in Franklin County, Miss., was a recent caller at our office.

Easter Sunday was a banner day at our church in Franklin, La., where Rev. C. C. Wier is pastor. Pre-Easter services had been conducted by Dr. A. M. Serex, pastor at New Iberia. A good class of young people was received into the church.

Rev. J. O. Bennett, one of Louisiana's superannuates living at Montgomery, has gone to Seymour, Indiana, to visit a sick daughter. He will be in Indiana until November. Address: 704 E. Fifth Street.

We hear very gratifying reports of the Kernahan Visitation Evangelistic campaign at Lake Charles. Our church has 200 prospects. Have you considered this plan of evangelism? There are a number of very fine things to commend it.

Our church at Houston, Miss., has responded to the wise leadership of Rev. G. H. Boyles. The entire church seems to have taken on new life. They have a good choir, Sunday school, prayer meetings and good congregations at preaching services.

Rev. Ellis Smith, pastor at Winnfield, La., reports that the banks have closed, interrupting somewhat their plans. Now it is not news these days for a bank to close, but it is a great inconvenience. Brother Smith speaks strongly of the Advocate.

Revival meeting at Gatum Mill, Bonhomme, Miss., continues, with great crowds attending. A train is run for all workmen and families from the woods and logging camps. Rev. J. O. Haines is in his thirteenth meeting here. Next week it will continue at the camp at night and in the woods during the day. W. T. Griffin is pastor here.

From time to time we like to call your attention to dependable prohibition information. Have you seen "Hold That Line," a pamphlet by Elton Raymond Shaw, M. A., Economist and Publicist? Send fifteen cents to Shaw Publishing Company, 8316 Dexter Boulevard, Detroit, Mich., and ask for your copy.

Some of our readers know Rev. S. W. Miller, Frisco, Texas. We have just received a copy of his autobiography. Brother Miller is 86 years of age. The interesting little booklet is introduced by Dr. W. A. Shelton, Atlanta, Ga. You can secure a copy for fifty cents by sending it to Brother Miller.

Rev. A. R. Hoffpauir, pastor at Arbuckle, Cal., late of the Louisiana Conference, keeps his connection with Louisiana Methodism by way of the Advocate. Brother Hoffpauir is serving a splendid little station of 186 members. There is a good building with ample rooms for Sunday school and the other organizations.

Some of those sending in subscriptions forget the rules of the game. The Advocate is to be sold for $1.50 for each subscription or renewal, total amount to be sent to this office. At the close of the campaign twenty-five cents per subscription will be sent to individual or committee securing the subscriptions.

"This is a rather late report, but the old saying is that it is better late than never. On Easter Sunday we received thirty into the church; nineteen were by profession of faith and eleven by certificate. These made a total of fifty-four since Conference. Three infants were baptized. Our Self-Denial Offering was $100." Thus writes Rev. C. C. Clark, our pastor at Waynesboro, Miss.

"The Old Ship of Zion" will be presented at St. Mark's Methodist church, 1130 North Rampart Street, New Orleans, Tuesday, May 23, at 8:15 p. m., by St. Mark's Fourth Baptist (colored) Church, directed by Mrs. L. Thornton. Life as a ship on a voyage will be portrayed and sung as only Christian colored folks can do. Admission, adults 15c; children 10c. Reservation for colored patrons.

"I am trying to get my teams out this week on subscriptions. Will do our best. Preached three commencement sermons Sunday, and had larger attendance than last year at each place, Mer Rouge, 11 a. m.; Bonne Lder, 3 p. m.; Collinston, 7:45 p. m. Great day." That is Rev. J. B. Grambling, Mer Rouge, La. We think something should be done about that many commencements in one day.

This is supposed to be written in big letters. "Please add three more years to the inspiring influence of the Advocate in our home. The front page is worth the price. I always read all that comes from the 'Sage of the Pelican Pines!'" That word is from Mr. R. T. Douglass, a good layman at Gilliam, La. That just sounds too good. Dr. Steel and the editor are bowing, smiling and blushing. We enjoy this boost from a layman.

Rev. A. Y. Brown, Golden Cross Director for North Mississippi Conference, has certainly devoted himself diligently to the cause he represents. Brother Brown is one of the group of splendid younger men of his Conference who is studying and working to do all the work of his church. He is well equipped and comes from a family of Methodist preachers. Rev. S. A. Brown, at Sardis, is his father. Rev. R. O. Brown, his uncle.

We have received the 1933 bulletin of our Leadership Schools to be held at Mount Sequoyah and Lake Junaluska this summer. Get a copy from our Christian Education office at Nashville, and make your arrangements, if possible, to attend one of these. Nothing better than to plan your vacation around one of these schools. It is far better than "killing two birds with one stone." It is saving your own spiritual life and that of your Sunday school students at the same time.

Rev. W. H. Mounger is in his fourth year at Oxford, Miss., the site of our great State University. Much agitation was given some years ago to a joint state project to build a commodious university church at Oxford. In fact, money was appropriated and plans set up for its erection. The financial depression destroyed the movement. Perhaps it is well that the local congregation and the two Conferences did not get under a heavy debt. In a few years a more conservative effort can be made and our situation taken care of adequately. Our people have enough of the big church and the heavy debt.

✓ Wedding bells. Rev. Albert A. Collins, recently appointed to Eros, La., eharge, was married in Ruston, La., April 8, to Miss Lenora Speed of Meehan, Miss., Rev. H. J. Boltz, one of our superannuates, officiating. Miss Speed was reared in Mississippi and educated at Teachers College, Hattiesburg. Brother Collins, a native of Mississippi, is a student of Millsaps College, where he will receive his degree this summer. The parents of Brother Collins, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Collins, recently moved to Greenwood, La., where they are making a good place for themselves in the life of our church.

All that we have asked in the Advocate campaign is that our pastors and committees do their best, making a respectable effort to get the Advocate to the people. We are willing to abide by the verdict of such effort whether few or many subscriptions are turned in. This kind of assurance suits us: "We have two of our best young women to make the Advocate canvass for Centenary Church. They will do their best. They expect to make a systematic canvass. If they should not send you a large list of subscribers, it will be no fault of theirs, for they are very efficient." This is from Mrs. Guy Norton, Centenary Church, McComb, Miss. Please look back through that statement and see how completely this church has responded. Let us not forget that this campaign is a referendum on the Advocate. We must be governed by the response made in making recommendations to the Publishing Committee. We want to be able to assure the Committee that our pastors and committees have done their best.

LOUISIANA AND MISSISSIPPI METHODISTS BACK MEMORIAL MERCY HOME

This is the season of the year that our people turn their attention to the Memorial Mercy Home, that lighthouse conducted by Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Snelling, for the rescue and guidance of some who have lost the way.

Our three Conferences, in the following resolutions, display their concern for this highly important work:

Louisiana—"That we designate the third Sunday of May, or any Sunday near that date that meets with the approval of the pastor, for taking a special offering for the support of the Home."

Mississippi—"That the month of May be set aside for special offering to be taken in all our churches for the Home."

North Mississippi—"That we designate Mother's Day as the most suitable time for taking a special offering for the support of the Home; and where this is impracticable, that the offering be taken any time during the month of May."

SARDIS-GRENADA DISTRICT NEWS

By Rev. Jas. H. Felts, D.D.

The District Conference was held at Batesville, May 4-5. It was more than ordinarily interesting and helpful. Batesville did the honors of the occasion in an exceptional way. The midday meal was served at the church. The fellowship was of the finest.

The brethren are taking on new life. The atmosphere of defeat is disappearing. A pronounced optimism is bringing hopeful smiles. Our P. E. is neither plucking feathers from the pinions of angels nor knocking the horns off the devil. But he is definitely and positively doing his work in such a way as to win REAL approval and hearty co-operation. He is not afraid of hard work. He is modest. He looks after the whole program of the church. W. L. Stormont is the personification of the kind of energy that counts and keeps on counting.

Rev. S. A. (Steve) Brown, Sardis, had the Grenada pastor with him recently in a series of sermons. Say, did you brethren know that this man Brown had sense and religion combined in a somewhat unusual way? Intimate association often gives one a new viewpoint. My appreciation of Brother Brown and his family was multiplied many times in the course of this visit. He preaches well. He had only good words for his brethren in the Conference. His pastoral contacts are about as gracious as I have ever known.

Rev. P. L. Luter, known to most of us as "Pat," is in good favor at Senatobia. This writer delivered the "Commencement Sermon" at Senatobia recently. Pat has "horse sense," and a most dependable "brand" of religion. His home life is of the best. "Miss Maude" meets every demand of the home and pastorate in a way that pleases and cheers. May they live long and prosper.

Do you really know W. N. Dodds, pastor at Batesville, brethren? Well-married, a refreshing speaker, a good thinker, a brotherly co-worker, an ideal host, doing things so easily and happily that your comfort is assured. Dodds is a real workman.

I recently heard W. L. Robinson, Lake Cormorant, deliver a most creditable sermon. Brother Robinson has a pleasing personality, a good delivery, AND SOMETHING TO SAY. That youngster is a real leader. The demand for his kind of leadership grows, and Robinson is growing.

And do not fail to list Roy Grisham among the workers of this district. His wife, the product of a fine preacher's home and Grenada College, is second to none. We have no finer young leaders among us.

Some people call him Dr. Courtiss. They do not mean to separate him from the brotherhood. John Courtiss walks erect where timid souls would falter and fail. If I have ever known a man given soul and body to his task with the abandon of faith it is he. He finds happiness in his work beyond most men. And Grenada College, I verily believe, has topped the hill of difficulty, and is facing a new day.

Speaking of Grenada College, I have not seen a finer, cherrier, happier, or more hopeful group of teachers and students. A young woman of unusual mentality and exceptional equipment, a Presbyterian, our English teacher, remarked recently, "Surely Methodist people do not know what they have here, else this school would be crowded to capacity." She is right. The record of Grenada College graduates gives emphasis to her statement. We should be hanging out the S. R. O. sign, not the S. O. S. Even Methodist people will learn something if you will give them time. IT IS TIME.

Space forbids more. But the cheerful fighting spirit in this elongated territory is as refreshing as dew on a thirsty rose. By every token we have "turned the corner," and are headed for the open again. The laymen are working steadily, and have the "Forward look." The old blue hen's chickens are scratching and finding.

RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY

Whereas, in the providence of God, our Church and Conference have been called upon to mourn the sudden and tragic death of Bro. W. A. Hays, the beloved pastor at Natchez, after only a few months of service;

Therefore be it Resolved by the members of the Vicksburg District Conference, assembled at Woodville, Miss., that in the passing of Bro. Hays our Conference has suffered the loss of one of its most gifted and useful members, the Southern Methodist Church a loyal and devoted leader, the State a noble and upright citizen, and his family a godly and devoted husband and father. A man of superior gifts and graces, diligent, self-sacrificing, and exemplary in life and conduct, he wielded a wide influence for good, and will be sorely missed as the days go by. Like Barnabas "he was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith." "He has fought a good fight; and henceforth there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness," which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will give in the last great Day to all who love his appearing.

Resolved second, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, and that a copy be forwarded by our secretary to the hereaved family of Bro. Hays, to whom we extend sincere sympathy in this dark hour.

Resolved, further, that a copy of these resolutions be furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

We are wondering how your poster-making contest is coming? We have seen some that are splendid, but of course, we are not saying whose these are. We hope that every district will have an entry for each age group—we'd hate to be the judges.

Are you getting all "Mansfield-minded," now that the time is drawing so near? What are you doing to raise money to send your delegates? If it is something different, write your conference director about it, so the word can be passed on.

We have been favored with a copy of "The Pilot," the official conference organ of the Louisville (Kentucky) Conference Young People's Organization. We note that in a number of places "Assembly Clubs" have been formed for the express purpose of making funds to send their representatives to the summer assembly. Some of the things they are doing are: a ple social, rummage sale, silver tea, womanless wedding, a one-act play, a swimming party, a hay ride, a lawn party, etc. One club aims at "Ways and means of raising ten dollars for each member"—of the club, we presume. They hold bi-weekly meetings. This is a good suggestion for those week-day activities which every group needs to keep alive and growing.

Carl Lueg reports an enthusiastic all day rally of the Earnest Workers Union of Monroe District held at Delhi May 7. This union is providing a truck to convey delegates to and from both assemblies, at a nominal cost. This is another valuable suggestion. Plan to provide transportation for your delegates, and you will find a much larger number who will be able to go, with the cost cut down sufficiently.

The Baton Rouge District is planning an Assembly Field Day at Bluff Creek Saturday, May 13th. The Elizabeth Langford Union challenged the Hoyt M. Dobbs Union to this meet, and special athletic events are scheduled, with an Assembly-booster program planned.

The Ever Ready Union of Ruston District is planning a three-day Christian Culture Institute at Farmerville for June 8th, 9th and 10th. Rev. A. W. Townsend of Farmerville will be dean, with Revs. J. S. Henley, Henry A. Rickey, and Carl Lueg as instructors.

A new union has been formed in the Alexandria District, composed of Alexandria, Pineville, Colfax, etc. More details later.

Oh, yes, we would like to tell you who will be the dietitian at the Assemblies this year. To our regret, Miss Fannie Norman will be unable to be with us, but we have secured someone who will, we feel confident, be just as fine. Mrs. Parsley of Park Avenue Church, Shreveport, will be Assembly Dietitian, so look forward to good meals well prepared and planned.

The programs for both Assemblies have been approved, and will, before very much longer, be in your hands. The cost, as we have told you, is $10.00 per individual, for either Assembly. Please use great care in selecting your delegates, to be sure that you are sending them to the right Assembly. Those from 12 to 15 years of age and who will not be sixteen until after June 20, will attend the Christian Adventure Assembly, of which Miss Anna Turner is Dean. (And by the way, great times are in store for you at this assembly!) Those who will be sixteen before June 20, and others who will not have reached their 24th birthday by that time, will attend the Young People's Assembly—Rev. J. Henry Bowdon, dean.

Working and planning and trusting in the possibility for two exceptionally fine assemblies, and with great faith in the PERSON of our motto "All for Christ," to give us the power, we want to pass on to you this little acrostic. Mr. Harbin is the author:

C is for consecration given to every task,
H is for happiness from first to very last,
R is for resourcefulness in everything you do,
I is for intelligence that characterizes you.
S is for service from a heart that ever burns,
T is teachable, a heart that always learns.

Through it and around it and over it you find,

All for Christ and Christ for all,
For that's the Christ-like mind.

May we ever keep this motto burning in our hearts, kindling us to greater effort in His Kingdom.

Your Conference Director,

MARY SEARLES,

323 Brice, St., Baton Rouge, La.

He was the son of Mr. Cornelius W. Kelly and Mrs. Nannie (O'Quin) Kelly.

He married Miss Mamie Adair the first year of this century. She lives to mourn his loss, with four children: Mrs. Elwin Rives, of Los Angeles, Calif.; Huntley, Frank and Miss Alma Kelly, of Red Lick, Miss. He also had two small grandsons, the children of Huntley and Mrs. Iva Kelly.

His sisters are Mrs. R. A. Owen and Mrs. Dan Gilchrist, Fayette, Miss.; Mrs. Wm. Bucklemer and Mrs. Rosa McCaleb, Harrison, Miss., and Mrs. Harmon Adams, of Kirby, Miss. He joined the Methodist Church in early youth and lived an honest, unassuming member till his death. He believed in a practical Christianity.

We loved him. We miss the sound of his hearty voice on the farm, at the chase, and in the home.

MRS. RAYMOND COLTER.

MRS. DORA HOLMES, who passed to her heavenly home on the 21st of April, 1933, in the home of her daughter, Mrs. G. L. Rousse, of Shreveport, La., at the age of 73, left the assurance that a life well spent always leaves. There was no question-marks as to the righteousness of this good woman. There was in her an abiding faith. She shared her living with her church. When unable to attend church, she often sent for her pastor to pay her dues. Her reliance upon her Lord was secure. She was a great sufferer for the last few years of her life. She bore this suffering with a commendable fortitude.

She is survived by two daughters and four sons. These saw to it that she did not suffer need. She dearly loved her children and often spoke of them with commendable pride. She had built into them the principles of a good life. She was buried in Vicksburg, Miss., where one of her sons lives. She was a member of the Bos-sier City Methodist church, where she was loved and respected.

Cramps and Pains In Side and Back

"I had suffered with cramping and pain in my sides and back," writes Mrs. J. V. Bourque, of Gonzales, La. "I was so weak I could hardly walk. Cardui seemed to build me up, and after about twelve bottles I was better and stronger than I had been in years."

Women who find themselves in a weak, run-down condition can hardly expect to be free from troublesome, painful symptoms.

Where the trouble is due to weakness, Cardui helps women to get stronger and thus makes it easier for nature to take its orderly course. Painful, nagging symptoms disappear as nourishment of the body is improved with the assistance of Cardui.

CONFERENCE NEWS

North Mississippi

The Grenada Missionary Society held its regular April program meeting in the College Auditorium with the girls of the college in charge of the program. The theme of the devotional was "The Educational Responsibility of the Church." Leora White read the Scripture lesson from Matthew, bringing out the fact that when Jesus said, "Go into all the world," He also said, "Go teach." Allene Clark made a splendid talk on the theme, and Pat Harkey and Edwina McKee sang as a duet a hymn of prayer for teachers and learners. The play-production class of the College had written and prepared a playlet on the life and activities of Grenada College which was presented at this time. Through Grenada College the Church in North Mississippi is trying in part to meet its educational responsibility. The meeting was attended by a large and appreciative group.

KEEP THE MISSIONARIES ON THE FIELD

The Woman's Missionary Council and the Executive Committee of the Board of Missions is making a call to each church throughout our connection for gifts of gold, silver and platinum (such as rings, pins, chains, watches, cups, etc.), in order that we may keep our missionaries and deaconesses on the fields. Every possible resource must be touched if the Church is to carry on the program of Jesus, do her part in the world's salvation, and prevent serious suffering. You may have relics in your possession that have no large material value, yet they may be very valuable to you because of associations. Many such small gifts will total an offering of great value to the Kingdom. A small gift dear to the donor will be an alabaster box broken on the feet of Jesus. Shall we not bring forth from our storehouses things new and old? The day has come for a complete sacrifice of ourselves and all we have.

WOMAN LOST 10 LBS. IN A WEEK

Mrs. Betty Luedcke of Dayton writes: "I am using Kruschen to reduce weight—I lost 10 pounds in one week and cannot say too much to recommend it."

To take off fat easily, SAFELY and HARMLESSLY—take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—it is the safe way to lose unsightly fat and one bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle. Get it at any drug-store in America. If this first bottle fails to convince you this is the safest way to lose fat—money back.

But be sure and get Kruschen Salts imitations are numerous and you must safeguard your health.

1. Make the collection of love gifts a congregation-wide event under the leadership of the pastor.

2. The Woman's Missionary Society should furnish a vital and active leadership in co-operation with the pastor.

3. Committees should be named by the pastor and by the president of the Woman's Missionary Society.

4. These committees should solicit every family of the congregation for all available gold, silver and platinum as a love gift for missions. This should be done between May 1 and June 15.

5. Valuables collected are to be shipped to the Board of Missions as quickly as the canvass is finished.

6. When the smelting of the gold has been completed and values determined, an equal division will be made between the General Work section and the Woman's Work section of the Board of Missions.

7. At the close of the campaign recognition will be made to the Conferences of the amounts raised by them. This will be done, provided the smelting can be carried on in a way to make it possible.

Education and Promotion

Among the plans formed at the recent meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council the following will be found interesting to our auxiliary members:

1. That the enlistment effort for the second quarter take the form of a fellowship luncheon given by the woman's missionary society for the women of the church.

2. That the auxiliaries continue a systematic cultivation of the young women of the church for membership in the missionary society.

3. That tactful and intelligent plans be made for integrating the members of the young women's circles into the adult society, making possible to them full participation in service and in the work of the auxiliary.

4. That each year new circles be formed from these young women who are eligible to become members of the young women's circles.

5. That the average age contest be continued.

6. That the conference and auxiliary officers be urged to secure regular payments of all funds as a means of financing the work. Let the slogan be: "Monthly payment of membership offerings and quarterly remittance of one-fourth of the year's budget to the Conference Treasurer."

7. That the conference officers give all possible assistance to the Conference Superintendents of Mission Study in conducting one-day coaching schools for auxiliary mission study teachers in each district or zone early in the quarter.

8. That auxiliary leaders be encouraged to take the initiative in seeking interdenominational co-operation for study, prayer, and service. They are specially asked to foster the observance of the Annual Day of Prayer for Women on the first Friday in Lent.

HARMON, LA., METHODISTS COMPLETING PLANS FOR NEW CHURCH BUILDING

With Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, presiding elder, leading the forces; with Rev. L. W. Smart, pastor, the Steward Board, Woman's Missionary Society and Young People's Division, supported by the entire membership, the Harmon Methodists have launched a campaign for funds and materials to build a church at Harmon, and are meeting with encouraging success.

The Harmon Community Church, used by the Methodists and Baptists, was completely destroyed by the storm that struck that vicinity on March 30, and the Methodists are planning to build a frame building 30x50 feet.

P. T. Huckabay, member of the Board, jointly with his brother, P. L. Huckabay, of Coushatta, gave one acre of land in Harmon just off the pavement, facing the gravel road, back of depot, for the church site.

Following closely on this, various lumber companies, including S. H. Bolinger Lbr. Co., Bossier City; Weaver Bros., Bryceland; Frost-Johnson, Ben Johnson and Mansfield Hardwood Lumber Co., of Mansfield, and several others, gave Dr. Sexton orders for lumber amounting to 15,000 feet, approximately three-fourths the footage required. Architects of Shreveport have made plans and blue prints free of charge.

L. P. Stephens & Co. and Campbell & Co., Coushatta merchants, each gave two kegs of nails. Other donations are being added to the list rapidly, and for that reason a complete list could not be secured.

Mrs. C. J. Pugh, of Shreveport, sent a check for $10. The Gloster Sunday school, of Gloster, La., sent $4.25, and the Montgomery Motor Co. $10.

Work will begin at once, headed by a building committee composed of P. T. Huckabay, chairman; Dr. L. S. Huckabay, and A. L. Holland. W. L. Baker, chairman; T. A. Sherwin and A. D. Morrison are trustees. The finance committee is composed of W. C. McDonald, chairman; J. D. Nelson, sec.-treas.; Mrs. M. B. Adams, Mrs. E. C. Wells, Mrs. M. A. Wilson, Mrs. A. D. Morrison, M. A. Bogan and Richard D. Clanton.

Funds will be raised to buy other necessary material, pay one carpenter, seat the building. Men of the field will give free labor on their "off" days from regular work. The following members of the Woman's Missionary Society have charge of raising funds to buy a piano: Mrs. E. C. Wells, chairman; Mrs. J. D. Nelson, Mrs. A. D. Morrison, Mrs. M. B. Adams, Mrs. W. L. Baker and Mrs. A. L. Holland.

All members of the church, interested friends and others who would like to have a part in helping build the church are invited to participate.

DR. T. W. LEWIS SPEAKS

Dear Raulins: You are making a good paper. Wish I had a hundred dollars to send you. Some people are still extravagant, although lots of people are out of work.

I see people drinking beer at 20 cents a bottle, women sucking cigarettes, new cars go dashing by. Somebody must have some money or good credit.

I am in the middle of my fourth year at First Church. Easter Sunday we had 1091 at Sunday school. Our average attendance is about 800. Have

DR. A. C. KING

To the second quarterly conference, Algiers Methodist church:

Whereas, death has removed from our midst Dr. Alfred C. King, a highly respected citizen, a nobleman of the medical profession, and a highly valued member of our church, board of stewards and quarterly conference; therefore be it resolved,

First. That this conference pause a moment in its deliberation with silence as a token of its love and esteem for his princely character and his long and valuable service to our church.

Second. That we close up our ranks, and, with God's help, try to carry on the work to which he gave himself so generously.

Third. That we hereby express to Mrs. King our deep sympathy, assuring her of our prayers, and Fourth. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy sent to Mrs. King, and copies sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Algiers Herald for publication.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. J. C. CLARK
Enters Beyond Easter Morning

Shortly before the dawn of a beautiful Easter morning commemorating the resurrection of Him to whom she had devoted a life of service, the spirit of Mrs. J. C. Clark left its earthly temple and winged its way to join the Master whom she loved.

Quietly, peacefully, like the gentle rolling away of the stone from the tomb of the Saviour, her spirit passed from earth to Heaven as a benediction after a life, whose living was a perpetual sermon on the love of God and service to Humanity.

The manner of the closing of Mrs. J. C. Clark's earthly career in a world for which she had wrought so much of good and accomplished so much for the betterment of mankind, the calling of a beautiful soul to its abiding place with God, the beginning of her eternal life on an Easter morning, left beheld with those who loved and admired her, a message of hope and inspiration in keeping with the life of one who exemplified to the fullest the attributes of heart and soul, of aspect and attitude, deserved in the truest sense by the name of "Christian."

Mrs. J. C. Clark was a woman whose like will not pass this way soon. She was a strong woman, with a strength of character rooted in the divine inspiration. She was a woman of magnificent executive capacity, capable of doing big things in a big way. She was a lovable woman, and a loving Mother, and friend, and so gentle, so kind, so considerate that she wrought her deeds of good and accomplished her endeavors as the morning Sun through the benign application of light and warmth lifts the shrouding vapors of the dawn from a mist chilled earth.

In her long life, and she would have been 61 her next birthday, those who were associated with her in Church, and other works, never heard her speak ill of anyone. There seemed no place in her soul and mind, filled with love and helpfulness, in which envious, unkind thoughts or actions could find even the smallest place in which to lodge. She was eager to keep those with whom she came in contact. She was zealous to prepare things on earth that it might be a better, kinder place in which to live, more nearly approaching the idea of the heaven which seemed to have given her a glimpse of how things on earth ought to be.

Mrs. Clark's work will live after her. The Sun's work is not done when he glides below the horizon. Then comes the afterglow, and so when the woman who has made the Lord her strength and endured as seeing Him who is invisible passes beyond our earthly horizon, the West is long, luminous after she is out of sight. "Being dead she yet speaketh." Her accomplishments were wrought upon the hearts and souls of people. The impress of her teaching, the inspiration from the beautiful example, and the precepts of her life, will continue to mould and to guide those with whom she came in contact.

She was a member of the Methodist Church; her church life meant so much to her that one felt they were missing something very real and fine to remain indifferent. Her religion was contagious. In that body of Christian people she had labored unselfishly, earnestly, untiringly in many churches throughout Florida, Alabama and Mississippi, for she traveled with her husband.

Mrs. Clark is survived by her husband, J. C. Clark of Gulfport, one daughter, Mrs. Warren Mullen of New York, and four sons, Dan of Pensacola, Florida, and George and Charles of Gulfport, Miss.

In losing her we have sustained a great loss, but Heaven has gained one of its brightest jewels, and the inspiration of her life lives on in the hearts of those for whom and with whom she labored during her pilgrimage here with us.

There is no death! What seems so is transition:

This life or mortal breath—
Is but a suburb of the life elysian,
Whose portal we call Death.

Keeping the Advocate Saved

Due to the uncertainty in banking conditions during the early period of the March 15-May 15 Advocate Circulation Campaign, many pastors deemed it wise to postpone making the canvass until later in the period, and have requested us to extend the time to June 1, which, after careful consideration and consultation, we have decided to do.

Returns are now beginning to come in in goodly numbers, and every pastor is urged to take advantage of the extension of the campaign to June 1, and see to it that the claims of the Conference organ are properly presented.

The following are lists of two or more subscriptions received since our report last week, and include both new and renewals received through Monday, May 15.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

A LETTER TO OUR PASTORS

Dear Boys:

This is a personal letter. So just imagine your name up here at the top. Perhaps still better, if your imagination is still working, consider that we are sitting down in a cool place to have a little visit together.

You have noticed that I have been writing letters to other people, Japan, the Pope, Mr. Roosevelt. I have not heard from any of them yet. So I have decided to write to somebody who will answer me.

I am not going to waste a lot of your time telling you that you are the "key men." You already know about that. What I am after now is turning the key and unlocking something.

You know we are in this "Keep the Advocate Saved Campaign." And, first, I want to thank you for the part you, with your good people, have had both in this and the "Save the Advocate Campaign." While that first campaign did not quite measure up to my expectations it did speak a mighty strong word for the interest of our people. There was some good momentum in it. With the encouragement you gave us in it we launched the present effort.

Please don't tell it, but I got a little discouraged the other day. We were just not hearing from any of you much. My lip was hanging way down. I have met most of you fellows, so I just said to myself, "Those boys are not going to let down on this thing. They are bigger than any hard times or difficulties that they face. They are not quitters."

So just yesterday, before I got back to the office, the Manager called me on the 'phone and said, "Those pastors are sending in their lists of subscriptions. You ought to see them. If all around each pastor responds with the effort of which he is capable they will get the thing done."

Well, that lower lip came up with a snap, and first thing I knew the corners of my mouth had started round to my ears again. Thank you for that lift. We can do it.

I have not been to the office yet. I am writing from my post as pastor. Shall go over directly and see about the reports.

Now I know all about those "many things" that have crowded your program, and the "busted" banks. That's not news any more. The thing that is real news for us now is how numbers of our pastors with their committees are just going right out and getting the subscriptions for the Advocate.

This note to you is to ask that you actually get up in your pulpit and tell your people about the Advocate. It is as much their Advocate as your anyhow.

By the way, look on page four and see what I copied from another paper about "the Advocate." A good layman wrote me once about what he thought the Advocate ought to be, and compared it with some other papers. I appreciated what he had to say and wanted to make it just that sort of paper. But I cannot do it yet. I am doing the best I can. But it is our paper, and we are not going to apologize for it.

I believe I told you about two of our other Advocates. They have on a campaign and are just sweeping right along with it. Those editors read our Advocate. Let's show 'em what we can do. And then I read how the Catholics were going out

PROF. PIERCE CLINE
President of Centenary College

President Cline has been Professor of History and Head of the Department for 13 years. He holds the Ph.B. and A.M. Degrees from Emory University, Georgia, and has done Graduate work in the University of Chicago. Before coming to Centenary, he was professor of History at Birmingham-Southern College, of Birmingham, Alabama.

President Cline is active in Church and Civic affairs as well as Educational. He has established a wide reputation as a speaker on historical, economic, and political subjects, and is much in demand as such. He is teacher of the Foster-Moore Bible Class of First Methodist Church, Shreveport.

and just raking in subscriptions for their papers. And I said, "Does a Catholic love his church more than a Methodist does?"

You already know about the big jobs ahead of us. Tell you at times it looks a bit shaky. Looks as if they are determined to put a beer mug in every hand. And then there are all the other big matters with which our church must deal. Of all times in our history, this is the wrong time to quit.

Want to ask you a question. Do you really believe that what we Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi are driving at is worth while? And, second, is it interesting? Stanley Jones is telling of the race between Christianity and Communism. Is there any race of any sort on in your community and the Christianity you preach?

Now, I know that the world is in a mess. It's sick all over. But don't forget that a part of the trouble is due to the seed sown by preachers and missionaries and church workers. That glorious Gospel has stirred men to believe that a much better world is possible, and they are not going to rest until that sort of a world or a wreck turns up. There are some strong powers trying to hold it down and keep it from coming. But it must come. The Gospel you are preaching has just as much dynamite in it as it had when it set out through the Roman Empire in the First Century.

It is easy for us to think that that is true off yonder somewhere, but not here on my charge. Let's snap out of that. Isaiah said, "Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations: spare not, lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes." That means right where you are.

Come on, now, everyone. Let us get a list of subscriptions from each charge.

Best of wishes. And let me hear from you right away.

Heartily yours,
EDITOR

JUST WHAT IS "ALABAMA JUSTICE?"

This is one of the "unhappy phrases thrown up by the convulsions of the now famous Scottsboro Case which recently placed the quiet little city of Decatur, Alabama, in the limelight.

Aside from usual colorings of prejudice this case had its sordid background further complicated by the sordid story of the nine negro boys and the two white girls traveling on freight cars from one state to another. And this situation out of which it grew was made possible by the general lack of employment. Thus it finally roots itself in the social and economic soil of the day and becomes something more than a "sectional issue."

In the first trial, conviction followed, but this decision was set aside by the United States Supreme Court. As the days dragged by, feeling developed, and the whole case was aggravated by the cross currents of discussion. Creating something of a social cyclone the case drew into itself some of the worst elements to be found in the country. Even Communism reached its red hand into the matter. Counsel from "up North" came into the picture further weakened by a Jewish accent. In the midst of such an atmosphere the case was retried with results already widely known.

In the midst of the hot discussions at

A WORD FROM BRAZIL

By Rev. G. D. Parker

The reading of the appointments of the Louisiana Conference is always attractive to me on account of the changing personnel and the new territory occupied since I left it more than 31 years ago. I was finishing my fourth year at Carrollton Avenue, New Orleans, when I was sent to Brazil and stationed at Rio de Janeiro, the National Capital, by Bishop Chas. B. Galloway. Although I have visited the Conference only once during all these years and notwithstanding the fact that I know personally so few of the present members, yet I am intensely interested in everything that you are doing for the evangelical conquest of one of the hardest fields in the world.

As you doubtless know we organized a National Methodist Church in Brazil in 1930 authorized by the General Conference which met that year in Dallas, Texas. To some this autonomy seems premature coming as it did in the critical period of the aftermath of the World War and the changing social and religious order occasioned by that cataclysm; and the question of support is indeed serious, especially since the Board of Missions has been obliged to cut appropriations but a Church comes of age when it can produce its own workers and by this test the Brazilian Church had reached its majority. An increasing number of promising young men offering themselves for the ministry guarantees the future; missionaries are needed and desired but the entire responsibility must eventually rest upon national shoulders. Congregations are becoming self-supporting but we still need the generous help of the Mother Church in conducting and maintaining educational institutions where these future leaders must be trained, also the publication of literature for the building of an intelligent constituency.

This country has been hit harder than the U. S. A. by the financial crisis although we have no 18th. Amendment to bear the blame. If the manufacture, sale and consumption of alcohol means prosperity, as some would persuade us, then Brazil ought to be one of the most prosperous countries in the world. Dr. J. Q. Schisler of the Board of Education, states that he saw enough liquor the few days that he spent in Rio attending the World Sunday School Convention last July to float a battle ship. The price of labor is low, poverty distressing and morals appalling. Many of our people are making real sacrifices and suffering persecution for the Cause, one characteristic case I shall cite in closing. One of our humblest but most faithful pastors in the interior wrote me at the end of last year that he would not be able to attend the Annual Conference four days by train, for lack of funds. I read his letter to my congregation as a stimulus to their raising their quota for pastoral support as all raised for this purpose in churches served by missionaries is applied toward support of nationals. The next Sunday one of my Sunday school teachers, who has been a member of the church less than three years, privately placed a packet in my hands for this brother although I called no names nor did I make an appeal. It contained a gold bracelet which she said she did not need since becoming a Methodist. I sold it for a good price and sent the money to the brother up in the mountains and it was a very grateful colleague that I met at Conference who passed his examination, on which he had worked for years and was duly ordained elder.

Sometime after this event this same woman called at our home and with heartbreaking sobs told a story of systematic and cruel persecution on the part of her husband who does not sympathize with her religious activities. She had dispensed with a servant and was doing the work herself in order that she might have the salary for her church and charitable institutions, but he alleged that she was reducing the family to penury by her generosity and has harassed her to such an extent that she has been compelled to give up even attendance upon services. However, every Sunday at the church hour she goes to her room and remains alone with God in prayer and meditation while we are having service in the chapel; furthermore she sends her contribution for pastoral support punctually each month.

Pray for her and for us that we may prove faithful, and even through tribulation "wash our robes and make them white in the blood of the Lamb."

Cordially yours,

G. D. PARKER

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Brookhaven District Conference convened at Tylertown on Thursday morning, April 27, with Rev. O. S. Lewis of Brookhaven, acting as temporary chairman. The conference was well attended by pastors, delegates, and visitors, several of the brethren from the Louisiana Conference being in attendance at various times. The people of the beautiful little host city entertained the conference most pleasantly and yet found time to attend the sessions in large numbers, thereby adding to the congenial atmosphere and fellowship of the meeting.

The reports of the pastors showed a generally progressive movement over the district and reflected a spirit of optimism and faith on the part of pastors and people.

Autie Wiley Wilson and Joseph Bruce Vardaman were licensed to preach. Rev. B. M. Lawrence was recommended for admission to the Annual Conference and Rev. Nathan Havers was recommended to the Annual Conference for the recognition of orders.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: H. H. Goza, Virgil Youngblood, J. M. Ewing, Robt. Bahington, Curtis Youngblood, H. J. Wilson, S. E. Denman, J. P. Carruth, A. H. Jones, R. E. Bennett, Mrs. L. W. Alford, Mrs. W. R. Rawls, Mrs. C. A. Butterworth, E. F. Puckett, J. B. Smith and W. E. Driver.

Curtis Youngblood was re-elected District Lay Leader and A. H. Jones and Robt. Bahington were re-elected Associate District Lay Leaders.

A feature of the session was the program given by the Whitworth College Quartet, assisted by three college student speakers. Interesting data bearing on the history and spirit of the college was presented by the speakers and the quartet rendered several sacred selections.

The conference unanimously adopted the report of the committee on Temperance and Social Service which contained resolutions strongly supporting the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and condemning the trend toward the legalization of the liquor traffic.

Dr. C. W. Crisler, presiding elder of the district, added greatly to the profitableness of the session by timely addresses on various subjects of interest to the conference.

The next session will be held at Centenary Church, McComb.

JACKSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The District Conference of the Jackson District, Mississippi Conference met at Forest Hill Church on the Terry Charge on Thursday, May 11, 1933. The opening sermon had been preached the previous evening by J. B. Holyfield.

The business sessions of the conference were held in the auditorium of the Forest Hill Consolidated School, and were well attended. The devotional services were led by B. L. Sutherland, M. L. White, Guy Sigrest and J. H. Foreman, the sermons preached by J. B. Holyfield, Ira E. Williams and J. L. Decell and the special programs by the District Board of Lay Activities and Whitworth College were all inspirational and instructive. These stirring messages had much to do with making the conference a blessing to those who attended. Peace and harmony prevailed throughout all the sessions, and brotherhood and good fellowship were much in evidence both in the conference and during the recess periods. The various committees were on hand and brought in reports that were of a very high order and reflected a spirit of optimism and faith that is very commendable.

Conference and church-wide interests were ably presented—The New Orleans Christian Advocate was represented by D. B. Raulins who led the conference in prayer and spoke in the interest of our Conference Organ; the Golden Cross Enrollment was presented by H. E. Raley, Conference Director, and A. J. Boyles, District Director; the cause of Missions was presented by J. L. Neill, Chairman of the Conference Board; The Orphans' Home was represented by Fred J. McDonnell who addressed the district conference, and by a group of eight junior-age girls who sang three songs for us; the cause of Temperance and Prohibition was represented by Judge J. G. McGowan of the Mississippi Supreme Court who brought a masterful address on, "The Church and Prohibition" and by J. A. Smith and G. L. Harrell, who spoke on this great cause also; Paine College was represented by J. L. Decell; Christian Education was represented by J. C. Chambers and

D. M. Key and by G. F. Winfield who brought a delegation from Whitworth College who gave an excellent devotional program on the second morning; the cause of Lay Activities was represented by J. C. Wood, J. A. Lindsey, and J. M. Sullivan, who gave an excellent Laymen's hours on the afternoon of the first day; Mrs. Gordon Patton told of the work of the Woman's Missionary Society in this district during the past year; and Miss Ann Stevens told of the work done by the Young People's Division of the church.

Twenty-one lay delegates to the Annual Conference were elected: S. L. McLaurin, Brandon; J. M. Sullivan, Jackson; J. M. Forman, Jackson; J. A. Lindsey, Pelahatchie; G. L. Harrell, Jackson; Mrs. B. F. Lewis, Jackson; J. Morgan Stevens, Jackson; J. C. Wood, Jackson; W. H. Bradley, Jackson; Mrs. W. H. Watkins, Jackson; Mrs. J. A. Smith, Jackson; I. O. Brown, Fannin; Mrs. R. H. Shands, Jackson; R. J. Knoblock, Forest; D. M. Key, Jackson; Mrs. J. C. Chambers, Jackson; O. C. Hull, Lawrence; H. O. Middleton, Mendenhall; O. C. Scott, Forest; Mrs. A. J. Boyles, Flora, and W. C. Davis, Jackson. Six Alternate lay delegates were elected: W. A. Ellis, C. C. Windham, Mrs. J. M. Morse, Mrs. J. L. Decell, Mrs. R. E. Rutledge and J. J. Childre. The new Golden Cross Director for the district is Dr. H. C. Sheffield of Jackson. The District Lay Leaders were re-elected: J. C. Wood, Lay Leader and J. A. Lindsey and W. H. Bradley, associates. Two young men, who are in their senior year at Millsaps College were licensed to preach: Floyd Osmond Lewis and Julius Allen McRaney. The Ad-Interim Licensing Committee were elected as follows: J. L. Decell, J. A. Smith, M. K. Miller and T. O. Prewitt.

The district conference was brought to a close with a consecration service led by T. O. Prewitt and B. L. Sutherland. The conference closed with all the members gathered at the altar for a series of prayers of consecration.

B. L. Sutherland presided in a brotherly way and with a system that led to the prompt dispatch of the business of the conference. The people of the Forrest Hill community, and their pastor, C. A. Downer, were tireless in their efforts to see that all were comfortable and well fed. It was indeed good to be there.

LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Lake Charles District Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in regular annual session at the First Methodist Church, Rayne, La., Dr. W. Winans Drake, presiding elder in the chair. The conference was held on May 11 and 12. The chairman opened the conference with a very fine devotional service, in which he called the pastors and laymen's attention to the great call of God to a life of sacrifice and service as a basis for success in the work of the Kingdom of our Christ.

Rev. Claude K. Smith, Crowley, was elected secretary and Rev. J. C. Rousseaux, Many, was elected assistant secretary.

This conference is said to have been the most spiritual of any held in the district for some years. Sermons by Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, of Lake Charles, and Dr. A. M. Serex, of New Iberia, made a large contribution to the great spirituality and inspiration of the conference. The sermon by Rev. Mr. Gunn, using as a subject, "The Necessity of Building Upon a Firm Foundation," was a message every preacher in the Conference should hear. The subject used by Dr. Serex was, "The Beauty of God." If space permitted, I should be glad to have this sermon printed, that all the preachers and laymen of the Church could read it and get a small glimpse of this great message.

Reports from the several charges showed that progress is being made in the work of the Church in the Lake Charles District. Greater congregations are attending the churches, greater interest is being exhibited, and many are being brought into the church.

Rev. S. A. Seegers, Rayne, was elected District Director of the Golden Cross, and, as a very fine beginning of the work, presented a pageant given by the young people of the Rayne church as a means of interesting pastors and laymen in this great cause. A copy of the pageant and a receptacle for the taking of an offering for the work was presented to the representative of the Golden Cross from each charge.

The different causes of the church were presented, as follows: Christian Education, Rev. A. K. McLellan; Centenary College, Dr. W. Winans Drake; Missions, Rev. H. N. Brown; Memorial Mercy Home, Rev. J. W. Faulk; Orphanage, Rev.

R. W. Vaughan, New Orleans Christian Advocate, Mr. A. M. Mayo.

Mr. J. Ed Eaves, of Lake Charles, was elected District Lay Leader, with the following as associate lay leaders: Mr. E. L. Savoie, Crowley; Mr. S. H. Porter, DeRidder.

Dr. and Mrs. Briscoe Carter, Mrs. R. H. Wynn, Dr. R. H. Harper, Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Knight, were some of the distinguished visitors to the conference.

Special mention should be made of the entertainment arranged by the pastor and people of the Rayne church for the preachers and lay delegates to the conference. Everything possible was done for the comfort and entertainment of the visitors.

A vote of thanks was extended to Dr. W. W. Drake, presiding elder, and to Rev. Claude K. Smith, secretary, for the efficient manner in which the conference was conducted.

The conference unanimously accepted the invitation from Lake Charles to hold the next district conference in that city.

CLAUDE K. SMITH, Secretary.

SARDIS-GRENADA DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Sardis-Grenada District Conference convened in the Methodist Church at Batesville, Miss., promptly at 9:45 a.m., May 4, 1933. The conference soon realized that our presiding elder, Rev. W. L. Stormont, had made ample preparation for every detail of the program.

The preaching was done by Revs. P. F. Luter, W. L. Robinson and J. H. Felts. The devotionals, at the beginning of each session, were led by Revs. A. L. Davenport, B. F. Hammond, E. F. Tucker, and E. L. Jernigan.

Our connectional work was well represented by Revs. D. B. Raulins, Dr. D. M. Key, Dr. J. R. Countiss, Fred McDonald, Rev. A. T. Mellwain, Rev. R. G. Lord, Rev. J. H. Felts, Rev. S. A. Brown, J. W. Kyle and Mrs. Roy A. Grisham. Other visitors were: Dr. V. C. Curtiss, Rev. M. E. Scott, Rev. R. S. Lawson, Rev. S. H. Caffey, Rev. J. W. York, Rev. W. W. Jones.

Every pastor, except one, was present. Rev. W. F. Rogers of Horn Lake was absent due to illness, and one of his laymen, Dr. L. L. Minor, gave a detailed report of his work.

One promising young man, Mr. Willie Bob Richerson, was licensed to preach. He is a member of the See's Chapel Church on the Longtown charge.

Mrs. A. W. Stokes, of Grenada, a member of the conference, was introduced as a member of the first graduating class of Grenada College. The conference immediately stood in honor of this great worker in the Kingdom.

Every charge was represented. There were ninety-nine members of the conference present, and visitors swelled the attendance to two hundred and twenty-five.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: Hon. J. W. Kyle, Dr. E. L. Minor, Miss Tryphenia Rogers, Herbert Holmes, J. E. Birmingham, E. W. Varner, H. G. Johnson, R. W. Sharp, Mrs. Roy A. Grisham, Mrs. A. W. Stokes, J. B. Nelson, and Mrs. J. R. Countiss. Alternates elected were: A. B. Friend, J. W. Riley, D. R. Johnson and Rev. J. T. McKibben.

Revs. S. A. Brown, W. W. Hartsfield, W. N. Dodds, P. F. Luter, W. D. Bennett and W. C. Beasley were confirmed as the Ad-Interim Committee.

Hon. J. W. Kyle was re-elected District Lay-leader and Warren Stewart and Dr. L. L. Minor, his associates.

The pastor-host, Rev. W. N. Dodds, and the members of the Batesville Church certainly entertained us royally. The conference wanted to return there next year but knew that would be imposing. Horn Lake, Oakland and Byhalia extended invitations and Oakland was selected for the 1934 session of the conference.

NOTES FROM THE HATTIESBURG DISTRICT

By Rev. J. B. Cain

The Hattiesburg District still survives in good shape after the re-arrangement. We regretted to lose Brothers Clifford, Holt, Corley, Oliver, Ridgeway, Holyfield, and most of all Brother W. M. Williams. They were among our most active men and will be heard from in the districts where they go.

Of the new men coming to us six of them, Brothers Walters, Clark, McRaney, Norton, Thompson, and Matheny, have served in this district before, the first three being partly reared in it. Brother Thompson was reared in Sullivan's Hollow, just outside this district. Brothers King and Moors are well and favorably known to many people here.

The two pastors groups were considerably disarranged, the southern group losing its chairman, Brother Clifford, and the northern group its vice-chairman, Brother Holyfield, and worse still its next meeting place and chicken dinner, at Silver Creek. Three good group meetings have been held at Taylorsville, Purvis, and Collins, with good sermons by T. C. Cooper, W. M. Williams, and J. B. Holyfield.

Our veteran presiding elder, after a score of years in the eldership, is still younger and more active than many of us who came into the Conference much later than he did. He carries his responsibilities, which are many, in an easy and effective fashion, and has won to him the pastors and people of the whole district. It is a pleasure and delight to have him occasionally at Main Street church, where he spent five busy years and has many friends.

I do not know the developments in the district generally but the work in and around Hattiesburg has been aggressive and in many cases effective. Brother Schultz in a new pastorate is having an unusually good year and Brother Clegg, in his third year at Broad Street, is working out a plan that will save that loyal but relatively weak church from being overcome by its burden of debt, a heroic effort for which he deserves the largest credit. Brother Williams at Petal, after a miraculous escape from death in an auto wreck on May 5, is steadily regaining his strength. Brother Griffin at Bonhommie is in a meeting for two weeks on his work with Rev. J. O. Haynes assisting.

Good zone meetings have been held by the women's auxiliaries and the Conference meeting was scheduled for Hattiesburg before it was found impossible to have the meeting this year. District Conference at Encutta will be in session the day you receive this Advocate. The district young people's institute was held at Main Street on the afternoon and evening of May 5 with representatives from the three Hattiesburg churches, State Teachers College, Petal, Richton, Mount Olive, Sumrall and the banner delegation of fifteen from Kingston Laurel. Miss Grace Lewis presided and the principal address was by Rev. B. M. Hunt, of McComb.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By Rev. W. R. Lott, Contributing Editor

Broadly speaking, we have two classes of church leaders. One is very busy trying to work on the membership, and the other is trying to use the membership. One sees the church as a hospital for operations; the other sees the church as an organized power for performing valuable services. It can be readily seen that in the church, as in the world, we have need for hospitals and all the corrective measures for restoring vitality, yet there are vastly more active institutions than there are hospitals. The ideal church is a body of healthy believers who do not need the Spiritual Physician to be continuously taking their temperature or blood pressure. The Christian who can be made to forget his weakness and rise up with a light in his eyes to be used of God rather than be nurtured, is the fortunate one. I fear we do not trust our people enough. They can walk if we depend on them. In nearly every case, when they are forced to meet some great issue of life, they find themselves much stronger than they had thought. It is often the case that we pastors are agonizing over the indifference of our people when we have not tried their gifts and resources. On one occasion, an earnest minister, working with his own hands, built a church and parsonage. One discerning friend asked him, "Where were the hands of your people?"

The ceremony says, "Marriage is a holy institution." It might have said marriage is a dangerous institution for the church life of the young people. We are exhorted to look after the children, young people, sick people and the shut-ins. Had you noticed how quickly young married couples are lost to the church? Check up on your congregation over a period of four or five years. In many cases one of a denomination will marry a person of another. Well, in the atmosphere of unselfishness which love brings to them they step away from the loyalties which have held them through formative years. They will begin to alternate between church services. Then they do not go at all. Children are born into the home. The young mother drifts farther away, and the father thinks in order to be loyal to her he must not leave her on Sundays. Soon the church forgets them, and we find them again in middle life undeveloped, often torn by denominational prejudice, many valuable years lost to the church. What are we going to do about it? The young people in the same church will develop the same tendency. Young married couples need the care of the church. That picture of a bride you see in the paper represents a distinct church problem. The church really has not been able to meet it. However, something can be done if it is gone into definitely and intelligently. The dangerous divorce time is about the tenth year of married life. During these ten years is where we are losing. I think we should put into the hands of all our young married people some excellent little book like, "The Charm of a Well Mannered Home." Frequent visits to these new homes, with a prayer for their happiness, helps so much. If the young mother can be kept in touch with the church life by the use of the many means we have, the home may be saved. Let us not forget our young married couples.

PRESIDENT CLINE OF CENTENARY COLLEGE SAYS—

"We are going to lose or win on a policy of maintaining a high standard of scholarship and character, and absolute integrity and economy."

"We do not even propose to attempt anything other than to carry on until economic improvement has made a program of expansion possible. Our theory is the school that lives now can prosper then."

"We believe that the goodwill of the Methodist preachers of Louisiana is Centenary's most valuable asset. We shall do our best to earn, deserve, and receive this good will."

the time of the trial a gentleman by the name of Wade Wright made the statement about "Alabama Justice."

Does each state have a particular brand of justice? It might be well to ponder the question.

But with all the disagreeable features that developed out of the Scottsboro Case there were some points of light. Judge James E. Horton, before whom the case was tried, has been commended for his fair handling of the matter. This is the estimate of the attorney who had almost anything else to say of the trial otherwise.

Papers carried various reports and opinions of the trial so that it was practically impossible for anyone to arrive at a fair judgment. We wish heartily to commend the very sane attitude taken by Rev. A. P. Shaw, editor of the Christian Advocate, Southwestern Edition; the official organ of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. While pleading for the finer display of justice to the negro, he calls attention to the factors that made it extremely difficult, giving special reference to the outside Communistic influences. This he regards as the most unfortunate feature of all. And he condemns the disposition to make it a racial and national affair which might have been handled more effectively in the community where the crime was alleged to have been committed. Says he, "There are some constitutional matters which, as a race, we should guard closely, but we cannot afford to make a national and racial issue out of every little community crime and criminal."

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. J. D. Simpson had Rev. T. H. Dorsey assist in a revival at Coffeville, May 14 to 21.

Are you helping to balance the national budget by training your boy to drink beer?

"I enjoy your editorials very much. They are fine." Mrs. R. W. Baird, Greenwood, Miss.

"I am enjoying the paper more and more every week. I am a man 73 years of age." E. W. Nance, Philadelphia, Miss.

Revs. H. M. McCormack, Jr., W. L. Pearson and

W. R. Hammontree attended the pastor's school at Vanderbilt in April.

Dr. M. E. Dodd, pastor of First Baptist Church, Shreveport, presided over the Southern Baptist Convention meeting in Washington, D. C.

Mr. Louis Decell, Millsaps College, with the subject, "We the People," took first in the Inter-collegiate Oratorical contest which met at Millsaps, Friday, May 12.

Rev. W. N. Dodds, our pastor at Batesville, Miss., is receiving splendid co-operation in his work there. Brother Dodds has a happy way of reaching the hearts of young people.

The many friends of Rev. W. F. Rogers, of Horn Lake, Miss., will be pleased to learn that he has been able to return home after taking treatment at the Methodist Hospital in Memphis.

The parsonage at Aberdeen, Miss., has been very much improved inside by the ladies of the church. It is now a delightful home for the pastor, equipped with many modern conveniences.

"WHAT IF?"

"If 'The Advocate' were more attractive and readable I could get more subscribers."

Thus have spoken several pastors, at intervals, through the year.

They are so right that it hurts.

Chocolate cake is richer than cornbread. But what if it's cornbread or nothing to eat?

A Packard sort of paper might be more popular—at the Ford price—than a Ford type of periodical. But what if it's either the Ford or going afoot?

A tractor does plow faster than a team of horses. But what if it's either a horse-drawn plow or you and a spade?

A more attractive paper would be easier to get into our people's homes than the present "Advocate." But what if it's "The Advocate" or no church paper at all, to offset all the influences which undermine our work?

And "The Advocate," as it stands, offers every church something it can't refuse without loss.

One town not 100 miles from this office gets three tons a week of newspaper and periodicals.

Among the rest is one copy of "The Advocate," weighing three ounces.

That handicap is too heavy. An "Advocate" in every church home would make it a lot lighter for everybody concerned—pastor, official board, Sunday school workers—yes, and the janitor, even though it brought more people out on Sundays.

—The Northwestern Christian Advocate.

A daily vacation Bible School is now in progress at Hamilton Church. This church is said to be the liveliest of rural churches in North Mississippi Conference. Rev. W. C. Galceran is pastor.

Rev. V. C. Curtis is helping some of the pastors in his district with their revival work. May 14 to 21 he assisted Rev. J. A. George at Macon, and this week he is with Rev. T. B. Thrower at Ackerman, Miss.

Look on the first page and find the cut of Prof. Pierce Cline, the new president of Centenary College, who is shortly to take charge of the affairs of the institution. Note the few brief statements from President Cline on page three.

Rev. L. P. Wasson, pastor at Clarksdale, Miss., has just closed a fine meeting at Friars Point church, where Rev. M. H. McCormack is pastor. Brother McCormack speaks most highly of the work done by Brother Wasson.

Rev. Jno. A. May, one of our general evangelists, recently closed a great meeting near his home in Alabama, Centerville being the place of the meeting. Brother May is available for meetings throughout the country. For reference, write Bishop Dobbs, Shreveport, La.

Dr. E. Nash Broyles on Sunday, May 14, assisted Rev. T. M. Bradley in the funeral of Mr. J. E. Davis, at West Point, Miss. He remained over night and preached to local Methodist people.

Dr. Broyles was pastor at West Point before he was appointed Presiding Elder of the Aberdeen District.

Just why is it that the brewers are not putting "Three Point Two" into the beer they are making?

"Would it not be wise, before repeal, to watch the effect of legalized beer on individuals, the home, taxation, law-breaking, the traffic problem and politics?" asks the Friends' Temperance Association of Philadelphia. What do you think?

Rev. J. T. McCafferty preached the Commencement sermon at Ackerman, Miss., recently. Bro. McCafferty leads our church at Kosciusko. This town boasts of one of the best business territories of any its size in North Mississippi. We have a fine building for every type of church work erected under the pastorate of Rev. A. S. Raper.

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb reports good interest in his church at Louisville. That town has been as hard hit by financial disaster as any in the North Mississippi Conference. That is particularly true of the Methodist people there. However, they are a determined group and we believe that the faithfulness of the people will be rewarded.

Rev. P. M. Caraway, East End, Meridian, and Rev. W. B. Jones, Magnolia, Miss., were welcomed callers at the office of the Advocate on last Saturday morning. Brother Caraway had just concluded a week of special services at our Magnolia Church, where Brother Jones is stationed. The editor regrets being out when they called.

The Standard Training School of the North Mississippi Conference is to be held at Grenada, June 5-10. Among the fine corps of instructors we find the following names: Dr. O. E. Goddard, Rev. C. A. Parks, Miss Frances McLester, Prof. P. J. Rutledge, Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb and Mrs. C. W. Kent. Who could resist the appeal of such a faculty as that?

Have you brought in those gold trinkets for the saving of our mission work? A man handed me an envelope the other day, and in it I found some rings and other things. Too much sentiment attached to them to let them go. Is anything too good for God? And is there any way for you more fittingly to enshrine that worthy and sacred sentiment?

Some years ago Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, then Sunday School Secretary of North Mississippi Conference, took a special interest in a young girl, Miss Teeny Fowles, at Greenbriar Church, on the Becker Charge, in trying to lead her to become an efficient Sunday school worker. He succeeded, for that young lady is now director of Children's work in the Aberdeen District.

The Mother's Day number of the Bulletin of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, Dr. W. W. Holmes, pastor, carries an attractive cut of Mrs. Wm. B. Reily. Two or more generations have been and are the friends and supporters of Rayne Memorial and the same for the Advocate. Brother W. B. Reily, who is spending a while at his home at Sterlington, La., is reported to be in better health.

Hats off to Duke University. A group of students there is making a thorough study of the American home. We'd suggest that all the faculty members and the rest of the students get on the job, and that the project not be allowed to stop with the study. Let's do something about the American home. Think I shall start on mine. Shall be glad to assist you with yours when I catch up.

We sympathize with Mississippi Baptists, about whom we read the following statement in the Baptist Record: "The Executive Committee of the Southern Baptist Convention reports receipts from all states for all southwide objects in April at $97,073.08, of which over $40,000 was designated for special items in the program. On account of conditions in our own state Mississippi is not represented."

Rev. B. M. Hunt, pastor of Centenary Church, McComb, Miss., has been engaged in a meeting at Magee, Miss. Brother Hunt is one of our stronger young generation of preachers. His ministry is being attended with enlarging interest and usefulness. We would speak of his work in terms of success were it not for the fact that when that word is mentioned, so many of us at once think of publicity and size and numbers. Those are incidental features of a better ministry.

"Our work has been kept up to the usual high standards and the spirit of the student body has been superb. Already more than 100 high school seniors have indicated their purpose to be with us in September, and I look for a large increase in our enrollment. The school will easily be self-supporting if patronized by a sufficient number to fill its dormitories." Dr. J. R. Countiss, speaking for Grenada College. Rally round, all hands. Let's fill those dormitories. This is to be the big year for our Church colleges.

Dr. S. J. Davies, author of "Safety Signals," and a superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, has been spending some days in the Tri-State Hospital, Shreveport, where he has received every possible attention and courtesy. An attack of influenza is responsible for this enforced vacation of Dr. Davies. The examining physician reports that his physical machinery is in condition to assure a rapid recovery. If you are not close enough to send a flower, pray a prayer for Dr. Davies. Maybe you can do both.

Once again East End Church, Meridian, Miss., leads all other churches in the number of new and renewal subscriptions secured for the Advocate. Last year, you will remember, this church sent in the largest list of any church in the three patronizing Conferences. Their list of thirty-six, brought to our office personally by Brother P. M. Caraway, faithful pastor of this wide-awake church, tops all other lists received to date in our March 15-June 1 circulation campaign. When asked the secret of his success, his only reply was, "There is only one Mrs. C. M. Martin." We salute you, Mrs. Martin.

I still like surprises. I am strong for Santa Claus and all his co-workers. Our "Keeping the Advocate Saved" campaign was dragging terribly. I'd get through my work in the office as quickly as possible and slip out into the fresh air. For I saw old man Gloom crouched over there right by my desk. The last time I was in the Manager came forward with a smile, saying, "Those Methodists are doing better. Several lists have just come in." So we turned right in and said, "We'll put the closing date June 1." We do hope that every church will do its best. Look for announcement of your list in the column devoted to the report.

You have not heard anything from Rev. H. P. Lewis, Rosedale, Miss., in some time. You should have put your ear a little closer to the ground. He is enlarging the place of his tent. He is supposed to preach at three points on that charge. Why not stop there? Many think that enough. Brother Lewis has added three other points. He recently participated in a union meeting in which the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian pastors joined in the preaching. A short while ago he was assisted in a meeting at Rosedale by Rev. Jas. V. Bennett, pastor at Booneville. Brothers Lewis and Bennett are ex-pastors of this editor, and they have big and honored places in his "memory book."

Dr. O. E. Goddard may be judged a most versatile Methodist in the world from his record. A very successful pastor in every type of pastorate we have, an evangelist of rare gifts; a missionary in reality; director of home mission work for years; director of all the foreign mission fields for a number of years; commissioned at one time to lead the entire Methodist Church in a great revival campaign; a writer of books on mission, evangelism and church work in general. He refused to be elected Bishop at the Hot Springs General Conference when he was in reach of the office. Methodist pastors of North Mississippi will have the privilege of hearing this man give of his varied experiences at Grenada, Miss., June 5 to 10.

The following is a little more accurate statement as to the funeral of Rev. J. E. Cunningham: "The body of brother Cunningham, accompanied by sister Cunningham, the bereaved wife, and other near relatives, reached here from Alexandria, La., on the evening of April 25. Funeral services were held the following day in the First Methodist Church at 1 o'clock. Scripture reading was by the pastor and Rev. W. N. Duncan, Presiding Elder, Greenwood district; prayer by Rev. James H. Felts of Grenada and the address was by Dr. J. R. Countiss, Dean of Grenada College. At the cemetery the service was by Rev. E. S. Lewis, Winona, following which the Local Post of the American Legion executed a brief but meaningful expression of their love and honor for him who had served so faithfully during the World War. To know Jim Cunningham was to love him, and most people in Mississippi knew him. Mrs. Cunningham will make her future home in Greenwood—the city where they last resided and where everyone knew and loved them all.—E. H. Cunningham."

Rev. Melville Johnson is Dean of the Young People's Assembly at Grenada College, June 12 to 16. The first Young People's Assembly was held at the College in June, 1920, Rev. W. R. Lott, leader of the Young People. It has been held there every year since, with Rev. S. H. Caffey, J. S. Duncan, A. S. Raper, W. L. Robinson, W. C. Newman, leaders. Now under the new regulations, the president must be a young person within the age limit of 16-23. Paul Clanton, a young ministerial student, is president of the conference this year. For many years Rev. and Mrs. R. P. Neblett directed the Young People's work of the Conference. Revs. J. H. Holder, E. S. Lewis and W. W. Woollard, have given much of their time to that important field of work. Revs. W. L. Pearson, J. E. Stephen, H. P. Lewis, S. E. Ashmore, E. M. Sharp, R. A. Grisham, W. R. Hammon-tree, R. G. Lord, G. R. Williams, and Rev. and Mrs. W. N. Duncan and many others are giving special interest to this work. North Mississippi Conference is fortunate to have Miss Virginia Thomas, a young woman who loves young people and understands them, as its director of the Young People's Division.

haps today occupies the largest place of any man in our Church. We are not speaking of the place of publicity and recognition, but of actual and effective force. And we are not speaking of what is found of him on Vanderbilt campus. A part of the penalty and compensation of being a teacher, in many instances, is the quiet and modest place. He is often unheralded and unsung, at least in the measures familiar to the world. But Dean Tillet has distributed himself, through the lives of his students, to every quarter of our church in every quarter of the world in which it operates. Not only on every field geographically are they found, but in the front lines of every moral and spiritual endeavor. It was altogether fitting, therefore, that on the evening of May 5, at the Hotel Noel, Nashville, a hundred of his friends gathered to do him honor; this being the Fiftieth Anniversary of his work at Vanderbilt. And equally fitting was it that three of our bishops participated in the program. Bishops Dobbs, Kern and Smith were among his "boys" who graced the occasion.

Are you reading the articles by Dr. E. Stanley Jones appearing each week in the Advocate? One subscriber wrote saying that she was filing the articles away for further reading and study. We trust that you are giving them due attention. No more prophetic voice is speaking today for the great mission of Christianity. For most of our readers the cost incident to bearing these addresses would have been many times the subscription price of the Advocate. Mrs. R. H. Wynn, to whom we are much indebted, makes possible the addresses for Advocate readers.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The work of the Conference Board is moving along. It is actually moving. The friends of the Board are proving themselves real friends and the work is almost up to attainments of last year.

Mr. O. C. Hull, Associate Extension Secretary, has been rendering valuable aid to the cause. He has organized two Young People's Divisions, a Young People's Union and re-organized one Sunday school. This fine work on his part has been exceedingly helpful. He has gotten one church to again begin to send in its fourth Sunday offering and to observe Sunday School Day this year.

Bro. Hull has conducted four most helpful and successful meetings. The response of the people to the meetings was most gratifying. Many gave themselves to God and joined the church while the church organizations were aided and larger and more vital programs were successfully carried out.

All small churches need Cokesbury schools or classes. If we can render you a service in this matter we shall be glad to hear from you. We are planning to have 20 classes. Five have already been held.

Many churches should conduct their own classes, studying together and standing the examination. We shall be glad to render service in this matter also.

It was the pleasure of the Executive Secretary to spend Mother's Day at Mount Olivet church on the Sartartia charge. The workers in the Sunday school had arranged a most interesting program and the congregation were highly appreciative of it.

Dinner was served at the church to the delight of all, after which we spent an hour in an institute that we trust was helpful. Brother Alsworth is doing a good work in this circuit and the people are responding to his leadership.

The assembly, we are praying, will be in every way the most successful we have had. Will you not join in this prayer?

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

No doubt you are wondering just what the plan for vespers is this year, as you have probably heard that there is to be a change. Rev. H. L. Johns of Ruston, will bring an inspirational message each evening at vesper time on some real life problem of young people. After he finishes his brief talk, the discussion will be opened by two young people—different ones each evening—who have been given the assignment ahead of time. Then other young people are to take part in the guided discussion. It is hoped that this plan will enlarge and enrich and deepen the effects of the vesper services, and that it will stimulate real serious thinking on the part of the young people themselves. Bro. Johns has had a wide experience in working with young people, and has the young person's viewpoint, and we believe that his leadership in this respect will be a most valuable contribution to the success of the Young People's Assembly.

The two unions of Baton Rouge District held a joint meeting at Bluff Creek Camp, in a Field Day, Saturday, May 13. District Director Collins Lipscomb had charge of the day's activities, which consisted of contests of various sorts, baseball, competitive games, swimming, etc., all of which were participated in enthusiastically by the fifty-odd young people present. At the close of the day's fun the group gathered on the hotel porch for a brief program. Talks were made on the two Assemblies by Mr. Lydell Sims and Miss Mary Searles. The winning district poster was displayed, the winner being Miss Marcy Sallers of Blackwater Church. After several prayers by the young people, the group adjourned.

We have received a report of the meeting, which resulted in the organization of the Alexandria sub-district union, from Miss Maude McFarland, publicity superintendent. Officers are: President, H. F. Bradford, Pineville, La.; Vice-President, W. D. Bodde, Pineville; Secretary, Miss Lottie May Hoyt of Cheneyville; Treasurer, Miss Cora Duke, Colfax; and Publicity Supt., Miss Maude McFarland of Pineville.

Devotional was led by Rev. D. B. Bobbie, and included special music, and chorus singing. The recreational program began with pep songs, led by Mrs. T. M. Sayman, accompanied by Miss Virginia Martin. Then Miss McFarland took charge, and the farce, "Pyramus and Thisbe," was presented by a group of young people, followed by games. Colfax had 14 present, Leconte and Cheneyville 11, Alexandria 7, and Pineville 49, a total of 81.

The union will meet every third Friday night. An announcement concerning the summer assemblies was made by Rev. A. K. McLellan. After a few songs led by Charles White, punch and cake were served by Mrs. Woods and Mrs. Ryder. This new union brings the total in the Conference up to 20, some more and some less active.

The High Road Union of Shreveport District met at Logansport, Sunday, May 7, with 20 present from Harmon, 7 from Mansfield, 16 from Logansport, a total of 43. The June meeting will be held in the new Harmon church, the old church having been destroyed by tornado.

As the young people entered the church, they were welcomed by the Counselor and one of the Logansport young people. They were requested to register as they entered, all of which led them to feel they were welcome. The program follows: Prelude, Mrs. Carroll; hymn, "Jesus Calls Us"; welcome address and prayer, Rev. S. S. Holliday; responsive reading, Psalm 121; solo, Mrs. J. C. Hull; duet, Margie Price and Majland Gray; "If" by Klpling, Jimmy Price; quartette, Cathryn Carroll, Nita Calhoun, Lola Simmons and Della Simmons.

A little story will demonstrate to you how much young people enjoy and love the assemblies. This one is concerning the Christian Adventure Assembly. Miss Ruth Stewart of Minden attended this assembly last year, and profited by it a great deal. This year, she graduated from High School, an honor student, and her parents told her they wished she could be given a trip to Europe for a graduation gift, as her cousin had. She replied that they could give her something which would make her just as happy, and do her more good, which was within their means. When questioned concerning this, she said it was $10.00 that she might attend the Christian Adventure Assembly!

We have heard of other young people who are mowing lawns, and doing other odd jobs to earn money to send themselves. This offers great possibilities, since this year churches are less able than in the past to finance delegates. We hope to see you all, June 13-19, or 20-26.

Your Conference Director,
MARY SEARLES.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S UNIONS OF WEST CLARKE COUNTY ORGANIZE IN GROUPS

A very interesting and well attended meeting of the young people's unions of West Clarke County was held in the Methodist church at Pachuta, Miss., Sunday afternoon, April 23, to organize into a group. The unions attending were: Pachuta, Quitman, McGowan's Chapel and Desoto. The meeting was opened by the singing of the hymn, "He Keeps Me Singing," Scripture and prayer by Miss M. Cameron, assistant secretary of Meridian District. Rev. D. E. Vickers, pastor of Pachuta Charge, gave an interesting talk on the importance of young people's unions.

After the business session, with Miss Mary Cameron acting as chairman, the following officers were elected: President, Beuerly Adams; Quitman, Miss.; Vice-President, Jack Fatheree, McGowan's Chapel, Quitman, Miss.; Secretary, Rosa Lee McKinnon, Pachuta, Miss.; Treasurer, Allene Rogers, Quitman, Miss.; Publicity Superintendent, Sarah McCarty, McGowan's Chapel, Quitman, Miss.

The meeting was then turned over to the president. Plans were made for a meeting of the officers to be held in the First Methodist church, Quitman, Miss., Saturday afternoon, April 29, for further plans.

The meeting was dismissed by the singing of the hymn, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" and the quoting of Scripture adopted by the Young People's Union.

CONFERENCE NEWS

Louisiana

The New Orleans District Conference meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society was held April 26, at Parker Memorial Church, New Orleans, Mrs. A. L. Swan, Secretary, presiding.

The meeting opened with a song, followed by prayer offered by Mrs. W. L. Duren.

The meeting proceeded with Mrs. W. D. Storms reading an interesting Council report from Mrs. Sexton, who was unable to be here herself. It was a pleasure to listen to this most complete report, especially on Christian Social Relation, as it embodied such facts as, "Life isn't a matter of compartments—secular and spiritual; it is a matter of relationships, and we who follow Christ must strive as He did to make those relationships the best possible for developing the individual." "A follower of Jesus Christ who relates his Christian principles to his political actions," quoted from Mrs. Mills; and the encouraging fact that co-operation in all leading phases of life will surely lead to Peace. This message left us with the secret of power—"Deeper consecration and closer co-operation."

Mrs. G. S. Brown read Mrs. Ledbetter's report from Council. The summary of this report was that depression was ignored and there was no sign of letting down, but instead, bigger and better plans, were made. The pervading spirit was courage and the association with those many consecrated men and women was good. She said we must grasp more deeply what Christianity means, taking the example of those who were willing to give up the salaries and go back to the old stipend, in order to continue the work. Instead of being in the million dollar class, we are in the $959,000.00 class;—only 85% of the pledges being paid, but the year ended without deficit owing to previous built up funds. The central problem of Missionary Enterprise is the need of trained workers. Mrs. Brown stressed the need of missionaries more than ever and also the imperative need of the Bible women in order to carry on the work, should the missionaries be excluded from a country.

We next heard from Mrs. Brothers, who was a delegate to Conference from New Orleans. Mrs. Brothers told of the inspiring communion service with only women at the Communion Table. Also the plea of the negroes for us to continue giving them help they so need. She told of the talk of Mrs. Powers on the need and encouragement of young women's circles for the training of these younger women for the future leadership, and the closing playlet, "Mrs. Porter Tries Publicity," given by the Arcadia Women, bringing out the needs of more and appealing advertisement.

Mrs. Davis was next to give her report of the Conference and opened her remarks with the story of the lighted lamp, based on the verse, "Ye are the light of the world." She told about the Jubilee Inn work, and how so many girls are helped there, as well as Miss Ella Hooper's work at Houma with the Indians. She announced that next year's conference would be held in New Orleans, at Rayne Memorial Church.

Mrs. Swan then reported on our own district work; the organization of two new auxiliaries, one at Chalmette and one at Golden Meadows, near Houma, and asked that these two haly auxiliaries be sponsored and taken care of by the older ones.

Mrs. E. Nenwirth gave a most interesting report on the Hospital work, saying that most of the work is done at Charity Hospital and the Women's Dispensary. She reported 1200 visits during the year, a total of $94.26 expended, clothing given valued at $60.25 and having a cash balance on hand to March 1, 1933 of $20.72.

Mrs. R. S. Crichtow, superintendent of the Children's Work gave a brief summary of her department, stressing the need in our own district of more World Clubs for the Junior Boys and Girls, and World Children's Circles for the Primaries.

This brought us to our worship period with Mrs. S. E. Foster leading. "Take Time to be Holy" was sung, followed with prayer offered by Mrs. Neibergall. Mrs. Andrew Dykers sang a beautiful solo, "Jesus, I Come," and Mrs. Levy read from Isaiah 40, the 31st verse, "But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles," giving a short discourse on the subject, emphasizing that we should all "wait upon the Lord" as did Christ who saw fit to constantly commune with God, as prayer brings power and strength and peace. Silent prayer fitted in so beautifully here and was closed by Mrs. Crichtow. "Rock of Ages" was sung before the Sacrament was administered by Dr. M. S. Monk and assisted by Dr. W. W. Holmes and Dr. B. F. Rogers. This beautiful service closed our morning session.

Our evening session opened with the singing of hymn, "We're Marching to Zion," and Mrs. Marlon Monk, to follow out our President's message of "deeper consecration, closer co-operation," gave the Master's plan as found in St. Mark 1:35 "And in the early morning, rising up a great while before day, He went out, and departed into a solitary place and there prayed," showing that as Jesus found prayer we can also find it, the way to get in closer touch with him. Prayer followed.

Introduction of the two zone leaders, the leader of the Spiritual Life groups, as well as the presidents of the various auxiliaries present, was made by Mrs. Swan, and each was called upon for a word in connection with her work.

A treat for the evening—"A Day's Work at St. Mark's," by Miss Stroup, some of the ladies auxiliary of St. Mark's, and some of the boys and girls. Miss Stroup gave us an idea of the varied and sundried calls that are made upon her and her associates from a jig-saw puzzle to a foot and baby specialist. The boys and girls were mostly interested in the gymnasium and swimming pool, as well as the Scout Troop and Boys' and Girls' Clubs. Calls for clothes were made all the time. The pathetic, yet sometimes amusing, sides of this work were so well demonstrated — one woman came in with a swollen jaw, seeking dental aid, and when asked if she wanted her tooth extracted, replied, "No, just pulled." An express package came in bringing fruit and clothes from some of the out of town auxiliaries, which are so much appreciated. So from this little sketch, there comes a feeling we cannot do too much for St. Mark's, to help them meet the needs of these people.

Miss Ella Hooper of Houma was introduced and outlined briefly what they are doing there, which was no less interesting, and issued an earnest invitation for all of us to visit with them and see for ourselves as that was the best way we could gain full knowledge of their conditions. She had with her little Lena Le Benff, our own district girl, who sang first a little French song, and then one of the little songs she had learned in school. With Miss Hooper was Miss Hendrichs, one of the teachers, and she outlined her three years' teachings there, and the value of the work the Missionary Societies are carrying on at Houma.

A solo, "This is my task," was beautifully sung by Miss Martha Ann Carey.

Mrs. R. W. Irvine, on Christian Social Relation, said the realization of our responsibility to our fellowmen, and living the Christ-like life, is what this means. She said the people of the world are in closer relation now than ever before, and cited the time of six seconds for a voice to travel around the world via radio. She asked that Mrs. J. W. Mill's program in regards to political life be stressed throughout the year. What is one's relation to the jobless—the underpaid wage earners? Her answer is, our duty is to see that these people have a living wage and enough to care for their need.

With the singing of "The Doxology" and Benediction, the meeting came to a close.

Mrs. E. E. PRESCOTT,
Acting Secretary

MRS. S. L. HOLT was called to her reward in heaven on April 19, 1933. She was very patient in her illness of many months. They were months of hopeful waiting for the summons of God to her heavenly home. Death held no dread for her. She welcomed it. She longed for the time to come when she should enter into the fullness of her inheritance in Christ Jesus.

She loved the law of God which caused her light to shine more and more unto the end of a perfect day. This law, she took as her guide quite early in life. Her saintly life was a blessing to all with whom she associated. The purity of her life and the nobleness of her deeds, endeared her to all who knew her.

Sister Holt and her husband, A. L. Holt, who preceded her to God, were responsible for the building of Bethany Church in Yazoo County. To think of Bethany Church is to think of Sister Holt. For it her prayers constantly ascended. To it she gave of her life and means.

At the time of her death she was with her daughter, Mrs. W. C. Herren, in Jackson, Miss. A brief service was held in the home, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. A. Wells of Jackson. The body was then removed to Bethany Church, where the service was concluded. Rev. G. H. Thompson officiated, assisted by the writer.

She is survived by four daughters: Mrs. W. C. Herren of Jackson, Mrs. R. J. Coker, Mrs. C. S. Coker of Yazoo City, Mrs. Pearl Holt of Faunce, Minn.; five sons: J. E. and L. L. Holt of Laurel, Miss., M. K. Holt of Peason, La., F. A. Holt of Aliceville, Ala., W. A. Holt of Yazoo County, Miss.

Interment was in the Bethany Cemetery.

Methodist church at Lodebar, Shiloh Charge, Miss.

On December 20, 1883, he was married to Miss Carrie May, who passed to her reward in 1931. Since then his health seemed to decline, though usually strong, enough to attend to the duties of his farm and business. On the day of his death, January 2, 1933, while out with a farm laborer, seeing that winter fuel was provided for his household, he suddenly fell dead, thus reminding us of the uncertainty of life.

His home was not only the home of his pastor while in this community, but any visiting preacher also found a hearty welcome there.

He provided well for his family and gave generously of his means to those who were unfortunate.

He is survived by four sons and three daughters—two sons having preceded him—one brother, a number of grand children, other relatives and a host of friends and neighbors, who sadly miss him.

Owing to the illness of his pastor, Rev. M. R. Jones, the funeral service was held by Rev. S. F. Harkey of the Brandon Charge.

Keeping the Advocate Saved

That it can be done, there is no question. The following lists of new and renewal subscriptions received during the past week will bear us out in this statement. If the more than 400 charges who have not been heard from will do just half as well as the ninety odd listed below and previously reported, we will have more than enough subscribers to insure a bigger and better Advocate, and thus enlarge the usefulness of the Conference Organ which has been serving the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi since 1850.

The goal is in sight. Every pastor is in position to assist largely in attaining the goal. This is no time to call a halt. Together, we cannot fail, but we must all see to it that the cause of the Advocate is properly presented in every church. The campaign closes June 1, and we urge every pastor to complete the canvass by that time.

The following are new and renewal subscriptions received through Monday, May 22.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

MY OLD TEACHER. Why is it that there is never but one? No doubt Paul must have referred to Gamaliel of Jerusalem as "my old teacher," even though there were several teachers on the faculty of the University of Tarsus. And when Timothy spoke of "my old teacher" no one doubted that it was Paul he had in mind.

Now most of us have had teachers, but just one teacher. And the teachers were good, each making some contribution to our better luggage of life. But they seemed to have grouped themselves in memory as teachers, whereas one just will not remain wholly associated with them. He keeps standing alone as "my old teacher." I guess this must be due to the fact that one day the door to your life was a bit wider open and the old teacher walked in and went all over your life, and laying his sympathetic finger at various places, said, "Thou ailest here and here." And you knew at once that a real diagnostician had taken hold of your case. And you stood ready for him to prescribe for you. He was the understanding one with the great heart who not only said, "Thou ailest here and here," but also said, "There are great gaps here and here that should be occupied by better soul-furnishings."

And he found some idols in the halls of your soul, in the pantheon of life. At some of them he smiled, in his soul, not on his face; for that would have made it impossible for him ever to have become "my old teacher." And he did not, with the sledge-hammer of the militant iconoclast, begin to break those idols and call them so much rubbish. He talked with you and taught you. After while you began to see yourself through his eyes. Then he began gently to take down the idols. Oh, how it hurt at first. How vacant the place seemed. Why we thought it was a real god and a very necessary something. How the vacancy ached. But next morning there was something bigger, finer, fuller, in its place. Thus he became "my old teacher."

These are commencement days. Already students and teachers begin to feel those strange heart-wrings. There will be the invitations, flowers, presents, the home-folks, the cap-and-gown, the academic procession, the sermon, the address, the diplomas, the heart-tugs and the tears.

That diploma is all right, even summa cum laude. And here is my hand, boys and girls, for a brave soul and a big future. But about the best thing you can take away from Alma Mater is a memory picture of "my old teacher." It will become a shrine to you and you will always be bringing fresh flowers there.

NOW I DID NOT start out to say all that. My heart and memories just ran off with my head. But I did start out to say something about "my old teacher."

I saw him the other day. When he took my hand and looked into my eyes I felt something of the same tug that gripped me on the morning of September 11, 1907, when I entered college.

(Seems that I just cannot pull myself back upon the main line.)

It was something he said. A good many years ago he ruined my heaven for me. I had it all fixed up nice and comfortable like. He asked me some questions then that disturbed me. I thought I need not give much attention to it. I had joined the church and had done fairly well without over-exerting myself with the good life. I thought I was to inherit a great tax-free section up there, and that the comradeship of the notables, even Paul, was to be taken as a matter of course. He seemed to hint that that could hardly be without long and strenuous discipline and preparation for that honor.

Well, the other day he got off on his "what-ifs." He said, "What if, granting that when death comes we may be given a place in the realm of the blest, we have to begin right where we leave off here? For instance, that warped disposition, that prejudice, that canker of soul that has not been fully corrected." It bothered me as I thought upon it. What if we don't get to land right in the middle of heaven first thing, and get to walk down the golden streets, Elijah on one arm and Moses on the other? And he used to say that we had better speed up a bit here or we'd be assigned to the Kindergarten Class when we reached heaven, and that we might not get to see Paul for several centuries, and maybe then just hear him talking and not get to speak to him for a few more centuries.

And the other day he said, "What if some of these well-intentioned souls, who have accumulated great fortunes out of the labor of many honest, hard-working men, but who have lived in ignorance of the conditions under which those men and women and children lived, after death, should be sent back to earth to live under the same conditions as those who had given home and health to make him wealthy?" And I said, "Ah, what if?"

Come on now. Let us good people who have been taking for granted our home in heaven, look into this thing. We haven't enough time now, I'm afraid.

And "my old teacher" said, too, that he thought there would be many surprises in heaven, about like that situation Jesus talked about in Matthew Twenty-Five. You know about the "goats and sheep."

FIFTEEN RAHS FOR THE BAPTISTS. We think it altogether fitting and eminently proper that we should come forward and give the Baptists the right hand of fellowship. They have had some big doings up there in Washington during their conventions. What could have been more fitting than for both these major Baptist bodies to meet in our nation's capital just at this time?

These two conventions, both the Southern and the Northern, seem to have been marked by a serious but heroic and happy practicality. They got down to real problems and attempted to face the facts unafraid.

We wish especially to commend two features of these conventions. It should make us all glad to see these Baptists, separated for eighty-eight years, get together and have a joint session. Dr. M. E. Dodd, president of the Southern Convention, is quoted as saying, "Now you yanks and rebels get together and shake hands." And it seems that his instructions were followed most heartily.

The next thing was the strong word with reference to prohibition. After most fitting and happy words had been addressed to President Roosevelt, with the assurance of the prayers of that great church, they later announced quite clearly their attitude on the liquor question. Someone dared to hint such a resolution was not quite "respectful" to the President. The vast majority did not seem to agree with the hint. Rather they seemed to think that the President might not be showing the proper respect, in some particulars, to this great country that belongs as much to the Baptists and others who think like them as to him.

NOW COMES THE SUICIDE TAX. How many kinds of taxes are there any way? The attempt to balance the budget with beer and still stronger drink can prove nothing short of disastrous to the country. When men are crying for bread and milk and a place to work it is no time to offer them beer and ballyhoo.

Reports indicate that Mr. Roosevelt intends to place the Democratic party and the administration back of the repeal movement and urge that the states fall in line as rapidly as possible. As explanation of such an effort the reply is that it is the fulfillment of the campaign promise in the platform. Be that as it may, if it is so regarded, it is nothing less than a covenant with death and an agreement with hell.

Prohibition, regardless of the high-powered opposition all along, and the limited enforcement of the law, has made its case. The fight for repeal is being launched on

THE RACE BETWEEN COMMUNISM AND CHRISTIANITY

By Dr. E. Stanley Jones

(We are indebted to Mrs. R. H. Wynn for typewritten copies of the addresses of Dr. E. Stanley Jones. Having heard them she wished to share them with her friends who are readers of the Advocate.—Editor.)

I have said that there was a race on between Communism and Christianity, with Communism leading, particularly in China. The Chinese soul has become a very great vacuum. It has drawn to itself things from every quarter as a panacea for her ills, but the two things that stand prominent, are the ones I have mentioned. I do not think that Christianity should be identified with a capitalistic order, but I believe if it were fully applied and given free run, it would result in some form of corporate sharing closely akin to Communism, but without its class war, its ruthlessness, its compulsion, and its atheism.

In the early days of the Apostles, some great impulse came into the hearts of men that made them feel the brotherhood. I do not think the impulse would be different today, if we gave the Gospel a real chance in our lives and our corporate existence. Nevertheless, Communism stands for the interpretation of life that Christianity asks us to receive.

We are met on the threshold by this objection: the Communist says that religion is an opiate to the people. That is one of the questions we have to face in balancing these alternatives. They say that religion has the effect of opium. What do they mean? That religion is a denial of the will to live,—a retreat; it is an attitude of men not having sufficient courage to face life, open-eyed, with sufficient resources to meet life. They say that religion drugs men so that they can stand knocks and meet the difficulties and pains of human life. A man in Manchester, England, was asked why he drank beer. He replied, "because it is the shortest way out of Manchester." He had no courage to face Manchester; so he got out the quickest way possible,—by drink. Drinking is also a species of failure of nerve. When a man has not sufficient resources within himself, he takes to some subterfuge like liquor. The difficulty with that was that in the morning when the effect of the liquor had worn off, Manchester was back again and he had less resource to face Manchester and his problems and difficulties. We become insensible to the great human need around us. That is the charge they make against religion.

First of all, there is some truth in what the Russians say. I think I should come to the same conclusion if I were in Russia for some time. The Orthodox Church did constitute an opiate—it would not allow men to think. The church undertook to do all the thinking, to take care of the souls in time and eternity. The church stood with the inhuman Czarist regime instead of standing by the people. I believe there is some truth in what the Russians have said,—not that I am insensible to what that great church did toward the civilization of Russia, for it took hold of barbarians who became civilized in the process, but found itself a great mass of forces instead of a message. Does that exhaust the possibilities in regard to the matter?

Is that all religion has to present? If so, we should dismiss the thing at once. I do not believe that constitutes the sum total of religion; we must have not a spelled-out, but a lived-out definition. I would point to a Person, that One that talked and lived and died among us. That constitutes religion. His spirit and life. His attitude of mind. His self-sacrifice. His love that took hold of a race and took it to His heart until it broke. It is the purity, the poise, the revelation of the heart of God and His self-giving service that constitutes religion. Does that constitute an opiate to the people? When a man opens his life to Christ's impact and touch and regeneration, does it put a man to sleep, bank the fires and make him to live less, to retreat? If so, I do not want it and I do not think this age wants it.

These are questions religion must answer and see if Jesus gives a complete answer. What did He think about life? Did He believe that the business of life was to get out of life? This is a great test question. I love and respect Buddha, the Gentle. He brooded on the facts of life so deeply that he came to the startling thought that life and suffering are as inextricably bound up together that you cannot separate them. The only way is to cut the root of desire and that will cut the root of life itself and you will get into that painless estate, Nirvana, a snuffed-out candle. I love him, but I disagree with him. It is to reduce life to that of a vegetable, to cut off a man's head to get rid of the headache, to get rid of life in order to get rid of the pains of life. You cannot get rid of life by less, but by more life. Our difficulty is that we have so little life. What would Jesus say? He looked very deeply into life, saw it from the Cross, and yet He said, "I have come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly." His method was not to reduce life but to raise the inner tone of life so a man's resources were sufficient to match all the circumstances, so that with these inner resources of the spirit, he could lay hold on all experiences, the pleasurable, the painful, and take them into his life as a plant lays hold on the elements in the ground and turns them into a flower. I give you the power to lay hold on the problems and difficulties of life, so that with the life within you, I give you the power to master the outer life.

Wherever Jesus has gone there has come an impulse to live. Call over the names of the men who have done great things and usually it begins in an inner spiritual awakening. The finding of inner resources begins an upward march, the desire for completion, for fuller and more perfect life. I have watched as His Spirit brooded over the dead hopelessness of races, men who were beaten, who had lost their nerve and felt there was no use to live, who desired to stop this terrible wheel of existence that sends them from birth to birth and birth to birth. No wonder hopelessness settles down upon such a people. But when Christ came into their lives, they began to see things, the possibilities of living, the possibilities of life. He has quickened nations into a will to live.

What does Jesus teach about the mind? The Jews would not allow them to think; they believed in asceticism of mind as well as of body. Why do the churches take that attitude? Jesus never did. While the churches stifle investigation, Jesus never did. He faced life open-eyed, unafraid and said, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." If I could gather up in one sentence the spirit of the finest in this age of investigation, scientific inquiry, I could do no better than to quote that statement of the Master. You go into Johns Hopkins University, the great scientific university, and over the portals are those very words. "Therefore, I believe that Jesus would turn men toward the facts and let them see where they lead them, and I believe if we go far enough, with the facts, it will bring us to the fact of Christ. I am not afraid of investigation. I am afraid they will not investigate sufficiently; not afraid of thinking but of not thinking deeply enough. Every single fact that is universal will lead us to Him. We are wrong when we say that Jesus will not allow men to think.

What has become of the conflict between science and religion? It is a real conflict. I think the thing is getting clearer now. I think there is a conflict between some science and religion, but we are beginning to see that they occupy provinces that are different. Science is a matter of weight and measure; religion that which can be evaluated. Science is quantitative while religion is qualitative in its aspect of life. Science goes to the poetry of Milton and looks at its physical structure. We say there are so many feet and having explained the physical structure of the sentences, would they have explained Milton's poetry? Religion would go to that poetry and be grateful for the physical structure, but there is something else throbbing in those sentences. Science would tell us the physical structure of it and religion would evaluate and interpret the ideas throbbing through its words. Science would go to the drama and explain the process, raise the curtain and tell you about the physical structure of the drama, but you would not thereby exhaust the meaning of the drama. Religion would come along and interpret ideas that try to express themselves in the physical setting. A realist has said that a violin solo is the scraping of a horse-tail across the guts of a dead cat. I suppose, as far as it goes, that is perfectly true; but I can imagine that those who love music would declare that it is not the interpretation of a violin solo, with its exquisite strains and perfect rhythm.

Men come to life and pick up pieces the physical structure and say that this is life, but some of us feel that there is something broader and deeper and of more worth than that. We therefore believe that Jesus gives us the highest interpretation of these values and the unfolding of the meaning and the value of life. If the meaning of the drama of life is Christlikeness and living the way He lived and interpreting life the way

He interpreted it, this universe has a purpose and it is a good one and far beyond this physical life we find around us.

What did He say concerning salvation? A great many have said that salvation was getting us to heaven and out of hell and they interpret salvation along that line. I recognize that hell has been taken out of the thinking of many people. To them, hell is gone, but hell is still here when they break the law, and just as terrible as the old hell. We break ourselves when we sin, and not the law. We break ourselves on the underlying facts of the universe and if that is not hell, I do not know what it is. Salvation that Jesus gives us is this: wherever He mentions salvation He identifies it with health. Wherever He uses the word "saved," the literal interpretation is "Be whole." (Moffatt's translation). When a man goes into sin he thinks it is pleasant and soft, but he finds he is living against the universe and the universe will not back him. He is in defiance of every thing in the universe when he sins. Sin is unhealth, sickness is not natural. Health is the really natural thing. Death is not the truly natural. Life is natural.

Jesus came to do away with these three great negatives, sin, suffering, death, and came to bring goodness and health and life. So His salvation is a positive thing, not a denial, but a declaration.

The man who receives salvation from Christ has these negatives taken out of his life and the affirmations poured in. No man can ultimately succeed with lies in his heart, for the universe stands for truth and reality and is against every thing false and base and ignoble and low, and in the end, the affirmation will overcome the negation. Religion is not reduction but production of life. It is the fullness and completion and perfection of human living. He thereby defines salvation as health, a healthy body dedicated to the highest purpose of the universe, a healthy mind, a healthy spirit, that is God-touched, cleansed with the influence of His spirit, a sound human being. Send a man out, not with negations on his lips, but with mighty affirmation rising from his soul. Christ stands as the great "Yes" over the great "No" that sin sounds, and if you are living under the spell of sin instead of entering the realm of happiness, growth, a blessed future, you are living under the spell of doom.

ENCOURAGED TO ADVANCE

By Maud M. Turpin

Faith instead of fear; prayer instead of panic; loyalty instead of letting down; resolution instead of retreat; courage to undertake the seemingly impossible and consecration to stay by the holy task. These were some of the conclusions reached by the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at its recent annual meeting in Nashville, Tenn., when the work of the past year in the field of missions was reviewed and plans were discussed for holding the line steady against the glad day when better times arrive.

Every element of the missionary picture was present. The appalling need; the open doors of opportunity, the obstacles in the way; the sacrificial spirit of the workers; and the determination to safeguard the achievements of 87 years of glorious missionary history.

Bishop S. R. Hay, president of the board, called the body together in the chapel of the Doctors' Building.

The general secretary, Dr. W. G. Crani, in his message and report on the opening day sounded the note that was destined to characterize the spirit of the meeting when he called upon the board to rightly assess the difficulties and attempt to ascertain the limitations which have been forced upon the staff by unprecedented economic conditions that have affected national and international relationships as well as every phase of church activities.

Two comments of the general secretary concerning the much discussed "Laymen's Report" aroused interest, namely: "They, (the laymen) attempted to discuss and settle the theological basis upon which missions should be promoted. In this they did not qualify. They prepared a joint statement of this theological basis which turned out to be a compromise in order to prevent a minority report from being presented. The result was the creation of a theological chameleon which changed color from sentence to sentence as it journeyed through the thought processes of the reader's mind. Second, they brought forward many criticisms and suggestions for improvement in the missionary business which have the major concern of missionaries and missionary administrators for the past twenty years. For this we should be thankful. It may hasten us in the making of certain necessary readjustments which the times and the natural processes of national development demand."

The annual meeting had been preceded by a round of committee meetings in which matters of importance to the three departments of general and woman's work, namely, foreign, home, and education and promotion, had been thoroughly discussed, so no time was wasted when time for action arrived.

Reports of the departmental secretaries had been mimeographed and were distributed to be read at will. Reports of the treasurers were prepared in printed form to supplement the verbal reports given by Mr. J. F. Rawls for the general section, and Mrs. Ina Davis Fulton, for the woman's.

The one night session attracted a full meeting of the board members and visitors to hear bishops in charge of missionary areas speak in behalf of their respective fields. Among the missionaries to bring first hand reports of their work were: Dr. Fred T. Mauget, who told of medical work in China, Miss Viola Matthews, Brazil; Deaconess Margaret Young Negro work; and Dr. Frank Onderdonk, who spoke on, "Progress of Missions in the United States."

A special order Wednesday morning honored the life and work of members and missionaries who had died during the year as follows: Miss Esther Case, former secretary of foreign work, Woman's Missionary Council; Deaconess Emma Burton; Mrs. E. B. Crappel, member Woman's Missionary Council; Miss Nannie E. Holding, Missionary in Mexico; Dr. Margaret Polk, Missionary in China; Dr. C. B. Mount, Missionary in Africa; and the Rev. B. F. Gilbert, Missionary in Cuba.

Missionaries retiring from active service honored by a resolution of appreciation were the Rev. J. W. Price and the Rev. J. L. Kennedy, who had served in Brazil thirty and fifty-two years respectively.

The board voted to concur in the resolution of the College of Bishops which reiterated the Methodist Church's stand against the liquor traffic.

More than two hundred deaconess workers were assigned to their respective posts. Five young women recently consecrated to foreign missionary work by the Woman's Missionary Council were accepted by the board, and the class of '33 also included twelve young women under appointment as deaconesses. No new missionaries were sent out by the general section.

With the adoption of a budget for the missionary year 1934, the board appropriated the smallest sum in many years to carry on its work. For its general work, including foreign department, home department, Negro work, educational and promotional department, expense of administration and miscellaneous, $725,778.85 was appropriated. For similar lines of work, woman's department, $799,294.35 was appropriated. Reduced income for missions necessitated drastic salary cuts, reduction of administrative force, change of missionary status in some cases to that of contract worker and in some instances recall of missionaries from the fields and closing of lines of work.

ONE HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY— HOPEWELL CHURCH

The one hundredth anniversary of Hopewell Methodist church (Rose Hill charge, Jasper County, Mississippi) was celebrated on Sunday, July 30, 1933 by a large concourse of people who seemed to enjoy thoroughly the morning and afternoon services and the dinner so lavishly served on the one hundred fifty-six foot table, specially prepared for this occasion.

The Hopewell church was organized one hundred years ago as a Methodist Protestant Church, but before many years had gone by it was changed to the Methodist Episcopal Church. Needless to say, it became a part of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, upon its organization in 1844 out of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The ministers taking part in the anniversary occasion were: M. L. Burton, an honored superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, who went out into the itinerant ministry from Jasper County; W. B. Jones, who had a father and two brothers who served Hopewell Church long years ago, both as pastors and presiding elders; Geo. H. Jones, who had both grand-fathers and three uncles to serve Hopewell; J. T. Abney, who "discovered America" within two miles of Hopewell Church; H. R. McKee, now of the North Mississippi Conference, who served Hopewell as pastor for the quadrennium 1915-1918; and S. C. Moody, the present faithful pastor of the Rose Hill Charge.

The singing on the occasion was under the leadership of M. S. Buckley of Newton and the preaching was done by Rev. M. L. Burton. Brother Burton used 1 Chron. 28:19 for his text in the morning and John 15:16 in the afternoon.

Rev. W. B. Jones made a talk of historical interest at the morning service and read a list of names of the earliest pastors of the church.

Rev. J. T. Abney made a talk of reminiscences at the afternoon service and reflected upon the change among the people of the community and church during the last forty years. Rev. G. H. Jones read a list of the pastors of the church from 1870 to the present day and also the obituary of his grand-father, the Rev. Gabriel Hawkins, M. D., who died while serving the Rose Hill Charge in 1885, the obituary having been written by Rev. J. M. Weems and published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, December 10, 1885.

CHRISTIAN ADVENTURE ASSEMBLY

MANSFIELD, JUNE 13-19

By Anna Pharr Turner, Dean Christian Adventure Assembly

How fitting is the name of this six-day meeting of boys and girls to be held at Mansfield College, June 13-19! It is a glorious adventure in Christian living—six days full of everything fine and wholesome. Every parent acquainted at all with the program would make every effort possible to see that his boy or girl had this wonderful opportunity. Many who do know the value of the program are making sacrifices to enable their children to attend.

Ages 12-15, Inclusive

Every organization containing members twelve through fifteen years of age should be represented at the Christian Adventure Assembly. It is here that the principles of committee work are first learned, also how to conduct a business meeting. They learn to do by doing. The inspiration of the morning watch, Bible Classes, and wonderful vesper services are long remembered and have helped many to really live a better life. An especially sweet service is the vesper, held on the beautiful lawn just at sunset.

Excellent Recreation Program

An expert play leader is planning an excellent recreational program, including ball games of various kinds, swimming, tennis, relays between the Indian groups, and a big Indian Pow-Wow one night. A Japanese Banquet will be the feature one evening.

Theme: "Loving Our Neighbors"

The theme for the assembly is, "Loving Our Neighbors as Ourselves." The assembly hymn is, "Others." The age limits are twelve through fifteen years. All who were there last year will return, if possible, I am sure. We also hope to have a goodly number of new delegates, who can be assured of receiving a warm welcome and enjoying the six days to the fullest extent possible. There are several assembly Mothers who will be there for the sole purpose of looking after the boys and girls and making them feel at home. A nurse will be present during the entire time of the assembly, being a member of the staff. An expert dietician is in charge of the dining hall, so parents may rest assured that their boys and girls will receive the very best of care.

WESLEY FELLOWSHIP ASSEMBLY

Mansfield, June 26-July 1

A Program Planned to Include all Local Church Workers

A conference for Christian workers is being planned at Mansfield, June 26-July 1, immediately following the closing of the Young People's Assembly. A program of spiritual fellowship, study, recreation, and inspiration for all local church workers is sponsored by the co-operative efforts of the Board of Christian Education, Woman's Missionary Conference, Conference Board of Lay Activities and the Conference Board of Missions. A complete announcement of courses and instructors, platform speakers, and program was sent to all of our pastors in the May issue of the Christian Education Bulletin.

One of the main features of the Assembly program is the platform lectures to be given by our own Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs. The morning worship will be cared for by Mrs. R. E. Harrell of Columbia, Louisiana. The Vesper services each evening will be given by Mrs. George S. Sexton, Dr. W. Angie Smith, Mr. T. W. Holloman, Mrs. Hoyt M. Dobbs, and Rev. Virgil D. Morris. The recreational program will be supervised by Rev. Carl Laeg of Delhi.

The following courses and instructors available for those who will attend are:

Leadership for Mission Study Groups—Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, Nashville, Tenn.

Stewardship—Rev. Frank E. Singleton, Weatherford, Texas.

Organizing for Christian Education—Rev. A. K. McLellan.

Teaching Children—Mrs. W. W. Holmes, New Orleans, La.

Wesley Fellowship Groups

A Study of Adult Life—Rev. H. W. Williams, Nashville, Tenn.

The Home in Society—Mrs. R. E. Smith, Shreveport, La.

The cost of this Assembly is $2.00 for registration fee, and $6.00 for room and board for the entire time.

The activities for the assembly will begin with registration for classes at 3:00 p. m., Monday, June 26.

Registration fee of $2.00 should be sent immediately to Miss Nannie White, Box 742, Alexandria, Louisiana.

THE GOLDEN CROSS

By Rev. A. Y. Brown

During these days the church member may properly ask, where can I place the money that I give to Christ so that it may do the most good immediately, for the Kingdom of God and for humanity? We want to suggest the Golden Cross division of our hospital work as a most worthy investment now for the following reasons:

First—We all realize that the regular, permanent, necessary benevolences in the form of Conference apportionments must receive first consideration and be paid in a better proportion for the very life of our connectional organization. The hospital assessment is a part of our regular benevolent apportionment, and by agreement with the Hospital in Memphis and the Hospital Board, Golden Cross funds will be credited on our regular benevolent apportionments. Thus, the enrollment campaign will not mean an additional collection, but an inspirational appeal to help increase our regular benevolent payments.

Second—In this hour of present need we would like to see our money used for the immediate and direct need of humanity, especially when the need is made greater and more acute because of the present emergency. Money contributed to the Golden Cross goes immediately to our hospital in Memphis and enables the hospital to take patients regardless of creed, who have been stricken by disease and who are unable to pay for their own hospitalization, and in the name of the Healing Christ minister to them and restore them to the enjoyment of abundant life.

Third—Certainly we feel that we would like for our contribution to be used where it may help in saving for the church a worthy institution that is in immediate and critical need because of present conditions and unusual calls for service. Our hospital has been able in the past to meet its interest and bond payments, its running expenses and do from eighty to ninety thousand dollars worth of free service. But unusual falling off in support from the three Conferences last year, and increased demands for free service bring us to a very critical situation just now. A $13,000.00 payment is due this month and the bond holders threaten to take over our property unless we meet this payment. If this happens the free service will be stopped and the splendid service of our hospital greatly reduced. In the light of these facts, we feel sure our people will be glad to rally to the aid of our hospital.

Let us tell our people of the hospital and its needs, make the appeal on its merits and they will not fail us. When the pastor decides to take the enrollment at a certain time the battle is half won. We have side-tracked the Golden Cross for other appeals many times in the past, but the hospital is at a point of crisis now and we ask our pastors for unified co-operation. "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye did it unto me."

the claim of what it will do to bring back prosperity. Its supporters cannot establish any worthwhile merits for repeal itself.

"A PENNY FOR YOUR THOUGHTS" is probably a high price. You have been offered it though many a time when you appeared to be in a "brown study."

And you have often seen copies of the picture of "The Thinker." There he sits weighted down with the heavy effort.

Now we don't think very much. Few of us ever get to enjoy real brain sweat. There is something to the statement that we hire others to do our thinking for us. But how can you know whom to hire to do your thinking if you do not think? Anyhow we ought to fire a lot of those whom we have hired. They are drawing entirely too much money for the results we are getting in some quarters.

Do our schools teach students to think? Can we learn to think without schools?

This is a time when people should begin to think. We should try to struggle up from the bondage of our prejudices. If the future is to have any worthy advancement we must assemble the data of the past, make some comparisons and draw some conclusions upon which we may work with confidence.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

Rev. T. F. King, pastor at Sulphur, La., reports progress on his charge.

Rev. R. A. Bozeman, pastor at Ida, La., is to hold the camp-meeting at Okalona, Ark., this year, beginning the second Sunday in July.

Rev. J. D. Wroten, pastor at Water Valley, Miss., represented his class, 1913, at the Alumni banquet at Millsaps College this year.

Revs. Hilary S. Westbrook and H. A. Wood have been engaged in revival services at Florence, Miss. The meeting closed May 26.

Rev. P. M. Caraway, pastor at East End, Meridian, baptized nine children and received eleven people into the church on Mother's Day.

"We enjoy your paper, and can not understand why more of the members of the church do not subscribe." W. N. Hill, Jackson, Miss.

"I have presented the cause, and have personally solicited subscriptions. C. B. White, Wisner, La." And the subscriptions came.

The largest class in its history will be graduated from Southern Methodist University this year. Bishop H. A. Boaz, a former president, will deliver the address.

Some time ago a good brother sent the editor copies of several papers devoted to various types of reform. He has misplaced the letter from the brother and is therefore compelled to take this means of thanking him for this kindness.

Miss Lucy Foreman of the General Board of Christian Education was recently a guest of the MacDonnell School, Houma, La., where she conducted a course, "What Is Teaching?" Miss Foreman's visit to MacDonnell was greatly enjoyed.

Rev. A. K. McLellan, Louisiana Conference Executive Secretary, Board of Christian Education, recently spent several days at Houma, La., working with the young people both of Houma and of nearby communities.

Dr. A. W. Turner has made a tour of Tangipahoa Parish, La., making addresses in behalf of prohibition. The parish has been organized with Rev. B. H. Andrews, our pastor at Ponchatoula, as president.

By a vote of the people the town of Pineville, La., remains dry with beer kept out. This little city is the home of Louisiana College and of Dr. T. W. Gayer, president of the Prohibition Alliance of Louisiana. Rev. D. B. Bodine is the pastor of our people at Pineville.

Commencement exercises of Scarritt College, Nashville, Tenn., are scheduled for June 4-6. We regret that we are unable to respond to an invitation to be present. Scarritt is one of the great schools of our church, and is expanding its usefulness all the while.

Rev. F. J. McCoy, our pastor at Leesville, La., for several years pastor at Houma, La., was the commencement preacher for the MacDonnell School on Sunday, May 25. Dr. Frank L. Wells, pastor of First Church, New Orleans, delivered the annual address, Tuesday, May 30.

Mississippi doctors say no beer. The State Medical Association of Mississippi recently voted overwhelmingly against the coming of 3.2 per cent beer. We are not surprised that these Mississippi doctors voted as they did. However they greatly deserve our commendation.

Dr. W. W. Holmes, pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, was the commencement preacher for Whitworth College. He delivered the annual address to the Y. W. C. A. also. Ex-Governor Pat M. Neff, president of Baylor University, Waco, Texas, delivered the class address.

Mr. Harry Childress, son of Rev. W. C. Childress, our pastor at Homer, La., is among our fine young people graduating from high school this year. We are in receipt of announcement. Congratulations, good wishes, and an open road ahead and willing feet to follow it.

We very much appreciate numbers of letters commending the editorials of the Advocate, and expressing the desire that the paper may be restored to its original size. Let the remainder of our charges respond as a good number have already done and this will become a working possibility in a short while.

The American Bible Society says that the sale of Bibles has fallen lower than during the past eight years. Is it because of a financial or spiritual depression? If your neighbor doesn't have a copy let him read through you. Maybe he is doing so, and has decided that it is not so interesting and worthwhile.

Once more we rise to commend the editors of our county and parish weekly papers. Last week Mr. A. P. Russell, editor of the Magee, Miss., Courier, launched a timely editorial under the heading, "The Question of Beer Again." This editor comes to the support of Bishop Mouzon in his pronouncement on the liquor question and speaks with direction and drive in his words.

Dr. H. C. Morrison recently held a meeting at Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss. While there he visited Millsaps College, later paying it a splendid tribute in which he said, "I have not seen a finer body of students in any school of the church. I met many of the professors, and a number of them were constant attendants at our services."

The Board of Stewards of First Church Columbus are making a drive to collect enough on their budget to tide them over the slump which generally comes during the Summer. That is a good example for all boards of stewards. It is to be feared that many pastors are suffering right now because stewards are standing between them and their living. Stewards please look after your pastors. Did you know that many of them are living on fifteen to twenty dollars per month?

Rev. W. R. Lott writes that he will have to revised his list of good gardeners since he looked over the fence to see the marvelous success of Rev. T. H. Dorsey. He thinks that Bro. Dorsey can challenge the "world" of Methodist preachers and come off with the laurels. He must include Rev. T. M. Bradley at West Point who is a "fancy" gardener. The pastor of the Christian Church at West Point said: "Bradley has every gardener in this town far behind him."

Miss Elsie Moore, Wesley Foundation Secretary at M. S. C. W., has been very successful this session in securing the co-operation of the Methodist girls in that great institution. Miss Moore possesses many gifts for the work which she is giving her life.

Revival services are in progress at the Methodist church in Vivian, La., the pastor, Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt doing the preaching. "The Handwriting on the Wall," "The Unpardonable Sin," "The Everlasting Gospel," "Where Will You Spend Eternity?" and "The Eternal Judgment," are a few of the subjects announced for the evening services.

Brother Pastor: Have you reported the results of the special Advocate circulation canvass scheduled for March 15-June 1? If not, kindly let us hear from you at your earliest convenience so that we can make a full report to the Publishing Committee. To-date, we have only heard from about 130 of the 575 pastors serving churches in the three Conferences patronizing the Advocate.

Rev. C. A. Parks, our pastor at Indianola, Miss., has mastered the plans for the Adult Division and is doing a fine piece of work in that Conference. He not only teaches other churches but puts it in practice in his own church. He is a graduate of Millsaps, has taken advanced work at Northwestern University, and keeps abreast of the progressive work of the church. He will teach in the Standard Training School at Grenada in June.

We looked over the shoulder of Mr. A. M. Mayo, the veteran superintendent of the Lake Charles, First Church Sunday School, the other day and caught him sending an announcement to all his superintendents, teachers, officers and students, saying that there is to be a Sunday school picnic at Moss Bluff, beginning at 2 p.m., Friday, June 9. Other Sunday schools participating are those of Vinton, Sulphur, DeRidder and Moss Bluff. Let's all go.

"You are cordially invited to attend the Young People's Revival conducted by Lay Evangelist Van Carter of the Louisiana Council of Religious Education, at First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Minden, La., from May 28 to June 4. Services at 7:45 P. M. 'Uncle Van' will love to greet you. Yours sincerely, Albert S. Lutz, pastor, Miss Thera Stovall, Young People's Worker." Thus reads a card delivered at our office by Uncle Sam, recently.

The trustees of Grenada College, at their May meeting, found the college in good spirits with prospects for a very fine session in 1933-34. The 1932-33 session was very encouraging. It costs but $280.00 per session to attend this fine college. The work done, the fine type of girls sent out, the wholesome Christian atmosphere and personal attention given every student is appealing to our Methodist people. Mississippi can boast of as fine a system of Methodist colleges as any state.

Rev. Durwood Blackwell, president of the senior class of the School of Theology, Southern Methodist University, was recently ordained deacon, the ceremony being conducted by Bishop Paul B. Kern, former dean of the school; Dr. James Kilgore, acting dean; and Dr. R. W. Goodloe, head of the Department of Church History, assisting him. Young Brother Blackwell is a son of Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Blackwell of DeSoto, Miss., and is a member of the Mississippi Conference. He will receive his M. A. and B. D. degrees in August of this year.

The General Conference location committee pleased the Methodists of Mississippi very much when it located the 1934 General Conference at Jackson. Mississippi is a strong Methodist state. Methodism covers every hill and hollow of the territory. It is very strong among the colored as well as the white race. It is hard to get ten miles away from a Methodist church in Mississippi. Some of the most gifted men the church has ever produced came from her churches. The Methodist clan welcomes the faithful from every territory to join in her hospitality in 1934.

Rev. A. T. McIlwain, pastor of First Church, Columbus, Miss., received the Doctor of Divinity degree from Bob Jones College, College Point, Fla., on June 1. This honor comes to him as a recognition of his exceptional services in the church as a pastor. Joining the North Mississippi Conference in 1914, he served three years at Glen Allan, then three years at Senatobia. At the close of his sixth year in the pastorate, Bishop McMurtry appointed him presiding elder of Columbus District, where he served four years, following which he served two years on the Greenville District, two years as pastor of First Church, Corinth, four years at First Church Greenwood, and he is now in his first year as pastor of our church at Columbus.

Although the report of the publishing agents, Mr. B. A. Whitmore and the Rev. A. F. Smith, to the Book Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, sitting in annual session at Nashville, May 10, failed to show a net profit for the past year, superannuated ministers and their dependents were voted an appropriation of $50,000. This amount will come from an emergency fund built up in strong financial years as a reserve for the "lean years" when there may be no appreciable net profits, which according to the law of the church must be distributed to the Conference claimants. The $50,000 dividend brought the total amount of appropriations to the superannuates for the 1930-34 quadrennium to $310,000, which is $10,000 more than was appropriated during the former quadrennium.

Asbury College, Wilmore, Kentucky, will celebrate its forty-third commencement during the week of June 1-6. Among the prominent speakers and guests will be Bishop Lester J. Smith of the Cincinnati Area of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Bishop Arthur J. Moore of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Dr. Clarence True Wilson of Washington, Dr. W. G. Cram, General Secretary of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Dr. Harold Paul Sloan of Haddonfield, New Jersey, the Rev. M. B. Stokes of Korea, Dr. H. C. Morrison, President Emeritus of Asbury College, and others. An interesting feature of the exercises will be the singing upon various occasions of the College Chorus of one hundred voices, the men's quartette, the two glee clubs and other musical organizations which have been heard from morning to morning during the past few months on the Asbury College Radio Devotions over WHAS, Louisville.

AUTHOR OF "BROKEN LIGHTS" VISITS MacDONELL SCHOOL

Mrs. Narena Easterling of Jackson, Miss., the gifted author of "Broken Lights" and numerous short stories, was a recent guest of the MacDonell School, Houma, La.

These occasional visits from such a charming guest are eagerly anticipated by all the pupils as well as the teachers. Her keen interest in each personality, her delightful French conversation, and her deep appreciation of the natural beauties of the locality make her a most stimulating and charming visitor.

Mrs. Easterling's talent as a writer has made it possible to depict in her articles incidents and customs true to the French life of this community. In her recent article, "Transmuted Missionary Dollars," she has pictured most vividly, to friends all over Southern Methodism, the many interesting features of our Christian Education among the French of this section of Louisiana. By comparison and contrasts she has shown the value of the work done in the MacDonell School. She is a source of inspiration to those interested in character building as she possesses power to make positive mental suggestion that make a lasting impression on those whose lives she touches.

A visit from such an outstanding personality is an event long to be remembered.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

NOTES FROM THE VICKSBURG DISTRICT

By Rev. H. G. Hawkins, P. E.

Sunday, May 14, the writer was with Rev. H. L. Daniels in a quarterly conference occasion of the Edwards charge at Reeve's Chapel. There was a splendid repast on the pleasant grounds, with the water furnished from the water cart of the Oakley state farm, which is near. The congregation was attentive; and the reports were gratifying, including an expenditure for re-ceiling and papering the rooms at the parsonage, thus making that home beautiful. Six members had been received.

On May 21, we were with Rev. E. W. Ulmer, preacher in charge of the Yazoo Circuit, preaching Saturday night in the church at Lintonia, suburb of Yazoo City, where the building has just been enlarged at a cost of over $400, to meet the needs of the growing congregation. At the Sunday morning service and quarterly conference, held at Fletcher Chapel, there was a large congregation, with dinner on hand. The young pastor has his congregations to use plain miniature envelopes for weekly and monthly offerings, and thus doubtless doubles the financial result. Seventeen members had been received during the second quarter.

Sunday night we preached to the congregation at Yazoo City, where Rev. G. H. Thompson, pastor, has been giving close attention to the construction of a dining room and kitchen underneath the church. Also the auditorium was being repainted. By the use of available R. F. C. labor $4,000 of improvement has been accomplished, with cash outlay of $1,750, this latter resulting from collection of some insurance.

On Monday Brother Thompson and I visited in the city cemetery the grave of Abbey, savior of the Methodist Publishing House at Nashville. The only words engraved on the marble marker are: "Richard Abbey, D.D. Born November 16, 1805. Died October 22, 1891."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The district institutes and meetings held last week were well attended. The pastors and workers who attended manifested a very keen interest in the work. Most valuable and inspirational help was rendered by the presence and work of Rev. M. L. Rippey, Director of Adult Work of the General Board, and Miss Barnett Spratt, of the Children's Division of the General Board. Their addresses to the whole group and their special work with the Adult and Children's groups were most highly appreciated.

The Greenville District meeting was held at Shelby and was presided over by the presiding elder, Dr. E. Nash Broyles. All of the pastors of the district except four were present and thirty-five workers attended.

The Greenwood District meeting was held at Greenwood and was presided over by the presiding elder, Rev. W. N. Duncan. This meeting was attended by ten pastors and twenty-five workers.

Two meetings were held in the Aberdeen District. The first one was at Wren school house on the Becker charge. This meeting was attended by nine pastors and over two hundred and fifty workers. The other meeting was at Calhoun City and was attended by eight pastors and fifty workers. The presiding elder of this district, Rev. T. H. Dorsey, was not able to attend these meetings because of previously arranged engagements, but had someone appointed to take his place.

The Columbus District meeting was held at South Union Campground on the Chester charge. The presiding elder, Dr. V. C. Curtis, presided and directed the meeting. This meeting was attended by sixteen pastors and about one hundred workers.

Three meetings were held in local churches. One at Indianola, attended by about thirty-five workers; one at Grenada, attended by about forty workers; and one at Empora, attended by about fifteen workers. In all of these meetings about one-half of the charges of the Conference were touched; something like one hundred local churches were represented by over five hundred workers and sixty pastors. These meetings should bear fruit for the Kingdom.

Have you made your plans to attend the training school at Grenada, June 5-10? Board this year is only $5.00 for the six days. Every church should send at least one representative. We have heard of several churches that are sending representatives. Many individuals will come. We have as strong a faculty as may be found anywhere. Dr. Goddard will occupy the platform every night, lecturing on New Testament Christianity with special emphasis on the Holy Spirit. Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb will be with us, teaching the course for leaders in missionary education. Mrs. C. W. Kent of Texas will teach the course in primary worship. Mrs. Kent is going to China late this summer with Bishop Kern to do children's work in that field and she is going at her own expense. We have no better teachers than Prof. Rutledge, Miss Frances McLester and Rev. C. A. Parks. It is a benediction to be associated with the workers from over the Conference. If you want further information write me.

We found Rev. M. E. Scott busy on the job as usual at Pontotoc. It was a pleasure to meet with the interested group of workers of this church and to address the young people and preach at the evening hour. The organizations of this church are doing excellent work.

The young people of the conference are looking toward Grenada for the Summer Assembly, June 12-16. We have worked out the best program that we have ever had. Every young people's organization should have representatives at this assembly.

Have you observed Sunday School Day yet? It is not too late. If you have observed the day, have you sent in the offering? We are having a splendid response to this cause this year. If every Sunday school will observe this day and send us an offering, be it ever so small in some instances, we will be able to do a lot of work that is waiting to be done. Will you co-operate in this great cause?

Pray for us and for the cause of the Kingdom.

JUDGE FORMAN SPEAKS AT MT. VERNON

Despite the gloom and dark clouds that are ever drifting today, God's love always shines through.

Friends, relatives and old acquaintances gathered at Mt. Vernon church, Sunday, April 30, to enjoy this beautiful sunshine. Our pastor, Rev. J. H. Morrow, who is so devoted to God and his work had secured Judge Julius M. Forman and Dr. J. M. Sullivan of Jackson, Miss., to deliver the messages for the day. Hon. R. E. Bennett was also on the program, presenting to the people the New Orleans Christian Advocate, showing the value of feeding one's mind and soul on the right kind of literature.

Judge Forman was introduced to the congregation by a boyhood friend, Bro. Jim Anders. A powerful message was given by Judge Forman, his theme being, "I am with Thee, Thou Mighty Man of Valor." Every face seemed brighter after these rays of sunshine were let in.

In the afternoon Dr. Sullivan gave a most wonderful message on the Lay Activities of the church. The Golden Cross project was presented at this time by our beloved P. E. Rev. H. G. Hawkins and Brother Morrow. The services was then turned into a business meeting, our second quarterly conference being held at this time.

Special music was rendered throughout the services by Bro. Mack Forman and his sons, and a male quartet composed of Rev. D. H. Cassels, Marvin and Louis Whittington and D. H. Halford.

A lovely dinner was served by the good women of Mt. Vernon.

May we live so close to Him that the sun in our lives shall never set, but shine with undiminished luster through our lives.

REV. C. L. OAKES IMPRESSED WITH INSTITUTE

The conclusion that I drew from the consideration of Religious Education, presented by those appearing on the program during the Sunday School Institute held at Shelby on May 16th, is that, while the church is not to relax its zeal in adult evangelism, she should regard the religious training of the young as the normal way of making disciples and the aspect of her work to which she should give the leading emphasis. The ideal which the church should set for each of her children is, "That the man of God may be complete, furnished completely unto every good-work." That is, she should aim to bring each of them to a fullness and symmetry of life and to a thorough efficiency in service. That is, the stalwart and well-rounded Christian must necessarily be a capable and useful Christian, and a capable and useful Christian must necessarily be rich in the knowledge of God and moral and spiritual worth. And if Christians generally are to approximate this ideal it must be by a rational and consistent process of Christian education.

The educational program that is proposed contemplates not only the winning of disciples, but also building them up in the faith, and training them for intelligent service. Special emphasis has been placed on bringing up a generation of church members whose minds shall be enriched, by such vital and comprehensive knowledge of the marvelous message of the Bible as shall lift them out of their selfishness and send them forth to shine as lights in the world, holding forth the word of life. That will mean the turning of united forces against the hideous forces of lust and greed and injustice, and so the ultimate removal of a thousand obstacles that stand in the way of the onward march of Christian civilization. It will mean the abolition of commercialized vice, of political graft, and of economic injustice that dooms millions of men and women and little children to lives of ignorance and ceaseless drudgery and hopeless poverty.

Let us use all the powers of Christian education that ours may be a church not content herself with removing hindrances, but one positively and aggressively evangelistic. One that will turn her great resources of spiritual life and power upon the sodden and wicked world for its cleansing. One that will proclaim with a divine passion of love and conviction the healing of those who are bruised.

We have sought out the information concerning the religious connections of the members of the present cabinet and give it below. "The least noise would make me tremble and feel weak and nervous. I read where Cardui had helped other weak women, and decided to try it myself. I felt better after I began taking Cardui, and decided to keep it up. I took six bottles in all. I was in a better condition after taking Cardui. My nerves were more settled."

Members of the Woman's Missionary Society of northeastern Louisiana met at Lake Providence recently for the annual district meeting.

Members of the Lake Providence society were the charming hostesses on this occasion, extending their guests many delightful courtesies. Luncheon was served at the Community Club, situated on the banks of the beautiful lake.

The meeting opened at 10 o'clock with a song, "Lead on O, King, Eternal." Mrs. Metcalf led in prayer. The devotional was given by Mrs. Royal of Oak Grove from Matthew 16:24 and 25. Prayer for reconsecration and rededication was offered by Rev. J. T. Harris of Rayville.

Mrs. C. A. Hill of Lake Providence issued the invitation for lunch.

The afternoon session was opened with the 23rd Psalm, repeated in unison, and prayer by Rev. W. H. Giles.

Mrs. Harrell of Columbia told of the work of the spiritual life group. An interesting play was presented by the young woman's circle of Winnsboro. Mrs. J. T. Harris of Rayville gave a report of the conference held in Monroe the 11th and 12th of April.

CHARLES WHITE WRITES ABOUT ASSEMBLIES

Dear Brother Raulins:

This letter is also directed to all "other" young people of Louisiana Methodism. I had no idea I could play the role, "President Emeritus," so well—have been sitting on the back row and keeping quiet since I left Mansfield last summer in search of Georgia Peaches, and the Fountain of Youth. I did go to quaint old St. Augustine and drink from the Fountain of Youth. Immediately thereafter I rejoined the Hi League.

For a number of years I have been the victim of two fevers at this season of the year—Spring Fever, and Assembly Fever. Now I'm most sure that all of you suffer from Spring Fever—or if you don't you just "ain't" all there. What I would like to do, if possible would be to spread the latter fever into every young people's group over Louisiana. Now if you have the disease, or feel it coming on, hang on to it, and go give it to ten other folks. Please don't just pass the germ around, give them the fever, and leave the patients with the bag to hold. This would be cruel indeed. You just must help them out of their suffering. The only sure remedy is to get them to Mansfield June 13-19 or June 20-26. I trust there will be lots of suffering among our young people, for I know that the joy, the thrill, the satisfaction that comes from being completely cured will repay you seventy times seven times.

I would earnestly appeal to the Mothers and Fathers to co-operate with the young people in the local churches in sending good delegations to Mansfield, and particularly do they need your assistance in the matter of transportation. There should be available in every church several cars which might be used by the delegates, and you could render them no finer service than to drive a car-load to Mansfield.

Let us pray for, anticipate, and receive great blessings from Assemblies next month. Will I have the pleasure of seeing you there? If you are planning to attend how about writing me a card or letter some time within the next week telling me so. Also let me know about how many will go from your church.

I make this promise—Will have ONE new joke, and will give a full report of my findings regarding Georgia Peaches.

Yours faithfully,

CHAS. N. WHITE.

REV. R. T. PICKETT.

MRS. LUCY M. MAINES SHULL was born near Many, La., August 5, 1850; was called to her eternal reward from her home near Zwolle, La., March 15, 1933.

Bayou Scie Methodist Church has lost one of its oldest and best Christian worshippers. Sister Shull was always ready for service. She loved the church with all her heart, mind and strength. Everybody loved her, because she was loyal, faithful, and devoted to her Christian duties. Her life was one of sacrifice and unselfish devotion to her God. She was a blessing to all who knew her.

She was a lover of good literature, and never read an unwholesome book in her life. She was a great reader and student, and was vitally alive to every interest of every department of the church and every good cause of humanity. She was a great lover of sacred music, and nothing could take the place of the standard music. If not convenient to attend worship on the Lord's day, she took her place by the radio and worshiped with the great preachers and people who listen in. Her life was a great one because she lived for the good she could do for others.

She and William L. Shull were united in holy wedlock in 1866. To this union were born nine children. She was a widow thirty-two years last August, and lived most of that time with her son and four daughters, who are left with the grandchildren and great-grandchildren to mourn her going. But we are certain she has closed her eyes to earth to open them in heaven, because she said, "I have been faithful to the vows I have made unto God and the Church."

"Then let our sorrows cease to flow,
God has recalled, His own.
But let our hearts in every woe
Still say, Thy will be done."

BAPTIST FIGHTING REPEAL IN LOUISIANA

The fifth Sunday meeting of the North Sabine Association met at Mt. Zion Baptist Church, Many, La., April 29th and 30th., 1933.

Having had Dr. Leon Sloan with us in the above meeting and after having heard him talk of the evil of liquor traffic, and of the good that might be done toward stamping it out, it was moved by Rev. T. J. Lites that the moderator, Rev. A. P. Durham, appoint a committee of three to draft a resolution, urging every church of the state to invite Dr. Sloan to visit them and tell them of the evils of the liquor traffic and of the needs of fighting this awful curse, and to assist in what ever way possible, to help in a financial way to carry on the fight. Same was duly seconded and carried. The moderator appointed the three undersigned:

Therefore, be it resolved by your committee that after hearing Dr. Sloan's discourse of the liquor traffic and of the evils of intemperance and of the possible ways to combat this evil, that we are more fully impressed that this matter should be brought more thoroughly to the attention of our Christian people of the State.

Therefore, be it further resolved that we make public this resolution by asking that same be printed in the Baptist Message and the Christian Advocate, and urge each church both city and country to use Dr. Sloan in this great work. That we believe with his connection with the Anti-Saloon League for the last four years, thoroughly qualifies him for giving first hand information of both the evils and the possible cures for this great evil.

Be it resolved therefore that every pastor of the State, consider having Dr. Sloan with them as early as possible. Write him at once for a date.

Respectfully,

REV. HARRY FERGUSON,
REV. E. C. HARRIS,
AMOS J. BARRON.

CHRISTIAN ADVENTURE ASSEMBLY

Just a few weeks and some of the finest young people in Louisiana will be meeting in Mansfield for their annual assemblies. Those boys and girls from 12 to 16 will be interested in the fine program offered this year at the Christian Adventure Assembly which meets June 13 to 19. The theme for this year is, "Loving Our Neighbors as Ourselves." Classes will use

Prevention Is Better Than Cure

An opiate will dull periodic pain. But isn't it better to prevent the pain? Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets three or four days before the expected discomfort and notice the difference. If yours is a stubborn case, you may need to take these tablets regularly for a few months. Persistent use brings permanent relief. Clinical tests prove it.

No narcotics. No dizziness. No unpleasant after effects. Just little chocolate coated tablets that bring results. New size package—50¢ at all druggists.

the latest texts bearing on this subject. Two of especial interest will be, "WHAT DOES CHRIST EXPECT OF YOUNG PEOPLE TODAY," and the interesting new mission book, "FRIENDSHIP FIRES," used in the course, "OUR INDIAN NEIGHBORS." The others are equally as fine.

A splendid recreational program will be under the direction of Rev. Jolly Harper. This includes not only directed games, but tennis, baseball, volley ball, swimming and other such sports. The Nite's Dolns include an Indian Pow Wow, a Japanese Banquet, a Stunt Night, a Pageant, and a Camp Fire.

One period each morning will be devoted to committee work, just as in the local chapter. Each delegate will be assigned to some committee and will help in working out projects of his group. We feel that this plan, which is quite new on our program, will be of great value to the divisions represented.

Don't forget that expenses have been cut this year. We are expecting a fine representation of Intermediate boys and girls at our Christian Adventure Assembly. We surely hope that every pastor, counselor and other Intermediate workers will make every effort possible to see that these boys and girls have this wonderful opportunity of being at Mansfield this June.

We are planning to hold about ten days meeting on the missions this summer and the boat is very badly needed to facilitate this work. We had 112 at our service last Sunday.

Keeping the Advocate Saved

We stated in this column last week that if the more than 400 pastors who have not as yet been heard from would do just half as well as those who have already reported, we would have more than enough subscribers to assure a bigger and better Conference Organ. However, but a few of this number have forwarded the results of their efforts in behalf of the Advocate since this statement was printed.

There are more than 2,500 subscribers on our lists whose renewals could easily be obtained if called upon by their pastor or Christian literature committee. Results already obtained prove this to be so.

Do not let us lose this opportunity of placing our own Church paper in the homes of our people. It will pay you for your trouble over and over again. The Advocate is your paper, established in 1850, and has been faithfully serving the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi all these years.

Come on, Brother Pastor, send in your report. If you have conducted the canvass on your charge and have failed, through no fault of yours, to obtain results, write us to this effect so that we can get a line on the present-subscribers from your charge. All we ask is that you present the cause of the Conference Organ. You can do no more. But don't say it can't be done until you have tried it. May we hear from you?

The following are reports received up to and including Mandy, May 29, 1933.

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

HE MADE THE STARS, is the majestic utterance of the writer of the Book of Genesis. And it is high time that we were turning to them and their Maker for guidance. At the dawn of the Christian era wise men followed a star and found beneath its radiant light the world's Redeemer. Thus it must ever be when wise men follow the stars.

Just a few minutes ago I sat by the radio listening to the announcer in Chicago opening the Century of Progress World's Fair. After some dramatic statements from a man whose business it is to watch and study the stars in their courses, the announcer called upon the observatory at Harvard University, "Harvard, are you ready?" Then a buzzing sound was heard. Thus he saluted four of the greatest observatories of this country, closing with Yerkes of Chicago University. The buzzing sound was the voice of Arcturus, a star forty light-years away, as it paused a moment in its busy course to start the Century of Progress Fair for earth's children, waiting breathlessly for the epochal moment when they should hear from the skies. When all was ready Arcturus spoke and the magic city on the shores of Lake Michigan sprang into light, and its doors opened to the public.

The light from Arcturus which opened this World's Fair set out from that planet at the time of the Columbia Exposition just forty years ago; and has been rushing across the ether zones at the maddening rate of 186,000 miles per second during all those years in order to keep this engagement to open the World's Fair on time. Man knows nothing of speed yet, regardless of our boasted advancement. That is, heaven's way of coming a long ways and at an infinite rate of speed in order to keep an engagement with the earth. But hasn't God been doing that all the time?

Yes, it is a marvel of science. But let us reverently uncover while we recognize the God of the universe without whom science and no other enterprise of man has a guiding star. Our God is the God of order. Science can find no laws that are not God's laws, and no truth that is not God's truth.

An occasion so tense and an achievement so great find no suitable language outside of the Bible and no adequate reference other than God. So it was altogether fitting that the speaker should turn to those words of Holy Writ found in the Book of Job. Men observed the stars long before telescopes were invented. Still some have been so foolish as to think, when they had perfected the telescope and a few other instruments which have materially effected the outlook of man upon the universe, that God had become antiquated and no longer necessary. God had been left behind in a smaller universe. How vain, how foolish. Marvelous progress indeed in a century. But science, to which we all should acknowledge our lasting debt, standing on tiptoe at the end of this century of progress has but caught breathlessly at the skirts of God, who still outdistances the most heroic plunge of the mind of man augmented with all his improved instruments of comprehension.

Is it not time that we of this generation throughout the world, with Abraham, Job

DEAN SMITH SAYS—

Dear Ed:

That was a rich thing President Roosevelt heard when the Baptist preachers told him that the Baptists were for his program, 96.8%.

Franklin D. Roosevelt looked queer and his face began to flush. To his quizzical silence the Baptists quickly flashed "You see, Mr. President, we simply can not stand for 3.2 per cent beer!"

"Boy, ee!" As the girls say—wasn't that a good one?

Let's understand a few facts about this 3.2 beer:

1 In many places it is not up to 3.2.

2—Often it is merely old left over "Near Beer."

3 3.2 is intoxicating and where it is drunk there is more drunkenness.

4 Police are ordered by their "Higher Ups" not to arrest "the boys" unless very disorderly.

5 Bootlegging is still here—beer has not stopped illicit liquor and beer calls for "hooch" and stronger stuff.

6 The brewers are already cheating the government out of a lot of revenue. In order to net the government $125,000,000 the brewers will collect a billion from homes where children cry for bread.

7 The brewers are piping soft and easy now, waiting for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment—then with a clear field they will soak the nation. Better stick to prohibition.

and other giants of the past, chart our course by the stars? Look what we have. In the midst of a world chaos with nations each day betraying their inability to cope with the age-making issues of our day. Each morning's paper brings some further revelation of some prominent name connected with dealings in high places that would cause us all to blush. In this day we seem to have behind the scenes, an invisible government of special favors to the select few, locking hands with criminals that fear neither God nor man, paralyzing the regular functions of our government. Men of greed consort with political charlatans in high places and forget their responsibilities to the rank and file of mankind and the sacredness of their oaths.

Do we not, in a world lost to the higher appeal of vision and integrity, blundering along in the fogs, need to turn again to the stars for guidance? And as sure as the centuries roll we shall again find that light falling upon a world's Savior who alone can lead the nations out of their turmoil of greed and fear and hate into a brotherhood marked by the spirit of goodwill and cooperation.

THESE ARE VACATION DAYS. Many, this year, will have to deny themselves that trip they have anticipated. Those cool spots on the mountain, or by the sea, or at the old home place, will have to wait. Those romping streams and sporting trout,—Well, why bring that up?

Let's take a holiday anyhow. Let's lead a strike and start something new in the way of a vacation. Sour grapes? Ah, well; better that kind than no vacation.

After all what are those elaborate trips anyway? If you don't take your eyes and soul along they are but a weariness of the flesh and a strain on one's disposition. Consider the mosquitoes and ants also. Consider how you will have to "rest up" after it is all over. If you stay at home there will be a fine chance for you to use your eyes and imagination and find out what is there. You have been so busy you have never taken an inventory of your own home and community. You have overlooked many things there. Just what room is there for advancing self-esteem to the citizen of Kentucky who goes away to the Alps and there meets some enthusiastic traveler who asks him about Mammoth Cave and the fellow has never seen it?

I knew a great doctor who did not "go away" for his vacations. He remained in his home town. Several things might be said for such a practice. He knew what sort of a bed he would have to sleep on, and the kind of food he would have to eat. He could spend all of his time resting, and there was a slight saving of expense.

* * *

LAST WEEK I had a day off. I resolved to cram a whole vacation into it. With eyes, ears, nose, tongue and fingers, and some friends I set out to the park. Being without feathers, fine or otherwise, I did not "flock." Just went out for a walk with myself to see if my company was worthwhile. At first I was a bit disappointed and wanted to find somebody to go with me. I decided, though, to "tough it out."

I walked out to where God was making trees. No hammering, no noise, and no

THE RACE BETWEEN COMMUNISM AND CHRISTIANITY

Part II

What does Jesus think concerning the personality of man? There is growing up the thought, or the idea, that somehow, man is of infinite worthwhileness and this is beginning to break down our barriers. The greatest discoveries are those in human brotherhood. One of the great things the East has taught me is the worthwhileness of man. I knew it before but I never knew the solidarity of our race as I do now. The same things that trouble me, trouble other peoples; scratch down through this surface and you find just folks, people. A judge of the High Court of Great Britain, said in Burmah, "I find since I have been here, the human mind is the same as in England: the lawyers in Burmah and in England make the same mistakes. They work out to the same wrong conclusions. All come out at the same place." I have watched them, knowing that there was something deeper and found the great underlying facts of man are one. We have to live together as a great human brotherhood. Jesus looked over the people standing before Him made up of many races of people and said, "One is your Father and all ye are brethren." This is a simple statement, but one upon which we shall have to build our new humanity, giving every man a chance, an opportunity and a right to live. There is One standing and demanding that every man should be given a right to live and that is Jesus Christ of Nazareth. I believe today that the essential impulse that is in the missionary is that essential gospel that says "a man is a man for a' that." So if you are looking for One around whom chaotic civilization may revolve, I think the facts will drive you to One who knew no distinction between East and West, this color or that color, who died that every man might live.

You say "can religion live in an age like this?" You say that the outlook of this age and the outlook of religion are quite different? Religion says, "Believe," and Science says, "Experiment; believe nothing; test every thing." So it seems we must part company at this place. I wonder if that is a fair putting of it?

Go back to the discovery in the pages of the New Testament and see what you find: Jesus Christ never crammed any thing into a man's mind. He took the title, Son of Man, lived with men. "Live with men and come to your conclusions as to who you think I am." At the end of three years he said, "Who do you think I am?" They fell down at His feet. They came with trembling words upon their lips. "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God!" He never forced any thing but asked men to experiment. There is a difference between faith and credulity. Credulity is blind, asking no questions; but faith is experimental, saying "I do not see all of the facts, but I see enough to launch out upon," and faith is that affirmation and act that leads from eternal truth to fact. It is an adventure. I see enough here to venture on and in that adventure the truth is verified. Therefore, Christ is able to live in our age, an age of experimentation. Do not call Him Saviour unless He literally saves you. Do not say He is divine unless He can do something for you no one else can. Do not call Him Lord unless He can speak to the chaotic things in your spirit and make them obey the sovereignty of His voice. Do not call Him Master unless He can master everything in your life and bring you to that obedience that you will feel in the end is true liberty. I believe that in this atmosphere, Christianity will come into its own. We have been experimenting with things. Now let us go down and experiment with the deepest facts in life. If there is a way, we ought to be able to discover it. If there is something, we can get hold of it and that will lead us to the deeper things of life. We ought to experiment with something that has cleansed the depths of human nature, and that will be a joy to the soul.

Away-out in Mukden, the center of the difficulty in Manchuria, the city was attacked on three sides the second night I was there. One of the Japanese officers had been killed. I am supposed to be a light sleeper, but the next morning when I came down, I found I had slept through the first battle I had ever been in. There was a disturbed outer condition. Today the minds of men are deeply disturbed, but in the midst of that difficulty there can be an inner poise, an "in spite of" rather than an "on account of."

A returned Chinese student from America, a fine type, said to me, "What are you going to do with me? I don't believe in Christ as divine and no church will take me. When I told them that in America, they said, 'we cannot take you.' So I am hung up and that is what I have been for years. I am making no progress." He expected me to argue with him and I suppose I could have marshalled a good many reasons which I believe point to the fact of Christ's being more than human. (I can see no human category in which to put Him. He breaks my human categories and steps out of them.) "I won't do that with you." I said to myself, "What do you believe?" "I believe that Christianity is the best religion." "All right. What do you think about Christ?" "I think He is the best of men." "Let us begin there. Whatever He turns out to be, will you begin to follow Him?" "Yes, I ought to do so. Yes, I will try Him." "If you do, remember this: you have also to give up every thing that you think He would disapprove of in your life." He said, "That is not easy." "Of course, it is not, but you are serious about this, are you not?" "Yes." "Are you willing to give up everything?" "Yes, I think I will." "Whoever He turns out to be, don't you think you would be better in His company and companionship?" "Yes, I think I should have more power and dynamic, if I could live in touch with Him." "Will you open your heart to let Him in?" "Is it as simple as that?" "Yes." "I will." We knelt together, I prayed and he prayed a prayer. It would not be considered a complete prayer, perhaps, according to your standards, but I knew he was anxious to enter into life. The "God who looks upon our shortcomings and loves us still, who could gather Him up into His heart, was there! The next day he walked straight over to me, his face beaming, and said, "All my doubts and difficulties have gone. It is the happiest day of my life. My wife is coming too." That is the impulse. That man had simply exposed himself to Jesus Christ and Jesus had verified Himself to that man's soul as light verifies itself to the eye and love to the heart.

Perhaps you have never tried that way of taking it into your life and beginning to follow Him and so you are still stumbling.

I was going down to Latin America aboard ship, talking to a typical young Latin American student, the kind who have gone to the universities and found the university said: "Experiment," and have gone to the church and the church said, "Believe." So they say, "This is a contradiction," and have thrown the whole thing over. I talked with him and he said he did not believe in any good and bad, only in beauty and ugliness.

Anatole France said all he wanted was, when he died, to have a beautiful woman to close his eyes. He wrote, however, "I cannot remember a single happy day except, perhaps, when I was a little child." (As I look back across the years since Jesus set me free, I cannot remember a single unhappy day except the day they elected me Bishop and I felt my task in the East was done. The rest has been something that has given life its harmony and peace).

We stood on the deck and talked about God and the human soul. He sneered, I said as I looked at the stars, "The night is filled with music and poetry and ideas and elegance." He turned to me and said, "Now you are getting poetic and romantic." I said, "Not quite." I took him to the radio room and said, "The thing you say is romantic is fact. The operator is getting something out of the air and in the morning, what he has discovered will be on the bulletin board. The thing you call romanticism will turn out to be fact."

I should be unfair to discuss these questions with you, apart from the testimony I can give, for no man can discuss who has not proved it. It does work. Wherever there has been failure, it has been mine. He has never let me down. When I tune out my wrong and tune in with Him, something redemptive, alive, new, appears and if you ask the question, when did I begin to live, it was not forty-nine years ago when I was born but it was about twenty-seven years ago when I was reborn. There came something into my life. There is a difference between existence and life. From that moment on, I have lived.

I come to the conclusion that the Soviets are deeply wrong. They say man is an economic animal, that he can live by bread alone. I believe their teachings constitute an opiate to the highest nature of a man and put him to sleep at the deepest portion of his being. They say how he is satisfied with a dash of poetry and music, but something rises up and says, "I am still hungry, I still want God, I can't be satisfied with material existence." Someone has said that man is a human and a higher hog at one and the same time. There is something in my heart that is rebelling against being merely a higher hog, that says that while I may be of the dust of the earth, there is some spark within me. Jesus gives the answer to that highest cry and religion is a type of life, life in its highest form, completion, fullness, and Christ is the living answer to that cry. When a man finds Him, he feels in the depths of his heart, that he has found life. It is the medicine, it is the way of life; better than that, it is life itself and when we find Him we find the way to life.

REV. JESSES SADLER RUTLEDGE

Rev. Jesses Sadler Rutledge, youngest of the five children of Joseph Sadler Rutledge and Nancy Catherine Cowan, was born near Evergreen in Avoyelles Parish on July 13, 1862. He never saw his father, who was killed in the War between the States. When but a small child his mother with her fatherless children moved to Ouachita Parish where her people lived, and there on a farm he spent his boyhood days. He attended such schools as were then available, at the same time helping on the farm. At the age of fifteen years, he gave his heart to Jesus and united with the Methodist Church, which was the church of his parents. For several years after reaching manhood he continued to live with his mother and farm. Then he heard the call to preach the Gospel. And, ever loyal to Jesus Christ, he answered that call and was licensed to preach by the quarterly conference of the Lapine Mission, Delhi District. His license is dated November 18, 1893, and signed by Rev. H. O. White, presiding elder.

Feeling the need of further schooling in order to equip himself for the great work to which he was called, Brother Rutledge enrolled as a student in Centenary College, then located in Jackson, Louisiana. For three years, from 1897 to 1900, he was a student there. During this time he served as a supply, first on a charge near Woodville, Mississippi, and then on the Slaughter and Ethel Circuit in the Louisiana Conference. In December, 1900, he was appointed to supply the Dry Creek Circuit. At the following Conference, held at New Iberia, in December, 1901, he was admitted on trial into the Louisiana Conference and returned to the Dry Creek Circuit. At this Conference, on December 15, he was ordained a deacon by Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald. While serving the Dry Creek Circuit he met and was married to Miss Sarah T. Kent. The ceremony was performed March 17, 1903, at Bon Ami, by Rev. H. Armstrong.

In December, 1903, the Dry Creek and Glenmora Circuits were combined, and Brother Rutledge and his wife moved to Glenmora, where they lived while for one year he served this greatly enlarged work. In December, 1904, he was assigned to the Pine Grove Circuit, where he served until December, 1908. While serving this circuit Brother Rutledge completed his Conference course of study. He was admitted into full connection at the Conference held in New Orleans in January, 1906, and ordained an elder by Bishop Seth Ward on December 8, 1907, at the Conference held in Ruston. His other appointments were: Indian Bayou, 1909-12; Pine Grove (second time), 1913-14; St. Tammany Circuit, 1915-16; Longville, 1917; Denham Springs, 1918-21; East Feliciana Circuit (changed from Olive Branch in November, 1924), 1922-26; Greensburg, 1927-28. While serving the Greensburg Circuit he suffered a breakdown in health, and at his own request was granted the superannuate relation at the Conference held in Lake Charles, November, 1928.

For two years following his superannuation he continued to make his home in Greensburg, and then moved to Walker, Louisiana, where he lived with his wife and unmarried daughter, Miss Erie Rutledge, until his death. His death occurred on Tuesday afternoon, April 11, 1933, after an illness of several weeks. The funeral services were held the following afternoon at the Walker Methodist Church, which he had served as pastor while on the Denham Springs Charge, and where he worshiped during his declining years. The services were conducted by Rev. K. W. Dodson, his presiding elder, assisted by Rev. A. D. George, pastor of the Keener Memorial Church, Baton Rouge, and the writer, who was privileged to be his pastor for more than a year. His remains were interred in the Denham Springs Cemetery. He is survived by his widow, two daughters, Pearl (Mrs. J. Kline) and Eris, one son, Glenn, and two grandsons, Cecil Kline and Billy Rutledge.

In the passing of Brother Rutledge the Louisiana Conference has lost one of its most indefatigable gable workers. He worked faithfully, tirelessly, and uncomplainingly. He did not know the meaning of indolence himself and had no patience with those who would not work. His example of industry one might well emulate. Although his pastorates were small, he served them with unceasing energy and zeal, and through his efforts many souls were won for Jesus Christ. He did not complain because of the meager salaries he often received, but, as Paul exhorted Timothy, he was willing to "endure hardships, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." He, with his faithful wife and helpmate, made countless sacrifices for the sake of their three children, and, as a result of these sacrifices they were privileged to have the advantage of a college education. Brother Rutledge was a firm believer in education. When a young man on one of his circuits, having answered the call to preach, asked him for advice as to whether he should enter the itineracy at once or go to school for further training, he replied, "You can always cut more wood if the axe is sharpened."

The life of Brother Rutledge was a glorious one. His faithful ministrations to the people whom he served greatly endeared him to their hearts, and his friends were legion. In every phase of church life he maintained a warm interest to the end, and even though the condition of his health made it impossible for him to preach very often, yet his presence at the services of the church, his fervent prayers, and his cheery words, were sources of inspiration and of blessing to all.

"Servant of God, well done!
Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

ROBERT A. CROSS.

WHAT ARE YOUR PEOPLE READING?

Many vicious periodicals are published in this country. Some months ago 59 were prosecuted and more than 100 were severely criticized. Of the 100 magazines deemed particularly objectionable, 76 are published in New York City, where most of the indecent books are also published. It is said that these publications are, largely, the creation of those who are alien to American traditions and sentiments. Dr. H. W. Van Loon challenged a New York editor to accompany him to the nearest newsstand where he asserted would be found the "foulest collection of smut, dirt, and plain pornography ever offered to the unsuspecting public in the name of literature." In a list of publications banned in Canada are 94 from the United States.

Our people are reading this foul literature, and little good literature, and it is not strange that crimes and indecency result, and that voters are casting their ballots for the repeal of the 18th Amendment. Will our pastors at this critical time put Christian periodicals in the hands of their members, or will they let them read this vile stuff and become disloyal to the Church and the cause of righteousness? What would happen if all church papers were forced to suspend? Think of it, and act to prevent such a tragic outcome.—Arkansas Methodist.

A NOTABLE MEETING

By Mrs. C. W. Turpin

The annual meeting of the Board of Christian Education at Nashville, Tenn., marked the close of the third year of the consolidation of the Sunday School, Education and Epworth League Boards and revealed progress in putting into practical operation the unified plan of Christian Education.

Bishop Edwin D. Mounzon, president, presided over the various sessions, May 2 and 3. Other members of the episcopate on the board were Bishop Paul B. Kern, Bishop John M. Moore, Bishop H. M. DuBose, and Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs. There was a representative attendance of the members and a lively interest marked the session.

Reports of the general secretary, Dr. W. F. Quillian and the departmental and divisional secretaries and superintendents and the treasurer revealed a busy year in the work of the board and showed as a result unprecedented advance in the denomination's system of sixty-five schools and colleges; in the 17,000 church schools and young people's organizations and in the service of the board's fifteen periodicals and other Christian literature.

The report of the treasurer, Dr. W. E. Hogan, indicated that good judgment had gone along with the financial pruning knife; but while the headquarters staff was praised for its sacrifice in accepting cuts and doubling up duties in order to reduce expenses, the point was made that this was justifiable only on the grounds of the present national economic emergency and that if the board is to carry on efficiently the work formerly done by three boards, more funds must be made available.

Bishop Kern at the one night session in a stirring address revealed wonderful progress in the program of Christian Education being carried on by the Boards of Christian Education and Missions under the direction of the Rev. H. K. King.

A committee on General Conference legislation was appointed; the board went on record as espousing total abstinence as the only solution of the liquor problem and deplored legalizing of beer and urged fidelity to the Eighteenth Amendment as a part of the constitution.

An increase of 45,000 in Sunday school enrollment was reported and the board voted to continue emphasis on reaching the unreached. Members of the central staff were re-elected for the ensuing church year. The next session of the board will be at the seat of the 1934 General Conference, Jackson, Miss.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT

As a fitting close to the Centennial Founder's Day, sixty-nine graduates received degrees and diplomas Tuesday, May 30, in the 1933 graduating class of Millsaps College, which is this year honoring the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Major R. W. Millsaps, founder.

Dean Gordon J. Laing, University of Chicago, made the baccalaureate address at the closing exercises of the commencement celebrations Tuesday night; the Major Millsaps memorial services were held Tuesday morning, with greetings from various college and church bodies, and addresses by Dr. W. L. Duren, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, of our church, and Oscar Newton, head of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, Ga.

Thirty-two graduates, or nearly half of those receiving degrees, were awarded their diplomas with honors or high honors. Prizes and medals were awarded as follows: Founder's medal for graduate with highest scholarship, Robert S. Hough, Jackson; Bourgeois medal for highest average in freshman, sophomore and junior classes, Harris Collins, Yazoo City; Ida V. Sharp medal for highest four-year average in English, Elizabeth Heitman, Bolton; Buie Declamation medal, Webb Overstreet, Jackson; Clark Essay medal, H. T. Newell, Jr., Jackson.

The memorial exercises honoring Major Millsaps brought seven speakers to pay tribute to the college founder. After the academic procession, Dr. D. M. Key, president of Millsaps, introduced the speakers: Dr. David H. Bishop, head of the English department, University of Mississippi, brought greetings from the state supported colleges; Dr. D. M. Nelson, president of Mississippi College, Clinton, from the other church-related colleges in the state; Dean Laing from the Association of American Universities, by which Millsaps is fully accredited; Dr. William Alexander, of the General Board of Christian Education of the Southern Methodist Church, from that board; and J. B. Streeter, Black Hawk, only surviving member of the first board of trustees of Millsaps and still a member of the board, from the original administrative body in charge of the college. All the speakers spoke of the life and services of Major Millsaps, who made generous contributions that enabled the Mississippi Conferences of the Methodist Church to found the college.

THREE COMMENCEMENTS

By Rev. James H. Felts, D.D.

Three representatives of Grenada College, E. S. Lewis, J. D. Wroten, and J. H. Felts, sat in with the Millsaps trustees by courtesy Monday, May 29. A fine, intelligent, honest-to-goodness group of men—it was interesting and helpful to observe their work. And it was real work.

Rev. W. L. Duren, D.D., a graduate of Millsaps, delivered the "Founders Day Address." His review of the life and character of Major Millsaps was one of the most interesting and virile messages I have heard in many years. Duren is a clear thinker and a forceful speaker. He speaks with the easy assurance of one who knows what he has to say. Dean Laing of Chicago University "caught" the crowd in a five minute greeting. At the evening hour this perfectly delightful speaker delivered the address to the graduating class. I care not ask for space to review the program of the day. The presence of Mr. J. B. Streeter and his words of appreciation were most happy. Dr's. Bishop, Nelson, Alexander, and the Hon. Oscar Newton, added to the harmony and fine spirit in evidence.

Grenada College used local "talent." The writer delivered the sermon, Miss Laney, so long and favorably known as a vital part of Grenada College, delivered the address. It was worthy of the splendid woman who delivered it and the occasion. Now that Grenada College is coming into her own again the bustle and stir of things is in the air. "A tree is known by its fruit." We accept this standard of measurement without hesitation, and "point with pride" to our graduates. Teachers, home makers, church leaders, they have made good, are making good. The morale of the school was never finer.

Rev. N. J. Golding delivered the commencement sermon for Grenada High School. He neither topped the timber nor groveled with moles. He simply stood on his feet like the man he is and spoke out of his heart into the heart of the great congregation. Introducing him I had said, "This is one of our Millsaps boys who has arrived. He has grace, grit, and gumption." After the service Miss Turner, one of the brightest teachers I have known, said, "You win." I knew what she meant. She was speaking for the student body and the congregation. No visitor has pleased Grenada High School and the friends thereof more than Nat Golding.

LEST WE FORGET—OUR MISSION PASTORS

By Rev. Melville Johnson,
Treasurer, North Mississippi Conference Board of Missions

Several weeks ago, one hundred preachers agreed to conduct at least one revival and to send the offering made to them to the treasurer of the Conference Board of Missions. Beginning with this issue, the Advocate will carry a list of the preachers with their remittances until the revival season is over.

Your board does not expect the pastors or Mission charges to send us the offerings received for meetings which they themselves conducted. But we do expect every pastor outside of Mission charges to do so if the way is open to him. If a number of the larger churches of the Conference will assist us in this way, the offering received will be sufficient to greatly aid the Mission Board in making the fourth quarterly payment to the Mission pastors.

The present Board of Missions has sought against great odds to care for the needs of the Mission pastors for three years. In these three years, our total receipts from all sources have been less than the receipts of the board in the one year, 1924! In 1924, the Board of Missions received $12,222.00. Your present board has received less than $10,000.00 for a three year period! This year, we are forced to try to make one dollar go as far as four dollars went in 1924. Deflation of currency has not gone that far. We simply cannot meet the needs of the Mission pastors on our present budget.

When we, your present board, took over this work, we should have received $7,000.00 with which to meet the appropriations to the Mission pastors. Instead of $7,000, we received $2,000.00. A bank literally "busted" in our faces, involving all of our funds received from the old board, excepting $2,000.00 which had already been appropriated. We borrowed $2,000.00. At the end of the year, we received $3,160.00, little more than enough to pay the note of the year past. For the present year, we have received only $2,200.00 out of which we paid last year's note. By borrowing and meeting our notes as they fell due, we have carried on. We have met every emergency call of our Mission pastors. But our quarterly appropriations are insufficient, and we will be unable to make a fourth quarterly appropriation unless we receive a considerable sum from these Mission meetings.

Many of our brethren on Mission charges are receiving their salaries in turnip greens. Our people are tithing their garden vegetables, and neg-

ANOTHER HORN VICTORY

It was a day of triumph for the Christian community in Horn Lake, Mississippi, as the annual conference of the North Mississippi Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was held in the city. D. B. BODDIE

On the day preceding the election, a day of fasting and prayer was announced in both churches and at the close of the day, a joint prayer service was held at the Methodist church. We believe that God was with us in this battle. One word that said that this was the best prayer meeting that she had ever attended. To hear the prayers go up in behalf of the boys and girls was enough to convince anyone that it was God's battle that was being waged. In B. B. Boddie, La.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON TEMPERANCE, VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Whereas, our church throughout its history has been interested in all moral reform movements and has identified itself especially with the cause of temperance in the cause of seeking to deliver society from the curse of alcoholic and intoxicating liquors, this interest and attitude being voiced from time to time in Episcopal addresses, in the action of our General Conference, in resolutions passed by other church bodies and gatherings, and in the literature sent out by the church press; and

BOOKS AND BOOK LOVERS

By Rev. Arthur Madison Shaw

Preacher, especially some of the younger ones, frequently do me the honor of consulting me about the "new books." I rarely see a new book now, and perhaps others may be pining on account of the same privation. To such I would say, first, by all means, buy new books if you can. There never were so many keen minds engaged in supplying them as now. If you can't buy them, borrow one occasionally. I manage to do that now and then. But second, if you can neither buy nor borrow turn to the old ones. Some of these old friends never will be out of date. I am greatly enjoying them right now, an just finishing Les Miserables, the seventh reading.

Reverend Brown's "Beliefs that Matter," Rufus Jones' "New Studies in Mystical Religion," Elwood's "Reconstruction of Religion," and you can't get too much of Deismann's "Paul." Or, if you like something still older, C. A. Smith's "Historical Geography of the Holy Land" is still a fascinating and informing Bible help. Bushnell's "God in Christ" repays frequent re-reading among Christians. But the wise preacher will go to hurry. Just the terrific silence of the divine artistry of creation. Fool poets were back in their studies under man and noise-made roofs making poems, for fools can make them. God makes trees, flowers, birds, grass blades, dew tipped. And he makes several other things. Tries to make men.

No, no hurry. He seemed forgetful of time, of clocks and calendars, day and night, and the symphony of the seasons and circling years, and just let them pass by. And he lets the generations of people pass too while he builds on. Yes, people pass on their way to the cemetery to the narrow houses on the narrow street.

God seemed building by a secret and sacred pattern, known only to himself; building no two trees by the same pattern, extravagantly discarding each pattern as he went on with his work. For god is no cheap and uniform jerry-builder. He does not place his trees in a row, but zig zag. It is man who builds that way, poor and weighted down with his greed and his gold standards, poor in brain, time, soul and genius. Man stabs and scars the landscape with his cob-web structures of a day. Hurrying away at the end of his brief day, he leaves instructions that a stone be placed where he lies with his name upon it that the two generations following, seeing it, and making inquiry, may learn that for the breath of a day, with proud spirit he cluttered the earth.

But God keeps on making trees. I watched him, breathless. It was creation's drama re-enacted, creations epic re-sung. With timeless toil that waits not for hurries. Ruthless man, deaf to all cries, "Spare that tree." Blind to all its beauty, hews down a tree that it took God centuries to make. But God makes another, but not like that one. There are no copies. The centuries are his and the trees are his.

"Why, God," says a voice over my shoulder, "why put that gnarled knot on that lovely tree? Why disfigure it thus? Why such crooked limbs?" Said God, "The tree you seek is over there, tall, smooth, slim, and straight. There are trees for all tastes. I am healing a wound on this noble tree and making it beautiful. Souls that have suffered and worn arrows in their souls may see this and sing again."

Impatient I inquire, "When are you going to celebrate the completion of this tree, and what day do you dedicate this cathedral wood?"

Said God, "Each day it is completed and each day it is dedicated. Can you not read the ancient ritual of nature? Do you never hear the bingle notes of dawn? Haven't you seen the singing surbeams falling like leaves upon the forest's floor? And haven't you stood silent for the shadowy vespers while pines whispered peace?"

I turned away rebuked by my rudeness, ashamed of my smallness, and shocked at my stupidity. Quietly I walked, and slowly, down those cathedral aisles as the sun streamed through the tinted windows of the west. And as I walked I of many of his feathered friends. For, tangled in his throat, are the songs of all birds, so that he has no song of his own, but of all.

My day was over. Turning home I mused. Why is it that no one has thought to grab all the flowers or get a monopoly on all the bird songs and the sunsets, all of which are without copyright? Then we might have the privilege of paying for every sight, sound and smell, and learn that we have such wealth wasting about us while we hasten, unheeding to our graves.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

A very encouraging word comes to us from Mrs. S. M. Richardson of Blue Mountain, Miss.

"I am enjoying your paper, and I am working for it. Recently we had sixty present for prayer-meeting. J. L. Nabors, Holcomb, Miss."

"We are very much pleased with Brother and Sister Andrews. They are faithful and earnest workers." That is what we heard about the pastor up at Ponchatoula, La.

Miss Ora Hooper, Fort Barré, La., rural worker, reports that the church bell has arrived. We join this fine people in high hopes for a greater day in their community.

We hear that Dr. W. W. Holmes, pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, delivered a great commencement sermon at Whitworth College. The address to the Y. W. C. A. also was delivered by Dr. Holmes.

Dr. Joseph A. Smith is delivering some great sermons. He is a great preacher and a great teacher. At least we hope so. We are glad to hear of his work.

Mrs. C. H. Smith, of New Orleans, has been elected to the Ad. Assoc. of the Y. W. C. A. for which we wish her every success.

The annual conference of the S. S. W. A. was held at the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at New Orleans, La., on June 1. Rev. H. M. Smith, Pres. of the S. S. W. A., presided. Rev. A. K. McElar, Rev. H. W. Williams, Mrs. W. W. Holmes and Mrs. R. F. Smith. This is a conference for Christian workers, and is open to all workers. For more about it.

The Mississippi Alliance Association, at its annual convention, passed the resolution: "We pledge ourselves to intensified instruction of school children on the evils of alcohol and narcotics, lines upon the human system. We oppose the distribution of obscene literature and pictures, and approve the action of the United States Government in denying to mails matter of this kind." Nashville Christian Advocate.

Rev. R. T. White, pastor of Parkview Church, Shreveport, La., speaking: "Everything is moving quite well concerning everything. We have received 65 into the church 24 on profession of faith. We have baptized 16 babies. The congregations are up. Our Sunday school is growing. Twenty-six credits were received by our people in the training school. People seem to be getting more anxious to attend church. I think there are better times ahead."

PROHIBITION SUNDAY

The Pastors of New Orleans are preaching on Prohibition on Sunday, June 11. I am asking the pastors of all denominations of the state to preach on this subject on that day if it can be worked into their program for the day. If not convenient to do so on that particular day, I hope that they will preach on this theme in the near future.

LOUISIANA PROHIBITION ALLIANCE

By Rev. T. W. Laver, President

The Louisiana Prohibition Alliance, which was organized on March 28, has launched an aggressive campaign in favor of Prohibition. Every parish, ward, and community will be organized to promote this worthy cause. Every effort will be made to prevent the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, to encourage legislation favorable to the protection of dry territories in the state and a sentiment of education in the schools, as to the evils of alcohol on the human system.

The leaders of this Alliance find an increasing sentiment in favor of Prohibition. We find in numbers of communities a great reaction against the efforts of the wet since beer is being sold legally. It is believed that this sentiment will grow. If the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed before our people come to their senses, there will be a demand for its return in some form.

The leaders of the Alliance find that the Prohibition organizations in the state are themselves becoming aroused and more active. This is encouraging. Our people have not supported these organizations sufficiently to make it possible for them to put on an aggressive campaign in the past few years. This is one reason why we find ourselves in the condition which we face. Dr. A. W. Turner is especially active in this work and is meeting a fine response in all communities which he visits. The Anti-Saloon League reports good interest, especially in New Orleans where they are most active.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Less than a week remains now before the opening of the first of our summer assemblies. The Christian Adventure Assembly will be in session next week. We stated in the Broad-castles that there would be an Indian banquet and a Japanese party, but it is just the opposite—a Japanese banquet, and an Indian Pow-Pow party. The recreation, as well as every other feature of the assembly, is going to be very fine, with Rev. Jolly Harper at the recreation helm.

It is still not too late to get one or more of your Intermediates ready to attend this assembly. The investment in time and money you will never regret, and it will be a valuable one in the lives of your young people.

Many churches are working hard at various things to finance sending delegates to the Young People's Assembly. We wish that the churches all over our Conference could but realize how important it is to the very life of the church that its young people receive training in church leadership, and in fellowship. The assemblies offer just this training which will be brought back to the local church.

Rev. Guy M. Hicks, of Mansfield, well known by all who have attended assemblies, and other young people in the state as well, will have charge of vesper services, instead of Rev. H. L. Johns, who because of unforeseen circumstances, feels unable to fill the place.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs will be at the Young People's Assembly on Wednesday, June 21, rather than on Thursday as previously announced.

These are only a few features of the program. Both programs are, or should be, in the hands of your general superintendent now. Ask him or her for one, and get ready to be there! The reason the programs are so late in reaching you is that of frozen assets.

May we urge that every department pay its Conference Promotion pledge at once, or be prepared to do so at the assembly? This money is greatly needed if the assemblies are to be opened without indebtedness.

Says Her Husband Lost 16 Pounds In 4 Weeks

"I have never found a medicine that 'peps' you up like Kruschen Salts and better still, leaves you 'pepped up.' I take it two or three times a week—not to reduce but merely to feel good and clean. My husband took it to reduce, he lost 16 pounds in 4 weeks." Mrs. E. A. Ferris, Washington, D. C. (December 29, 1932).

To lose fat and at the same time gain in physical attractiveness and feel spirited and youthful take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning.

A jar that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle at any drugstore in the world but be sure and get Kruschen Salts the SAFE way to reduce wide hips, prominent front and double chin and again feel the joy of living—money back if dissatisfied after the first jar.

An Appeal

Ds. Th. Kerremans, pastor of our Flanders Methodist Church in Brussels, Belgium, himself, a young man, writes that his young people are planning a missionary exhibit to be held in August, for the purpose of stimulating missionary interest, and giving to missions. He asks that our young people send them everything they can in the way of missionary material—old copies of the Missionary Voice, and Epworth Era, pictures of work in the mission fields, particularly the Belgian Congo; objects used in mission work; posters—anything in short, which will bring the missionary work close home and make it real. All material should be sent to Ds. Th. Kerremans, 75 Vier Windenstraat, Molenbeek, Brussels, Belgium.

Also, Mr. Kerremans is much distressed over the possibility of our Church having to cut out the European missions. He says, "Belgium needs a mission very, very much, for the gospel of Christ is not known there. Now if the 'Children of Light' cut us out, what will happen? We have no further money for literature, and our pastors have not been paid anything in forty days."

Young people of Louisiana, this seems to me a real challenge and a missionary project which will not cost money which is so hard to get hold of just now. At the same time, it will not interfere with our missionary pledges to the Home and Foreign Missionary Enterprise. Will you not make this your summer missionary project, and send any materials which you may have, early in July, to Ds. Kerremans?

Our Unions

The J. O. Y. Union of Minden District, according to a letter from Mrs. Katherine Hortman, held a very fine meeting at Pleasant Valley, May 21, with some 200 present. 174 were counted—all that could get inside the church, with a number on the outside. How thrilling—a church filled to overflowing with enthusiastic young folks. Mrs. George Nelson had a very interesting program planned. Pleasant Valley and Plain Dealing each received half of the $10 given by the Union for the highest average attendance for the entire year—this to be used for a delegate to the Young People's Assembly.

The two unions of Baton Rouge District are sponsoring a school van which will transport the district delegates to and from the Young People's Assembly, at a cost of around $2.50 round trip. The bus, or van, is a practically new one, and will be driven by Rev. Dan F. Anders, of Zachary. Anyone in Baton Rouge District or the southern section of Alexandria District, who would be interested in this very low rate of transportation, may write to Rev. D. F. Anders, or to Collins Lipscomb, Hammond, or to your Conference Director, at 323 Brice Street, Baton Rouge.

Monroe District is also furnishing a bus to transport delegates from all sections of the district to the Young People's Assemblies, at a very nominal cost. New Orleans has secured special railroad rates if as many as ten go at the same time. Alexandria Hi-League, whose Counselor is Mr. Charles White, plans to send no less than twenty-five people to the two assemblies!

BONHOMIE REVIVAL

The annual revival at Tatnm's Mill just closed, resulted in conversions, reclamations and forty-four joining the churches.

A train was run between the mill and the logging camp enabling all to be in a two weeks' revival. Though the thirteenth meeting of Brother J. O. Haines, of Birmingham, he seemed to have done his best preaching. The singing was congregational, lead by local talent and was truly inspirational. The churches were overflowed at almost every service. The morning services were out doors, attended by workmen, white and colored. The colored people sang the songs at these services, mostly. For one week noon services were at the logging camp in the woods. The ox teams and loaders visiting around the rows of seats under the shade of trees, made it very interesting. This Company plans for this service annually bearing every expense; the owners and their families attending every service. W. T. GRIFFIN, Pastor.

CONFERENCE NEWS

Louisiana

The Methodist women of Bunkie, Alexandria District, proved themselves perfect hostesses when they entertained the district group. A spirit of friendliness prevailed throughout the day. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. O. E. Grant, district secretary. The devotional, "Christ the Bread of Life," was given by the White Chapel Auxiliary. Report given by district secretary, Mrs. Grant urged that we cast our nets into the deep and a beautiful assurance was given for worthwhile results. Encouraging to note an increase in membership in all auxiliaries and three new ones reported organized. This talk was fittingly closed by a beautiful reading, "He Is Counting On You," given by a Eunice member. Interesting highlights of the Annual Conference was given by the LeCompte auxiliary.

A recognition service was conducted by Mrs. Powers, of Alexandria, and certificates and badges were presented to the auxiliaries for honor work done last year. A talk on Stewardship was given by Mrs. Wisenbaker, of Elizabeth, with well chosen words we were presented with the truth that we were bought with a price and owe all to Him.

District Standard of Excellency—presented by Mrs. B. F. Gallaher, of Minden District.

A touching memorial service was conducted by Oberlin Group, honoring Mrs. Jno. Dardierne, Mrs. John Spellman, Mrs. Walter Bruce and Mrs. Schuitze.

Platform recognition was given the presiding elder and other visiting pastors. Other visitors, were greeted, among them two life members from Alexandria.

Afternoon devotional by Brother Lipscomb. The afternoon program brought a reading from "World Outlook" by Palmetto auxiliary and a playlet, by Oakdale women. This playlet was written by the beloved and talented member, Mrs. T. E. Brown and carried home a message of forgiving love.

"Rural work"—by Miss Ora Hooper; "Value of Reporting"—by Mrs. Grant; "Status of Women"—by Port Barrie auxiliary; "Presentation of Children's Work"—by Bunkie auxiliary, followed by reading from one of these children; "Round Table"—conducted by Mrs. Grant; and sentence prayers were led by Mrs. John Evans, of Alexandria, and closed by Mrs. Grant.

At the noon hour a most generous luncheon was served.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI

One of the most delightful meetings that the Aberdeen zone, Aberdeen District, has had was held at Tranquil. A zone quilt, made for the benefit of the rural work, was quilted. About $50.00 has been realized out of the quilt and it will be sent to the Orphan's Home. By noon the quilt was finished and lunch was served under the beautiful trees.

In the afternoon the Hamilton Society gave an interesting program. The zone hymn, "The Kingdom Is Coming," came first. A very impressive devotional on "Stewardship of Prayer" was given by the zone chairman, Mrs. R. C. Tucker. The roll was called and reports from the auxiliaries were given. These were good. It was decided that the all day sessions would be continued, instead of the afternoon sessions. Another zone quilt was planned, the funds to be used as an emergency fund, so that at the close of the year if any auxiliary failed to pay the amount pledged, the deficit could be met with this fund. A rural project was discussed and it was decided for the larger auxiliaries to meet with and help the smaller ones in any way possible. Miss Burma West gave a very interesting report of the annual meeting at Louisville and of the district meeting at Fulton.

A discussion of the Children's Work was given by Mrs. L. M. Tucker. She also gave plans for vacation Bible schools. Reasons for sending a Negro woman to Holly Springs were given by Mrs. Ryan Noah. A special song by Miss Burma West and Mrs. L. A. Stewart was enjoyed at this time.

A discussion on the importance of Christian Literature was brought by Mrs. L. A. Stewart. Definite plans for spiritual life groups were given by Mrs. L. W. Darracott. Paine's Memorial was selected as the next place of meeting. The closing prayer was by Mrs. Sam Word.

The second zone meeting of the year, convened in Charleston, Sardis-Grenada District, with eighty present. The zone has recently been changed and now includes Grenada, Holcomb, Oakland and Charleston.

Mrs. Campbell, president of the Grenada auxiliary, presided. Mrs. Roy Grisham of Sardis, was also present and assisted with the program. Since the change in zone, Mrs. Grisham remains chairman of the Sardis district. A most interesting program was given and at the conclusion the following officers were elected: Mrs. F. B. Rathbun, chairman; Mrs. Jernigan, vice-chairman; Mrs. Campbell, secretary; Mrs. C. E. Anderson, treasurer. After all business was completed a social hour was enjoyed.

Pastor.

"MRS. MARY LEONARD ROBERTS was born December 10, 1881 and died April 9, 1933. Mrs. Roberts came from the Mississippi Delta to Jackson County, accepting a place in the public schools in which position she proved to be a gifted teacher. Her marriage to Mr. R. M. Roberts, March 9, 1911, did not stop her public usefulness. She was a very active and capable worker in the church, especially as teacher of the Adult Bible Class, for she not only possessed a marked degree of intelligence and unusual knowledge of God's word, but she was spiritually minded. There was no work or sacrifice which she could perform left undone by her for her family, church, school and county's welfare. She was a wise and efficient teacher in the various organizations for betterment of home, church and state. No wonder such a life is missed among us. She loved life and prayed earnestly to live not for self, but to see all her children educated and prepared to make their life's work successful, yet she was resigned to God's will. As Jesus passed by and said to her, "Come, go with me," she was prepared for the journey. At 11:15 p.m. she instantly fell asleep, meeting Jesus with a smile which lingered upon her lifeless form silently speaking comfort to her bereaved husband and five children, an aged mother, sisters and brothers. She was beautifully laid to rest in the Mt. Pleasant Cemetery, where she peacefully rests awaiting the first resurrection, while her soul lives with God.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON SPIRITUAL STATE OF THE CHURCH AND EVANGELISM, JACKSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Dear Brethren:

The dual nature of the subject of this report is no haphazard coincidence. These two departments of the church's life, its spirituality and its evangelism, are indissolubly united. They are not just put together, they can not be put asunder. The presence of the one implies the presence of the other, the absence of the one means the absence of both. If a church is spiritual it is evangelistic, and if it is not evangelistic it is not spiritual.

(1) We, your committee on the Spiritual State of the Church and Evangelism, Brother Elder, wish to say that so long as you and others of your office put first—thus giving it primal importance—on the "Report of the Pastor to the District Conference" those "Received on Profession of Faith" and as long as we find the first hymn in our standard church hymnal "O for a thousand tongues to sing, My great Redeemer's praise," we feel that those who are charged with the directing of the affairs of our great church are putting first things first. And that while the Methodist Church may not claim apostolic succession for her leaders yet we feel that you are following the lead of our great soul-winning founder and in turn Him "who came not to be ministered unto but to minister."

(2) In the second place, brethren, and in this item some may charge the committee with being old-fashioned; we are perfectly willing to have this epithet applied to us, but we should vigorously resent being called "out of date." Your committee believes that there are certain places in the church's program where a fairly sure index of its spirituality is shown:

(a) The mid-week prayer services—not necessarily in the large number who gather at this service, but in the presence of the pentecostal fire on the altar and in the heart.

(b) In the Sunday School—where the ratio of the men and women in the adult department and the children in the elementary department is one-to-one.

(c) In the Board of Stewards—that no steward should be able to look his pastor in the eye on Sunday unless during the week he in no uncertain and in no heartless way has endeavored to balance his church's budget.

(d) In the regular service—that that church which allows a stranger attend its regular service and depart without meeting a soul who worships there (or is supposed to) is not only not friendly, but not evangelistic and hence not spiritual.

(3) And finally, brethren, we feel that the lean years through which we have passed have taught, or rather re-taught the church a very valuable lesson: That the granaries and store-houses may be full and yet the people be in want. That "moth and rust and robbers" are but three of a host of enemies that steal away "treasures on earth" and that "treasures in heaven" are the only ones that abide and sustain in times of stress and distress. That "Though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day. For our light affliction which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal."

Signed,
B. E. MITCHELL,
For the Committee.

Keeping the Advocate Saved

The following are subscriptions, both new and renewal, received through Monday, June 5. The number of charges reporting have been most disappointing. Out of some six hundred pastoral charges served by the Advocate, less than 150 have reported the results of the special canvass for subscriptions unanimously voted at the recent sessions of the patronizing Conferences.

However, the results obtained by those charges who have conducted the canvass have exceeded our expectations, and if the remainder would do just half as well we would not only "Keep the Advocate Saved," but, could immediately return to our original size of sixteen pages, thus better serving our readers and the Church we so dearly love.

PAPER PROBLEMS

One of the most baffling of all the Paper Problems of a religious paper is the one concerned with securing and retaining a representative group of readers. The most discouraging experience of any solicitor for subscriptions is the meeting with good people who dismiss the suggestion of subscribing with a superior reply. "I have no interest in such a publication." This attitude prevents any argument about the value of the paper in the matter of furthering the cause of the Church, and the sad fact is evident that in the Reformed Church in America perhaps 140,000 of its 160,000 members do not subscribe to either of its representing papers. One wonders how it is possible to continue with any adequacy in the work of the denomination when so large a proportion of the membership is content to live in ignorance of the activity in life and thought that is distinctly Reformed.

This problem is continually in the mind of the Editor, as he studies from week to week the falling list of subscribers.—Christian Intelligence

EDITORIAL OBSERVATIONS

"ILL FARES THE LAND, to hastening ills a prey, where wealth accumulates, and MEN decay," pessimistically sang Oliver Goldsmith in his "Deserted Village." Poor pessimist. Clearly, by many of our "advanced standards," Goldsmith stands condemned. For he goes on maundering, "his best riches, ignorance of wealth;" "the times are altered;" "rural mirth and manners are no more." Can you beat it? That wail of pessimism just won't go in America, especially the United States part of it.
It just won't go. You must be a optimist.
We've made a fetish of optimism.

But, of course, Goldsmith was talking about England. Sure, times have altered there, and "rural mirth and manners are no more." It is all right to talk about one's best riches being ignorance of wealth, in England. America must have something that rattles and it must rise to the "upper brackets" and do it in a hurry.
Ours is the land of liberty, the land of optimism, of prosperity and plenty.

Half the optimism of America is blind folly or foolish unwillingness to face facts and assume responsibility for those facts.
We want to shut our eyes to the disagreeable and hope that in the morning some angel will have made everything all right for us. We can sleep on a muttering volcano, and get up and go out and advertise it as the most productive soil and the safest place for a home or place of business.

What we need in America today is fewer optimists and pessimists and more intelligent and daring realists who are willing to face the whole threatening situation and do something about it.

CONSIDER THE HOUSE OF MOR-GAN. For the past several days we have been regaled with cumulative newspaper reports listing the names of those on the "preferred list" of the House of Morgan.
Mr. Morgan has been on the witness stand discussing upon "business and professional ethics," especially the kind that applies to his line of business. We are ashamed and disgusted as we take up our paper each day. There are the names of those who have been favored with high positions of responsibility for the people.
We are now beginning to see what the hierarchy of plutocracy can do for us. Here is wealth without a sense of social responsibility.

Within the law, yes, within the law, perhaps; but there is no law that can curb greed or direct and control the power of wealth. Wealth can dictate laws and control courts, so that there is no longer a government of the people save that which wealth will permit.

Bribes? Of course those on the favored list were not bribed. It was just a business transaction, perfectly legitimate. Of course Mr. Morgan never felt that he would need these men to stand by him in a tight place, and, of course, these men certainly would not be influenced by these favors in case they were called upon to act with reference to Mr. Morgan's interests.
But we had better not forget what the Wise Man said about how a bribe effects both the giver and the receiver of it. Humanity is still rather weak in some spots.

Have you considered either how wealth, properly manipulated, may both determine the laws that are passed and control the decisions of the courts for itself?

In America many of us have substituted respectability for righteousness. So long as we are not found out we seem satisfied.
This way lies ruin. It is righteousness that exaltheeth a nation and not respectability. It is no longer a complete defense of a course of conduct to claim that "many of the best people do that."

And have you considered what it means with reference to our perennial bogeys, "Bolshevism and Communism?" We are just going to have to jack up a lot of our Fourth-of-July-Flag-Waving-Oratorical-Patriotism that is always crying out against the "reds," and see just what is under it. Can it be that they are trying to get my eyes on a "red" or a Bolshevik lest I see what they are doing behind the door?

We had as well face it: If we do not change our ways as a country something like Communism is inevitable, and Russia will not be to blame for it. America is creating her own brand of Communism.

Why not take this "new deal" business seriously and make a clean sweep of things while we are at it?

* * *

WHY IN THE WORLD do these men not repent and straighten out instead of attempting to explain and make alibis?
Why do they not just plainly say they were wrong and ask the country for a chance to prove a change of heart and method?

That brings me to ask, how many of these favorites of the House of Morgan are members of the church, and of what churches? I'll admit that this is not going to prove very flattering to those of us who have been assigned the pulpits of our country. But let us know it. We are the ones who are supposed to preach righteousness instead of respectability. We are supposed to set up the standards.

Right here we discover something of the place of the modern pulpit. Where have the pastors of these men been, and what have they been preaching to these men who sat in their pews on Sunday mornings? Have they been told anything about the obligations of wealth and its extremely dangerous possibilities?

It is time for us preachers, in our preparation, to devote some time to getting acquainted with the inner workings of our country, and not spend it all on our particular brand of theology and our peculiar forms of worship. It is time for us to get acquainted with the world in which we live.
Let me recommend for your reading as a beginning, Edward Alsworth Ross' "Sin and Society." It was written twenty-five years ago, and that is just about how far behind many of us preachers are. Laymen, ask your preacher if he has read that book.
Get him to let you have it for a night or two. And we'd better read some pamphlets of Hebrew literature that came out even earlier than Dr. Ross' little book.
You may not find the copyright date on them at all. The titles are Amos, Hosea, Isaiah, Jeremiah; and the Four Gospels.
Note what is said about wealth, its dangers and responsibilities.

Have you quit preaching your sermons on Sin and Repentance? Well, leave them where they are. Write some new ones.
Those old sermons are not fitted for the world in which we now live. "The times are altered." Sin has changed its form and is hiding itself behind good form and clothing itself in respectability. The Gospel of Repentance is a much needed Gospel right now.

When John the Baptist held his meeting down there on the bank of the Jordan his main sermon was, "Repent." The people said, "What must we do?" and John told them what to do.

THE PLACE OF WOMAN IN THE ORIENT

By Dr. E. Stanley Jones

(We are indebted to Mrs. R. H. Wynn for typewritten copies of the addresses of Dr. E. Stanley Jones, having heard them she wished to share them with her friends who are readers of the Advocate. Editor).

I want to carry to you the gratitude of the lands across the seas for what you have been doing to help us in the sum total of the movement for the redemption of that portion of the world. You have had a big share in it and I feel that my message would be incomplete if I did not carry the gratitude of those lands to you.

When I talked to the ministers we took the plan of the ministers speaking first to me, asking me questions and I answered them. We will reverse that. I shall speak to you and then allow you to ask me questions. Our skins have been greatly thickened since we have been out in the East. I read a certain letter periodically. If you get a letter of that kind once, nothing else matters, for every word of the whole vocabulary has been exhausted in that one single letter. So, having received that and survived, nothing else can hurt. If what we have is not reality, the sooner we find it out the better; if it is reality, it will stand criticism.

Woman had had a very great part in the remaking of these lands. I suppose there is no one who owes such a debt to Christ as woman. The pious Jew thanked God that he was not born three things—a woman, a leper or a Gentile. You can see your company. The disciples of Jesus admonished Him when He talked with women. The highest among the Pharisees was the bleeding Pharisee who went around with blood on his forehead, had his eyes on the ground lest he look upon a woman; so he was constantly limping himself on trees or stumps or whatever happened to be around. Jesus came to deliver us from that. Woman is no longer a mere being of sex, but a human personality, to be respected for what she is. Jesus never warned men alone of lust, or women alone, but He warned both concerning it. There was one time, of course, when Jesus seemed to be disrespectful to woman, when He said to His mother, "Woman," and the people of the East object to that, saying He was disrespectful. My reply is that when we make that criticism, we criticise ourselves, emptying the word "woman" of its content and substituting "lady," just as we substitute "gentleman" for "man." Jesus had no such distinctions. Our minds are class-filled; therefore, we have these distinctions, but His mind was not class-filled and the highest thing was to call her "woman," putting the content of His own deep respect into it, using the word "man" and putting into it the content of the respect He held for every man. So if there is anybody who should love Jesus Christ, it is woman. She staggered to Jesus, laden with chains, and walked out free.

Interpreting to the West the movements going through the womanhood of the East is not easy to do. The East is very sore because we pick over the worst sides of her civilization and spread it before our people in order to impress them with the need for doing something. She says this is not fair. I think they are right. It is not fair to pick out the worst portions and use them as a motive for getting money. If Christian missions cannot be founded upon fair play, we would better shut up. I am not opposed to the book, "Mother India," so much because it did not have a great deal of truth in it, but because it was written by someone who was not giving herself to the healing of those things. Nobody can talk about these things unless it becomes more than talking—a deep passion to heal, and then to hide the wounds. We do not want the missionary movement founded on the degradation of peoples but upon the possibilities we feel are in all nations and we do not want the missionary movement to thrive on the idea that we are "Lady Bonntiful, bending over other people with dainties;" but with the feeling "we want to do you good, sisters," and to do it, with deep respect. I went to the East with pity, to bend over them, but stayed to try to help them solve their problems and there is nothing but respect in my heart for the men and women of those lands. You may say they are underprivileged. Every privilege that has come to me has blood across it and I have nothing but what has been bought at a great price. It is difficult to interpret because in nations like China and India you can scarcely say anything about any thing that does not need to be modified by the opposite. I could stand here and give you a series of pictures that would depict some of the fine things about womanhood there, and every single word would be true. I could give you also a series of pictures that would make your heart break and every bit of it would be true. There is in the land of India the most beautiful building in the world, put up in memory of a woman, the most exquisitely grand building ever conceived in the mind of man. You may have your beautiful sky-scrapers, but stand before the beautiful simplicity of the Taj Mahal on a moonlight night and you draw a breath of wonder that such beauty could be conceived in the soul of anyone. But as you stand near the Taj Mahal, you can look around and see the terrible degradation of woman everywhere.

But India has glorified womanhood. When she wants to use the highest terms for God, she uses "motherhood" and she thinks she can teach us something about God by teaching us the motherhood of God. She says God's love is tender and brooding and sheltering and shielding like a mother's and so she says it touches one most deeply to think of the motherhood of God. India calls her land the Mother-land. Mother India! It is always depicted as a woman. No wonder, for mind you, Indian womanhood is queenly. She may be poor, but draped in the sari, her flowing garment, which may be very coarse, in her graceful bearing she is a queen. If you are looking for fashion, beauty, grace and delicacy, I have often wondered why you have passed by the Indian sari. I shall probably be tremendously discounted for saying this, but I think the Indian dress is the most beautiful in the world and I hope she will never change it for this terrible kaleidoscopic thing you call fashion. She keeps it from century to century, she changes its border, making it a little different, but it is essentially the same. Woman there has borne the burdens upon her head until she is straight. The Chinese have borne the burdens on their shoulders until they are bent. Dressed in the simplicity of the sari, with the straightness of a queen, she is queenly no matter even if she is ignorant and terribly poor. I have stood and spoken to a great audience in South India where 35,000 people gathered in a single assemblage, probably the largest in the world. There were 10,000 women and 25,000 men on the other side, all the women dressed in white. I have said, to my mind, this is the most beautiful sight I have ever seen.

I think the finest relationship between the sexes is found, not in the western world, but among the Syrian Christians at Mount Celie the remnant of a group who are supposed to have been evangelized by St. Thomas, the Apostle, in Southern India. For centuries they have been decadent, but some of us have been privileged to go among them and now they are a church that is awakening to its responsibility for the advancement of India. These women are educated along with the men. There is 100 per cent literacy among the children of school age. The women are free to come and go—no purdah, no putting them behind curtains. When it comes to marriage their custom is a cross between the Eastern and the Western method. The Eastern is for the parents to do every thing and mould the marriage relationships and the children have nothing to do. In the West I think it has come to the place where the parents have little to do with it and the children make all the decisions. Here the plan is for the children and the parents to be satisfied and I think it is far more desirable than either the Western or the Eastern. I have been going down among them and I cannot say that I have seen anything that is wrong among the sexes, no attempt to flirt, if that is a sin. (I think it has been wiped out of the category of sin in the modern days.) I have never seen them attempt to flirt. They move freely among each other. Divorce and unfaithfulness is practically unknown. When Mr. Gandhi came down to these Syrian Christians, the first thing he did was to thank them for the wonderful contribution they had made to India's welfare, and to the ages. Their Christianity has been very formal but there has been sincerity in it. I thank God for what it has done for them. I say, therefore, you have all extremes. On the other hand you can find that according to the Shastas, girls are born to the woman of sin. A woman is a woman because of her sin in a previous birth and she hopes that some way, somehow, she may be reborn as a man.

A woman cannot be saved; she must be reborn as a man. Her husband is a lord. It is she who would light the funeral pyre as a symbol of what kept them together. A Hindu says, "That shows how one we are." "Yes, very beautiful; but which one is to burn on the pyre? When a woman dies, does the man mount the funeral pyre?" It does not work there; that is different. Of course, I don't want you to think that thing goes on; only occasionally, here and there. It has been wiped out.

The Scriptures teach the woman is more for what she is than for what she has been. A lady from the West who became a Hindu says her husband is the open door through which she sees and worships the divine. I could, on the other hand, turn to the fact that in the Legislative Council they have a woman and a woman has been the head of the Congress of India, a Mrs. Naidu. In one of the Legislative Councils it was debated whether they would give the right of suffrage to women. The hall where they met was the old palace of the ruler of the section and you could see where he had had one hundred and fifty wives—the buildings were still there, surrounding the central palace. I listened to the debate. Around the gallery at the top was a group of Christian women. These legislators, Hindus and Moslems, said, "we have to give it to them; look at the women up there, watching us." The Christian women were pressing on their minds and giving release to women. I think the greatest thing that has happened in recent years in India is the fact that there, a nation has worked out a technique of getting its ends nationally without recourse to armed force. We did not know just what was to take the place of war, but Gandhi, discovering the truth underlying the new Testament, showed us the possibility of gaining one's national ends without war. To my mind it is closely akin to the underlying ideals of the Gospel.

Even that is not the greatest thing that has happened. If I were to put my finger on the greatest thing it would be the coming of womanhood into the national life. She has been secluded; my wife was talking to a woman who said as she pointed to a tree above the wall, "that is the only thing of the outside world I have ever seen." As a little child she went in behind those walls and stayed there. What has happened? The women of India have begun to come out and take their part in the national life and during this last couple of years they have marched the streets, stood before shops picketing them, made people walk over their bodies before they would allow them to go into the liquor shop; they lie down on the ground to try to keep the men away from the shop and if the men walked in, it would have to be done over their bodies. No man would ever do it. Now, what have they done? They have drawn on the resources of womanhood for national reform. Hitherto the woman has been the conservative element. A man said, "I live in two centuries. I don't know where I belong. In the home I am in the sixteenth and in public, in the twentieth." These women are literally going to jail by the thousands for the national cause. Women who have been doomed behind bars now stand up and march to jail with a smile. There is something great and fine about one who can do that and I believe that the greatest hope for India in many ways, lies in that uprising of womanhood, for no longer can the men justly blame backwardness on the women. If I could read to you the manifesto put out by women at a certain conference the other day, it would make every single woman's organization gasp at its radicalism. There has been nothing more radical than that statement of theirs. They have gone farther than any of us ever thought or guessed about doing. As to divorce, they contend the woman should have the right of divorce at her own will—just say so. As to the right of abortion, birth control and subjects that are associated with radicalism, she has gone far beyond most of us in the Western world. That is only a fringe, a radical fringe, but that fringe is there and she is beating, beating straight down into the soul of India from every where. I was in a great audience in Bombay at a Communist meeting. Every thing in Communism is not bad but I have very great disagreements with it as to its class war, its compulsions, its ruthlessness and its atheism. I saw in front of me a young woman with marks on her forehead, shaking her head in disagreement. The marks on her forehead told of the ancient past, but the shaking of the head told me that she was under the sway of ideas that were deeply radical. The shaking of the head of that young woman is something that will shake the structure of human society.

WORLD'S FAIR VISITORS

Guarded from rackets by Chicago churches

In order to protect the general public from highway-rebbery prices the churches of Chicago have organized to assure Church visitors good rooms in accredited homes at a very low price. 25,000 rooms are being pre-empted and made available for the church public at prices ranging from $1.00 to $2.00 single, and from $1.50 to $2.50 double, with special prices for parties or by the week. This enterprise is being carried out by the Church Housing Commission in co-operation with the Visitors' Tourist Service, Inc.

This organization is the official agency endorsed by A Century of Progress, Chicago City Council, Chicago clergymen, and the Chicago Board of Health Department. It is a member of the Chicago Association of Commerce, and the Illinois Chamber of Commerce.

More than 1,100 conventions are scheduled for Chicago this summer. Ninety per cent of the rooming space in the downtown district is pre-empted by the regular traffic and convention reservation. The space available for general use is very limited and high priced.

The Church Housing Commission represents eight great denominations co-operating in service. They are Methodist, Presbyterian, Jewish, Lutheran, Congregational, Catholic, Baptist, and Episcopalian.

The Visitors' Tourist Service is financed by a small family season membership fee of $3.00, which entitles all members of the family to the following service as often as they come and as long as they stay:

1. Assignment to certified rooms at a moderate price. There are also small furnished apartments and rooms for parties in such institutions as The Eleanor Club and The Chicago Training School.

2. Free parking space on one of the 11 parking places controlled by the Visitors' Tourist Service and located in various sections of the city. These places are guarded day and night and visitors have the privilege of coming and going as they choose.

3. The Visitors' Tourist Service controls an entire five story building in Chicago's famous loop. The location is 209 South Wabash Ave., Chicago, Illinois. This will be club headquarters. One entire floor has been set aside for the churches. Members can make this their loafing place in the loop, order their mail sent to this address, secure information on how to see Chicago and the Fair in the least expensive way.

The only expense to the visitors for the above service is the $3.00 family fee. Visitors should secure their membership card before starting for Chicago, and if possible state their wants and get their room assignments by mail. This will enable them to drive into Chicago and go directly to their rooms and parking places, thus keeping their car away from the crowded loop section in which no parking is allowed.

All direct inquiries sent to the general office should carry the church department on the envelope address. Any person failing to register until arrival should go directly to his own denominational department.

Special attention will be given to parties of young people who can visit the Fair under church auspices with perfect safety.

The Club Rooms are situated in the very heart of Chicago, one block from the famous Art Institute and within easy reach of the Fair grounds.

OUR RESPONSIBILITY IN THE PRESENT PROHIBITION CRISIS

(Pastors are earnestly requested to read this statement to their congregations).

("For this Purpose the Son of God was manifested that He Might Destroy the Works of the Devil." 1 John, 3:8).

The Board of Temperance and Social Service of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, commissioned by the General Conference to lead the church in its opposition to "any recession from the constitutional outlawry of the liquor traffic" hereby places on record its amazement and distress at the unprecedented action of the Congress and the President of the United States in the passage of a law attempting to legalize a traffic in 3.2 beer which scientific tests, observation and experience declare to be intoxicating and therefore clearly violative of the Eighteenth Amendment of the Constitution. We deplore the fact that the example set by Congress and the President has been followed by the Legislatures and Governors of several States. It is indeed appalling that this intoxicating beer is being sold in restaurants, drug stores and hotels with practically no restrictions, and sad to relate in many cases by women, even by young girls. We are faced with the prospect of the European bar maid type.

We also greatly deplore that President Roosevelt emphasized favorably this distressing violation of the Constitution in his radio address on May 7, and declared that "The sale of beer has already resulted in considerable re-employment and incidentally has provided much needed tax revenue." President Roosevelt utterly ignored the fact that every beer truck helps to displace a milk truck and that the "much needed revenue" will be paid largely by depriving the wives and children of drinking laboring men of the necessities of life.

Many of our political leaders have utterly failed the people on the prohibition question. They solemnly declared against the return of the saloon, but have sent down to the states for ratification a proposed amendment which repeals the Eighteenth Amendment outright and offers no substitute whatever. We must therefore face the momentous fact that the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment does actually mean the return of the saloon by whatever name it may be called.

The issue presented is clear and unmistakable. It is not and must not be made a question of partisan politics. It is not a question of supporting the program of the President or of Congress, or the program of any political party. Congress has submitted the question of repeal to the states for decision. This proposal to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment can be defeated in a majority of the forty-eight states if the Church of Christ recognizes clearly the great moral issue involved and fights as aggressively against repeal as it did for ratification of the Eighteenth Amendment.

The outstanding question is whether the brand of the criminal shall be removed from the body and soul destroying liquor traffic, which we believe to be one of "the works of the devil" which the Son of God was manifested to destroy. In answer to such a question we urge our Methodist preachers and people to record themselves openly, effectively and unanimously in the negative in every proper way.

We commend to our people the closing paragraph of the statement of our College of Bishops made on May 6: "The bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, commit themselves to the maintenance of this high purpose and call upon all the ministry and membership of the church to enlist in this hour of national crisis that the united voice of the church will speak with such moral majesty as will mightily aid in arousing the nation's soul and averting the danger at our doors."

METHODISM VERSES LIQUOR AND THE REPEAL OF THE EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT

At the district conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held at Noxapater, Miss., May 9 and 10, very strong resolutions were adopted by the body which represented a membership of 70110 communicants, on the subject of temperance, the sale of beer and the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

There was no uncertain sound heard on the question. The resolutions were presented by three of the ministers of the district—Dr. Henry Felgar Brooks, of Starkville; Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, of Louisville, and Rev. J. G. George, of Macon, as follows:

"Whereas, there is much discussion all over our country on the question of temperance and prohibition as it relates to beer and light wines and the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment; and

"Whereas, the Congress of our nation has already passed laws permitting the several states to determine whether or not the sale of beer with an alcoholic content of 3.2 per cent shall be allowed within the borders of the several states; and

"Whereas, Congress has also submitted the question of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment to the people of the several states for a ratification or rejection; and

"Whereas, Methodism has long voiced her opposition to the manufacture, sale and consumption of any drink having an alcoholic content, therefore be it

"Resolved by this representative membership of Methodism in this conference convened—

"First, That we here and now re-affirm our faith in and obedience to the regular Disciplinary provisions and warnings found in our Book of Discipline, Chapter XVI, Articles 513, 514, 515, and Article 298 in Chapter V, which reads as follows: Chapter XVI, Article 513—"Let all our preachers and members faithfully observe our General Rule which forbids drunkenness, or drinking spirituous liquors unless in cases of necessity."

"Article 511 In cases of drunkenness let the Discipline be administered as in case of immorality, drunkenness being a crime expressly forbidden in the Word of God. In cases of drinking, except of necessity, let the Discipline be administered as for imprudent or improper conduct.

"Article 515 Let all our preachers and members abstain from the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors to be used as beverages, from signing petitions for their sale, from becoming bondsmen for any person as a condition for obtaining a license, from acting as a dispenser or voluntarily accepting an appointment or election as such under the laws of any state in which there is a dispensary law authorizing the sale of intoxicating liquors by the state, county, or municipality, and from renting property to be used for such sale. If any member shall violate any of the provisions of this paragraph, he shall be deemed guilty of immorality. Nevertheless, in the case of a member who shall sign a petition for such sale, or shall become a bondsman for any person who shall engage in such traffic, or shall rent property to be used for such sale, or shall act as dispenser or voluntarily accept election or appointment to any office created for the purpose of selling or dispensing intoxicating liquors on behalf of the state, county or municipality, he shall be the duty of the pastor to deal with the offender as provided for in Article 298, which reads as follows: 'Let private reproof be given by the preacher in charge or by a leader; and if there be an acknowledgment of the fault and promise of amendment, the person may be borne with; otherwise the preacher must take two or three faithful friends, who shall labor to bring the offender to proper repentance; and if he shall not hear them, and there is no sign of amendment, the offender must be dealt with as in case of immorality.'

"Resolved, second, That the pastors of the several churches and charges in this the Columbus district are hereby instructed to read these Disciplinary provisions to their several congregations, noting particularly the warnings therein, loud and to use all reasonable and scriptural means to guard our people from being led astray in this hectic hour."

The resolutions were spoken to by Dr. Brooks and Dr. Curtis, the presiding elder, the first speaker defining the position of the Church throughout the years, always standing for temperance, never compromising with the world on any of the moral issues. He assailed the methods used and the propaganda disseminated as coming from unholy and unpatriotic sources. He claimed that the younger men and women did not know the debauchery and sin of the old saloon days that they had never seen a saloon and knew not the curse that came to our homes, our families and the nation. Dr. Curtis spoke very forcibly on the questions of taxation, cost of crime, and the lowering of the moral standards, and called upon the people to stand strong for the defense of what had been gained morally by the nation in the passing of the Eighteenth Amendment. The resolutions were adopted, the large audience of people rising to their feet, many of them crying out, "We are for our homes, temperance and the retention of the Eighteenth Amendment."

Later in the day the laymen in their meeting adopted similar resolutions, and the ladies in their meeting also voiced strong opposition to the repeal, dedicating an appeal to the governor to stand strong for temperance and prohibition and the home.

Respectfully submitted,
HENRY FELGAR BROOKS,
L. M. LIPSCOMB,
J. A. GEORGE,

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

A tent set up among tall pine trees on the Eucutta charge served as a unique meeting place for the district conference of the Hattiesburg District, opening May 24 and continuing through the 25th. Rev. A. Joe Beasley proved to be the ideal pastor-host. The large delegation was easily and most hospitably served by the members of his congregations, who revived the delightful old custom of "dinner on the ground." Brother Beasley and his people are to be congratulated on undertaking and so successfully entertaining a district conference.

Dr. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, opened the conference with fitting devotional remarks and presided over the business sessions.

Among the honored guests of the conference were: Rev. T. J. O'Neil, presiding elder of the Meridian District; Rev. Otto Porter, presiding elder of the Seashore District; Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Conference lay leader; Dr. G. F. Winfield, associate president of Whitworth College; Miss Catherine Jane Jordan, voice teacher of Whitworth; the Whitworth quartet, and other members of the Whitworth student body.

The following delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: Judge E. M. Lane, W. S. F. Tatum, Mrs. J. W. Abney, L. H. Rainwater, H. Gillis, H. Ogden, P. C. Alexander, W. H. L. Carruth, J. D. Rogers, A. C. Lynd, W. A. Holloway, Mrs. W. J. Ferguson, Mrs. C. W. Sullivan, Henry Hilben, H. V. Waits, and Mrs. Jeff Brown. Alternates elected were: J. B. Anderson, D. R. Campbell, Mrs. J. B. King, Mrs. J. B. Cain, and S. O. Trest.

B. B. Davis and D. W. Heidelberg were elected delegates to the Annual Conference by the Meridian district conference. Since then their charges have been transferred to the Hattiesburg district. Bishop Denny ruled that they would be delegates to the Annual Conference.

Conference and Church-wide interests were presented by various representatives. A Layman's Program was conducted by W. H. L. Carruth, associate district lay leader, who, with Dr. J. M. Sullivan, addressed the conference. Notable among these interests was the challenge presented by Mr. W. S. F. Tatum concerning the Methodist Hospital located in the Hattiesburg district. Rev. W. M. Williams, our faithful chaplain at the Sanatorium, addressed the conference in regard to his work.

W. H. L. Carruth was elected district lay leader and empowered with the assistance of the presiding elder and the Conference lay leader to select associate lay leaders. The conference adopted with a rising unanimous vote the report of the Temperance Committee which contained resolutions strongly supporting the Eighteenth Amendment.

The devotionals were conducted by Revs. W. J. Ferguson, R. A. Allums and J. H. Jolly. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. C. C. Clark.

The musical contribution of the Whitworth quartet, along with talks on Whitworth by Whitworth girls, added greatly to the entertainment and inspiration of the conference.

Brother Beasley presented as an entertainment feature each day Sam and his quartet of the Encutta colored church.

The conference accepted the invitation to hold its 1934 session at Mize, after which our efficient presiding elder, Dr. J. T. Leggett, brought to a close not only a highly informative and inspirational conference, but, all in all, a most pleasant one.

C. C. CLARK, Secretary.

ASBURY COMMENCEMENT NOTES

By S. E. Carruth

Even superlatives fail to adequately convey the glories of Baccalanreate day at Asbury. One is made to sympathize with Peter at the transfiguration—"he wist not what to say." Such an aggregation of spiritual culture as filled the spacious Hughes Auditorium on that delightful Sabbath morning could hardly be otherwise assembled. Most states of the Union and many foreign countries were represented and prominent Christian workers from earth's various harvest fields dotted the worshipping multitude.

Our own Dr. V. C. Curtis, presiding elder of the Columbus District, showed himself at home in directing the peoples' praise service. The processional of that imposing faculty and more than a hundred robed prepared youth under the strains of Kentucky's best organ provoked glad tears from the sympathetic. Then the awe-inspiring solemnity a la Asbury. Who else should lead us to the throne but the saintly, unconquered intercessor, Henry Clay Morrison? The unseen Presence was unmistakably realized.

Since Asbury is pre-eminently missionary it is fitting that the scripture lesson be read by our worthy secretary of the Board of Missions, Dr. W. G. Cram, a highly esteemed alumnus of this college, who came back home to give encouragement to the institution that has made a major contribution to his world service. The chorus, "The Heavens Are Telling" (Haydn), accentuated the worshipful mood and the audience manifested a restless eagerness for the anticipated feast.

That prince among world educators, President L. R. Akers, who is richly endowed with the grace of saying the proper thing impressively, right eloquently warned the receptive audience what might be expected and thus presented the speaker, Bishop Arthur J. Moore, of the San Francisco area, and who also is president of Asbury's Board of Trustees.

What shall we more say! You have heard him on a like auspicious occasion? Then you may surmise the measurements of the discourse. Every discerning mind recognized the resourceful mastery of the man—God's man. Bishop Moore has the vision to recognize conditions and difficulties, even at the worst; the honesty to acknowledge threatening, sinister forces; and, happily, the hopeful courage to foresee the ultimate victory of right. The responsive hearers imbibed his spirit of optimism and marched with him up the hills of conquest and certain achievement.

The ever jubilant soul of Jim Wells, the winning pastor of our Jackson Glendale church, soared aloft to the third heaven under the spell of the message, but in this instance a holy host shared the ecstatic emotions.

The cosmopolitan throng will scatter abroad the rare inspiration of that service.

soring weekly lectures over radio station KWKH (550 kilocycles) since January. Musical numbers for these programs have been furnished by the music department of Centenary. During the next few weeks a very special series of lectures will be given each Monday evening over KWKH, beginning at nine o'clock. The general subject to be discussed during these lectures will be, "The College in the Modern World." Many people believe that the aims and methods of the colleges should be diligently studied in the light of modern conditions, in order that the colleges may turn out leaders of society who will be capable, purposeful, and determined that society shall truly progress. The following five lecture-periods will be used for a discussion of the general topic from the viewpoints indicated:

June 12—"The Viewpoint of College Students," Mr. Justin Griffin and Miss Bailey.

June 19—"The College Administration's View," President Pierce Cline, Centenary College.

June 26—"The View of Business," Mr. Paul Brown, Shreveport banker and secretary-treasurer of the Board of Trustees of Centenary.

July 3—"The View of Society," Mr. Lake Hall, Shreveport attorney.

July 10—"The View of the Church," Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, bishop for Louisiana and Arkansas and President of the Board of Trustees of Centenary College.

The comments of listeners to this series of lectures will be appreciated by Centenary College. The radio committee also welcomes suggestions as to topics to be discussed over the radio in future addresses. The college desires to serve as many people as possible. The radio lecture series was inaugurated in order that factual and inspirational talks might be provided.

SUCCESSFUL REVIVAL AT ALCO, LA.

We have just closed a two weeks' revival meeting in the Alco Methodist church. It was one of the best meetings ever held in this community, the church overflowing almost every night. Brother P. B. McCullen, pastor of our Ringgold Church, did the preaching. He is truly a man of God, fearless in his battle against the evils of the world. Each message was filled with great truths and lifted us to a higher plane and stirred our very souls.

Brother McCullen was assisted by our pastor, Brother A. H. Baggett, who is a real soldier of the Cross.

There were only eight accessions to the church, yet we feel the church members received a wonderful blessing and were really fed by the bread of life.

Our song services were made a great success by the earnest efforts of our talented choir director, Mr. R. A. Rodd. We are indeed proud of him and his splendid choir, also our pianist, Miss Etha Mae Baggett. We greatly appreciate the hearty co-operation of our sister church.

REPORTER.

REV. W. F. ROGERS LAID TO REST

Rev. W. F. Rogers, our really beloved pastor of the Horn Lake Charge, Sardis-Grenada District, North Mississippi Conference, fell on sleep early Sunday morning, June 4. He was buried from our Grenada Methodist Church, Monday, June 5, at 2 p. m. The services were conducted by the pastor, presiding elder, and Brothers Dorsey, Countiss, Mellwain and E. H. Cunningham. Interment followed in the Grenada cemetery. Some thirty pastors and a host of friends from all sections of the adjacent territory were present. A wealth of flowers adorned the last resting place of this pastor-preacher who died in the harness. A more extended statement will be made at an early date.

BOSTON SYMPHONY PRESENTS BRAHMS

By Prof. W. G. Phelps

Last night I attended a wonderful concert in Boston by the great symphony orchestra of that city. You attended it, too, if you tuned in at the right time and on the right wave length. How wonderful that by the turn of a button in our own home we may be transported to the ends of the earth and hear the messages of the greatest living artists and orators!

The orchestra in Boston was presenting a Brahms program. Never have I heard such prolonged and appreciated applause as at the close of the first part. During the intermission a talk was made about Brahms, his career, and his compositions. The speaker stated that the great composer was not highly appreciated in his lifetime and the renditions of his works were sometimes greeted with hisses. Brahms' standard of excellence was too high for the general public until educated to an appreciation of it. He also stated that symphony conductors in Boston could stir up little interest at first in the music of Brahms, but being so strongly convinced of the high grade of excellence in his compositions, they persistently kept including Brahms numbers in their programs until they had educated the public to such a degree of appreciation that whenever they announced a Brahms program they could expect a capacity house of delighted listeners. This should teach us that high standards maintained constantly in any field of endeavor will win at last. This is particularly true in the realm of Christian work. High standards of thinking, acting, and living will ultimately gain favorable attention to the Christian way of life. In fact, there is no other method of ushering in that blessed time of Isaiah's vision, when "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." We may well pause and take a lesson from the career of the great German musician, Johannes Brahms.

OUR WEEKLY PARTY

"The work is going along fine at Amory, Miss. We hope to send another list soon.—C. T. Floyd, P. C." No more need be said.

Rev. E. M. Scott, our pastor at Pontotoc, Miss., will assist Rev. W. O. Hunt in a meeting at Shannon, and Rev. G. H. Boyles, at Houston, Miss., during this month.

Rev. J. R. Murff will join with the Baptists in a union meeting at Kilmichael, Miss., with Rev. R. B. Pearson, our pastor at Mooreville, doing the preaching in the Baptist church.

The Aberdeen District Licensing Committee met at Aberdeen, Miss., June 9, and granted a license to preach to Basil Moore, of Amory, Miss. This young man is a student at Millsaps College.

The Mississippi Conference Young People's Assembly opened at Whitworth College last Monday with an enrollment of more than two hundred. This is much beyond the mark of last year.

The quartet of Whitworth College, which has been touring the Mississippi Conference, conducted the Carrollton Avenue Church service, New Orleans, Sunday evening last.

Miss Elizabeth Hancock, of Independence, Miss., who has been confined to her bed for three and a half years with tuberculosis, writes an encouraging word for the Advocate.

Sister Emily M. Hillebrandt, Sulphur, La., writes with great appreciation of the Stanley Jones articles and thanks Mrs. R. H. Wynn for making them possible to Advocate readers.

"Wish I could send you one hundred subscriptions to help sustain the Advocate. M. F. Johnson, Berryville, Ark." Brother Johnson is one of our superannuates.

Rev. G. P. White, Hammond, La., has been ill for several days. Brother Nesom, of Tickfaw, also has been ill. Why not pray for these brethren and write a letter of cheer?

Rev. H. A. Wood, Union, Miss., adds a word of cheer to editor and manager along with a fine list of renewals. We thank God for all our friends.

If any of you are thinking of attending the World's Fair at Chicago, it might be well for you to read an article on another page of this number, "World's Fair Visitors."

"Enclosed find $1.50 to renew my subscription. I enjoy your weekly visits too much to want to miss a copy. Mrs. J. S. Summerlin, Shreveport, La."

"A wonderful spirit of Christian co-operation continues throughout the bounds of the Longview and Cedar Bluff charge," is the encouraging word of the pastor, Rev. W. M. Hester, accompanying a list of renewals.

With "Jesus the Pioneer of Life," as his subject, Rev. Jeff Cunningham, pastor of Price Memorial Church, Greenwood, Miss., delivered the commencement sermon for the Greenwood High School.

Why is it that your friends come when you are out? That is the way Rev. W. F. Roberts, pastor at Dubach, La., with his nephew, did the editor. And Prof. G. L. Harrell of Millsaps College acted the same way. The Advocate appreciated their calls.

Dr. Lawrence L. Cowan, pastor at Central Church, Meridian, Miss., preached the sermon at the M. S. C. W. Commencement. Those who heard the message will long remember it as an eloquent sermon of unusual literary merit.

A series of evangelistic meetings was begun at our church in Tupelo, Miss., Sunday, June 4, led by Evangelist Frank M. Neal, of Amarillo, Texas, assisted by H. W. Goodpaster, also of Texas. Dr. W. P. Bahrman, pastor, reports all departments of the church moving very encouragingly.

Bishop Paul B. Kern delivered the Commencement sermon at University, Miss. Bishop Kern combines rich scholarship with abiding convictions on fundamental spiritual truths. The Methodist Church is more and more appreciating him as a leader to be trusted and valued.

Major H. J. Chapman, formerly of Jefferson Military Academy, Washington, Miss., now teacher and chaplain of Blue Ridge school for Boys, Hendersonville, N. C., filled the pulpit of the Algiers Church, New Orleans, last Sunday evening. Major Chapman is a local preacher.

Rev. J. E. Selfe, pastor at Opelousas, La., will have as the leader of his meeting Dr. R. T. Henry, returned missionary, now serving the Kentwood charge. Morning messages will be missionary, the evening sermons evangelistic. This should prove a very effective meeting.

Home Coming Day was observed in our Cotton Valley (Louisiana) church last Sunday. "Our congregations are good. We have broken all Sunday records of attendance records, and our prayer meetings are good." This encouraging report, along with several subscriptions comes from Rev. W. Perry, the pastor.

Rev. W. C. Galceran, Jr., reports that the parsonage at Strongs, Miss., was partially destroyed by fire. The building was sufficiently insured to cover the loss. He reports also that in his revivals he is using a variety of talents by securing various pastors from nearby towns to preach one night each in the revivals.

Rev. W. F. Rogers, who recently died at Horn Lake, Miss., was one of the men of his Conference who had served for many years in the ranks. He was effective until his seventy-seventh year. He died in the active work as was his wish and prayer. He was a kind, sincere true preacher of the gospel. He had the spirit of the Master.

Rev. W. R. Lott is conducting night preaching services on the lawn adjacent to the church building at Aberdeen, Miss. The situation is ideal for an outdoor meeting. A musical instrument is placed near a window, and a platform for the speaker was so erected as to use the church building as a sounding board to carry the voice. Large congregations are gathering every Sunday night.

With the awarding of 518 diplomas, the largest number in the history of the university, Duke University's eighty-first commencement came to an impressive close Wednesday evening, June 7, in colorful exercises at the large stadium. It was Duke's first outdoor graduation exercises and thousands of persons gathered in the stands for the program.—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

In sending in a list of subscriptions and a hint that more will follow, Brother W. C. McCay, Baldwin, Miss., writes: "We are getting along fine and still have plenty of hard work to do, but are thankful that we are able to work, and that we have a place in the Master's vineyard where we may toil, not only for self, but for others." Such spirit knows no failure.

Rev. Jas. B. Grambling, Louisiana Conference Young People's worker, and pastor of our church at Mer Rouge, is organizing a "Chicago World's Fair" party. His slogan is "cheap rates and a good time." If you're planning on going, you'd do well to get in touch with Brother Grambling, as his seven years residence in Chicago qualifies him as an ideal chaperone.

First Church, Crowley, La., Rev. C. K. Smith, pastor, recently observed "Harvest Day for Old Gold and Silver," the congregation having been instructed to bring their gifts of old gold and silver and place them in a chest at the door of the church. Proceeds of this harvest is to be used in lifting a mortgage. Seems that this good church has not gone off the "gold standard."

"I have read the Advocate nearly all my life, and my grand-father Porter, for whom Porter Chapel was named read it also. If I live to see the sixth of July, I will be eighty-seven years old. The Advocate is such a joy and comfort to me and were I able I would gladly send you a thousand dollars to save the paper for the church.—Mrs. E. D. Henderson, Vicksburg, Miss." Thank you Sister Henderson.

In his church bulletin of June 1, Rev. J. B. Holyfield, pastor of the Magee charge, Mississippi Conference, commenting on the revival meeting recently conducted at Magee, says in part: "Our heart was rejoiced over the fact that many of the people as a result of the meeting reconsecrated themselves to the Lord. Brother Hunt did heart searching preaching, and there is no doubt in our minds but that great and lasting good was accomplished here by his ministry."

In occasional great meetings of the World Fellowship of Faiths to be conducted during the Chicago World Fair from June to November, and in daily sessions during the three culminating convention weeks, August 27-September 17, representatives of many creeds and countries will seek to solve such problems as: "Poverty-Amidst-Plenty," "Unemployment," "Racial and Religious Persecution," "Youth and the Future," "Fear," "Disarmament," and "War."

"No-count" preachers' children. Each year an anonymous donor presents a valuable gift to the student of Louisiana Tech, Ruston, La., who is selected by a faculty committee. This year it went to "the dormitory girl who has shown the best citizenship rating during the year." Meet the young lady: Miss Audrey Bess Hoffpauir, daughter of Rev. Louis Hoffpauir, pastor at West Monroe, La. Flowers and congratulations, Miss Bess.

Mr. Harvey T. Newell, Jr., one of the most promising young men of the Mississippi Conference, and the president of the class of 1933 of Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., presented at the alumni banquet of the college a comprehensive yet terse statement of the experiences of his class, and their hopes for "service and fellowship, reliability and dependability in a world where nothing material is secure as long as graft and dishonesty are so widespread." The short address made at the celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the birth of the founder of the college, Major R. W. Millsaps, was only one of the many that typified the spirit of the college.

Dr. Mary E. Woolley, President of Mount Holyoke College, and a member of the United States delegation to the first session of the World Disarmament Conference, has been elected the new Chairman of the Department of International Justice and Goodwill of the Federal Council of Churches, according to an announcement made today by Dr. Albert W. Beaven, President of this inter-church body. The election of Dr. Woolley to this position, in the judgment of the Council's officials, brings to the leadership of the peace movement of the churches one of the country's foremost students of international relations and one of the outstanding women of the world.

Heralded as teaching peace, while describing the costs of war, "The Pantheon," massive panorama of the world war, is one of the attractions at A Century of Progress. The painting is 402 feet long and 45 feet high. It occupies a building of its own on the midway near the Twenty-third street entrance. Brought to the Fair from Paris by American patrons of art, the huge picture is presented under the sponsorship of Pershing Hall, the A. E. F. memorial hall in the French capital. The painting faithfully depicts the battlefields of France and Belgium during the great struggle and the foreground is filled with an assemblage of 6,000 world-famed individuals, painted mainly from life, and immortalizing the heroes, both men and women, who rendered conspicuous service during the period.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

As you read this column, we will be in the midst of the Christian Adventure Assembly. We will give you a preliminary report on this assembly next week.

Unions

The Hoyt M. Dobbs Union of Baton Rouge met at Blackwater Church, June 4, with representatives from Istrouma, Keener, First Church Baton Rouge, Zachary, Blackwater, and Baker—the latter represented for the first time. Mrs. Hausey led a brief devotional, followed by brief business conducted by president James Anders. It was decided unanimously that the union should pay half the expenses of Miss Marcy Saliers, winner of second place in poster contest, to Young People's Assembly. A most enjoyable time was spent in the recreation room of the church, when a Biblical Hall of Fame was selected. Cake and punch were served. The July meeting will be held at Baker.

The Live Wire and Sunshine Unions of Lake Charles District held a joint rally at Lake Arthur, Sunday, June 4. Rev. W. W. Drake brought a most inspiring message in the morning. After the picnic lunch and a fellowship period, the young people re-assembled for discussions of assemblies and plans for raising money for delegates.

The Shreveport City Union had an assembly-booster program at their meeting at Claiborne Church, May 29, with Miss Pearl Hattie leading. Talks were made by Miss Margaret Bell, Miss Edeline White of Alexandria, and Mr. George Fox, Jr., of Centenary. Ways were suggested for raising delegates' funds. Shreveport plans to send eleven delegates to the Young People's Assembly. Iced tea and cake were served in a unique manner.

The New Orleans City Union is presenting the play, "The Importance of Being Earnest," at Epworth Church, on June 15 and 16.

Did you hear the broadcasts on May 6 and 13, over WWL, in which the assemblies were advertised? We are told that the programs were fine.

One more district poster has been received since last week's report of the contest. It arrived too late to compete in the contest, but is good, and will be displayed at the assembly. The maker is Miss Mary Kendrick of Jena, in Minden district.

We'll see you in Mansfield.

Your Conference Director,
MARY SEARLES.

IS AMERICA CHRISTIAN?

By Mrs. S. E. Ashmore

So often we hear the phrase "Christian America," but IS America Christian? If it is why do we have corrupt politics? Why study plans for world peace? Why discuss the merits or ills of Prohibition? Why spend our National wealth to halfway protect us from crime? Why are American billboards covered with advertisements to foster unhealthful habits as smoking and drinking? Why do Americans endorse obscene shows by attending them? Why do we allow graft? Why? Why?

Is America's mind the mind of Christ? Do we think more of our social or political standing than our soul's salvation? Are we passive and indifferent to our Christianity or are we ON FIRE for God and His cause? Are we doing anything to show we are Christians? God pity us! In our own weak, sinful, selfish ways, we are trying to run our country the devil's way and claiming the advantages of the Christian way. We have lost sight of what CHRISTIAN means.

We wonder and complain about our economic ills. Did God promise to bless the nation who had MAMMON as its god? No, He said, "Blessed is the nation whose god is the LORD." Does the Holy Book tell us that fostering unchristian principles exalteth a Nation? No, it says: "Righteousness exalteth a Nation, but sin is a reproach."

If America was Christian there would be no need to worry about ways and means to bring about world peace, for is not the Christ of our religion the "PRINCE OF PEACE?" If America as a whole would accept that Prince entirely as He is, accept His teachings, we would have no time for bickering and strife, we would be yearning to get ourselves right and to carry out the great commission, "Go and tell," or, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature;" we would want other nations to know of our Christ and His teachings.

The subject of Prohibition or 3.2 beer would not be a subject of great importance, we would see the evils of drunkenness and we would do our part to stamp it out. Instead of encouraging it by passively listening to unchristian propaganda fostered solely for unholy purposes, we would create a public sentiment so strong the Wet Forces could not stand it. If we would refuse to take part in or sponsor that which destroys the soul of man, if we would look up and press forward to higher and better things, if we would say, "Lord, thy will be done in all things," and give His Spirit a chance to dwell in our lives, then we might call ourselves Christian. What a glorious privilege is ours if we would lead the world to Christ. Let America make it her business to serve the one supreme God.

"Lord God of Hosts be with us yet, Lest we forget, lest we forget."

luka, Miss.

Stop Chills and Fever!

Rid Your System of Malaria!

Shivering with chills one moment and burning with fever the next—that's one of the effects of Malaria. Unless checked, the disease will do serious harm to your health. Malaria, a blood infection, calls for two things. First, destroying the infection in the blood. Second, building up the blood to overcome the effects of the disease and to fortify against further attack.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic supplies both these effects. It contains tasteless quinine, which kills the infection in the blood, and iron, which enriches and builds up the blood. Chills and fever soon stop and you are restored to health and comfort. For half a century, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic has been sure relief for Malaria. It is just as useful, too, as a general tonic for old and young. Pleasant to take and absolutely harmless. Safe to give children. Get a bottle at any store.

I had taken Cardui about seven years ago to build me up. I decided to take it again. I took five bottles of Cardui. My head and back quit hurting. I am lots stronger."

SARAH ALICE HUNT, daughter of Alexander and Martha Hamil, was born in Winston county, Miss., Aug. 30, 1858, and was married to Obidiah Hunt, January 8, 1880, and passed to her eternal reward February 12, 1933.

Sister Hunt united with the Methodist Church in early life and her life was always a rich heritage to all who knew her. She was the mother of twelve children, three of them died when they were young and nine remain to mourn the loss of a Godly mother, and one son the Rev. W. O. Hunt is a prominent member of the North Mississippi Conference.

Sister Hunt's life was one of service to her Lord, her family, and her friends. She loved her church and her pastor always had a welcome in her home. A few days before she left she told the writer she was only waiting for the Lord to say it is enough, come on home.

The body was carried to the old church of which she had been a member for so long, where a large crowd had gathered to pay their last respects, where the writer assisted by her pastor, Brother A. M. West, conducted her funeral.

To her children and friends, your other has gone to her father's house to await your coming. Don't deceive her.

Her former pastor,
REV. R. S. LAWSON,
Memphis, Tenn.

MRS. MOLLIE J. EASON, daughter of J. S. and Mrs. Lucy Moring, was born in Raleigh, North Carolina, February 9, 1856, and took her flight into the glory world, from the home of her devoted son, Dr. J. Sidney Eason, March 10, 1933—age seventy-seven years, one month and one day.

She was married to the late and lamented W. H. Eason, November 24, 1880, and was the mother of five children, one of whom had already gone to the city of God, and four of whom, Dr. Sidney Eason, Coldwater, Mississippi, Dr. Henry Eason, Tupelo, Mississippi, Mrs. L. P. Hall, Coldwater, Mississippi, and Mrs. Clay Callicott, Memphis, Tennessee, survive her.

Mrs. Eason, in addition to splendid cultural attainments, was wealthy in natural endowments, and was well noted for her unusual common sense in meeting the issues and coping with the difficulties of this changeable life. She was a faithful member of the Methodist Church, deeply consecrated in Christian life and service, maintained splendid social relations, and was greatly loved and honored by all who knew her. As a wife and mother her ideals were the highest, her love and her labours were abundant and beautiful, and she left an example more than worthy of emulation.

Her funeral service was conducted from the Methodist Church of this city by her pastor, Rev. W. C. Beasley assisted by the writer.

B. F. WHITTEN.

Coldwater, Miss.

In the death of MRS. J. B. SMITH, Oma, Miss., we see another "Mother of Israel" called home. Before her marriage she was Miss Thresa Sartin. She was born November 16, 1865. Sister Smith gave fifty-nine years of her life to the Lord as a consistent member of the Methodist Church. What a great comfort she was to her pastor only those who were privileged to serve in that capacity can know. She was loyal, devout, and full of faith. Though she did not leave for her children great material wealth, she left them a heritage in the example of her consecrated Christian life of infinitely greater value: A heritage that depressions do not affect, time does not erase, and robbers cannot steal. She is survived by a step-son, Rev. J. L. Smith of the Mississippi Conference, four sons, H. R., A. L., M. R., and P. C.; five daughters, Mrs. T. B. Harris, Mrs. M. L. Ballew, Mrs. H. D. Furr, Mrs. H. B. Wilson, and Mrs. C. A. Batson. During the last few weeks of her life she suffered much, but she bore it with patience. And early in the evening of April 4, 1933, she gained eternal relief when she fell asleep to awake in the Father's House above.

Her Pastor,
L. T. NELSON.

FORGETTING GOD AND HIS LOVE FOR HIS PEOPLE

By Mrs. E. W. Sorey

How the great heart of God must have ached when He said, "My people have forgotten me days without number."

Oh, it seems so easy for people to forget God in this age of rush and turmoil. Such should not be. We read in His word: "Can any man hide himself in secret places that I shall not see him? saith the Lord. Do not I fill heaven and earth? saith the Lord."

The very consciousness of His omnipotence should ever direct our minds to Him. We then could exclaim as did the Psalmist: "Whither shall I flee from thy Spirit?" or, "whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up in heaven, thou art there; if I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea: Even there shall thy hand lead me." Oh, the wonderful love of God! yet, He says: "My people have forgotten me."

In the stillness of the night as we gaze upon the myriads of twinkling stars, hedecking the sky with their radiance, can we forget His mighty power that holds them in place? Can we forget Him when we behold nature newly born, the trees in their verdant robes swaying in the breeze, the beautiful flowers that surround our path—said to be His smiles? Can we forget Him when we drink in their fragrance and can pluck them for our very own?

How sad He must feel as we seemingly drift along enjoying the many blessings He has placed here for our pleasure and yet oftentimes we forget to express our thanks and appreciation. Oh, the mighty power of God! The Psalmist tells us He holds the winds in his fists. The poet has said: "He plants His foot steps in the sea and rides upon the storm."

Our Saviour revealed our Father as a loving and long suffering God. "He does not afflict willingly," yet at times, He deems it necessary to awaken us to a sense of His presence with the destructive cyclone. "His anger endureth but for a moment," for "He maketh the storm a calm."
